Keep Unity of Varsity's Past President Smith's Challenge Issued To New Undergrads

Addressing an audience of more than 900 undergraduates in Convocation Hall yesterday, President Sidney Smith urged freshmen to maintain the strength and unity of the University's past.

"The senior undergraduates are one link. Those who have graduated are another. You are the new links which will be forged for the future," the President stated. "If your link is weak, then the strong chain will be broken. This is the measure of your importance to this institution".

Ways of Preserving Strength

The President pointed out four ways in which the new freshmen and women could keep this link strong; first, by diligently and faithfully adhering to their studies, secondly, by being cheerful and courteous both in and out of the class rooms, thirdly, by reading and learning the history and traditions of the University and its affiliated colleges and faculties and lastly but not least, to maintain their hopes and ambitions throughout their years in the university.

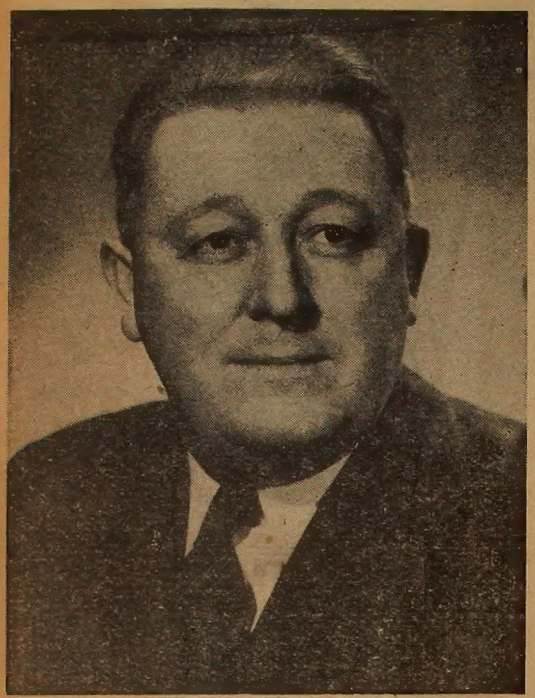
"I am really speaking of your philosophy of life. Keep your ambitions and hopes in spite of efforts of other members of the university to alter it. It is your right and privilege," he said.

"One last thought I wish to leave with you," President Smith said, "And that is, (and I quote from the words of the late Lord Tweedsmuir) youth must believe that the world is their oyster. The world is your oyster. Fashion here the opener to find facts and figures, knowledge and occupations and above all—pearls—pearls of wisdom."

Colorful Ceremony

Clad in his blue and silver academic robes of office, President Smith led the procession of twenty other university dignitaries clad in equally colorful robes of black, trimmed with scarlet and purple, while the great organ at the front of the Hall boomed out accompanying music. All lectures were cancelled in order that all undergraduates would be able to attend this annual colorful affair which officially opens the University year.

Additional Welcome



Following the President's address, Warden Nicholas Ignatieff of Hart House and E. A. MacDonald, General Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council welcomed the new undergraduates and explained the intricate workings and facilities offered to them by Hart House and the SAC respectively.

Mr. Ignatieff addressed his remarks mainly to the new male undergrads but intimated that the new coeds would also find the organization and activities provided by Hart House of great interest. He said that indirectly, the women of the campus were responsible for many of the activities which take place in Hart House throughout the year.

"Hart House supplies to a large extent a means of broadening your education. I hope as you work and play during your sojourn at university that you will find the deep understanding from both the members of the faculty and those in Hart House that this post-war world so sadly lacks," he stated.

Mr. Macdonald outlined the organization and activities of the Students' Administrative Council. He pointed out that the SAC tries to serve all the requirements of the student body in so far as it was humanly possible. He briefly sketched its duties and the publications for which the SAC was responsible. Mr. Macdonald said he hoped that the new students would find time to engage in the interesting work which these publications provided.

Welcomes Freshmen

President Sidney Smith welcomed the incoming freshmen class in Convocation Hall yesterday. The president told the near-capacity audience that it was in their interests to maintain the Varsity chain of unity with past traditions. While the speaker was a stranger to most of the assembled members of 5T2, it will not be very long before the freshmen will come to know him as a friend.

Trinity Buttery Is College Hub

"College life at Trinity will again revolve about the Buttery," Head of Arts Gordon Gwynne-Timothy said yesterday. The Buttery is the much-frequented headquarters for refreshment and conversation located since September, 1947, in the basement of Trinity.

Subsidiary activities will include debates in Strachan Hall, jammed receptions at St. Hilda's and Trinity, the traditional formal and informal parties, and initiation of worms (freshmen). Formal initiation of the "lowly ones" into the College takes place this week.

Gwynne-Timothy, who is also president of the S.A.C., said he was unable to make further comment on coming events at Trinity at this time. Just now, he explained, he was too busy reading Esquire to get in training for the job of picking Varsity cheer leaders to worry about College activities.

Book Store Modernized

Students gazing at the grim stone walls and the mediaeval architecture of the university buildings come to a sharp stop when they see the new book store south of the Old Observatory and Hart House. In contrast with the buildings clustering around it, the store is designed in a 1948 style and its stucco and glass exterior presents a pleasing appearance.

The store was built to relieve congestion at the University of Toronto Press where in former years students jammed into inadequate space or stood in line to be waited on. All sales are now handled at the store and with 50 per cent more shelf space, about 100 per cent more counter space and much more room just to move around, students will find the book store pleasant to be in as well as pleasant to look at. The display shelves and pastel painted interior encourage browsing.

Mr. A. L. Bryant is in charge of the shop and at present there is a staff of 30 to handle the rush at the beginning of the term. The permanent staff numbers 16.

Self-Contained Kingdom For University Students

In the olden times, a college was usually a cloistered retreat from the rest of the world. Behind ivy-covered walls, the lover of learning ate, slept, studied and carried on all the other activities of life without ever setting foot outside.

But what of today's college? How much have modern times affected our sheltered lives? Let us look at our own campus. The student can live in one of the college residences (IF he's lucky). He may eat at the college banquet hall. (In Vic he must own at least one tie to be properly dressed for dinner, while at Trinity, a long black flowing gown is an essential before he gets a morsel of food.) Hart House Great Hall is a popular spot at mealtime, and the Tuck Shop is the place for political discussion over a cup of coffee. The co-ed, a fairly recent innovation on the campus (or intrusion as the case may be) is equally well provided for.

For entertainment there are dances, teas, and innumerable stage productions both at the colleges themselves and at Hart House. Hart House theatre is one of the most completely equipped theatres on any Canadian campus.

Varsity stadium houses a series of sports events from football to figure-skating, and is a flurry of activity during the entire year.

All school supplies are available at the new University Book Shop in front of Hart House. They have everything: papers, pens and pencils, and perhaps a few address books. (Blank, of course.)

The news, any that is important, is brought to you every morning by The Varsity. It brings you a complete survey of sports, art, music, drama, movies, and campus politics. The Varsity also has a Classified Ad. section which is sure to get results.

The University Library and the other college libraries are well equipped to give you all the knowledge of the known world. The books and the lectures that are available right here can equip you with whatever training you desire.

Looking at our campus then, it can be seen that time and cosmopolitan influences have done little to change college life. If you never set foot off the campus, you will still have missed little. We are a city within a city, and if a big wind blew away the rest of Toronto some of us would never miss it!

Changes Over The Vacation

Less obvious than the emergence of the new bookstore across from UC, and the mobs of younger-than-ever freshmen who surge everywhere about returning second, third, and fourth year students are the changes which have come to pass in the administrative departments of the University. They are, nevertheless, significant bits of information to those trying to catch up with developments on the campus since last year.

At Simcoe Hall, Mr. Ralph E. Spence, 39-year-old Cambridge graduate, who joined the University as chief accountant in 1946 after coming to Canada from Japan just before Pearl Harbor, has been appointed Comptroller of the University. Mr. Spence succeeds Arnold Gaine, now vice-president (administration) for the Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Company. Both Mr. Spence and his wife were born in Japan.

President Smith Announces Engineering Appointments

D. N. Cass-Beggs has been promoted from assistant professor to associate professor of electrical engineering, announced President Sidney E. Smith recently.

Associate Professor Cass-Beggs is an honours graduate of the University of Manchester in Electrical Engineering. He joined the staff of the University of Toronto in 1939 and was with his wife and daughter on the Athenia when the ship was torpedoed by a U-boat. He has been active in research, particularly in the field of servo-mechanism for the development and control of an RCAF human centrifuge and other defence equipment.

Dr. Smith also announced the promotion of ten others from the rank of lecturer to assistant professor in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering.

Assistant Professor C. P. Brockett is a graduate in Chemical Engineering of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His early experience included three years on the design of scientific instruments and another three years as a research chemist with the Eastman Kodak Company. He also worked on the staff of the Aluminum Company of Canada at its Arvida works. He joined the staff of the University of Toronto in 1946.

WEEKEND FOOTBALL

Kingston, Sept. 23—(Staff)—This week-end will see the Queen's Tricolor invade Civic stadium in Hamilton. The Queensmen will take on the Intermediate McMaster Rams. Accompanying the gridironers from the eastern Ontario city will be their colorful pipe band.

Help Wanted

With the resumption of publication this week, The Varsity is in need of staff reporters, both experienced and inexperienced. Those interested in doing news reporting, features, sports, movie and book reviewing, photography, and makeup, should report as soon as possible to The Varsity News Room, Room 78, in the basement of University College. A special invitation is extended to first-year students who are interested in learning newspaper fundamentals. Previous experience is not necessary since The Varsity will train staff members during the fall term.

Victoria College Greets Freshmen In Gala Weekend

Traditional Vic Freshman Weekend got under way in Burwash Hall and the residences last Friday evening under the direction of twenty-five seniors. More than 190 first year men took advantage of this all-freshman introduction into Victoria College and the University of Toronto.

Dr. Walter T. Brown, President of Victoria University, and other members of the faculty of that college welcomed the freshmen to the College and University activities at a special assembly in Vic Chapel Saturday morning.

Highlight of the weekend was the show staged for the frosh by members of past college performances. The men were introduced to college and University songs and yells, and made first practical use of these in an impromptu snake dance along Avenue Road and Bloor Street. Frayed tempers of numerous drivers and street car operators only added to the vociferous enthusiasm of the Vic men of 5T2. All this culminated in a visit to the women's residences of the college for a dance and a social evening.

After special Chapel services Sunday morning, tours were conducted through Hart House and around the University campus. The men were guided about the grounds by seniors in charge of the Week End and were shown the various buildings and places of interest on the campus.

Monday evening, the new Victorians were entertained at a dance sponsored by the Freshman Week End Committee and held in Burwash Hall.

Dean Bennett officially concluded the activities of the Week End at a freshman assembly in Burwash Hall Tuesday afternoon. The Dean outlined the various policies and practices of Victoria College and tendered encouragement and advice to the new class.

Over The Hump

With the opening of the new term this week the University is entering into a significant phase in its post-war development. In company with other universities across the land it has met the challenge of an enormous influx of war veterans during the past three years and, though criticisms and shortcomings were manifest during the perlod immediately following the war, the University has weathered the storm.

Today, the peak of student expansion has passed. From a whopping registration of more than seventeen thousand last year, it has subsided to less than fifteen thousand. The great throngs of ex-service students which filled the campus during recent years are on the decrease and although almost half the student body this year are veterans, the youthful faces of recent high school graduates are becoming more and more evident.

It is too early yet to assess properly the value of the university to its veteran graduates. Has the large enrollment been a deterrent to a wide and comprehensive college education? Have the crammed lecture halls and overworked staff proved lacking? These and many more questions are being asked. Educators are confronted with the larger problem of education on a mass scale and the fear that such a trend will prove disastrous to academic standards.

Now, with a decreasing registration and an expansion in facilities the problem is eased somewhat. The effect will be slight this year and it will be quite a while before the overcrowding is relaxed and harried professors can devote more time to their students.

But the outlook for this year's freshman crop is encouraging. Here they will find scope and breadth for their abilities. They will find the tempo and comparative freedom of the University exhilarating after the more circumspect atmosphere of the High School where much of their thinking was prescribed for them. They will find themselves being taught by men whose capabilities are unequalled anywhere, whose painstaking devotion to their work has earned them enviable reputations.

In addition, they will learn that the academic life of the University is of many parts. The numerous organizations, clubs, functions and other extra-curricular student activities offer a wealth of experience for the most varied interests. They will acquire deep-rooted enthusiasms, qualities of self-expression, and hobbies they will retain for many years.

Whether the student takes advantage of these opportunities is a matter for individual decision. But the student who comes to the University and applies himself to his prescribed course to the exclusion of all else is missing the entire spirit and purpose of the University.

Special to The Varsity

The man who invented the typographical error, and thereby made college journalism possible . . . Igor Retsorff . . . stepped off a C.P.R. freight train in the Danforth yards this morning. Mr. Retsorff was immediately apprehended by a special squad of the Toronto Un-true-blue Activities Committee, headed by Controller David Ballfire.

(All immigrants coming from behind the Iron Curtain in C.C.F.-dominated Saskatchewan have been subjected to special scrutiny since a certain recent disaster in High Park Riding.)

Asked if he had ever had anything to do with Socialism, Mr. Retsorff said with the puckish grin that has broken hearts from Elizabeth street to Pelvis, Sask., "That question is open to several meanings."

He was immediately thrown to the ground, and searched for a party card. The card, when found, proved to be from a party Retsorff was on last Saturday night.

"That's all we need!" cried Ballfire. "Take him away, boys!"

They did.

Later investigation proved the Controller's suspicions to be only too well-founded. When one of the squad inadvertently inflicted a twelve-inch gash in Retsorff's scalp (as Toronto's boys in blue will do, from time to time, in their boyish exuberance), the Controller paled with horror. All his suspicions were confirmed. Retsorff's blood was red!

In the meantime, Robin Hood Cinders, the well-known chairman of the Ontario Hydrew Commission, has lodged a complaint. "They're giving all the newspaper space to Retsorff!" he sobbed.

"I'll show them!" Cinders went on, turning the famous profile that he personally has inserted in thousands of newspaper ads, and to hell with the taxpayers who are paying the bill. "I'll get back on page one! I'll get the headlines again if I have to turn off every light in Ontario! They're all trying to get me . . . even MacHiram, that I trained up myself, is starting to put out proclamations every week."

In the meantime, a Committee to Free Retsorff has been organized by The Varsity. Membership is $100.00, of which only 95 will go to the paid officers of the committee. We hope to get him out in time for Christmas . . . 1980.

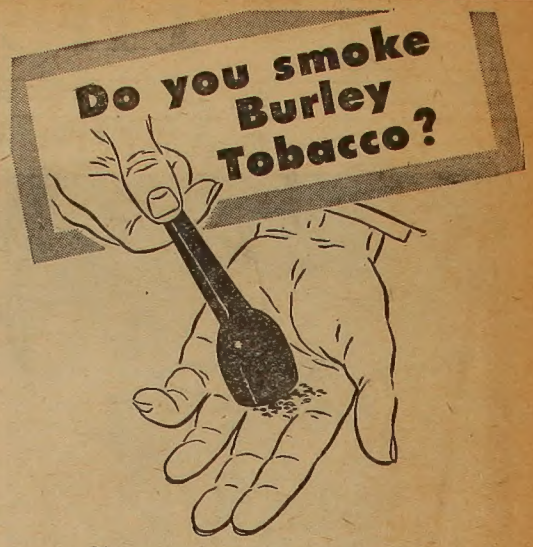
AJAX RUMBLINGS

Pete Newman

So! You're new at Ajax.

You think that a spruce is just a kind of tree, and your fortieth beer means no more to you than your thirty-ninth. But you'll learn.



After you have had to survey Ajax's wind swept plains, tasted your share of calculus problems, ridden on the undernourished and springless vehicles known only as "The Green Dragons", and encountered — successfully or otherwise—your first "demmie", then you will begin to know a little of what actually makes up this place —Ajax.

You'll find that there is much more to it than grey oblique buildings, and unwritten "lab reports." You'll find a strange creed of men, who look at you over the ramparts of their slide-rules, and with a knowing glint in their eyes softly purr the fascinating words of "Godiva."

AJAX SPORTS

Ajax Golf Tournament entries must be in the Athletic Office, Rec Hall by Friday noon. The Tournament bus leaves that building at 1 o'clock Monday.

All students interested in Track, soccer, football, tennis and managing teams should give their names to the Athletic Office immediately.

You should! Because Burley is one of the mildest tobaccos grown . . . with a smooth, mellow fragrance that tastes especially good in a pipe. Burley packs easily . . . burns slowly . . . leaves a clean, white ash. And it stays lit!

Masterson and Four Worthies

Pictured above are but five of the 43 Varsity footballers who cavorted through preseason training at Ontario Athletic Training Camp on Lake Couchiching. It was anything but a holiday, though, according to the boys, who lost an average of 4.4 pounds in the first two hour workout. These five, Alec Lawson, Wally London, Bob Masterson, Bill Stockman and Bill Petrie (left to right) ground their way to top condition, and learned a variety of new, deceptive plays during the two weeks.

Blues Training Early, Show Great Promise First Game Saturday

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

The Varsity Blues blew into town Monday afternoon after a two-week stretch at the Ontario Athletic Training Camp, the training camp to end all training camps.

Situated on the north shore of Lake Couchiching, the camp did more for the Blues in two weeks than the Back Campus could have done in a month. Morale was at a new high after the first week, plays were clicking, and the Old College Try was very much in evidence.

Everything possible was done to make the venture a success. Accommodation and food were excellent. Swimming, boating, volleyball, tennis, and table-tennis were available for any hearties who came out of the two daily practices asking for more.

This is Bob Masterson's first year as head coach of the Varsity Blues, and if press notices are any indication of ability, Varsity's coaching worries are at an end. Four years at Miami University and eight years in professional football is Masterson's impressive record. He was chosen the most outstanding athlete ever to graduate from Miami, and in two seasons with Washington Redskins was picked All-Professional end.

As foundation material for the 1948 version of the Blues, Masterson has 16 of last year's squad back in the fold. Of the back-field brigade, Bruce Cummings, Ted Toogood, Tommy Waldon, Bob Henry, and Ed Huyckе are back, and little Nick Volpe has been tearing up the back field sod since his transfer from the outside wing. Flashy new comers include Bill Fernie, with Beaches last season; Wally London, ace plunger with Victoria College; Ken McIntyre from St. Mike's; Joe Chorostecki from Ajax; Joe Kane, starry little passer from Oakwood Collegiate; and Bill Danylchuk, Bill Gourlay, and Norm West from the Intermediates.

Three insides and three middles from last year form the basis of the Blues line strength. Ian Clark, Dace Copp, Moose Mustard, Jack Williams, Art Hardman, and Bill Beatty provide a tower of strength. Vieing for the vacancies are Frank Peppiat, with Vic last year; Ches Evans, who was hurt in pre-season training last season; Don Longmore, Bill Lloyd, and Jack Daly, up from the Intermediates.

Strong Nucleus

Jack Gray of last year's Blues, and Bill Stockman from Beaches are expected to provide most of the power at the ends. Added to these are Blue veteran Eric McMillan,

Ajax Frosh Given A Warm Welcome

"This is just the beginning," said Brian Judges, first vice-president of the Ajax Engineering Society. "The Society is planning some real bang-up dos this year."

Last night, the freshman class in Engineering attended a reception in the Rec. Hall, Ajax, sponsored by the Ajax Engineering Society.

Included in the program were the Riccio Trio, Joe Murphy, Rex Slocum and the musical efforts of Skulemen Bob Hayman, Jim Harrt, Mickey McCloy and Barny Warren.

The Riccio brothers gave their own arrangements of several popular tunes, interspersed with patter songs, and assisted Joe Murphy in his imitations.

Rex Slocum entertained the class with feats of magic, while the four Skulemen rendered several of the more popular Engineers' songs.

The Russian Philosophy Is Scored By Principal

One of the prime difficulties in making a decision in world affairs is the lack of a moral force sufficient to back that decision, said Principal W. R. Taylor, speaking at the University College Convocation Tuesday night.

He explained "the Russian has a philosophy of men and society with which are integrated his policies and attitudes. Their philosophy is out of date and false, but it supplies them with a complete pattern for living. Their slogans are potent because they quiver with life and conviction. In contrast we Westerners have a pattern of life but because of our defects in education we have lost a sense of the philosophy behind our pattern of life. We talk of democracy, of freedom, of human rights, of government of, by, and for the people, but why democracy, why freedom, why popular government?

"The problem in the United Nations is resolved into a lack of moral force that can be brought to bear on any major issue that concerns us in the west. Each issue finds us divided and uncertain because we are not under the spell of a lively philosophy of men, society and the world. No people can be great and no great things can be accomplished without the authority and the force of powerful convictions about the ideas, principles, and standards of life." he said.

Speaking of college affairs Principal Taylor welcomed the new students and impressed upon them the necessity of treating their college courses seriously. He pointed out that a sensible division of time is extremely important. He also condemned the theory of education which states that the end to be achieved is vocational or social success.

Dr. Sidney E. Smith, President of the University greeted the new students particularly and gave them some of the background of the college. He paid tribute to the excellence of the staff and commended the students on their choice of the Provincial College.

Mr. Leslie Rowntree, President of the University College Alumni, spoke on behalf of the Alumni and Alumnae Associations of the College, while Miss Mary E. Innis, President of the Women's Undergraduate Association, and Mr. Ralph Campbell, President of the Literary and Athletic Society, addressed the new students, who, in contrast to recent years, were composed almost entirely of high school graduates.

Newman Club Program Outlined for Term

At the Open House held in Newman Club last night, President Pat Rudden assured members that much had already been done to make this year an unqualified success in the history of the Toronto Newman Club.

Last year, he pointed out, the Executive Committee had been enlarged to give further representation to the various faculties of the University. In addition, Vice-President Claude MacDonald, the Toronto delegate to the recent annual convention of the Canadian Federation of Newman Clubs had returned from Winnipeg with many new ideas to make the coming year a successful one for Newmanites.

Plans have now been made for such activities as the French Club, a discussion group, the Debating Club and the Musical Appreciation Group. Plans for the organization of a Bridge Club, Dramatics, The Glee Club and a Choir were now underway.

Father McHenry, in his address to the members explained how the three aims of the Newman Club, (Spiritual, Intellectual and Social) were already being fulfilled.

"The Club is what you make it. It offers Catholic students many facilities, organizations and activities. All that is required is active co-operation," Father McHenry stated.

On Friday afternoon a Freshette Tea will be held. Saturday night all first year students will be the guests of Newman Club at an Introductory dance.

Engineering Bldg. Ready for Classes

The University of Toronto's new mechanical building started in the fall of 1946 is now ready for some classes.

The structure is by far the most modern looking building on the campus. With a 200 by 600-foot laboratory in the basement, machine shop and library on the first floor, air-conditioned lecture room for 350 students and two other lecture rooms containing 130 each on the second. The whole top floor is taken by a machine design drafting room. The building also includes common rooms for both staff and students and a museum.

Student Housing Service Provides Rooms for Many

The University of Toronto Housing Service is in frantic operation at Hart House. Two Rooms, two phones, and a large staff present an appearance of buzzing confusion. So far the housing service has secured everything from garrets in which the struggling artist may starve to houses where the enterprising family may sublet.

Jan Meisel, the director of the Housing Service, says that they expect to be able to accommodate all comers this year without difficulty. The listing of single rooms is, so far, well in excess of the demand. Out of about six hundred places listed for married couples without children, only about half have been claimed.

In the case of married students with children some difficulty is being felt and the list is not adequate. Meisel says, however, that these families are being placed but that it takes a couple of weeks in each case to arrange accommodation.

The principal trouble in most cases, especially regarding married students, is the high rent currently being asked. The average student family finds more than half of its monthly government grant consumed. For a single room the average rate is six dollars a week without board and from twelve to fourteen dollars with board. For double rooms the price is only slightly less, about five dollars each a week.

The housing service has found unfurnished accommodation more difficult to get than furnished owing to some rental control technicality. It has found the average landlord more willing to take men than women and least willing to accommodate children. There are listed a small number of rooms, mostly for women, which are offered free in exchange for some such service as baby minding or the odd bit of ironing.

An intensive campaign was carried on during the summer to locate rooms. An appeal was announced through the churches, the Canadian Legion, the Board of Trade, the Service Clubs, the I.O.D.E., and Red Cross. Mayor Saunders announced the need for rooms on his own programme. The Globe and Mail ran a story on the subject. The city's district weeklies gave space. In response to this far flung cry the lists began to grow. The telephones are still busy with incoming accommodation. Meisel and his associates have been most gratified by the willing cooperation they have received on all sides.

The service is operated and almost entirely financed by the Students Administrative Council. It is primarily a service for the undergraduate, but, this year especially, the service has epanded actively to include both graduates and Faculty members.

Dean Young of SPS Addresses Jaxmen

Closer contacts between students and staff were urged by C. R. Young, dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, in an address delivered to the freshmen class in engineering on Tuesday.

Commenting on the history of Ajax, he told of the "glorious traditions, the advantages from residence life, the community spirit and esprit de corps of the faculty." Breadth—rather than intensity of professional training, he said, was the goal of engineering instruction offered.

E. A. Macdonald, general secretary-treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council, outlined the organization, functions and services of the Council. He urged all freshmen to "enter in full measure into the life of this great university."

John McCrodan, president of the Engineering Society, outlined the role played by, and the assistance given to the student body, by the Society.

R. H. Perry, Dean and Supervisor of Residences, gave a brief resume of the organization and discipline of residences.

Registrations Drop As Vets Graduate

Although registration is down to 15,000 and 16,000 this year, few faculties in the university have counted their exact enrolment.

University College has 1948 students at the present time and expects about 100 more. This is a drop of nearly 800 students from last year's registration. 595 of U.C.'s students are ex-service, considerably less than last year. There are 1258 men and 690 co-eds.

Victoria College has made no accurate count. Trinity College remains about the same size as usual, with between 600 and 700 students. St. Michael's figures were not available for the other faculties.

College registrars are not the only tired and harried people on the campus this week. Simcoe Hall has been swamped with footsore students, who have had to line up three deep for blocks, to pay their fees. There was a steady stream all day Monday, with the overflow coming back Tuesday to cause a traffic jam which at one point reached the Physics Building. Yesterday, lineups were smaller, but the students in them were even more harried. Admit-to-lectures cards were not coming through on schedule and petitions seemed to be tied up in miles of red tape. All in all registration seemed to be as much of a headache as ever, in spite of a slightly smaller student body.

Blues Training

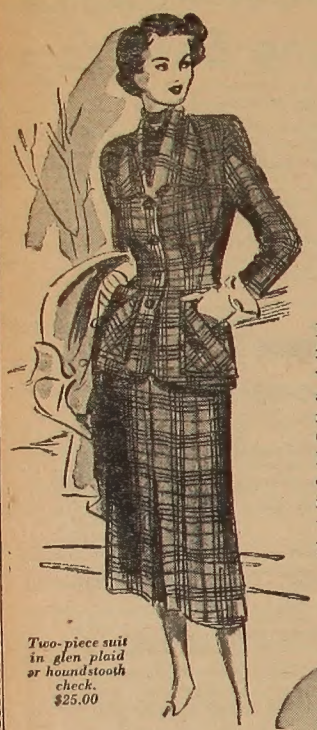
and Alec Lawson and Ted Gawinski who starred in the intramural loop last fall.

Masterson is counting on veteran Archie Jones to take up most of the centre slack left by Frank Williams. Al Scott, Ernie Jones, and Ed Fisher are also on deck for the snap spot.

Could it be that a new era is dawning for the Varsity Blues? The training camp had all the flavoring of a big time operation. While Varsity is unable to offer athletic scholarships, it is felt that the annual two-week pre-season camp will be incentive enough to divert young footballers into the Varsity fold.



Varsity students can rest assured that this year's edition of the Blues will be in the best possible condition, will have the best available equipment.

Take a pre-season peak at the Blues come this Saturday, when Varsity plays host to Beaches-Indians, and again the following week when Assumption College will provide the opposition. It should be a good year.

Joan of Lorraine

At the risk of dashing headlong into a most embarrassingly ironical situation this undergraduate writing in a paper for undergraduates is going to apply the word "undergraduate" as a term of opprobrium to Maxwell Anderson's "Joan of Lorraine", the initial offering of the season by the New Play Society which runs through Saturday. I cannot think of another word to convey the play's beastly moral earnestness which descends on the spectator in the form of a dense drizzle of abstracta, via a group of gifted and altogether admirable actors. This is the tragic part of it, of course, that on account of the very high standard of direction and presentation the vacuity of the play should become so very obvious.

It would be unfair to blame Anderson for attempting a play about Jeanne d'Arc in the face of the inevitable intrusion of memories of Shaw's masterpiece on the spectator's mind. Nor should anyone blame him for squeezing to the last drop the honest old "play within a play" device. But here charity ends. The problem of identification of actor and part is a complicated one, as is that of the impact of a saint on a world of sinners; one-track minds like Pirandello or Shaw were quite content to build plays around either one, but Maxwell Anderson tackles them together with a team of pseudo-sophistication and sweet reasonableness that seems to have escaped straight from the luxurious stables of the Luce publications.

The fact that Mary Gray, the actress who plays Joan, is a bit of a simple and priggish co-ed does not give Anderson the right to create her mirror image and claim to have created Joan. Which has absolutely nothing to do with the fact that Miss Mona O'Hearn makes a very respectable best of it. Similarly, Mr. Lorne Greene offers a very satisfying performance (especially vocally) as the Producer and Inquisitor. But can we (or he) forgive the playwright, if he is forced to throw at us Faith, Democracy and the Atom Bomb when we are yearning for something as simply poetic as the kitchen sink? And so it goes: the less the actors were burdened with Mr. Anderson's confounded Message, the luckier they are. Mr. Peter Sturgess is a very charming Dauphin when he does not have to be Compromise and Corruption. Miss Pegi Brown is permitted to portray a lady of entertainment pure and simple, and does so with skilled effect. The other members of the numerous cast were no less successful and so was the technical work.

In spite of it all, I can see the point of the Society's choice. They aim at living theatre for Toronto which implies crowds and bring up-to-date. "Joan" has drawing power, thanks to Hollywood, and it is a recent play by a so-called leading playwright and we should thank the group for allowing us to snarl at it.

American Influence Seen In Co-Ed Style

Co-ed fashions on the Varsity Campus yesterday displayed a riot of colour with emphasis on bright plaids and gay corduroy suits. From the top of her shining short hair to the tips of her colorful pumps the college girl is definitely stepping out in the latest American fashions.

A well-scrubbed look with lighter lipstick is in evidence beneath the shorter softly curled hair. This abandoning of long flowing tresses which took hold on the American campus early last spring is firmly installed here this fall.

Long and short suit jackets have the rounded soft shoulder line adapted from the American models of last year with the current American influence observed in corduroy boleros and high fluttering collars on blouses and coats.

Skirts being worn are still pencil slim while those being shown are emphasizing the full back. Gold buttons and belts for fall skirts have not yet crossed the border.

The plaid skirt and matching stole have been enthusiastically received by Canadian co-eds worn with tucked-in sweaters and the new rope of pearls.

The shoes are black, red, grey and green, low cut with straps across the foot. The American heels are taller and slimmer but the comfortable old saddle shoes are still immensely popular here.

Over this ensemble the new wine shade predominates in coats with tiers, pleats and belts. The back is still full but hoods are not as prevalent. The length of all coats and skirts is remaining a constant inches off the floor but hoping to have them shorter spring.

Those refreshing fashions bringing out the natural beauties of our young women are receiving approving glances from the young men in ankle-length trousers.

VIC'S CORNER

Hello happy children. Here we are back again for another year with another edition of Vic's Corner. Look for us each Tuesday when we bring you all the news at Vic while it's still news. The column will be bigger than today, so watch for it.

Yes sir! It's the latest addition to Vic tradition. We're referring to the Howdy Hop of course, and take it from us you won't want to miss this first big dance of the year. It's not just another dance, it's your golden opportunity to meet old friends, make new ones, discuss the summer holidays, dance and . . . but let's not go into all that. The cost is fifty cents; tickets on sale all day in the halls of Vic; ALL years may attend; come in couples or come alone . . . but be on the Strand tomorrow night when the "Double H" of '48 gets underway.

Tomorrow also the 5T2 class elections take place. We realize the difficulties facing every Freshman Class in choosing their executive, but it's up to you Frosh. The Bob is coming. There are the Class parties, hikes and numerous other events. Your active interest and support are the keystones to a successful year. See that you do your part. Election speeches will be given this afternoon at 1.30 in the Chapel. Be on hand to hear what your candidates have to offer.

And for the athletic types, here's some news from Joe McKimm, president of the Men's Athletic Directorate. The Vic Tennis Tournament starts tomorrow. Those wishing to participate have until tonite to enter. Feetsball enthusiasts will be glad to hear the rugby practices have begun and that an urgent call is sent out to all budding blockers, tacklers, ball carriers and . . . well, you get the idea. So get out there and get the equipment! Soccer also is underway. This year Jim Colvin of the Blues will lecture the educated toes on the best methods of bringing that long lost championship back to Vic.

Someone has said that no man but a blockhead has ever wrote except for money. Acta Victoriana can't promise you any of the green but the staff certainly extends an open (but empty) hand to ALL those interested in writing. The deadline for the first issue is Monday but if you can't wake your sleeping talents by then don't let them doze on. There are many more issues to come. Just drop your scripts inthe Acta box on the first floor.

That's all for today. In closing, just two reminders. First, the Howdy Hop in Vic and Burwash tomorrow night. Secondly, see you again next Tuesday. Stan "13".

Bob Masterson Gets Help As Players Turn Coaches

The Varsity's new Rugby teams are not only loaded with power on the field but also the mastermind department is made up of the finest football men of the district. Headed by Robert P. "Bob" Masterson the other four mentors form a coaching group that will give the Blue Football Clubs something to work for.

Bob Masterson needs no introduction to Varsity students since his coming to Toronto last year. Acting under last year's coach, Bobby Coulter, Bob Masterson brought glory to the University through the Blue teams both in rugby and in basketball. Although no championships were gained, the teams in both sports were one of the tops of their respective leagues. This year promises to be one of the best for Bob and his assistants.

Working along with Bob Masterson in the backfield is Jim Follwell, Athletic Director at Ajax. Throughout Jim's football career he was outstanding and his record speaks for itself.

Jim is a graduate of O.A.C. and received his Master's degree in Science and Agriculture. During the war he served in the R.C.A.F. on the staff of the Y.M.C.A. and had spent two years in Iceland.

He received his start in football at Albert College in Belleville. In 1940 and '41 he was kicking half with the Toronto Argonauts.

He joined the Ajax Athletic Association in 1946 and the following year coached the Ajax Juniors to Ontario group finals. Last year he mentored the Varsity Intermediates and this term he will assist Bob Masterson.

Frank Williams, a student in Engineering, was taken on as line coach for the Seniors. Himself a veteran of the Blues, he knows what to expect on the front line. A trick knee injury last season ended his active football career and his loss was a big blow to Varsity's hopes for 1948.

He received his start in football at high school in Fort Erie and St. Andrews. Also he has seen football service with Tulane University, the Toronto Argonauts and the Navy. Frank is a valuable addition to the coaching staff.

Heading the coaching duties for the Intermediate Football team will be Donald Bark. A graduate of Commerce and Finance he spent three years with the Big Blues during his time at College. As well as playing rugby he was a member of the Varsity Blue Champion Hockey teams for three years. For his sportsmanship and work in athletics at the University, Don was co-winner of the Biggs Trophy last year.

Assisting Don Bark with the Intermediates will be Alex Brown, a graduate of University College last year. Prior to entering the army in the last war, Alex played football for the University of Toronto Schools and Balmy Beach. During his time at the University he was very prominent in Inter-Collegiate rugby and was one of the better linemen in that circuit. He won his first colors for two consecutive years with the Blue Team.

Two ace athletes from last year's intercollegiate squads have been named as instructors in the PHE course. They are Barry Lowes and Warren Clayson. Both graduated from PHE last year.

Clayson, who last year won his Bronze 'T' and was joint winner of the Bickle Trophy for swimming, will instruct in swimming, water polo, and allied arts. He was on the senior intercollegiate swimming team for three years, and last year was a double winner in the intercollegiate swim meet. He was also a member of last year's water polo squad which made a clean sweep of the intercollegiate, Ontario, and Dominion titles.

The other new staff member, Barry Lowes, was on the senior intercollegiate basketball teams for two years, and last year was also on the Athletic Directorate as president of the basketball club. He will instruct in several sports, including basketball and track, and assist in the intramural office.

and ornamental at 6.30, and diving at 7.30.

These practices are open to everyone. Here's an opportunity for you Freshies to literally 'Get into the swim.' You never know what your chances are until you turn out to the practices where you will get coaching and any further information you may want.

Last year Varsity women tied with McGill for first place at the Intercollegiate meet. If everyone with any experience in swimming or diving turns out to these practices, we will have a strong team to fight for us at the swimming meet at McGill in November.

The Intercollegiate tennis meet is being held at Queen's on October 22 and 23. This means that the College tennis tournaments and then the interfaculty tournament must be completed by this date. The tournament lists will be up soon in all the colleges so keep watching for them. Like all college tournaments, the tennis games are loads of fun, providing new contacts with other girls either in your own particular college or faculty or in the other colleges and faculties and also chances for future friendly games. So whether you are a Senior or a Freshie, if you can wield a racket, sign the tournament lists and besides having some fun yourself you will help your college or faculty which needs players for the interfaculty tournament.

Tennis managers—Please get in touch with either Cay Fowler or Jane Matthews as soon as possible.

Ready To Operate

Nearing completion, after two years of construction, the new Mechanical Building is now open for some classes. Designed by Allward and Gouinlock, it has a machine design drafting room on the top floor. The second floor houses an air-conditioned lecture room for 350 students, in addition to two other lecture rooms for 132 students each. A machine shop and library are on the first floor and a 200 by 600 foot laboratory in the basement. In addition there are common rooms, museum and allied laboratories.

Blues Ready For Test With Beaches Indians In Exhibition Opener

By HANK WESTCOTT
Sports Editor

What is probably the best-coached, best conditioned, and highest spirited football team that Varsity has had for years will be pitted against the Beaches-Indians ORFU entry in Varsity Stadium tomorrow afternoon.

Team Grunts, Groans

In preparation for the first exhibition game of the season coach Bob Masterson put his numerous charges through a rugged practice session last night, hoping that they will near the physical condition of the Beaches. For close to two hours the team whipped through calisthenics, running, and practice in kicking, passing, blocking, and the new plays.

The odd part about it was the enthusiasm shown by this year's Blues. They even seemed to enjoy it as they whipped savagely into the blocking dummy, under the encouraging cajoling of coach Masterson.

Top Condition Shown

The two weeks at the Ontario Athletic Training Camp at Lake Couchiching plus the week of earnest endeavours on the Trinity field have jolted the Blues into top preseason condition. And in that short time, too, they have learned the intricacies of Masterson's 58 plays, most of which require superb timing. Some of these new plays have more deception than the FBI with men milling around in the backfield like housewives at a fire sale.

The Masterson-Folwell-Williams coaching trio are tough too. They move hither and yon through the congregation—nearly fifty practiced with the seniors last night—dispensing advice, criticism, and approbation. And the team thrives on it.

CUMMINGS RETURNS

Bruce Cummings, whose pitching and kicking did much to edge Varsity into second place last fall is back again this year, with all his football faculties intact. Last night he unleashed some of his unerring tosses halfway across the field into the arms of the chosen receiver. He was brushing up on his placement kicking last night too, and once missed a bunch of perspiring linemen by inches.

Volpe Changes Spot

Nick Volpe, this year converted to the backfield from an end, seems to be going well in his new spot. Ted Toogood, he of the sensational kick run-backs last year, is back again as are other backfielders Waldon, Sabiston, Huycke, and Henry.

The line also will have many familiar names in the lineup this semester with Jones, Scott, Copp, Clark, Mustard, Beatty, Gray and McMillen forming a nucleus for this year's line.

In spite of losing more than four pounds at Lake Couchiching in the first practice alone, the line will average upwards of 200 pounds against Balmy Beach-Indians tomorrow, while the backfielders average weight hovers close to 190, according to statistician, press-agent, and manager, Bill Bell. This makes it one of the heaviest of Varsity teams.

He Knows The Plays! !

The Beaches have a decided edge in seasoning, having already won two and lost one in their ORFU loop this year. But having Joe Kane on the Varsity squad could be quite an asset. He played for Beaches until a couple of weeks ago and is somewhat familiar with the plays.

Tickets for tomorrow's game are included in the book of tickets which will be on sale again today at the south door of the arena. Game time is 2:15.

Hans Gruber New Conductor Of BC Symphony

Hans Gruber, last year's conductor of the U. of T. Symphony Orchestra and the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus, has become one of Canada's youngest full-fledged conductors. At 24 years of age, he is now in charge of the orchestra of the Victoria Symphony Society in British Columbia.

Mr. Gruber left Toronto last Thursday by air, and received a warm welcome in Victoria on his arrival there. Rehearsals for the first in the series of six concerts, of which the Victoria group is to give four, have already begun. The first concert will take place November 1st.

"Much of the credit for the undoubted success of the last three seasons of the Orchestra here must go to Hans Gruber," said Mr. E. A. Macdonald, General Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council. Last year, the Orchestra and its Chorus gave 12 concerts, played to audiences totalling over 10,000 in Toronto, Ajax, McMaster University at Hamilton, and Queens University. Critics found high praise for their performances of Shostakovitch's 5th Symphony, Beethoven's 3rd Piano Concerto, and the Mozart Requiem Mass in which the 80-piece Orchestra accompanied the 175-voice Mixed Chorus.

When the Victoria Symphony Association approached Sir Ernest MacMillan, conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, early this summer, Sir Ernest recommended Mr. Gruber for the position of new conductor of the western city's orchestra. A recent tribute to the young musician came when the Mayor of Victoria requested a performance this next April of the Requiem Mass by the Victoria musical group under the U. of T.'s former conductor.

"I am sure he will do an excellent job in Victoria," said Sir Ernest.

Born in Czechoslovakia, Hans Gruber came with his family to Canada in 1939. In Toronto he attended Lawrence Park Collegiate and graduated in 1947 from University College in Pass Arts. Last year, he was engaged in graduate work here while devoting a great deal of his time to the Orchestra and Chorus. While with the U. of T. organization, he worked with such soloists as pianists Marian Grudeff, George Crum and Alan Blumenthal, organist Eleanor Tait, and the four Conservatory artists who took leading parts in the Requiem Mass.

It is expected that the SAC music committee will make an announcement early next week regarding the choice of a successor

Varsity Radio Show Seeks Script Writers

The 1948-49 S.A.C. Radio Committee is already laying plans for this year's radio activity on the campus, it was announced yesterday by Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, IV Trinity.

Gwynne-Timothy, who headed last year's committee said that Kilocycle College, the S.A.C.-sponsored radio course, would probably be in operation again this year, with the possibility of an advanced course for those who took last year's lectures. Another projected feature was the use of a wire recorder, so that workshop groups could listen to their own productions.

Gwynne-Timothy said he was not certain about the actual airing of university shows, but that Ross McLean, a member of last year's committee who is now in the C.B.C. Talks department, had been appointed as a liaison officer between the Corporation and the S.A.C.

This year's committee will be headed by Paul Fauteux, III St. Michael's, and the Radio Workship will be directed by Buzz Thomas, III U.C. Peter Dobell, of Trinity, will be Director of Programs. Robert Gill, Director of Hart House Theatre, will act as staff advisor.

The committee has started looking for scripts and potential script writers, and intends to make a formal announcement of its plans in this respect soon. It is expected that concrete plans will be announced early next week.

More Than 2,200 Men Throughout Canada To Take COTC Course

More than 2,200 students at 25 Canadian universities across the country will be taking Canadian Officer's Training Corps training this year, it was learned in Ottawa this week. The figure represents an increase of approximately 400 over last year's COTC quota.

During the past summer more than 1800 students attended Army schools and camps—an increase of 600 over summer training period of 1947.

Authorities say that interest in COTC training at the universities is rapidly increasing. Students, who during summer camp periods are paid full pay for commissioned rank, qualify for commissions in either the Active or Reserve Force—upon completion of their training.

University Librarian To Continue Service Rendered Last Year

In an interview yesterday, W. S. Wallace, University Librarian, said he intends to continue keeping one or more officials in charge of the catalogue system to show the students how to use the catalogue and where the books are situated. This comparatively recent innovation was instituted last year and met with much approval.

Mr. Wallace said "Each undergraduate will receive all the attention he wishes."

There were few summer loans. Last summer the books had to be renewed only once monthly, while the previous year a two week renewal rule was in force.

The book situation for undergraduates has improved to some extent. Fewer books are out of print and this session it will be possible to obtain copies of a number of books previously unavailable.

The losses were decreased last year because the students had to present their Admit to Lecture Card before borrowing a book and,

Hydro Shortage Reflected On Campus, Power Reduced

Did you forget to pull out the toaster plug this morning when you left the table, girls? Did you disconnect the curling iron when last you used it? If not, YOU may be the cause of a campus-wide, even an Ontario-wide power shortage. Diligent scientists and engineers will be unable to continue epoch-making experiments, the burglar-alarm in Whitney hall will fail to respond, electric clocks around the campus would cease to run and chaos would result. This is how a power shortage may effect you.

"Unless there is full co-operation from every under-graduate to conserve power, there will have to be definite power cuts." said Col. Bonus, Buildings Superintendent, yesterday. As compared to the meter readings of October '47 the borderline has been reached in power consumption. A certain amount of power is generated by steam but the 84% hydro power allottment to the university is running close. Instructions to colleges, departments, and caretakers to conserve electricity have been sent out. Students also are asked to co-operate if a power cut is to be avoided. There will be no cuts this year yet Col. Bonus said, but everyone should take time off to switch out a light which is burning uselessly. "You may not think it much but it all adds up," he said.

Varsity Staff To Meet

There will be an important meeting for all members of the Varsity staff in Room 13, UC, at 1 o'clock Monday, Sept. 27th. All people who have expressed their desire to write for The Varsity are invited as well as those who have not yet applied.

Vacancies Filled By New Positions From Simcoe Hall

New appointments in many departments of the University have been announced by Simcoe Hall. Some are designed to fill vacancies and others to take care of increased expansion in these departments.

Two new associate directors, Mr. W. Arch Bryce and Mr. J. Roy Gilley, have been appointed in the Department of University Extension. Mr. Bryce will continue to be in charge of the Division of Public Safety and Mr. Gilley will be in charge of refresher courses and business courses in evening classes.

Dr. Ulrich Leo, a graduate of the University of Gottingen and recently a member of the Faculty of William Penn College, has been appointed Special Lecturer in Italian and Spanish. New appointments in the Department of History include Mrs. M. Albright and Mr. R. V. Allen, lecturers.

In the School of Social Work, Miss Leona Massoth becomes Director of Field Work, holding the rank of Associate Professor, and Albert Rose, Ph.D., has been appointed Assistant Professor of Social Work. Miss Massoth is a graduate of the School of Social Service Administration, University of Chicago, and was formerly an Assistant Professor of Social Work at the University of Indiana and Executive Secretary of the American Association of Schools of Social Work from 1941 to 1946. Dr. Rose has been Director of Research of the Toronto Welfare Council and Special Lecturer on the staff of the School for the past two years.

Two more appointments to the School are those of Miss Emily Hatch, as Lecturer, and Miss Doris Grotewohl as half-time Lecturer. Miss Hatch holds masters degrees in Education and Social Work, and Miss Grotewohl came to Toronto's School last year from Boston to be Field Supervisor in Group Work.

Mr. Robert Fennell, chairman of the Museum Board, announced the appointment of Miss Helen E. Fernald to the position of Keeper of the East Asiatic Department in the Royal Ontario Museum of Archeology. Miss Fernald replaces Bishop W. C. White who retired on June 30th. Bishop White has been named Keeper Emeritus and Honorary Librarian of the Chinese Library.

Miss Fernald, a graduate of Mount Holyoke College, after a distinguished career in the United States and extensive travel in Europe and America, came to Toronto in November, 1944, to assist Bishop White and to teach in the then recently founded school of Chinese studies of the University. She was Acting Keeper during the Bishop's absence in China last year.

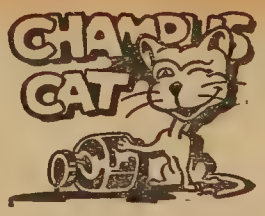
Your Newspaper



During its long and varied career dating back to 1880 The Varsity has grown with the University. From a semi-literary monthly journal it has gradually emerged as a full-fledged newspaper serving the needs of thousands of students across this sprawling campus. From the millions of words streaming across its pages over the years students have been informed and kept abreast of the teeming activity of undergraduate affairs.

But it is not merely a dispenser of news alone. Through its columns, the editors of The Varsity have tried to gauge student thought, to stimulate it, analyze it, and to mould it. For better or for worse The Varsity has tried to hold true to those interests to which it deems itself dedicated —the student body. And since the student body is a part of the larger organization, the University, The Varsity has, and will continue to have, a loyalty to the institution.

In order to fulfill its proper role, however, The Varsity must, at all times, retain its editorial freedom. This freedom is given to the paper by its publishers, the Students' Administrative Council, and by the University, and is held in trust and guarded against abuse. It may be used "to campaign in a spirit of tolerance and co-operation in order to secure improvement and to bring about mutually beneficial changes in the interest of the undergraduate body as a whole". This The Varsity pledges itself to do.

On a large campus such as this it is impossible for The Varsity to present a unified voice of student opinion. Undergraduates' views are too varied and complex to permit us to speak for all students. At the same time, The Varsity will not be the organ of any pressure group or faction. Fairness and impartiality will be our watchword. But impartiality or neutrality in the editorial columns would lead only to an insipid, vacuous policy. We will have many causes to espouse and criticisms to offer. We will take positive stands on various issues and though we may, at times, provoke your wrath or disapproval, we will do so because we feel it to be in the best interests of the student body.

The Varsity is your newspaper. Your contributions, your interest, your suggestions and criticisms, are the wheels which keep it turning. Without your active participation it could not continue to function. Only by your reactions can we gauge the effectiveness of our work and discover if we are discharging our responsibilities. The Varsity represents you, the undergraduate body of the University of Toronto. Your hopes, your plans, are all reflected in it. The yardstick of your co-operation will be the measure of our success.

Buildomology Or Where to Find It

We publish herewith a short alphabetically arranged guide to University buildings for the handy reference use of the new crop of freshmen.

1 The Anatomy Building: This building is full of long, indirectly lighted labyrinthine corridors, the walls of which are hung with drawings [illegible]intings of beautiful girls who have been culled from the pages of the last nine years of Esquire. Students going through for M.D. are required to walk through the corridors (a total distance of 23 miles) at least twice during the Michaelmas term.

2 Burwash Hall: This building is inhabited by monks who cultivate burrs and make a kind of paint out of them called "burwash." The walls of the tuck shop in Hart House are painted with burwash.

3 The Biological Building: A game goes on here all the time between male and female members. Pasted on the nose of the contestants are small bits of paper called "Litmus Paper." The girls have pink pieces and the boys blue ones. In this game the players, who are armed with hypodermics (containing hormones of a certain nature) chase each other around the rooms. When a contestant is stabbed with one of the needles, his or her piece of paper changes color and he or she retires from the game. At the end of the game all the pieces of paper are collected and a graph is drawn.

4 Botany Building: The word Botany here is a corruption of the word "botty" from the word "bott" or "bot" from the gaelic "botus" a body worm or "bolteag", a maggot. As you have no doubt already guessed, the Botany building is filled with dead horses and rotten apples. No one has ever been inside except Salvador Dali who visited sometime in the 1920's.

5 The Chemistry Building: Entirely devoted to the production of poison gas.

6 The Observatory: Here may be found the oldest man in all of Greater Toronto. He lives in the glass dome on top of the building and forecasts the weather by observing the flight of birds with a telescope. Incidentally, the Meteoro-logical building on Bloor street has nothing to do with the weather. It is a honey factory, as you can easily tell by what they keep in the garden. The frosted glass dome on top of the Observatory is to prevent the birds from watching the old man.

7 Hart House: is the building on the north sector. This building is where the men go when they have to . . . escape from freshies who came to university with the express purpose of snagging a man. There are many rooms in Hart House devoted expressly to the art of self defence from these same females who batter at the door waiting to be let in. These rooms are the fencing room, the bowling room and if she isn't a nice girl we have the wrestling room. All instructors in these manly arts of self defence have had many years experience in trying to escape from the weaker sex.

There may be a shortage of books in popular demand for reference, since professors continue to insist on old books which have not been reprinted. Mr. Wallace said he usually suggested an alternative reference if the book is out of print.

Going to Conference With Open Mind—Hogan U. of T. P. C. President

George Hogan, President of the University Progressive Conservative Club stated last night the University PC Club intended sending delegates to the national party convention to be held in Ottawa in October when a new leader for the Federal Progressive Conservative Party will be elected.

"Open Minds"

"University of Toronto delegates will be attending the convention and are going with open minds," Hogan stated.

The day prior to the start of the National Convention delegates of the University of Toronto PC Club will attend a meeting of the Progressive Conservative Student Federation. At this meeting the delegates will try to obtain a constructive statement of policy from the party. They will also present resolutions on employment, fiscal policy and social security.

The meeting of the Progressive Conservative Student Federation will take place on Wednesday, September 29, in Ottawa. All students who are members of the PC party are entitled to attend the Convention as observers.

"The Progressive Conservative Convention, unlike the Liberal Convention held in the latter part of August, will be an open convention in which the rank and file delegates will be able to take part in and decide the issues.," Hogan said. "We intend to fight for a constructive statement of policy."

Al Lawrence, national president of the PC Federation who will be one of the delegates from the Toronto campus, addressed a meeting of the Toronto District Young Progressive Conservative Council Tuesday night. In his address, Lawrence charged the National Progressive Party with failure to produce any sound party policy.

"The man in the street in general knows what the CCF policy is. Does he know the Progressive Conservative Policy?" asked Lawrence.

Because the answer to this question was negative Lawrence urged young members to go to the convention and make sure they initiate a specific policy for the first time, in 18 years, that will not only win votes but might win an election. He urged them to go to Ottawa and plug for a definite policy and howl down any party bosses who might attempt rigging.

Neglect Aims

"In order to clarify the party policy, the members themselves must be aware of the exact aims of the party. These were summarized in a little booklet at the annual meeting, he continued. "The trouble is

Frosh Elections And Tea Dances Start Vic Year

Victoria College is going to be a busy place this year if the students and the V.C.U. carry through all their plans.

So far the chief event has been the Freshman Week-end, which started things off with a bang. This Friday the first year president and the reps. to the assembly will be chosen. This assembly boasts 75 representatives who will meet once a month and form the basis for Vic's claim to the "most democratic student government in Canada".

The first dance at Vic will be the "Howdy Hop" on Friday, September 24. The V.C.U. promises to follow this up with lots of tea dances throughout the season.

Friendship seems to be the password this year at Vic, with the new co-ed common room being the chief inducer. There you can chat about such other Vic doings as the Music and Drama Clubs, the Debating Parliament, the Varsity Christian Fellowship and the Student Christian Movement. Or perhaps you would prefer to sit and read the "Acta", the first issue of which will be out October 18.

New Two-Year Course Begun at U.S. College

Morgantown, West Virginia, Sept. 23—(Exchange)—A new two-year course leading to a degree of Associate in Arts has been inaugurated at the University of West Virginia.

Freshmen entering the University this semester may elect a new program of integrated studies in the College of Arts and Sciences to be completed in two years, and if they choose, may go on and in two more years earn the degree of either Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science.

The new two-year degree is made possible by introductory general courses covering the four main areas of knowledge.

New Assistant

The appointment of Dr. Claude Bissell, the young Dean of the men's residence at University College to presidential assistant, was announced this summer by President Smith. Professor Bissell who served in the campaign of North Western Europe and returned to University College in 1946 as lecturer in the English department.

Varsity Mission Sponsors Sunday University Service

Through various channels and by devious means, The University Christian Mission is becoming a familiar name on the campus. Through blotters, handbook, posters and the Opening University Service, students and faculty are faced with this unknown quantity. It seems to be measuring its steps towards a climax in January 1949, and the name, Bishop Stephen Neill, holds the spotlight. Beyond that not much has been revealed. The fact that The University Christian Mission Committee is sponsoring the Opening University Service this Sunday only adds to the mystery.

It is now almost two years since a representative group of faculty and students met in the Senate Chamber and under the chairmanship of President Smith agreed to work towards the sponsoring of a University Christian Mission either late in 1948 or early in 1949. Milestones along the way included the acceptance by Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Chairmanship of the General Committee and Professor Charles Leslie, Victoria College, of the vice-chairmanship. It was only this summer that Bishop Stephen Neill consented to be the Chief Missioner. The Speakers Committee, under the chairmanship of Provost Seeley, Trinity College, gathered a group of twelve or thirteen associate missioners from Canada and the United States.

In October, 1947, the Rev. Jack Bishop was appointed Secretary to the Mission on a part-time basis. On June 1, 1948, he was succeeded by the Rev. D. C. Candy, known to many on this campus as the Chaplain in Hart House.

The purpose of the Mission has best been described as an effort to "present the Christian Faith as a reasonable and challenging faith for today, to meet the needs of students and to answer their questions". This will be possible through a combination of major presentations and intimate discussion.

January 16th to 20th will be the actual days on which the Mission will take place with an evening series in Convocation Hall under the leadership of Bishop Neill, and local sessions with the other missioners throughout the four days. These will vary from formal addresses to residence bull sessions, from chapel services to after dinner addresses. The next three and a half months will see much feverish activity in preparation for the event, so that the four days will be used to the greatest advantage for all.

The Opening University Service at 11 a. m. this Sunday, September 26th, in Convocation is really the prelude to the Mission. Faculty and students are cordially invited. The special speaker for the occasion will be Dr. G. P. Gilmour, Chancellor of McMaster University. Dr. Gilmour is also Chairman of the Canadian Council of Churches.

Dr. Claude T. Bissell Former Dean of U.C. New Presidential Aide

Dr. Claude T. Bissell, 32-year-old Dean in Residence of University College, has been appointed assistant to Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto, President Sidney Smith announced this summer.

Dr. Bissell graduated from the University of Toronto with a Master's degree in 1937. The following year he entered Cornell and received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1940. Following his graduation he stayed at Cornell as an instructor in English for one year, and in 1941 he returned to Toronto as a lecturer in English in University College.

Dr. Bissell, in his official capacity, addressed a gathering of Varsity graduates in Owen Sound last week in connection with the University Drive for Funds.

"If you were to stop any ten Toronto students on the campus, you would find on an average that five were ex-service students receiving D.V.A. benefits," Dr. Bissell said. "Of the remaining five, one would be the recipient of a bursary or the holder of a scholarship."

Forseeing the complexity and acuteness of the problem at the termination of the present D.V.A. scheme Dr. Bissell said, "As a method of adjusting ourselves to the growing demand for higher education, we could, on the one hand, remove every barrier and eagerly embrace the belief, held by not a few these days, that citizenship in a democratic state automatically entitles one to a university education; or we could, on the other hand, work out a system of restrictions that would effectively reduce enrolment. The dangers inherent in these two extremes are obvious: for the first, a total lowering of standards, the abandonment by the university of its prime duty as guardian and preserver of intellectual excellence; for the second, the making of the university into a sanctuary for an aristocratic elite. Surely, the real solution lies in following the policy that has been so firmly enunciated by President Smith: The opening of the doors of the university to anyone provided he has shown that he is fitted in mind and character to profit by the rigorous training that a university offers."

NEW TIMEPIECES

Those who use the main gym and the boxing room will see two new clocks installed. The clocks, compliments of Players Cigarettes are electrically operated and similar to those at the arena and the stadium. The gym clock has space for team names, scores and time of course—a real asset to the gym.

SAC Places All From Waitresses To Grave-Diggers

The Student Administrative Council Employment Office in Hart House has placed three thousand students in jobs this past summer.

In January, the National Employment Service sent a representative to the S.A.C. Employment Office, and both services co-operated to send students out on many jobs; at resorts, as camp counselors, as waitresses, as fishing and hunting guides, in mining and engineering jobs. "We even undertook jobs like undertaker's pick-up service and grave-diggers" says Mrs. Richards, Supervisor of the S.A.C. Employment Office. "Engineers are required to do twelve hundred hours practical work during the summers and the co-operation of industry to facilitate this is very commendable," she explained.

The N.E.S. places people in different cities and provinces of the dominion too. Many U. of T. students travelled east to Prince Edward Island and west to British Columbia to take jobs that the N.E.S. obtained for them. Married couples worked at lodges and cottages. Many people were placed at the trade fair and Exhibition.

Mrs. Richards is married to a fourth year S.P.S. student. The Richards live close to the campus and come to school together every morning. Mrs. Richards says that she enjoys being around the campus, and knowing the students and life of the university, something which she has in common with her student husband.

CELEBRATES "100TH"

Ottawa, Sept. 23—(CUP)—The University of Ottawa is commemorating its one hundredth anniversary this year. Celebrations will take place October 16, 17, and 18.

A pageant, illustrating some important dates in the history of the University will be staged, and a reunion, and a banquet have been planned. Honorary degrees will be conferred on the 18th.

UC Quadrangle To Be Site Of Frosh Fun Fest Today

Today's "Fun Fest", designed to introduce freshmen to University College life, is the first of a series of events that are already in the advanced stages of planning, college executives announced yesterday.

The Fun Fest will begin at 4 p.m. when UC freshmen will meet in the Junior Common Room before departing on a conducted tour of Hart House. At 4.15, UC first year women will meet in the Women's Union, St. George Street, for Hart House Warden Ignatieff's showing of a special movie designed to interest new students. The men's tour of Hart House will be followed by a return to the JCR where freshmen will be addressed by the Registrar of University College, Mr. W. J. McAndrew.

Frosh and Freshies are scheduled to meet in the UC quadrangle at approximately 5.30 for the beginning of the fair-like displays, booths and entertainments designed to provide first year students with their first contacts with clubs and groups of all types.

Buffet supper will hold the spotlight in the quad at seven o'clock. Arrangements have been made to provide refreshments for the 400 students who have bought tickets for the entire event. It is expected that most of the 400 will take part in the torchlight snake-dance around the campus ending up at the COTC Drill Hall for dancing to the music of Bob Cringan and his orchestra.

Among the other events scheduled for later dates are the Red and White Nights which will again form a major part of the year's activities. The first is to take place Oct. 27th. The Soph-Frosh Banquet will give freshmen and sophomores a chance to get acquainted. Arrangements have been completed for the event, which will take place in the Royal York Hotel, Oct. 6th. The traditional "come single go home double" policy will be in force.

The Undergrad, UC's literary magazine, has already gone to press for its first issue. The staff has been working on the magazine through the summer, and is now receiving contributions for the next issue.

Plans for the other University College organizations, such as the Parliament and the Players' Guild, have not yet been announced, but executives are engaged in preliminary activity in all of them.

U of T Extension Course Will Present Six Plays

The University Extension Players, a group of drama students at the evening classes given by the University of Toronto's Extension Department, has announced its program for the coming season. It includes six major productions, an evening of one act plays, two guest speakers and a film showing.

Prize-Winning Play

"Enos at Breakfast," the prize-winning Canadian play at the Dominion Drama Festival last spring, by Robertson Davies, is the players' first presentation in the Library Theatre on Oct. 16th. Professor T. H. Underhill of the History Department of the University of Toronto will be guest speaker and will discuss George Bernard Shaw.

"Mr. Pim Passes By", by A. A. Milne, will be produced November 13. Rose Frankens' "Claudia" follows on December 4.

Daphne Du Maurier's "The Years Between", the January 28 production, is domestic drama. Clive Brooke and Nora Swinburne played the leading roles on the London stage production of this play. Michael Redgrave and Valerie Hobson appeared in the British film version.

G. B. Shaw's "The Apple Cart" will end the Players' activities next March.

An old-fashioned melodrama "Fortune's Frolic" will provide New Year's entertainment.

The director has arranged for two guest companies, the Dickens Fellowship Players and the Trinity College Dramatic Society to perform for the club.

Will Do One Act Plays

The Players Club will close the season with an evening of one act plays, including Ian Hay's "Burglar Alarm" and Robertson Davies "At The Gates of The Righteous".

The first meeting of the club will be held September 25 at 8.15. Members will be shown a film version of Shakespeare's "As You Like It", with Sir Lawrence Olivier and Elizabeth Bergner in the leading roles.

Membership in the Players' Club may be obtained from Miss Jean Finlayson, 30 Roxborough St., E., or at the door.

LPP Delegates Score High Fees

Delegates from five Canadian universities condemned "Ottawa's subservience to American imperialism as a threat to Canadian independence" at the third annual convention of university Labor Progressive party clubs here this month, the National Student L.P.P. committee said today.

A committee statement said the students discussed "steps to meet the threat of a third world war and the increasing economic problems faced by Canadian students."

The conference charged an attempt was being made to "militarize the campus" by the policies of the federal government.

National LPP organizer Stanley Ryerson urged students to "unite to resist any attempt to militarize the campus or restrict academic freedom."

Delegates said students — especially student veterans—were facing higher fees and living costs and asked students "to carry on a vigorous campaign against these trends."

A Southern Yankee

That old Charlie Chaplin stuff is back again, but this time the laurels go to comedian Red Skelton, if any are to be handed out.

M.G.M. rolls back the years to 1865, time of the Civil War in America. A Southern Yankee could hardly be called a serious sketch on the Civil War, in view of the fact that it has Mr. Skelton prominently portrayed in nine-tenths of the scenes. As usual, Mr. Skelton has his raw bag of tricks and amazingly versatile mug with him. A Southern Yankee is therefore a strict Skelton tour de force. Clowning predominates, wherein Red tries to emulate some of Bob Hope's amusing gesticulations, toss in several gas house antics of the Marx Brothers, and still emerge as Red Skelton.

Naturally the picture had to have a plot so the script writers cooked up a fat juicy southern fried spy, sizzling with fabulous deeds, and set him down in St. Louis. The writers then placed a Union counter-spy ring right on hand. Mr. Skelton is naturally not neglected. The convenient thing about it all, however, is that spy, spy-catchers, and Mr. Skelton all share the same hotel. When Mr. Skelton, as the extra ridiculous bell boy, decides to turn spy catcher himself and nab the notorious Grey Spider (name of spy), why of course all Hell is ready to break loose. It does. No pulled punches are overlooked in A Southern Yankee. It's amazing what things people can do by accident, but the Hollywood way. The Grey Spider is on the verge of putting our hero of his misery, when accidentally and conveniently Red falls into a chair throwing his feet up to floor the villain, for the first astounding round of incidents, which eventually leads to the end of the picture. End meaning end not climax. This kind of a film does not need a climax, or rather the script writers carefully overlooked it. Incidentally George Coulouris plays the Grey Spider.

that even a great number of the party members in the House of Commons have not read the book and disagree with it," Lawrence stated.

His final attack was against the older Tory members of parliament" who would rather sit back and criticize the Liberal government than come out with a positive policy of their own.."

Delegates from Toronto who will represent the Young Progressive Conservatives will be Al Lawrence, President of the PC Student's Federation; George Hogan, President of the University of Toronto PC Club, Ted Eisenberg, Frank Green, Gowan Guest and Art Davis. Several other students will be attendnig as delegates and delegates at large.

Hart House Play Needs Freshmen For First Play

First year students at the university who are talented or even interested in dramatics have an opportunity to appear in the first Hart House production of the season, "Skin of Our Teeth", by Thornton Wilder, which will open Saturday, October 23 and play throughout the following week.

Although the main characters were cast last spring, Robert Gill, Director of Hart House Theatre, has announced that there are many small parts in which he wishes to cast first year people only. This, he feels, will give them an introduction to the theatre. Appointments for readings may be made by dropping in at or calling Mr. Gill's office, MIdway 7193. Rehearsals are to begin almost immediately.

"Skin of Our Teeth" was a Pulitzer Prize winner in 1942 and in its original production starred Tallulah Bankhead and Frederic March in the leading roles. The play is a comedy but wherever it has been presented, it has caused a great deal of controversy among theatregoers. It is like a comic strip view of history. An idea of why it becomes such a controversial issue may be gained when it is learned that two of the leading characters are celebrating their 5,000th wedding anniversary and a mammoth and a dinosaur are among the play's characters.

Anna Cameron will play the Tallulah Bankhead role of Sabina. She performed last season, as the wife in "Jason" and the sphinx in "The Infernal Machine" two years ago. Mrs. Antrobus will be played by Aubrey Lowrie who also appeared in "Jason" in the role of Mrs. Kennedy. Eric House will play Mr. Antrobus. He took the role of one of the guards in the U.C. Players' Guild production of "Antigone" last year. Eleanor Swan and Edward Follows will make their first appearance in a Hart House production as the children, Gladys and Henry.

Not only is Mr. Gill interested in first year people to act in "Skin of Our Teeth" but he is interested in anyone who wishes to act. There will be three other plays during the 1948-49 season and reading for roles in these will begin almost immediately. Interested students are asked to contact Mr. Gill.

Life With Father

The screen version of Clarence Day's gold-mine, "Life With Father", is currently on display at the Tivoli and Eglinton. The play by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, based on Mr. Day's widely read stories, ran for something like seven years on Broadway, and is still seen from time to time on the local stage. Donald Ogden Stewart, in writing his commendable screen adaptation, has made only a few concessions to Hollywood.

The story, as most of the English-speaking world must know by now, concerns the Day household in New York, around 1887, and particularly Mrs. Day's efforts to have the paterfamilias submit to baptism. The role of Clarence Day, Sr., is superbly filled by William Powell, whose acting heretofore has been confined chiefy to registering urbanity. The earthly expletives which enlivened the play have necessarily been softened, but Mr. Powell utters such words as "gad" and "tarnation" with such energy that they sound almost profane.

Irene Dunne plays the harassed Mrs. Day without making her appear featherbrained, as a less competent actress might have done. Another excellent performance is turned in by Derek Scott, a boy of about five, as the youngest of the Days. He is, I think, the first likable child actor in screen history.

There is, however, an unfortunate sub-plot concerning an affaire de coeur between Clarence Day, Jr., and a visiting schoolgirl from Ohio, portrayed by Jimmy Lydon and Elizabeth Taylor. Early in the picture the youth expresses his disdain for girls, but on taking a good look at Miss Taylor he is, of course, smitten. The ensuing courtship is carried on in a stumbling, geewhiz manner reminiscent of those radio serials about perennial juveniles. Adolescence has seldom appeared less attractive.

The settings, representing an upper middle class home of the Victorian era, are noteworthy for their beauty and authenticity. The production, filmed in Technicolor, is handsome without being dazzling. —Vincent Egan

An Open Letter to U.C.

DEAR STUDENTS:

We are sending this letter to you in order to advise, urge and implore you to watch this space next Wednesday from now on for U.C.'s gift to the progress of journalistic endeavour. We refer to a column of impressions and information designed to impress and inform our readers.

We should like to make it perfectly clear that we are not attempting to emulate the literary (and we use the word loosely) efforts of a certain other arts college which is located in some inconspicuous corner of the campus, far from the mainstream of university activity On the contrary, we intend to present an intelligent, sophisticated and mature column for the deep and genteel enjoyment of the intelligent, sophisticated and mature ladies and gentlemen of University College.

It should also be emphasized, and here we speak in all seriousness and sincerity, that this column will definitely NOT be an official voice of either the U.C. Lit. or W.U.A. executives. Nor is the writing of this new column to be the exclusive right of any one individual. Since we are one of those strange creatures who rather prefers pleasure to work, we will only be too overjoyed to give this space to any U.C. student who is mad enough to take on the burden of writing our little column. If interested contact yours truly at the Lit offices any old time. We would also appreciate any ideas and contributions you may be good enough to forward to us.

We know that your column will vary greatly from week to week. We have hopes of being humorous at times. There will be other weeks when we will be indignant. And we fear that we might often be deliberately controversial. However we shall try to be consistent in giving to you a column that will let you know what is happening around our college.

Speaking of things happening, we want to give the word to all frosh and freshies and remind them about the sensational FUN FEST scheduled for this evening. The boys and girls working on the affair have prepared a program which promises to put the first year people in a happy mood for the rest of their college days. Tickets may be obtained at the party. The fellows meet in Junior Common Room at four p.m. The girls will congregate at 4:15 p.m. in the Women's Union. Eventually the two groups will get together . . . we personally guarantee that. Remember — fraternization is our specialization!

In conclusion we should like to express the tremendous personal happiness we feel on returning to U.C. for another year. It's wonderful to see all of our friends in the rotunda, on the steps, in the J.C.R. . . . oh yes, and in lectures too. It should be a great year.

QUESTION-OF-THE-WEEK . . . Since the Hydro has appealed for voluntary saving of electricity, wouldn't it be proper for the authorities concerned to rid us of that obnoxious light in front of Whitney Hall's night entrance.

Don't forget that next Wednesday's Varsity will carry U.C.'s own column. Until then, have fun and good luck in the coming term.

Your friend,
Hal Rosenthal.

Varsity Tennis Tourney Begins Wednesday

Ted Reeve Says:

"I Don't Know Who Will Win"

By ED. SOKOLOWSKI

"I don't know whether we'll win or not," remarked Ted Reeve, coach of the Beaches-Indian rugby team, talking about the Beaches-Varsity game tomorrow, "but we are far ahead of the Varsity team in conditioning and have played a few games."

"The game this Saturday afternoon should be a good one to see," continued Ted, who also writes for an afternoon paper.

Three former Reeve men will be wearing the Blue sweaters Saturday afternoon when Varsity meet the Beaches-Indians and Ted Reeve believes that they will be an asset to the Blue team.

"Bill Stockman and Bill Petrie are very good team players and are good to have around. Our plays are a little different from last year, and I don't think these two will hamper us much, but Joe Kane may be a little troublesome since he played a few games with us at the beginning of the season."

Ted Reeve and Bob Masterson have seen quite a bit of each other during the summer and according to Ted, Bob is one of the best coaches in Canada. "Bob", says Ted, "is very thorough and I have high respect for him."

With regard to the Intercollegiate circuit Ted remarked that the Western Mustangs will be the team to beat. The Western backfield is something, but if Cummings stays in one piece and the linemen like Copp and Mustard continue to hit hard, Varsity should make a good showing.

Most of the Beach-Indians players will be in action Saturday afternoon except for Don Crowe, quarter, who was injured in the game with the Hamilton Tigers, Wednesday night.

Speaking of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

Who was the comedian who said "It's so peaceful in the country"? One day at the Blues' training camp at Lake Couchiching was a sure cure guaranteed to send any embryo naturalist scurrying back to the city for cover. There follows a few excerpts from the diary of an anonymous character who braved three days in the Blues' lair.

Lake Couchiching, Tuesday, Sept. 15th

7:00 a.m.—Rude awakening by rotund Blues' manager whose chief claim to fame is a beautiful wife. He brightly shouts at the top of his voice that dawn has cracked.

7:00 a.m.—Contemplation.

7:32 a.m.—End of contemplation. Chubby friend peers around corner to check effect of vocal blast. Effect has been negligible.

7:33 a.m.—Tactics take on a physical nature. Effect no longer negligible.

7:34 a.m.—Race to stake claim spot in front of fireplace. Finds all key positions adequately filled. Crumbles about size of football coaches and managers.

8:00 a.m.—(sharp)—Prolonged breakfast bell. Shivers way across to dining room, trying to act nonchalant as if he always took a bracing walk before breakfast. Suggests pre-breakfast swim, but drops subject under cold stare from Head-Coach.

8:01 a.m.—Is among first to enter dining-room.

8:15 a.m.—Peers over coach's shoulder as he charts times and progress of stragglers.

8:16 a.m.—Bill Scott arrives, one bowl of porridge, 3 eggs and 6 pieces of bacon late.

8:19 a.m.—Scott has overtaken and passed his teammates. Is starting fifth egg.

8:30 a.m.—Bill Lloyd sidles over to Head Coach, peers over his shoulder anxiously, and informs coach that he hates to be a squealer, but he's seen evidence that the boys are planning a big break that night. Saws and files have been stashed away and intrigue is plainly written on the faces of the ringle leaders.

8:31 a.m.—Head Coach checks faces of ringleleaders.

8:31 a.m.—Head Coach checks faces, or ringle leaders for intrigue. Checks Lloyd's face for sanity. Decides to be fence-sitter.

8:35 to 9:29 a.m.—Recuperation from breakfast. Less room than ever in front of fire-place.

9:30 a.m.—Calmly watches 43-odd huskies feign enthusiasm as they scamper towards playing field and two hours practice.

10:00 a.m.—Face twitches slightly as rookie backfielder confides that his third concussion didn't hurt any more than the first.

12:00 a.m.—Dinner-bell. So soon after breakfast! What's this! Spinach and poached eggs! Who ever heard of spinach and poached eggs?

12:30-2:29— Recuperates from spinach and poached eggs.

2:30 p.m.—Notes that players also show strain of spinach and eggs.

5:30 p.m.—Hears that boys plan game of chance after. Flexes fingers meditatively.

6:30 p.m.—Mrs. Wickett makes up for spinach and eggs.

7:00 p.m.—Hears a clicking noise emanating from trainer's domicile.

7:01 p.m.—Suggests to himself that he go back and read a good book. Fails to follow suggestion.

7:02 p.m.—Enters, and is greeted with open arms. Squeamish nature rebels at the term "new blood".

10:29 p.m.—Sadly departs minus several accessories with which he had entered.

10:30 p.m.—Meets friend and makes small loan to buy gas for homeward trip.

Students Invade Athletic Office All to No Avail

Those wishing to secure Intercollegiate Football tickets and retain the good will of certain hard-working members of the Athletic office staff would be well advised to pick these tickets up at the SOUTH DOOR OF THE ARENA today or Monday between the hours of 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. No books of tickets will be sold at the Athletic office at any time.

This appeal stems from the fact that a throng, 500 by unofficial count, poured into the above named office and seriously destroyed the morale and productive efficiency of the staff.

To date there have been 1,300 books sold (at the south door of the arena) and an unlimited supply is promised so there will be plenty for all.

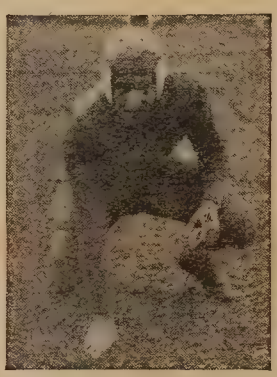
Ajax students will find tickets on sale at their own Athletic office from 12 noon till 2 p.m.

Final Day To Register Is Tuesday

Varsity's annual Interfaculty Tennis Tournament gets under way on Wednesday, September 29 at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club. Outstanding performers in this tourney will represent the University in the forthcoming Senior and Intermediate Intercollegiate contests in October.

A record should be established in the entry department this year judging by the first day's total. Entrants in the singles matches number 75 and the doubles competition entries have reached the 50 pair mark.

Top notch competition this year is assured with the entries of two-time singles champion Art Anderson who also paired with John Pawling to carry off doubles laurels last year. Also on hand will be Jack Langmaid who formed half of the runner-up doubles combination for 1947.



Registration is at the Intramural Athletic office and is open until Tuesday next at one p.m. provided the capacity enrollment of 144 contestants in the singles and sixty pairs of doubles hopefuls is not realized prior to this time. Players must register in person and may choose the times which they wish to play the first and second round matches when registering. Early registration ensures a greater variety of times from which to choose.

The draw for match opponents will be held in a manner similar to that of last year. For first-time entrants the old ballot-in-the-hat method will be used and will also take place upon registration. No entrance fee will be charged.

Regarding the selection of the Intercollegiate teams, members will be selected from tourney winners by coaches Syd Hermant and Bill Noyes. Other team members will be chosen from the winners of a round robin composed of non-winners chosen by the coaches to compete for the team. The foregoing will serve as a pattern only and the ranking of the players will be at the discretion of the coaches whose decisions will be final.

Into Action Tomorrow

Early Start For College Soccer

By SID OLYAN

The 1948 Intramural soccer loop is jumping the gun on rugby this season in what may well become a concerted effort to encroach upon the pigskin sports autumnal publicity.

Soccer representatives on the various college athletic boards are busily clearing the decks for the campaign which gets under way in the first week in October.

University College is making plans for a banner season with the first practice called for Monday, September 27th. At this time all UC and PHE "feets-ballers" are expected to turn out in shorts and running shoes to begin the arduous process known as conditioning. Practices will continue through the week, and the official words are that new players will be made welcome.

The place is the front campus of UC. 'Nuff said.

New Coach—Harold Brown Is Former Varsity Star

A former Varsity track star, Harold Brown, has been named to succeed ailing Hec Phillips as track coach at the University.

After gaining widespread track fame at Varsity with his brother Wally, Harold Brown entered the British Empire and Olympic games as a representative of Canada. He set the British Empire record in the broad jump in 1938, and in 1940 he racked up new records in the 100 yard, 200 yard, and javelin event. He graduated from Varsity in 1941, and is now teaching at North Toronto Collegiate.

Hec Phillips has been coaching the Varsity track interests since 1933, and reached the ultimate last year when all four of his intercollegiate teams won their respective championships.

VICTORIA COACH NOW AT McMASTER

Vic grid players will miss Bernie Taylor this year. After coaching the Vic team to five Mulock Cup victories in the past seven years, the hard-working coach goes to McMaster as assistant coach. He is replaced by Bill Paterson who played on the half line for Vic last year.

On The Sideline

TO THE FRESHIES
By JOAN EDDIS

By now some of that haze of your first days at University must have cleared away. You've found that you can get along with fewer Where-am-I's.

Trinity Freshies, although hampered by extraneous contraptions, have by now realized that the Buttery is not the local dairy.

PHE Freshies are getting into the swing of running from College and Yonge to Convocation Hall or UC in 10 minutes.

UC Freshies have learned that there is a distinction between the JCR and the KCR and perhaps they have realized that room number 24 cannot be found between rooms 23 and 25 but must be sought on the other side of UC.

Vic Freshies no doubt know that it is possible to have lectures in the Chapel and that to get to Women's Common Room you go through the side door, down stairs and through the lockers.

BUT

How much do you know about the many opportunities there are at University to participate in all types of sports? Perhaps you have seen the lists for the tennis tournament up on the bulletin boards. Practices for the Intercollegiate swimming team start on Monday at five thirty at UTS (at Bloor and Spadina). Soon lists for golf, softball and basketball will appear begging to be signed.

As a Freshie you look at these lists or notices and think, "I've played a bit of tennis (or baseball or some other sport), but I haven't really had much practice. It would be fun to play but I'd never have a chance to make a team. The sophs and seniors have played so much that they're sure to be better than I am. Gee, I don't know any of the kids who have signed to play. They'd never put a Freshie on the team anyway."

These thoughts are prevalent but so untrue.

At University you will find that all you need is enthusiasm.

Granted you need a little more than enthusiasm to make an intercollegiate team but all the Intramural sports are planned for your enjoyment and recreation. At practices and games what is lacking in style or form is made up for many times over by the laughs, the new friends, and healthy appetite. You will find that after a day of studying, of stuffy lecture rooms and mental anguish it's a relief to have some fresh air and an opportunity to romp around and exert yourself in a purely physical way. In most sports as many teams are formed as there are women to play.

When those notices and lists appear, don't be timid. If you're interested in any way and would like to be in on the fun and fresh air

SIGN UP AND TURN UP.

John Loves Mary

Anyone who has seen "Dear Ruth" will recognize Norman Krasna's nonsensical gaiety in "John Loves Mary" currently at the Royal Alex. It is the same sort of laugh-a-minute fun which pleases everyone—and I heartily recommend the play to those whose Supp. results are disheartening.

Here is the idea of the complicated plot: John returns from the war much in love with Mary, but brings back Lily, an English girl, as his nominal wife but really for Fred, her old beau, who is John's best friend and saved his life once. Their plans to stall John's and Mary's wedding while John and Lily go to Reno are complicated by the fact that Fred now has an American wife, and Mary's parents (the McKinleys) do their best to hurry things up. The subsequent clashes with the U. S. Army, the Paramount Theatre and Lily will make your sides ache.

John and Mary are skilfully played by Richard Derr and Jan Sterling respectively, the audience loving them as much as they each other. But my favorite was Donald MacBride as Senator McKinley: he is a movie star you'll recognize, and his superb acting is more than a pleasure to see. Toronto-born Margaret Bannerman (Mrs. McK.) was outstanding, too, as well she might be from her vast stage experience.

There were a couple of times during the play, when the actors' reactions were just a little too slow for me—perhaps the director had been advised that Torontonians' wits are as dull as their architecture or their Sundays. But don't let that keep you from starting the year off well at this delightful farce-comedy. By the way, readers will be interested to know that this is the type of play that has before now been censured by the, of all things, Un-American Activities Committee. Believe it or not.

Calling Card

With the concert and theatre season still in very low gear there will be sufficient space in the next few issues for the customary survey of events to come.

If any statement of the aims of this department should be expected, here it is: to strengthen the arm muscles of our readers that they may applaud or heave vegetables with renewed vigor; to strengthen their leg muscles to enable them to stand in line at the various box offices. In other words, to help produce a sense of participation in the many wonderful things that take place on the stages and concert platforms of the campus and beyond.

BLUES 7—BEACHES 7

Terrific 115 Yard Runback Gives Beaches 7-7 Draw; Volpe and Waldon Are Hurt

Bob Masterson's "brand new" Blues demonstrated convincingly, despite Pyzer and penalties, they were intent on cutting a wide swath down the middle of the Intercollegiate loop when they sweated to a 7-7 deadlock with Ted Reeve's Beaches-Indians on Saturday in an exhibition encounter.

The game, played before 7373 Varsity Stadium fans, spoke well for the Blues, untried till then in actual competition. Completing nine of 15 passing attempts, they carried the play throughout the larger part of the game and scored their major by virtue of the aerial prowess of Bruce Cummings and Joe Kane.

Varsity's touchdown came midway through the first quarter after Archie Jones intercepted a Porter pass and ran it down to Beaches 23 yard line. Cummings then threw to Gawinski for ten yards. Tommy Waldon was the target for the next Cummings pass which he caught on the 10 yard stripe and, evading two Balmy tacklers, crossed the line standing up. Cummings kicked the convert which was disallowed because of holding on the line by Varsity.

Pyzer Run Sensational

Diminutive Dougie Pyzer provided the most outstanding running display of the afternoon with less than 45 seconds left in the game. The speedy little half took Bill Gourlay's kick five yards behind the Balmy goal line and proceeded to dangle through most of the Varsity squad for a 115 yard sprint down the touch line to score. Smith's convert tied up the contest with barely time left for one more play.

Balmy Beach threatened early in the second quarter when Bunting recovered a Varsity fumble deep in Blue territory, but Smith's attempt went for a single field goal. Porter, later, made the second Balmy attempt for a field goal. This was also short and was run back out of danger.

Kick Two Singles

The Blues worked the ball from their own forty down to the Balmy twenty in the opening part of the second half. Huycke kicked far back of the Beaches goal where Jack Gray trapped Hazel for Varsity's sixth.

Varsity's second rouge point came soon after when Bruce Cummings booted the kick of the day, a high lofter which sailed 65 yards. Jack Gray was again first down to nail the Balmy receiver. The quarter ended with Varsity on the desirable end of a 7-1 count.

Volpe and Waldon Injured

Nick Volpe was injured when he skirted right end for seven yards

U of T Grads Holding World-Wide Elections

This month the world over 33,000 graduates of the University of Toronto are voting to elect their representatives to the Senate, one of the governing bodies of the university.

Of the 220 members of the Senate, the graduates elect more than one-third, or about 68 members. These 68, representing 22 groups of graduates from different colleges and courses of the university, cannot be members of the university staff. The remaining number, however, are members of the staff, appointed from the various faculties.

Already 27 members from 14 groups have won their seats by acclamation. Still to be elected this year are 41 members from eight groups, as follows: 12 from University College, five from Victoria College, eight from the Faculty of Medicine, five from the Faculty of Dentistry, eight from Applied Science, and one each from Forestry, Architecture, and the Pass course for teachers.

This year's election has stirred up more competition than ever before. In 1944, when the last election took place, there were competitions in only three categories; and prior to that all members had gained their seats by acclamation. All the ballot forms have been mailed to the graduates now. Besides the thousands of ballots sent to residents of Canada, 800 left the country going to such far-flung places as Japan, China, India, Cuba, Venezuela, Jamaica, South Africa, Australia, Argentine, England, Germany, and Russia.

Thus the election of the senators is an enterprize involving great distances. The ballots to foreign countries were sent by air mail at a cost of $1.50. All were posted by September 15, and the returns must be in to the University registrar's office by October 13.

The president of the University of Toronto is chairman of the Senate. The registrar is the secretary. To either of these men or to another member of the Senate come the various Students' Administrative Councils to represent their students in their dealings with the Senate. While the Board of Governors attends to the business and general governing of the university, the Senate has the power to regulate courses of study and to set examinations and degrees.

Cowan Denies Reported Increase In Meal Prices

Rumors that price increases in the Great Hall of Hart House are imminent were denied Friday by W. R. Cowan, comptroller.

"We have always resisted price increases until they have become absolutely essential," stated Mr. Cowan. "The situation is that with the increase in the price of food which has taken place since a year ago, we are concerned with how we are going to make out. Our own feeling is that things may settle down sufficiently by the end of October so that we will know what is going to happen."

The only price increase noted in Hart House has been an increase of two cents in the price of coffee in the basement Tuck Shop.

A survey of eating places throughout the campus show that the majority of them are retaining last year's prices for meals, while others have found it necessary to make increases of five cents.

Prices quoted by some of the college eating places are: Knox College, $12.50 weekly as compared to $11.00 last year; Burwash, at Victoria five cents extra for supper with no increase over last year in other meal prices; Trinity's Strachan Hall has increased prices ten cents according to Bursar E. G. Strathy.

Dinner in Ottawa Given in Honor Of PC Candidates

Student delegates to the Progressive Conservative convention this week will have a special opportunity to look over candidates for the leadership of the party, when they hold a dinner in Ottawa on Wednesday, at which most of the candidates will be present.

Al Lawrence, III Victoria, and national president of the Progressive Conservative Federation, announced Thursday that the candidates would not be asked to make speeches at the dinner.

In fact, the shoe will be on the other foot. Five or six university speakers from all across Canada will tell Messrs. Drew, Diefenbaker, Case and Fleming just what the younger group expects from the party.

Varsity Staff

There will be an important meeting for all members of The Varsity staff in room 13, U. C., at 1 o'clock today. All people who have expressed their desire to write for The Varsity are invited as well as those who have not yet applied.

Political Clubs On the Campus Busy All Summer

National conventions, a provincial election and the formation of summer schools, as well as an increasing interest in international affairs have made their mark during the summer upon the structure and outlook of all four major political organizations on the campus.

Progressive-Conservative Club members were active, President George Hogan, III Pass, said Saturday. In the Ontario election many PC Club members campaigned through the Central Young Conservative Organization, canvassing and giving radio addresses on the theme of "Youth supports Drew". Other members of the club, including Secretary Dave Hunter, III Pass, went as delegates to the Ontario Young PC Summer School at Gravenhurst, where they studied policy and organization with Professor MacKinnon of Carleton College, Ontario cabinet ministers, and party organizers.

In the coming year, in addition to its participation in the Hart House debates and the Mock Parliament, the club plans a series of regular monthly evening meetings, to include members of professional faculties. On these occasions party leaders will speak on current issues and principles of the party. The PC Club will send several delegates to the PC National Convention in Ottawa, but Mr. Hogan said, "We are going with an open mind."

During the summer, members of the Liberal Association were concerned with the Ontario election and some canvassed in St. David's riding. Mrs. Mimi Day, who has now returned to Denmark, spoke on CFRB and in Port Hope during the election campaigning.

The National Liberal Convention in August, however, attracted most attention. The University of Toronto Liberal Association had four delegates in Ottawa; David Stanley, IV Pol-Sci, President of the club, Joe Potts, IV Pol-Sci, Henry Bradley, III Law, Vice-President, and Doug Anglin, last year's President. The club also sent six alternates, including Mrs. Mimi Day, and six observers, forming the largest university representation at the convention. These delegates were especially active in the questions of Veterans Affairs, Dominion Federal Labour Code, Housing and Immigration.

For the coming year the club plans meetings to include, as their guest speakers, Mr. David Croll, Liberal member for Toronto-Spadina; the Hon. Milton F. Gregg, Minister of Veterans' Affairs, and the Hon. Paul Martin, Minister of National Health and Welfare and Honorary President of the U. of T. Liberal Association. The club also plans to send a delegate to the Workers' Educational Association, which is holding a series of meetings on youth and political parties.

Members of the CCF Club organized for Beaches riding, where they succeeded in geting their candidate, Reid Scott, last year's president, now at Osgoode Hall, elected by a majority of 500 votes. Mr. Scott represented the University of Toronto and the Canadian Co-operative Youth Movement at the national convention of the CCF party in Winnipeg, and spoke at the Convention on the nationalization of banks. Last year's club organizer, Elgin Blair, II UC, was chosen as the Canadian delegate of the CCYM at the International Union of Socialist Youth conference in Belgium.

Included in this year's plans are open meetings with prominent speakers in the Federal and Provincial field, open discussion meetings on questions of education and finance, and closed business meetings, the first of these to be in about three weeks.

Before commencing its activities the club awaits the results of the Algoma-East by-election. If Mr. Pearson is not elected, CCF Club spokesmen predict, a general federal election will be held. At the moment the club has branch units in Victoria College, University College, and Trinity College, according to Michael Hicks, IV Hist.

In the vacation months members of the LLP Club were busy supporting the C.S.U. strikers. Members also assisted in building up the circulation of Canada's only labour paper, "The Canadian Tribune." The new president, Steve Endicott, IV Hist., was sent to Europe to gain an understanding of the problems of youth on the continent.

"Our biggest undertaking during the summer," said organizer Len Dolgoy, III UC, "was the sponsoring of a National Summer School near Woodbridge, for LLP students. Our Curriculum," he said, "was centered around Marxian economic theory and its application to present world conditions. The National Conference which culminated the school's activities pledged itself to take positive action against the growing attempt to enlist and channelize scientific research to war purposes on the campus. The conference also condemned the attempt at restricting student enrolment by higher fees and raising of standards."

For the coming year the LPP Club plans discussion groups on Marxian philosophy and economic theory, open meetings addressed by prominent LPP political figures on current and theaoretical topics, weekly discussion groups open to all students, and week-end schools for members. These last are resigned to foster group spirit as well as teaching.

"On the social side," Mr. Dolgoy announced, "we will organize small informal gatherings and Hootinannies, community sing-songs and folk-dancing evenings.

Vic Freshmen Elect A President; Field of Seven

Jim Kilgour emerged victorious from among the seven candidates of the class 5T2 at Victoria College. In the elections held Friday afternoon, the freshmen chose Sheila Lennox as Associate President, Shirley Endicott as Secretary, Bob Toye as treasurer and Bev. Purdy as Social Representative. The results, announced at the Howdy Hop, showed the members at large for the Assembly to be "Butch" Cochrane, John Devereux, Bob McIntosh, Bill Mercer and Jack Sands.

About 60 per cent of the first year students voted in these elections, which were the first held under the new constitution. By this system, the representatives are elected at the end of the first week of classes, rather than at the Freshman week-end, and will hold office for the year, instead of only for the first term.

Unwarranted

In an address at Barrie last week, Mrs. Margaret Scott, most worshipful grand mistress of British North America, of the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association, criticized the federal government for bringing to Canada so many displaced persons of the Roman Catholic faith. Mrs. Scott is reported to have said she did not think these people would be good citizens "because they were of the Church of Rome." She added "It is our duty to be true and loyal so long as our government upholds the things for which our order stands."

We are not aware of the "things" for which the order stands nor do we think the government in Ottawa will be particularly perturbed by the conditions of loyalty set up by Mrs. Scott. We doubt whether even her fellow lodge members would care to identify themselves too closely with her remarks. Most people being subjected to the opinions she voiced will shrug them off as something less than common sense.

Freedom of speech is the hard-won privilege of every Canadian. Yet that very privilege carries with it a heavy responsibility—a responsibility to the nation which bestows it; a responsibility of which Mrs. Scott and those ilke her seem unaware, or, being aware of it, see fit to ignore it.

Freedom of speech presupposes constructive criticism. Mrs. Scott's vituperations hardly lend themselves to the promotion of national unity. In Catholic Quebec they will be seen as another attempt to drive a wedge between the two major religious groups in the country, a wedge which is already much too deep.

The remarks about members of the Roman Catholic faith may be shrugged off as merely the views of a rabid Protestant, but her suggestion that the loyalty of her group depends upon the government's acquiescence to her organization's aim is more serious.

It would shock Mrs. Scott deeply to be considered in the same category as a radical agitator on a soap-box. No doubt she considers herself, with some justice, as a pillar of the community and a worthy citizen. There are many people who hang on the words of "a pillar of the community", people who wouldn't give a radical agitator a moment of their time. Therein lies the greater mischief.

It is regrettable to think that while statesmen are sitting in Paris desperately attempting to bring a semblance of unity and understanding to this shattered world there are people abroad in the land who create irreparable harm to the cause of tolerance and peace.

B-U-R-P- NEWS BRIEF

FLASH—Last night, while conducting experiments to determine the alcoholic saturation point of his body, professor John de Kyper, faculty of a-plastered scientist, was completely overcome and had to be carried from the class room by a group of second year Gin and Pizz students.

Professor de Kyper, who has been conducting these experiments nightly for the past fifteen years, was this morning a completely broken and despondent man. He explained that for years he had been trying to determine the final c.c which did the trick. Last night he had begun the experiment with the utmost confidence that his efforts would be crowned with success.

"Suddenly — (his shoulders were heaving with convulsive sobs) everything went black. I don't remember anything which took place from that time until I woke up in this chair about an hour ago. Wow, I don't know what Myrtle put into that last batch but my stomach feels like it had been immersed in a tank of H_2SO_4," (sulphuric acid that is. The professor suggested that some explanation of this chemical compound be inserted for the benefit of the less technical minded people such as arts students, he said.

Professor de Kyper explained that, since the cost of purchasing the "store-boughten" variety had long ago proved prohibitive, he and his wife Myrtle had resorted to making their own "bathatub special XXX." A practice he said which had proved to be, as well, a very profitable sideline.

Mrs. de Kyper, who had been standing by her husband's chair holding an ice-pack three feet above his head, (he complained of the pressure if it was brought any closer), said she couldn't understand what had happened this time. She had used the usual ingredients; two gallons of wood alcohol, one tin of lye, two quarts of wild-juniper juice, a pinch of grated sarsparilla and a teaspoon of water, the latter being added for dryness. She recalled that while the brew had been simmering a tin of Drano had fallen from the shelf into the pot. When she tried to remove it, the tin had disappeared in the brew. Since there was nothing more she could do about it, she hadn't given it another thought.

"I wakened up about six-thirty this morning and found that John had not come home. I looked out the window and there he was flat on his stomach pulling himself inch by inch up the sidewalk," she stated. Mrs. de Kyper went on to say she had thrown on her wrap and ran out of the house to give him some help. As she approached him she heard him mumbling to himself, "I'll climb this wall if ut taksh me all day."

The last bulletin, (received at ten o'clock this morning), on Professor de Kyper's condition holds great hopes for his recovery from this latest experiment in alcoholic-upism. In his latest statement de Kyper said: "My Moitle has made the greatest discovery since the atom bomb."

For all students who are interested, enrolment in classes for 1st year Alcoholics xx will begin in the KCR, in the Partly Plastered Hotel, tomorrow morning at 12. Applications for the Alcholics Unanimous, a very distinguished society in the University will be taken at the same time.

THE VARSITY

International Flavor

Of the cosmopolitan touches about the campus, some of the most colorful are found in Whitney Hall and St. Hilda's College.

The future of the world is in safe hands as the Whitney Hall coeds from Guatemala and Jamaica bone up on the Toronto campus. Pamela Franklin, a gentle-mannered girl in History and Languages, smiled as she mentioned University College Principal Taylor's remark that, "You all want to be diplomats."

We do not think that so bad after looking at the suave, blonde, Jane Hazard, who would like interpretor's work after graduation, and the smiling Pam who speaks with enthusiasm of the possibility of teaching in an Arizona school that trains young people for world citizenship as well as college.

Picture the replacement of all UN diplomats by these bright young coeds . . . international relationships would improve famously.

Jane, Pam, and Jean Jack (from Jamaica) tried to tell us what Central America is like. It is an entirely different way of life, said Pam, and there is no possible comparison in Canadian life. Of the population, 75 per cent is Indian. The education of these people has just begun and most older folk can neither read nor write. Education is not free as it is here and children usually attend school till about age twelve when they pitch in and help with the plantation work. The Jamaican boarding schools (which the three girls attended) give exams set and marked in English.

Jamaica is the land of the calypsos, (musical commentators on the news) group dates in early social years, and the New Look. Jean emphatically exclaims that they have the Look "far worse" than they do here.

Ruth Hintzen, University of Amsterdam, student at St. Hilda's College, finds in Canada an air of prosperity that is missing in Europe although fees are about the same. Dutch and Canadian people are similar and Netherland folk are coming here because this is the kind of country they like. She says she hopes to see her future in international relations or social welfare.

Henriette Yaneck, Czechoslovakian immigrant, has come to stay in Canada "until they chuck me out". She feels her Switzerland-studied English has suffered from French conversations carried on board the Empress of France. But she has been only 14 days; after four years on the Toronto campus she will find her English has suffered irreparably.

Settlement House Serves Community

"The University Settlement is a community house located at 23 Grange Rd., facing Grange Park and the Toronto Art Gallery. Sir Robert Falconer founded the University Settlement with monies collected by Members and Staff of the University of Toronto.

The function of a University Settlement is to arouse social consciousness in the University and the Settlement neighborhood by providing a centre where both communities may cultivate common interests. Both groups join forces in investigating and improving social conditions. At first the University Settlement was supported by donations from the University Staff, students and friends. Now this organization is a Red Feather Service supported by the Community Chest.

The Settlement has done, and is carrying on, a wide variety of activities. A health clinic is held, where babies are weighed, are inoculated against disease, and have diets regulated by Doctors and Public Health Nurses. Five mornings a week, a nursery is conducted where sixty children, age two, three and four, come together to enjoy the freedom of space and to play with toys suitable for their age.

There are group activities and clubs for all ages starting at five. A branch of the Children's Public Library with a circulation of 1,500 volumes a month is operated at the Settlement.

New Canadians attend English classes. Music lessons are given to neighborhood children. A camp near Gravenhurst provides opportunities for summer activities in fresh air and open spaces. The University Settlement brings together people who have a diversity of viewpoints in a friendly environment.

At present, six men are required as club volunteer leaders for junior age groups. "This is a difficult age-group," commented John Haddad, Social Worker at the Settlement. Besides being an invaluable help to the Settlement, this volunteer work will provide the student with an opportunity to study how environment affects people.

U of West Virginia Has Big Enrollment

Morgantown, W. Va., Sept. 16—(Exchange) — Latest registration figure of West Virginia University indicates an increase of 132 students over last year's registration figure of 6,464. Unofficial reports indicate almost double the number of transfer students in journalism, medicine, education and graduate schools. Other returns, as yet unverified, show a decline in law, pre-law, pre-medicine and pre-chemistry. Large increases are expected in engineering, pre-engineering and mines.

Varsity Band To Make Debut At Western Game

This year, Varsity's Blue and White Band have some deep, dark secrets that will be sprung on football fans at the Western-Varsity game in London October 9. Bob Cringham reports that he is working on new drill formations and specially arranged band pieces that will make this year's band just that much better than it has been in previous years. Of course, our little 5' 2" dark-haired drum-majorette Marjie will be with the bend again as one of its stellar attractions. Bob says she is looking for an understudy of about the same size, and any girls who are interested may apply at the SAC office Hart House.

HOUSING IMPROVED

Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Sept. 27—(Exchange)—Housing conditions are improving at Louisiana State University. The fall semester will find conditions "less crowded" than previous years, says the director of housing for men, and he hopes to have "rooms enough for everybody".

New dormitories for both men and women will be opened later in the year. The new buildings will house nearly five hundred men and over four hundred women.

Many Undergrads Vote For Leader At P.C. Conference

More university delegates will attend the national convention of the Progressive Conservative Party in Ottawa this week-end than have ever attended any convention of any party in the history of Canada, Al Lawrence, III Victoria, said Friday.

Lawrence, who is national president of the Progressive Conservative Student Federation, will be an executive delegate to the convention from that organization.

"Altogether, there should be about seven or eight students from the University of Toronto who will go to the convention with full voting powers, and another 15 who will go as observers," said Lawrence.

There will be student representatives from all sections of Canada on the important 193-men policy and resolutions committee, which will prepare a platform to be presented to the convention for approval or amendment. The committee goes into session Tuesday in Ottawa.

Students will also work on publicity and organization committees.

Cheerleaders

Last Saturday morning nearly thirty co-eds gathered on the Trinity field to try out for cheerleaders. Doug. Love, publicity director of the Blue and White Society, said, "What we need is more women!!"

However, Saturday was just the preliminary round and official judging will start on Monday night at 5 o'clock in the same place. Judges then will be Joe (The Coon) Potts, Jack (Cartwheel) Pearse, one of last year's cheerleaders, and Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, president of the SAC.

Monday will be the elimination contest and the final judging will be on Tuesday when it is hoped models from some of the local agencies will assist in the judging. So come on out Freshies . . . who knows you too may be cheerleader.

Friday Frosh Fun Fest Overwhelming Success For '48 Freshmen Crop

Displaying more zip and spirit than any freshman class in years, University College's crop of first year students made their presence on the campus known at their Frosh-Freshie Fun Fest on Friday.

Highlights of the many activities was the "Typical Freshie and Frosh Contest" when Pat Murdoch of Toronto and Jon Christiansen of Kapus-Easing were chosen to hold these titles. "Miss Freshie" will receive as prizes, a complete new outfit from Simpson's and a free evening at Vanity Fair with "Mr. Freshman." In addition to his free evening with the winning girl, the man will be given tickets to all major U.C. functions.

The winners were chosen on the basis of personality, interests, poise and appearance. Judges were Miss Meg McLaughlin, a '47 U.C. graduate and now a reporter in the women's department of the Toronto Daily Star, Mr. Carmen Guild, 1946-47 president of the Men's Literary and Athletic Association, and Mr. Edward Feeny, Toronto Daily Star photographer. Semi-finalists were chosen during the afternoon by a group of undergraduate judges and the final contest was held in the evening at the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall when Hal Rosenthal, Lit. publicity director, interviewed all contestants. This feature of the day's entertainment was a complete surprise to the students.

Fun Fest activities began when the men met for a tour through Hart House and a separate rally in the Junior Common Room while the women met in the Women's Union where they were shown films by Mr. Perry of Hart House. The movies were colour documentaries, "Flood Relief," showing devastation caused by flood this spring in the Columbia and Fraser vallies, and "Land of the Ski Hawks," which depicted Quebec City and surrounding district as the focal point for skiing and other winter sports.

The men and women met together in the late afternoon on the U.C. quadrangle where the fair-like atmosphere of colorful booths and stands gave the first year students their first introduction to college and university organizations. Rows of displays lined the outside walls of U.C. and interested students signed up for various campus activities.

The U.C. Parliament presented a mock debate during which they exhorted the bewildered freshmen to join through their oslentations display of parliamentary procedure. The booth of the Russian Circle clinging close to that of the Progressive Conservative Club seemed to be there by more than mere accident. Surprises were provided by the Maths and Physics Society shooting liquid air at various passers-by and the Biology Club which brought along "Petunia", the skunk which was guaranteed deodorized. The German Club, with its name strung from frankfurters on U.C. walls, passed out pretzels to inquiring frosh but failed to come through with the well-known accompanying beverage.

Each display stand had its turn to use the loud speaker system to tell the students of the activities of its organization.

Supper was served before Joe Potts took over and turned an interested group into a yelling, sing-

Portuguese Study Will Be Stressed By Language Dept.

The Department of Italian and Spanish at the University of Toronto has now become the Department of Italian, Spanish and Portuguese.

Because of the cultural and commercial value of Portuguese greater attention will be given to the study of that language which is spoken by 62,000,000 people (seven million of whom are inhabitants of Portugal, 45,000,000 of Brazil, and nine million of the Portuguese colonies in Africa and the Far East).

The importance of Portuguese been duly recognized by the leading universities of the United States and courses in that subject are now offered at Harvard, Yale, Chicago, Columbia and California. During the last few years the study of Portuguese in the University of Toronto has been confined to students in Commerce and Finance but beginning this Fall, it will be made available to First and Second Year students in the Pass Course. The work will consist not only of the study of the Portuguese language but also of Portuguese and Brazilian literatures. More advanced courses will gradually be introduced on the culture and civilization of Portugal and Brazil with the object of eventually making the University of Toronto the most important centre of Portuguese studies in Canada as it already is in the fields of Italian and Spanish.

A special exhibit of Portuguese books will be held in the University Library from Sept. 15 to October 15.

The distinguished scholar and teacher Dr. Ulrich Leo has been appointed Special Lecturer in Italian and Spanish. Dr. Leo studied Romance languages and literatures, classics and philosophy at the University of Gottingen and received his degree of Doctor of Philosophy from that institution in 1917. He taught Romance languages and literatures at the University of Frankfurt and since 1945 has been on the Faculty of William Penn College. Dr. Leo has already published a number of articles on Old and Modern French Literature, on South American Literature and on aesthetics and linguistics. His main field of research is Italian literature and he has written a great deal on some of the leading Italian authors particularly Dante.

The Department of Education has recently announced that the Minister's approval has been given to the establishment of a Specialist Certificate in French and Italian.

A rapid-reading course of one hour a week (without credits) will be offered for the first time to undergraduate and graduate students in the various departments of science in the University in order to enable them to consult the scientific works and journals published in Italy, Spain, Portugal and South America.

Louisiana Frosh

Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Sept. 27 — (Exchange) — Orientation of freshmen and freshies is undertaken with enthusiasm at Louisiana State University. The six day program has sent the incoming freshmen reeling from lengthy placement tests to lengthier questionnaires that require the services of a genealogist to be filled in correctly.

Valuable Tools Lost As Contractor's Shed Entirely Destroyed

The fire which broke out late last week in a small shed in front of the Wallberg Memorial Building was reported today to have completely gutted the building and destroyed its contents.

No estimate of the damage has yet been made but the wooden structure was known to have contained valuable tools belonging to the workmen. Due to the prompt action of the watchman in summoning the fire department the flames were quickly brought under control, and the [illegible] building escaped injury.

Victoria College Welcomes Frosh At Howdy Hop

Starting its social season with a bang, Victoria College held its opening dance at Burwash and Alumni Halls, last Friday night.

The dignitaries present included Senior Tutor William Fennel and Mrs. Fennel and Dr. and Mrs. Bennett, as well as the many Medsmen, Dents, roaring engineers and Forestry men who invaded the premises and helped to make the evening the crowded success it was.

Another bright spot in the evening occurred when the vari-shaped balloons decorating Burwash Hall, were pulled down from the ceiling and were loudly exploded, not greatly to the detriment of the music emanating from the record player.

No Man's Land

WOMEN'S GADGETS

—— DOROTHY HERRING ——

We women are fascinating creatures. I say it in all modesty—And the things we think up to wear are a source of endless interest, too. Ever since some bright cave woman draped a string of tigers' teeth or shiny stones around her neck, Dame Fashion has been operating. She came into being with the first fig leaf, and she has been around ever since, pulling novelties from her bottomless bag of tricks.

This year, for instance, after elbowing a few helpless old ladies out of my way, I managed to see what fills the counters of the downtown stores.

Gold will be seen in more than tooth fillings this fall. You can have gold buttons and belts on your old black faithful. You can have gold caps, either the beanie type, or those things taken from little boy's caps. You can have gold ballet slippers; and even saddle shoes are brightened up with gold saddles.

In jewellery, gold is again the byword. There are chains galore, for both wrists and necks. In the jewellery department, too, there are some most intriguing earrings and brooches. Earrings are getting bigger and danglier and more

Use Drafting Labs In New Building

Parts of the new Mechanical Building have been opened to students in the engineering classes. The two machine drafting laboratories are now being used and the rest of the fourth floor will be in use shortly. These are only a small part of the spacious building. It is two hundred feet long by sixty feet wide, and is four stories tall with a full sized basement. The rooms have a total of 950,000 cubic feet and an area of 80,000 square feet. There are approximately fifty rooms in the building, according to the architects, Allward and Gouinlock.

The building is of modern design. The facade is of Queenston limestone and the rest of the building is of solid brick construction. There is a large clock on the front of the centre tower which gives the place a streamlined look. The windows are of the continuous sill variety, giving adequate light to the classrooms.

The interior of the building is designed to give the maximum amount of service with the least necessity for maintenance. The floors are of terrazzo and the walls are tiled in a beige color to facilitate easy cleaning. The corridors have acousticon ceilings to deaden hall noise. Due to the great cost of the insulating material it was impossible to furnish the laboratories and classrooms in this fashion.

Each floor contains rooms and equipment for a different phase of mechanical engineering. The fourth floor contains two large mechanical drafting rooms, with fluorescent lighting. One of these will be made into an Engineering Museum. Three industrial laboratories and a models and machine room complete the fourth floor. The third floor holds heating, air conditioning and refrigeration laboratories, including a cold room where the temperature may be lowered to many degrees below zero. The staff room and the students' common room, and a temporary lecture room that is to be converted to a research room, are also on the third floor.

The mechanical laboratory, calorimetry and fuel oil analysis room, a gauge room, an instrument room for research equipment, one temporary and two permanent lecture rooms are on the second floor.

The lobby off the main entrance on the ground floor is done in marble and leads to the library and offices. As soon as equipment is available there will be a well stocked machine shop on the main floor complete with tool crib, gauge room and other necessary facilities.

The large basement contains the hydraulic laboratory and the power distribution machinery for the building. There is a two hundred-foot long sluice in the hydraulics lab which probably will be used for the St. Lawrence Waterways project. Much of the equipment for this lab is already installed.

In the east wing of the building is a large lecture room capable of seating 350, and completely equipped for projection of moving pictures and for class lectures. The stepped-up floor is of terrazzo and there are no windows, all illumination being provided by large batteries of lights. The room can be locked off from the rest of the building if it is used for evening activities. For the convenience of staff and students there is a passenger elevator being installed.

According to the office of the superintendent, the third floor will be ready for use in about two weeks. The contractors expect to complete all work by the end of the Christmas term. They are hampered by a labor shortage.

KICKIN' AROUND By Bus-Driver Wally Falk

"It seems the announcers weren't giving Krowzowski credit for all the tackles he was making last Saturday!"

PRE-MED SMOKER

Pre-medical freshmen were welcomed by the executive of the Medical Society, Thursday.

The Dean of Medicine emphasized the taking advantage of the opportunities provided in the pre-medical years. He stated that the additional facilities and extra-curricular activities offered are available in few places in Canada.

Dr. H. B. Van Wyck stressed the purpose of University life, which he said is seeking knowledge for its own sake. He pointed to the inadequacy of purely technical training. An appeal was made to the heritage left by the forefathers of medicine in character, understanding and judgment.

The program was interspersed with musical and comic skits by members of the Society.

"Four Jills In A Jeep" In Varsity Style

Editor's Note: To some Varsity students, summer holidays mean a long awaited rest, to others it means an opportunity to replenish their bank account for the following year. But to some few fortunate students it means . . . well, we'll let them tell you themselves through one of their members. The students in this group are Jean Wolfraim and Peg Insole, both graduates of '46, Cynthia Dean, class of '50 and the writer, Joan Crysdale, a '49'er. The car, a '46 Chevrolet sedan better known as Uncle Arthur.

By JOAN CRYSDALE

Picture, if you will, four gay young things in a car tooting around Canada. At least that was the original idea. However, once away from home our imaginations ran wild and the jaunt turned into a ten thousand mile tour of not only Canada, but most of the United States as well. We had vaguely thought about going out to Los Angelus and New Orleans before we left home, but never expected these ideas to become realities. Mind you, in the spring, we had spent more time studying maps and pamphlets scattered on the floor than text books and lecture notes.

The thought of describing ten thousand miles of scenery is too fatiguing and it's always easier to talk about people anyway, so a few of our more ridiculous experiences might be more interesting.

For instance, there would come, periodically, the problem of flat tires. Our first attempt at remedying such a situation was a flop. The jack gave way, the car fell down and we had to retreat to the nearest gas station. Realizing that just wouldn't do in the future, we devised a new system, which was a great success. After jacking up the car and taking off the tire we acquired that "helpless female" expression and hailed the first car that came along. Our intentions were simply to borrow the man's jack, explaining that ours wasn't heavy enough to hold the car up properly. Somehow, though, we inveigled him into changing the tire, and before we knew it, the baggage was back in place and we were off.

Speaking of the car brings to mind that thing in the front of the engine known as a "radiator." What a delicate instrument it is!

Our troubles began near the Turner Valley, about twenty-five miles south of Calgary. It's a funny feeling to see the front end of the car about to fly off, when you're in the middle of nowhere and have no clues about how to remedy the situation. At least, that was our reaction. However, thanks to the Alberta Government, a road construction gang was crashing around on strange looking pieces of machinery just ahead of us. A great big man on a tractor come to our rescue by scraping some water out of a culvert. From then on we took water with us.

Our next catastrophe with the radiator occurred about forty miles from Jasper, on the Jasper-Edmonton Hightway. We were in the foothills and, I suppose the altitude and the wind were affecting the car. Not only water came from the car, but rust as well. We hadn't the foggiest notion what that brown stuff was. We were quite sure, as a matter of fact, that it was oil. It was at these troublesome times that we were always so glad to see those helpful members of the opposite sex. Somehow they knew what was wrong and cured the troubles, at least for the time being anyway.

Never go near a mountain with a questionable radiator. You might as well skip the view or else walk up to the top. Otherwise you will find yourself stopping on hair pin curves and mountain sides to quench the radiator's thirst. At least, that was our experience. Another thing, don't trust gas station attendants too much. They can be wrong. If they think you're complaining about radiator trouble because it has to be filled every five miles, keep at them, anyway, because there probably is something wrong. And when they do find something wrong, don't believe them, because the gas station next door will most likely suggest something else. We had great fun in Banff hearing the opinions of various station attendants. You never heard so many ideas. At the first place a sealer was poured in. Apparently when the rad. had been flushed in Calgary, they got it too clean. The second gas station man, whom we visited after the sealer failed, peered into the rad. with a flashlight and told us that we must either get a new radiator or else have the present one removed, sent to Calgary where it would be subjected to an acid bath. The next person concluded that a reverse flush would do the trick. And so it was, down the line. A new fan belt was suggested. Or else, why didn't we check the timing—whatever that was. Of course we could always remove the thermostat — we didn't need it anyway. We settled for the reverse flush and a new fan belt.

Our joy was short lived, however. In the Okanogan Valley the thermostat was removed and the timing checked. In Victoria the whole radiator was junked and a new one installed.

Much as I like gas station attendants, I wish they knew what makes a radiator work.

Balmy Beach Grabs 7-7 Tie With Varsity

Sensational 115 Yard Run Earns Tie In Last Minute

and was hit by Cosgrove of Balmy with a thud that was heard all over the stadium. Nick spent Saturday night in the hospital undergoing a complete checkup. The result was satisfactory and except for a slight headache he is sound as the proverbial dollar. Tommy Waldon was also knocked out as a result of a collision. Like Volpe he is none the worse except for a headache.

Varsity picked up two rather strange penalties in the five minutes in the last quarter. The first for ten yards was for having too many players on the field. Shore was ejected from the game on the second for rough play when he slammed a Beaches ball carrier to the ground. This penalty set the Blues back 25 years.

Just before the opening kickoff, the players of the starting lineups were introduced over the loudspeaker system, as they trotted onto the field.

Standout performers for the Blues were Cummings for his triple threat play, Joe Kane who passed two and completed two besides doing some nice running, Jack Gray whose tackling helped account for two points and Ernie Jeans, who intercepted three enemy passes. Toogood, Volpe and Huycke all made nice runs. Copp, Mustard, and Clark were top performers on the front wall, breaking up numerous Beaches plays. Outstanding for Balmy were Bobby Porter, Doug Pyzer, Garry Smith and Ernie Becker.

There's Gold In Them Thar Players

TOM WALDON

Three reasons for Teddy Reeve's glumness after Saturday's football fracas are herewith displayed. They and their 37 cohorts who dressed for the game outplayed the highly touted Beaches-Indians until Pyzer did a Mel Patton in the final minute. Left is Tom Waldon, who snared a Cummings pass and ran it 10 yards for the lone Varsity major. Right is centre star Archie Jones who accounted for one of the four Varsity pass interceptions. Below is Fraser Mustard a standout on the line, who was "in through the line, and bustin' up all them Beaches plays," according to our man Ross.

ARCHIE JONES

FRASER MUSTARD

Speaking of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

"Two bucks and a kick!—two bucks and a kick! Why don't they open it up?" Through the past three seasons of post-war intercollegiate football this has been the jibe most frequently hurled at the Varsity Blues.

Ah! but a new era is dawning, as anyone who saw Saturday's exhibition with the Beaches-Indians will verify. No one who was at the stadium Saturday afternoon can deny that the Blues looked like a different ballclub.

That the final score read 7-7 is incidental. What is more important is that the Blues actually outplayed the big ORFU club, and had Teddy Reeve thinking that maybe one of his predictions was looking good after all. (Among other things Reeve has called the Blues to win the intercollegiate title.)

The Blues were far from sensational Saturday, but remember that it was their first real test and also that Bob Masterson was juggling his line-up frequently. Those hipper-dipper reverses need the ultimate in blocking, and before the ball finally started moving in the prescribed direction, the BI secondaries were usually in to make the tackles.

Some statistics that impressed me may prove of interest. Varsity made 12 first downs, the BIs managed nine. Varsity completed 9 of 15 passes, the BIs clicked on 6 of 10 tries. Varsity intercepted four, the BIs one.

What impressed me most was the fact that the Blues held the potent Reevemen to 1 point through 59 minutes of grueling football. Once in the first half the BI's had the ball on the Varsity 10-yard line, only to be stopped cold by the Blues' front-wall.

This should prove that now at last Varsity has a football team worthy of support. I, among others, was left cold by the spasmodic support emanating from the students' section. A drunk got more acclaim in five minutes than the Blues received all afternoon. As a non-Varsity man put it so aptly, "What a bunch of deadheads! The only time they cheered was when the cheerleaders came out. Why, if Beaches-Indians had had cheer-leaders, I'll bet the students would have cheered just as loudly for them."

Toronto crowds have had the reputation of being overly-critical. When applied to a professional team there may be some justification—after all they're being paid—and a fat check every month makes it considerably easier to absorb abuse. But criticism by students of a University, heaped upon fellow-students who are giving their utmost for the glory of their school is nothing short of treason.

So let's forget the past, and rally behind the Blues. That extra ounce of support might provide the fire that would make this the season of seasons.

It seems the announcers weren't giving Krowzowski credit for all the tackles he made last Saturday.

Soccer Blues Hope to Win 25th Title

No group of University of Toronto athletes can look back on as enviable a team championship record as the Senior Blues Soccer team. Varsity teams have won the Senior Intercollegiate Soccer championship 24 times since competition began in 1904. In nine of the 44 years from 1904-48 there was no competition as a result of war, thus Varsity has been tops in 24 of 35 competitive years—an unequalled standing.

The 1948-49 season holds promise that once again the Blackwood Trophy will return to Toronto. Ask any of the team members. Ask anyone who knows college soccer. Each will have you believe that Varsity is going to win its 25th senior soccer title.

Not that these people are given to resting on past glories. They're just willing to bet on a sure thing. Take, for instance, the fact that back from last year's team are twelve stalwarts: Critchley, Colvin, Kersey, Montemurro, Glass, Small, Conyers, Tait, Barton, Reed, Scott and Antoni. All veteran soccer enthusiasts—and able.

Especially talented is Neville Conyers, mainspring of last year's team. Bill can be counted on to make an intercollegiate game a joy for Toronto fans and an ordeal for opposing players and spectators.

Just put ten good teammates on the field with Bill and Varsity is assured of more than a fighting chance for victory. And when one of those ten men is Toni Antoni the game will more than likely not even be a fight. Toni was an asset with few equals on last year's squad and he'll attract plenty of attention this summer since he's been active in soccer circles all summer.

But what about the opposition? McMaster, Western and O.A.C. complete the competitive circuit and each university is more than certain that it has an even chance. First game takes place here October 22 with McGill opposing in an annual exhibition fixture.

If you're at all interested in playing the game, if you're willing to work for the prestige that comes with championship, sign today at the Athletic office. Team Manager Bill Babcock will greet you warmly. Take a fling at being a member of one of the most select groups on the campus.

RUGGER PRACTICES IN PROGRESS NOW

The Varsity Intercollegiate Rugger team has started practices on the front campus but are still looking for more material for the squad. Manager Ted Simkins reports that 30 men have turned out thus far. Among them are Bill Douglas, Don Glen, E. W. Weaver and R. Stephenson, all of whom were mainstays on last year's team.

There are 15 men on each rugger squad so the present turnout will only make up two teams. The first game is with McGill and will be played here on October 22. All persons interested in playing are asked to get in touch with the manager at one of the practices.

Golf Tournament Starts Thursday

Entries are just beginning to come in for the intramural golf tournament which opens at St. Andrews Golf Club, Thursday.

Entries to date include Drew Harvy, Ross Hunter, Bill Gibbons, Bill Tarasick, and Don Mossop. However, last year's champ, Don Mossop, has an injured leg and may not be able to perform. A qualifying round will be played by the top 30 on Wednesday, October 6, to decide the two intercollegiate teams.

Art Anderson Top Seeded In Tennis

The number of entrants for the interfaculty tennis tourney which starts Wednesday is mounting hourly according to the intramural office. By Saturday, 110 hopefuls had signed up for the singles and 46 pairs for the doubles. Entries close at noon Tuesday or when the full quota of 144 singles and 60 doubles has been reached.

Seedings for the singles have already been drawn up. They are:

1. Art Anderson, PHE
2. Len Turner, PHE
3. Jack Langley, Dents
4. Fred Dawes, Architecture
5. Ernie Howard, Trinity
6. W. Brewer, Trinity
7. Adams, St. Mike's
8. Powell, Ajax

Likely seedings for the doubles are:

1. Turner-Anderson
2. Langley-Dawes
3. Powell-Little

The tourney, held at the Toronto Tennis Club's Rowanwood Ave. courts, will decide the interfaculty tennis champion of the university, and will largely decide the intercollegiate tennis team. Coaches Sid Hermant and Bill Noyes will meet intercollegiate team prospects Thursday at the tennis club at noon.

Do you play golf? Maybe it should be put this way—Do you play AT golf? If so, you'll be interested to hear that again this year U.C. is holding an invitation golf meet. It's scheduled for Wednesday, October 13, at St. Andrew's Golf Course which is situated on Yonge St. north of the City limits and is easily reached by street car.

It makes no difference what your handicap is, in fact you don't even need a handicap this year in order to play. All you need is fifty cents for greens fees (this is the half rate charged students), clubs, your admit to lectures card, and your presence sometime after 9:30.

It has been rumored that there will be prizes for hidden holes as well as the awards for the top golfer. Every woman at the University is eligible to enter. If you play at all, be sure you don't miss the fun and let's hope that the weatherman gives us a good day.

Don't forget about that Intercollegiate swimming team practice today at the UTS pool. Speed begins at 5:30, style and ornamental at 6:30 and diving at 7:30. Miss Baxter will be on hand to give coaching and further details. All u[illegible] are eligible.

St. Michael's Introduce Frosh To Student Year

St. Michael's College, simultaneously with St. Joseph and Loretto Colleges, will hold its annual Freshman Welcome Week soon, and with that student activities at the colleges will really get under way.

Last Thursday evening at 8.00 p.m. in Brennan Hall the upper classmen of St. Michael's introduced the newcomers to the many extra-curricular activities of the college and the university. Paul Fauteux, Student Administrative Council president, spoke briefly and introduced the St. Michael, St. Joseph, and Loretto student councils. He advised the Freshmen that they would have to elect their own representatives to the student council in three weeks. An athletic representative must also be chosen at that time.

Jack Wilson, a Moss Scholarship winner, explained briefly the co-operative movement and the purpose of St. Michael's College co-operative Tuck shop. Pointing out the many educational and financial advantages available to members, both he and Art Monihan urged all the Freshmen to join.

The Music and Drama Club plans an energetic year and looks forward to much cooperation from the students. Jim Hamelin outlined an ambituous program of Sunday evening musicales to run alternately with those at Hart House, plus a greatly expanded dramatic program. He announced that a college glee club would be formed and that the Music and Drama Club would sponsor several light operas this year and perhaps a musical comedy. He said that St. Michael's would join with Victoria and Trinity Colleges for dramatic nights at Hart House and that they also hoped to hold one dramatic night at University College.

Speaking in favor of sports, Frank Gibbon voiced the determination of the college to retain the T. A. Reed trophy this year. Other student speakers on the program were Chuck Tompkins, who spoke for the Senate Club, the official debating society of the college; Pierre Falquet for the French Club; and John Paquette for the political discussion club.

Wallberg Memorial Bldg. Fast Reaching Completion

On College Street, just below Convocation Hall, the Wallberg Memorial Building, which will eventually be occupied jointly by the Chemical Engineering and the Chemistry departments is fast reaching completion.

This structure is named for Emil Andrew Wallberg, a successful industrial engineer who died in 1929. The bulk of this estate went to his sister Ida Marie Wallberg. She died a few years later and her will contained the stipulation that one million dollars be left to the University of Toronto for the construction of an engineering building in memory of her brother. Not until 1940, however, was it thought advisable to begin planning this building and finally by 1942 the need for new facilities for the Chemical Engineering became very apparent. At the same time, the Chemistry department had greatly expanded and it was decided to expand the proposed Wallberg building and join it to the older Chemistry building and thus accommodate the Chemistry department.

Since both departments wished their new building to be as modern as possible, members of the staffs made a trip to the United States to see the layouts of the faculties concerned in a number of American Universities.

By 1946, when work on the building began, ideas gained on the trip, original ideas from the department members, and the consolidation of these ideas by the architect resulted in a plan for what will probably be the most up-to-date structure of its kind.

From College Street it appears as a large red brick structure about a block long and three storeys high, designed in a restrained modern style. Stepping through either one of the aluminum and glass entryways however, the change to strict functional design is apparent. The hallways and corridors are floored with a beautiful terazza, while the walls throughout the building are covered with a lustrous glazed tile.

The west two-thirds of the building is for chemical engineering and the east one-third for chemistry. Both departments have a number of lecture rooms and laboratories of different types, which are each models of efficient working design. The main Chemical Engineering lab is two storeys high, while in conjunction with this is an apparatus shaft running the entire height of the building.

In every room from the top to the bottom, the window areas are impressive, and consequently during the daytime work may be carried on without artificial lighting. In addition to this the senior labs are built so that all chemical apparatus may be moved or changed to suit the requirements of the work being done. Most of the equipment can be placed along the walls on specially movable brackets and shelves. The lab floors are a mastic tile which combines quietness and durability with comfort for tired feet. In the basement there are some interesting labs where temperatures and humidity can be closely regulated for very exacting work. A small cupola on the roof contains the ventilating and filtering system for the building.

The Wallberg Memorial Building will not only provide more room and better facilities, but also will consolidate and integrate the departments.

Guild Appointed New Secretary For Hart House

The University has a new graduate secretary with Carmen Guild who succeeds John Brown to a major position at Hart House.

Mr. Guild, formerly of Guelph, Ont., was a University College student in Psychology graduating in 1947. He was active in campus life being the social director of the Literary society progressing to president of U.C. Lit. and athletic societies.

He hoped to take life easy with his sheepskin, but from all indications, that is now impossible.

Besides catering to over 1,200 graduate members, it is his responsibility to keep everyone involved in various clubs and committees of the House happy. All members, grads and undergrads, resident and non-resident, and senior members may participate in these clubs. A senior member is an undergraduate member of Hart House.

For grads there are many benefits to be derived. Monday nights are set aside for their exclusive use of the gym, pool and athletic equipment. Teams are formed which travel in various leagues. A dining and reading room is there solely for them. They receive their quota of tickets for the various affairs. The new exploration society satisfies

Women Artists of Ontario

Women are as paradoxical as the expression "The New Look". This is apparent when one enters the Hart House Art Gallery and begins to look at the paintings in the present exhibition.

Frankly, I was disappointed at first. Over-elaborateness seemed to billow from almost every picture. A conscious effort at modernity and cubism left me unimpressed. Drab colours disillusioned me.

Then I saw two strongly executed oils by Isabel McLaughlin. I felt better already! The bold effect of the blanketing snow covering the sombre labyrinths in "Backyards" gave me a lift. The second painting powerfully depicted the frigid placidity of an Ontario farm in winter-time. This oil is called "Ontario Patterns". I hail the artist who can show the beauty of an Ontario countryside too often overlooked by painters rushing to Quebec for inspiration.

Perhaps I was expecting too much when I went to the exhibition because I began to see more and more paintings that pleased me. The abstract "Variation on a Theme", by Rody Kenny Courtice more than made up for her insipid "Autumn Bouquet". The "Moonlight on the Lake" by Yvonne McKague Housser was like a symphony compared to the pseudo-cubist "Composition with Lute", by the same artist.

The stark crispness of early winter was admirably shown by the "November" of B. Cogill Haworth. (There must be mistake—the lady who did the "Calvaire" cannot be the same as the one who painted "November").

I was particularly delighted with "The Adolescent", by—Oh! No!—B. Cogill Haworth! (There must be three of them.) The artist has truly caught the gaucherie of a youth who has finally tamed his hair with pomade, but doesn't know what to do with his hands or his ears which assume an alert position on his head.

All in all the exhibition is a conglomeration of good and bad, of genius and insipidity, of inspiration and dullness. Surprisingly enough, the identical artists show both qualities in their work. Can this be a partial answer to the paradox that is Woman—the female of the species who can make a paradox of Art as well as Style?

Symphony Week

Even though it remains one of the most puzzling phenomena of this puzzling era, that Symphony Week should be observed by means of fashion shows exclusively, one thing is certain: The possession of a symphony orchestra, and particularly of one so industrious and competent, is an invaluable asset to this community. Consequently, it merits constant care which, in this case, may take the form of support through attendance and unceasing vigilance against the spread of the vicious fallacy that organizations of this type really ought to be self-supporting. The latter subject will recur when we turn to the operatic scene.

glamorous, while brooches are in every shape from a turtle to a banjo, with even an imitation purse plus matching purse earrings. And if you want a rope of pearls long enough to trip over, you can get it.

The handbags are exhibiting new developments. If you are feeling exotic there is a shoulder bag of leopard fur, and there are evening bags of brocade, sequins, beads, that will dazzle at fifty feet on a dark night.

For sophistication there are scarves of every color that can be draped around the head, neck, or waist—almost any place except the ankle! And there are little half-hats of velvet and corduroy.

In shoes the startling developments are Louis heels, high backs, and toes cut out in the most amazing ways. Louis heels, high backs, and toes cut out in the most amazing ways. If you have any evening pumps of 1920 vintage knocking around in the attic, get them out!

In case any of you men are dissolving into wild laughter, however, there is a little note I would like to add. Passing through the tobacco department I tripped (and I use the word almost literally) over a pipe with a pipestem fifteen inches long. And if you don't believe me, drop down to The Varsity office, and I'll prove it!

Letters to Editor

LOVE OR SALTS?

The Editor,
The Varsity,

May I respectfully bring to your attention a serious typographical error which appeared in your edition of Sept. 24.

In your advance notice concerning the activities of the University Extension Players the title of our first production is shown as "ENOS at Breakfast." Whilst we have no hesitation in recommending these delightful fruit salts, may we point out that what the Club is presenting is something much more thrilling and romantic, "Eros at Breakfast", by Robertson Davies.

It would be a shame if readers of the "Varsity" were to miss this delightful and witty play about the love life of an undergraduate merely because they thought it was about a purgative.

Seriously though, "Eros at Breakfast" is a fine, amusing play written by one of Canada's leading journalists and authors. It won the prize for the best Canadian play presented at the Dominion Drama Festival last spring. The University Extension Players Club are proud to present its Toronto premier performance in the Library Theatre on Oct. 16th.

ing, dancing throng. They yelled for Toronto and they yelled for U.C. and they sang their songs until they were hoarse. In one long line they danced around the campus and yelled and sang some more. Exhaused, they arrived at the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall but with music from Boy Cringan's orchestra they were ready to dance in a more get-acquainted fashion.

The Fun Fest ended when the men were taken off to visit the man's residence and serenade the women in Whitney Hall.

Pat Murdoch, who was chosen as U.C.'s typical freshie, is tall and slender honey blonde whose personality and poise are apparent at first meeting. She's 18 years old, five feet seven inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, and has smiling green eyes.

A graduate of Etobicoke Collegiate, Pat is enrolled in Modern History and Languages and hopes to get into journalism or external affairs. Her high school interests were many and varied with emphasis on sports, although she was a member of the Glee Club and took part in dramatics. She hopes to carry through these interests to her college activities. Pat will probably do some modelling for Simpson's. She has already modelled at her own school but would not be interested in it as a career.

Jon Christiansen is enrolled in Soc. and Phil., intends to go into Pol. Sci. and Ec. and then into law. At 19 he has already acquired an active interest in student government and is interested in sports and music. Jon is tall and huskily built, a handsome U.C. freshman.

FRESHMEN SOON AT HOME

Well, freshman or freshette, so you're now a part of the University of Toronto! You've eaten your first meals, signed your forms, slept your first nights, started in on your lectures and attended the President's opening address in which your responsibilities as a new link in this great chain were pointed out to you. Truth to tell, you are probably still so dazed by the 'Great New World' which surrounds you that you are a trifle hazy as to just where the chain and link begin and end.

If you are a conservative Englishman or Western Canadian you must be quite overwhelmed by the slick efficiency of the handling of the fourteen thousand odd students. Their every want and need is catered for by an elaborate network of offices which manage to maintain that personal touch which renders Toronto so much more than a mere collection of stones and mortar.

Every race is equally at home whether it be at the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation's debates, lectures and discussions, or at the Newman or Canterbury Clubs. Whether you are from University, Knox, Dents—any of the colleges, schools or faculties which go to make up the whole—you may take heart in the certain knowledge that somewhere you will find your niche and be able to take fellowship in your favorite pastime.

Hart House offers Drama, debates, musical activities and every conceivable sort of indoor sport. There are evenings when German is spoken and the culture of everywhere from the Ukraine to the Near East is discussed. Roman Catholics have only to drop in at 'home' on the corner of St. George and Hoskin for freshette tea-parties or 'husky hiking'.

Yes, it is a 'Brave New World' that teaches you anything from dentistry to drawing, from archery at Hart House to Radarbuse with the R.C.A.F. but probably the most consoling thought is that all these clubs are for YOUR GOOD. You have only to glance at your Student's Handbook to see the serious bent of these activities. Ten of these societies are religious and four political. Although there is heaps of fun for the asking, these societies are no house built on the sand but a solid and integral part of the education which the University has to offer.

But you are probably a little uncertain of the real meaning of those simple words 'University of Toronto'. In your college you are finding that there are already perfectly good dramatic, music, discussion and debating societies without there being any need for you to have recourse to Hart House.

Americans from the land of efficiency may, perhaps, not be quite so impressed by the efficiency and size of the administration but they must surely be impressed by the grandeur and dignity of the architecture and by the solid tradition which the University has built up from its past.

Toronto traces its origin back through one hundred and twenty-one years of North American history to a Royal Charter of George IV. True, this charter seems to have had little effect for it was not until after the grant of Crown Lands instigated in 1798 by Canada's first Lieutenant-Governor (whose name has been given to a fine Georgian classic I-type building) John Graves Simcoe that any real move was made, and teaching did not start until 1843 when there was an enrollment of 43.

But Toronto's real greatness does not lie in the past but in the manner in which the past has been made to serve the present. Unlike the average university of the North American Continent, Toronto is not just one big unit, instead it retains the old colleges of which it was originally formed. Every one of the dozens of colleges, schools and faculties is a separate family or team working together. Each college would maintain to its dying breath that it is superior to the rest and it is in this spirit of keen but friendly rivalry that athletic sports are conducted. Each college is completely autonomous and takes care of its own finances and courses where there are sufficient numbers enrolled to make this possible, but when the colleges do unite for any activity no union could be more loyal or complete (as rival football teams will vouch).

The University has seen difficulties with war and in peace but, as with the University Act of 1906 some way round has always been found. There are always snags but these seem always answerable—it is hoped to have the engineers back on the Campus in the not-too-distant future—so take heart.

Toronto is the Provincial University of Ontario and as a result it is the Lieutenant-Governor who appoints the 22 persons who, together with the President and Chancellor, form the Board. True, it is the Senate and Caput of College Heads who administer the examinations but the Board can always veto their decisions.

Yes fresher, you are now a part of all this, the clubs are open to you and the fine legacy of the past is yours to cherish. Yours is the new link to forge—and as to the chain—why look out of the window, THIS IS IT.

School Teachers To Aid Research In Mental Hygiene

Reports in a downtown newspaper that two thousand teachers have registered at the University of Toronto for special courses were described as without foundation by an official of the National Committee of Mental Hygiene yesterday.

Actually, there are eleven teachers here, from various parts of Canada. They have been asked to share in a research experiment, which, if successful, will be expanded and include two thousand teachers over a period of ten years if the hopes of the Committee are realized. But for this year, it is eleven.

Not a Course

This research project is not to be regarded as a course for teachers. It is a pilot project in an attempt to determine the nature of the problem of maladjusted school children and thereby work for the solution.

After one week of visiting the schools of Forest Hill Village, selected because it is a small self contained community, the teachers will spend three months receiving instruction. These institutions are under the direction of Dr. Stokes, professor of Psychiatry at the University of Toronto, and are to bring the teachers up to date on the latest developments in psychology, social health, and other fields connected with this work. For one year the teachers will be registered at Varsity. They will then return to their schools and apply the experience they have gained in Toronto.

Federal grants have been voted through for this project.

The eleven teachers were selected carefully by their province. In their work, they must be able to be sensitive to the faults and trouble of the maladjusted children and re-

Asia Studies Will Replace Former School

The new Department of East Asiatic Studies at the Royal Ontario Museum has replaced the School of Chinese Studies. At present only courses in Chinese Language, History and Civilization, and Art and Archaeology are being given, but plans have been initiated to include such studies in Japanese and Korean.

Dr. Walmsley, who came from China only four weeks ago to become the head of the department, is well fitted for the undertaking. He taught in the School of Chinese Studies here in 1944-45, and since has lived and travelled in India and China, where he was principal of the Canadian School at Chengtu in the province of Szechwan. This secondary school, staffed entirely by Canadians, is attended by most of the children of the western missionaries and officials in the area. Recently enrollment has swelled due to the pressure of communist drives in Northern China.

Besides Dr. Walmsley, the staff of the new department includes Dr. Shih, who specializes in history, Miss Helen Farnald, A.B., Assistant Professor, and Mrs. Watts of the language course.

Twelve students have enrolled in the language and history courses, including two graduates in geography, two others who saw service in the east and have some knowledge of the Japanese and Chinese languages, an exchange student from Smith College, two in the General Course, and a pre-medical student who aspires to be a medical missionary.

The courses are to be incorporated into an honor course more in keeping with the modern trend. This department promises to contribute greatly to understanding between the east and west by providing an available background of information for those who may serve in diplomatic capacities and other fields where sympathetic knowledge is so essential to harmony.

Hart House Play Cast Anne Cameron in Lead

Casting for the new Hart House play "Skin of Our Teeth", directed by Robert Gill, was completed yesterday. Rehearsals will start immediately.

"This play, which won the Pulitzer Prize for 1942," said Mr. Gill, "is a comic strip panorama of the history of mankind, very unconventional and controversial."

The lead role of "Sabina" will be played by Anne Cameron, who portrayed the wife in "Jason", last year's production.

Eric House and Audrey Lowrie are cast as Mr. and Mrs. Antrobus. Henry and Gladys, the children, will be played by Edward Follows and Eleanor Swain. Mr. Gill feels this cast will do a superlative job on the production.

Ever since the play was first produced, a controversy has raged as to whether it is a great play or a piece of trash, Mr. Gill said. In one scene a couple celebrate their five thousandth wedding anniversary; in another, the two characters are a baby dinosaur and a baby mammoth. Regular procedure is periodically broken when the actors come down into the audience. The whole piece is almost surrealistic, and for older threatre-goers used to conventional plays, it will be puzzling to say the least.

WHAT'S ON TODAY

SPEAKER ON INDIA

Dr. Chakravary of the staff of Calcutta University, former secretary of Tagore and close friend to Gandhi, will address students on "The Gandhian Way' today at 1.30 in Room 13, University College. Sponsored by the S.C.M.

Cup News Service Link Universities On National Scale

Maintaining constant touch with student newspapers across Canada, The Varsity is a member of the Canadian University Press.

This organization provides for continual exchange of issues between campus publications, and, where necessary, provides wire service for fast news coverage.

Each newspaper has a CUP bureau operating within the staff. It is the job of the bureau to supplement local coverage of campus news with stories from other colleges. Its staff also files wire dispatches wherever local news warrants fast relay to meet the daily deadline of papers like The Varsity, The McGill Daily and the Daily UBC. Weekly papers get such stories by clipping issues as they come in by mail.

The CUP was born in Winnipeg on New Year's Day, 1938, when representatives of 12 Canadian college papers met to discuss the possibility of setting up a country-wide news system. This plan was to have the effect of consolidating Canadian student opinion and affording a method of brightening up the papers of member papers with news from other Universities.

Each year, papers send delegates to a national conference where criticism is heard from competent newspapermen, mutual problems are discussed and the Bracken Trophy is awarded the paper judged the best in the country.

Rugby Tickets Sell Quickly

The Athletic Association reports that sales on football tickets are progressing quietly and 5,000 ducats were sold at 11 a.m. Sept. 27, in contrast with 3,500 on Oct. 31 one year ago. Last year many objections were raised by student bodies on the campus to the $1.50 price put on the tickets. The Athletic Association found it necessary to institute the fee last year because of increased cost of operations and to replace obsolete equipment.

Married students have so far this year bought 350 double tickets to see the games. Mr. Gregory stated at the stadium yesterday that no complaints so far have been made on the price of the tickets and students eagerly snatch them up looking forward to a good season:

A few tickets may be sold after Monday's deadline to take care of late registration.

Whitney Hall's Crop Of Freshies Less Than Last Year

Whitney Hall—at the corner of Hoskin avenue and St. George street, for those freshmen who haven't discovered it yet—will be full to the roof again this year.

Two hundred and twenty University College women are enrolled so far, but this year's crop includes only 73 freshies, down from last year's registration of 103. Most of the new girls are from Ottawa and St. Catharines.

All three of the subdivisions — Cody, Mulock, and Falconer Houses—have held official welcoming ceremonies for the freshies during the weekend, in the form of a house party. Seniors have also guided freshman charges through the intricacies of registration.

Sunday night will see the first of the planned entertainments of the term—a pyjama party.

The house committee said they had started a plan of publicity to induce all newcomers to take part in some college activity. Posters have been placed on notice boards urging the freshies to jump in, experienced or not.

Vic Music Club Begins Operations

Vic College Music Club commence their activities with the Music Club Open-meeting to be held in Wymilwood at 7.45 p.m. this evening. The Club will present its plans for the academic year, introduce its new executive, its directors, and offer musical excerpts from previous productions. An opportunity will be afforded to all musically-minded Vic students to become part of Vic's Musical-family; and to students who are interested in stage-crew, make-up and other phases of staging a musical production the Club offers a warm welcome.

Excursion Takes Art Students To Detroit Old Masters Exhibit

More than 40 students of the University of Toronto, most of them students in Art and Arhaeology, spent two days of the past weekend in Detroit at the Institute of Arts where they had an opportunity to view canvases of Old Masters.

Most of the paintings, now being exhibited in a few leading cities of the United States, are from the Kaiser-Friedrich-Museum in Berlin, and were discovered by advancing American armies in a salt mine at Merkers. On its return to Europe, the collection will be broken up and the canvases sent to various European galleries and museums. Representative pictures of the Austrian, Dutch, Flemish, French, German and Italian schools were there, under heavy guard of military police. For the students, accustomed to black-and-white slides, this unique opportunity of seeing the originals of these masterpieces was a great privilege, and an experience not soon to be forgotten.

The group of students left Toronto on Friday morning and returned Saturday evening, travelling both ways by train on a chartered coach.

The excursion was arranged by the Department of Art and Archaeology and the students were accompanied by Dr. P. Brieger, head of the department, and Mr. C. Comfort. Prior to the war such trips to galleries in large cities were yearly events and the visit to Detroit of the past weekend is the first since the war. It is hoped to make these field trips once again annual events in order to give students more opportunities to view original works and to fulfill a need for personal contact with the great art of the world.

Of the collection seen on Friday and Saturday, there were certain canvases which were more popular with the group. One of these was the "Man with the Golden Helmet" by Rembrandt. The well-known manipulation of shadow is particularly striking in this, while the depth of feeling and superb use of colour were manifested in his portrait of "Hendrickje Stoeffels."

The "Young Lady with a Pearl Necklace" by Jan Vermeer was well displayed on a yellow brocaded backdrop. This seemed to accentuate the clear yellow garment of the lady, and the cool sunlight of the window. Also there were many other paintings by old masters such as Altdorfer, Memling, Hals and Titian.

Apart from this special exhibition, the regular collection of the Detroit Institute of Arts included paintings by Goya, El Greco, and Gainsborough, and a huge fresco by the contemporary Mexican, Rivera.

DR. PEAKER TO HEAD GLEE CLUB AGAIN

Dr. Charles Peaker, F.R.C.O., will again direct the Hart House Glee Club this year. Dr. Peaker is particularly interested in giving instruction in part singing. Tenors as usual are in large demand.

The first meeting will be at 5 p.m. tonight.

The Glee Club Committe expects that as in former years the CBC will invite the club to broadcast towards the end of the Michaelmas Term.

Still Needs Revision

With the football season well under way, the attention of undergraduates is again focused on the distribution of tickets for Varsity games. At this time, before the actual opening of the league schedule, it might be well to clarify the matter in order to avoid any misunderstandings that may arise later when the demand for tickets becomes more pressing.

Last fall, after many months of consideration and discussion, the Athletic Directorate published a statement explaining that a charge of $1.50 would be levied for tickets to the three home games. The charge was made necessary, said the Directorate, in order to provide revenue for the increased cost of maintenance at Varsity Stadium and to allow the existing facilities to be expanded.

The increase, approved by the Board of Governors before the opening of the 1947 fall term, was met with disapproval and even hot opposition by many students. In a spontaneous demonstration of protest many student groups met to express their indignation. Plans were made to hold a mass student rally. The mock parliament of one college debated the question of making the Athletic Directorate directly responsible to the student body. The ex-service committee issued a statement condemning the increase. The storm of protst was such that the Students' Administrative Council set up a special committee to investigate the sale of tickets and the reasons for the increased price.

In the face of such concerted opposition from the student body a concession was made which allowed married student veterans to purchase tickets at student rates for their wives. Gradually tempers cooled and the flurry of protest died away.

Now, with the opening league game less than three weeks away, murmurs of discontent are heard once again. At last Saturday's exhibition game the student section was crowded to capacity while more favored sections of the stadium remained half empty. It is true the Athletic Directorate must retain the greater portion of the stadium for general admittance in order to maintain its revenue but it is difficult to see why a more equitable distribution of seats among the student body cannot be arranged.

In addition, some student veterans seem irritated because no provision is made for them to gain admittance to the games with their children. As it stands, the student must either leave his offspring at home or else must seek entry to the stadium through the general admission wickets. The question of raising the status of students' children to a par with that of students' wives poses no serious problem but would require merely a slight re-adjustment. The number involved is not large and the consideration extended would maintain the good will of a small but important segment of the student body.

We Need A Head For This Cat

(A SAD TALE!)

It is a beautiful day. White clouds and all that. And as we sit here, listening to the distant throb of the traffic . . . .

Cat: Now, then, what's all this?

Us: Look, vulgarian, do you want this column to remain forever . . . .

Cat: You said it, bub!

Us: Sometimes I wonder why I ever yearn towards real self-expression.

Cat: Me too.

Us: You want me to write something full of sophomoric puns, and all about liquor, huh? Like the trash that usually fills up this space.

Cat: (Taking a long drink from a bottle of hair tonic) Well, we have to consider our standards, you know.

Us: But just listen . . . .
The puce triangle that is your throat in the bubbling canot of brain.
Tonight . . . .
Tonight be my parallelogram,
o lethean Nepenthe!

Cat: You've been out with that E.L. & L. gang again!

Us: Oh, very well, then, I'll send it to "Transition."

Cat: So long as you don't ask us to print it.

Us: What about something political? I could call myself Auctoritas, or Scrutator, or something like that: Like this:

The latest moves reported from Ruritania by usually reliable sources indicate that the all-Boslavian Congress of Socialist Workers New Democracy Parties may have more significance in terms of multilateral economic concessions than earlier reports in Pravda would have led anyone to believe. On the other hand, it is obvious that unless new protocola are drafted in Flumia. . . . .

Cat: What does all that mean?

Us: Mean, schmean! It's a column of political comment.

Cat: Not in this column, it ain't!

Us: (Sulkily) Oh, very well. Do you suppose we're geting to the bottom of the column?

Cat: Yeah, pretty close.

Us: KCR?

Cat: Right with ya, bub.

SAC Places All In Summer Jobs Rumor Big Wages

The Students Administrative Council employment service handled about 2,000 job applications from women-students last summer. Miss Parkes says that 1,839 of this number were directed to job openings. However, only 1,000 placements were reported, because quite a number of students took the referred jobs without informing the S.A.C.

Miss Parkes gives a great deal of credit for the fine work to the National Employment Service personnel. They were lent to the University for several months.

At the very start of the summer vacation, several hundred students were given very lucrative jobs with the International Trade Fair.

Some students were able to spend an expense-free summer while enjoying a pleasant holiday away from their homes. This difficult-sounding feat was made possible by the students acting as nurse maids to the children of families vacationing at resorts.

The usual quota of women found employment as waitresses in summer hotels. While an accurate cross section of wages and total summer savings made by these students is very difficult to obtain, most of them commented that the American tourist is not as easy with his tips as formerly. The usual opening-day rumors made the rounds telling that so-and-so had made $1,200, but these wealthy people are very hard to track down—income tax evasion maybe?

Finalists Chosen In Cheerleader Trials, Yesterday

The second tryout for the Varsity cheerleaders was held yesterday at the back of Trinity field. Over thirty-five girls were led through their paces by experts Margie Harrington, Ruth Pullen, Midge Geary, Pat Cockburn and Ellen Gairdner.

The nine boys participating were instructed by Ted Andrews, who claims that "This will be the best year yet."

For an hour and a half, the participants went through the motions of the cheers to the accompaniment bombardment of footballs from the nearby rugby practice and the encouragement of the spectators.

After careful observation from the committee, fifteen girls and the nine boys were asked to return for the final decision tomorrow. The Blue and White Society of the S.A.C. is handling the contest with Joe Potts as chairman.

The judges on hand will be Bill Bell, S.P.S., Manager of the "Blues"; Pat Suddick, Men's Athletic Commissioner; Dorothy Stillwell, Women's Athletic Commissioner; Doug Love, S.A.C.; Jack Pearse, last year's head cheer leader; and a model from Pasquale d'Angelo's "School of Charm."

It is expected there will be nine girls and three boys picked for the '48-'49 team. They will most likely make their first showing on Saturday when the "Blues" will match with Assumption College.

Students Needed As Group Leaders For Settlement

An opportunity to work in an interesting place with a group of interesting people now awaits any student of U. of T., at 349 Sherbourne St., better known to the residents of Moss Park area as "Neighbourhood House."

What is Neighbourhood House? It is an organization under the Federation of Settlements and a Red Feather service of the community, originated to help in planning the recreational and educational needs of the people — any people from 2 to 102 years. With a full program and a small staff, Neighbourhood House is anxious for volunteers to assist in recreation—and University students are especially desired. This does not mean Psychology students alone—but all students of any age, sex, college or course.

Qualifications

The first and main qualification is a sincere liking and interest in people, and a desire to work with them. Skills such as training in arts and crafts, music, dramatics, gymnastics, club leadership and organization are useful but of secondary importance. "What we need", said Miss Barbara Greene of Neighbourhood House, "is enthusiastic leaders to help the children have a good time!"

The program planned calls for assistants in all age groups. Nursery school occupies the morning, while 6 to 11 year-olds come for sports and interest groups in the afternoon. The "Tweeners" (11-15) hold a canteen once a week, and the "teen-agers" get hep every Friday night at their "Club 349". The Saturday night program for young adults is also a thriving club. All these programs are run by the members themselves with help and suggestions from leaders.

"Neighbourhood House has something to offer you in return", Miss Greene said. "Not only is the work fun and interesting, but it is an experience with people, a responsibility and a challenge, well worth the time."

DANCING AT UWA

Morgantown, W. Vt., Sept. 22 — (Exchange) — Modern dancing classes held at the University of West Virginia are open to men students, and are counted as part of their course in physical education.

Hitting It Hard

If Bill Boyd and Ian Clark can hit the Western line as hard as they will hit the blocking dummy a moment after this picture was snapped, they should have little trouble leaving a great gap in the Western line this year. The rapt look of care shown Coach Masterson's face, (holding dummy), should turn to one of joy the first time these two stalwarts break through the opposing line.

Well-fed Zion Church Mice Serve As Cancer Victims

There is nothing poor about the church mice in the church-lecture-hall on College street. In fact, they are probably the best fed mice in the city.

These particular mice are part of the university's search in the cure for cancer. Their bed fellows are chickens and flies. In the basement of the church there is a full scale animal hospital complete with a trained nurse to put the animals to sleep. The churched beasts would probably be the happiest animals in all of the animal kingdom if most of them weren't ready to be the victims of cancer.

Scientific accuracy is completely necessary in the experiments. The cages are sterilized weekly. The animals receive a balanced diet. Every time a student stamps his feet in the hall above when complaining about a lecturer, he may be setting back the search for the cure for cancer by weeks.

"The surest way of preventing the animals from catching cancer is to have them die of something else", said Dr. W. R. Franks, in charge of cancer-research in the Banting Institute. Students are not encouraged to visit the church chicks; they (the animals) might catch a cold from the students.

When Dr. Franks took over the basement of the church, he found himself with nothing but a mud floor. Even the Sunday school was unable to use the space when the church was still used for praying.

"It was a matter of stopping research on cancer, while waiting for the citizens to subscribe to the plea for funds for a new research building or using a discarded church basement," said the doctor. He chose to continue his search.

Dr. Franks feels that they have come a long way from the start of cancer research. He is in steady conference with similar experimenters all over the world. They have, for example, found a way to make two out of every three chickens immune from cancer — the other one dies.

Cancer in chickens can be caused easily from virus. The chickens don't seem to mind having cancer too much. But you never can tell about chickens. They act very much like humans were infected. They lose weight and become restless. They can continue to lay eggs. None of the eggs ever get to a dinner table. They are burned.

Dr. Franks said that he appreciated the students' co-operation in the matter of staying away from animal church-hospital.

Service For All From University Advisory Bureau

The University Advisory Bureau, 67 St. George, offers aid in financial, personal, and adjustment matters to all ex-service personnel attending the University. The Bureau is also open to others who are in need of assistance or advice. It was organized in 1945, and is run by ex-service personnel.

In financial matters, the Bureau arranges for any aid which may be necessary, or helps arrange a budget for the student. An ex-service student, with one year of college, can apply to the Bureau for financial assistance, under the D.V.A. help him to overcome it. Methods most students who have been away from school for any length of time. The Bureau provides a questionnaire from which they can determine the student's weakness and study habits present a problem to and hours of study are also suggested. Personal problems are handled by the Bureau, and are discussed in strictest confidence.

During the last two years the type of assistance given has changed considerably, from a clearing house, helping a student decide his course, to helping him decide this future. Interest tests are given to determine what vocation suits the student best, and at which he will be most satisfied. The Bureau helps the student to make decisions, but does not make his decisions for him. Thus it helps in the development of the student, citizen and worker.

Dr. Chakravarty of the staff of Calcutta University will address Varsity students today, under the sponsorship of the S.C.M. The subject of his address will be "The Gandhian Way."

Dr. Chakravarty was the former secretary to Tagore and a close personal friend of Gandhi.

U.N.T.D. Students Have New Dress, Keep Pay Boost

Organization of the University Naval Training Divisions has been revamped during the summer, Naval Service Headquarters has announced. Changes have been made in U.N.T.D. uniforms, pay, training facilities, and qualifications since last spring.

This term will see the passing of the familiar seamen's rig from the campus, and henceforth, members of the U.N.T.D. who have passed the selection board will wear navy battle dress. The white cap band and the status of "U.N.T.D. Officer Candidate" will be no more. Instead the men will be known as "Cadets, R.C.N. (Reserve)."

Students entering the U.N.T.D. for the first time will enter as Ordinary Seamen, and will train in that capacity until February of their first year when they will go before an Officer Cadet Selection Board. Those passing the board will then become Cadets and will undergo summer training at the coast as such. On graduation, cadets may qualify for a commission in the R.C.N. (Reserve) providing they have spent at least two full summers at sea with the Royal Canadian Navy. Opportunities also exist for commission with the R.C.N. permanent force.

During the early part of the summer pay rates for officer candidates were increased from $135.00 to $143.00 per month, and the increased rate will continue for "Cadets R.C.N. (Reserve)."

"This year the University of Toronto Division will have a quota of 160 men", Lt. Commander R. F. McRae, Commanding Officer of the Toronto U.N.T.D. announced. Approximately 60 of these would be drawn from first year students.

Students having a yen for the sea may gain information from the Ship's Office at 119 St. George Street, where recruiting will be open until October 20. Special bus facilities will be provided for Ajax students, seeking to join the U.N.T.D., to visit H.M.C.S. "York" during the first parade on October 5. The bus will leave Hart House Ajax at 1830.

German Morale Is Low Declares ISS Visitor

"I was struck by the remarkable strides made in recovery in Holland, Britain and Denmark when contrasted with those made in Germany," said Pat Daniel, 4T9 Sociology, University College, commenting in an interview yesterday on some impressions he gained while travelling in Europe last Summer.

Daniel attended a summer seminar held in Kiel in Northern Germany, sponsored by the ISS and financed by UNESCO, the Canadian provincial governments and the Control Commission in Germany. The latter were hosts to the ISS group while they were in Germany.

The most frequent question asked by the Germans was, "Is there going to be a war?" Germans in the British zone are enthusiastic in their support of the Western stand in Berlin, but their thinking seems to be more in support of what the West is actually doing than in any democratic ideal, he said. Compared to what they had last winter, Germans seemed to be getting "enough to eat." Related to Canadian standards that would be the equivalent of "about one light lunch a day." The most important thing on the German mind today is whether there will be enough food, enough clothing, and whether there will be a house to live in. Their thinking does not go far beyond "their economic and material situation." Daniel noticed a definite feeling of depression among the Germans. He felt that their morale was lower now than at the end of the war.

Travelling to Copenhagen after the seminar, Daniel found Denmark "a very refreshing change after Germany." One of the things that impressed him most, no matter where he went, was the "amazing hospitality of the people." Staying one weekend with a German family he found that they had placed an entire ten day's ration of meat and butter on the table.

Speaking about Holland, Daniel said it was "one of the few places

A tea will be held at Wymilwood on Sunday, October 3, at three o'clock for the purpose of acquainting S. C. M. and Freshmen.

On Thanksgiving week-end the S. C. M. plans a Fall Camp.

In addition to the central S. C. M. located at Hart House (girls are admitted at this office), each faculty or college has its own local S. C. M. Unit, with its own officers.

One Sap's Sketchbook: "First Day"

By LIN AHA

From Gopher Hill, Alberta, Cariboo Bend, British Columbia, Grainville, Saskatchewan and Pe-Drew-Grad, Ontario, from Big Fish, Nova Scotia, Little Fish, New Brunswick, and Sleepy Look, P.E.I., from all the bergs, villes and rent collecting cities across this land of evergreen and gold to the finest university in the nation, to the fountain of learning.

How many thousand? We've quit counting. Just like mass production: it was a novelty when the Ford was a model T.

"What're they all here for?" Effie scowled at me as we walked across the green.

"Same as you and me."

"Yeah, but what the h—'s use of a sheepskin with atom bombs and bacteria cocktails falling all around?"

"So it will be a good year for umbrellas!" Abe offered without a grimace.

Since we were passing it, I said, "Let's go see the bookstore. They've swanked it all up, you know." Effie shrugged and turned. I followed Effie and Abe followed me. There was some one in the vin to the left of the door having a picnic reciting away something like this: "Look Shmoe: 'The Perils of a Purloined Atom' next to 'How to Milk a Stubborn Cow' and that's next to 'The Anatomy of a Perverted Beetle'—a place for everything and everything in its place! Ha! Hey shmoe, this is a good one.

" 'Bean Culture' side by side with 'High Frequency Transmission' which is next to 'Cleopatra's Nightmares' . . . etc., etc.,

"It musta been a arts student that stacked that sawdust up," an unshaven specimen commented from behind.

The situation called for some sardonic comment from Effie. It came, "You know, the order of those books is a symbol," Effie said, squinting with profoundness. (Effie never says anything "unprofounded.") "It's a symbol of this university and the whole cockeyed world. We know everything from the anatomy of a beetle to high frequency transmission but 'a arts student must stacked it all up!"

There may have been something to think about in that caustic tidbit from Honour History. I did well enough to have heard it, let alone digest it, with her standing there.

Just standing there. Varga's creations might just as well have blushed and bowed gracefully off stage. The best hairdresser in town must have spent a week-end on her hair and then gold plated the finished job. She wore a gun metal grey coat, gun metal grey stockings, gun metal grey shoes. The color of her 18th century skirt was somewhere between mauve and ultra-violet. A picture without a flaw. Like a rare melody, a late summer sunset, She was standing in front of a display counter looking at a book as big as a hope chest. Abe looked at me, looked at the paragon fresh from Eaton's "fresh from Paris" window, walked over, stuck his face into her book, stuck his face in her face, said "And what are you doing here?" Cinderella didn't bat an eye lash. Abe came back: "The tone is about medicine!"

I said, "Do you really suppose she's here to martyr all that gun metal grey to learning?"

Effie answered, "Maybe she read about Madame Curie and Lise Meitner, maybe."

Then Abe said he had to get a handbook at the SAC office. We got back out on the road.

There was another kid up near the tower, in the alcove where all the names are chiselled in granite. You couldn't help noticing her. She was regular featured, but not beautiful. Her clothes were sturdy but not coarse. She was looking over the heads of the by-passers, over the length of the campus, over the tops of the roofs. She wore the expression of someone who had reached a high summit and who was looking back down for the first time, seeing the land below, the shape and scheme of it all, the scheme one cannot see from the valley. The look of someone who had struggled very hard, fought a no-holds barred battle to get here and did.

Effie must have received the same impression as I because he said, "I wonder how long that 'fresh air exhiliration' will last; how long she'll keep from getting confused and disillusioned like the rest of us; how many lectures hence she's going to feel like she was back in the valley and there wasn't any scheme at all."

"Not if she's in engineering," Abe answered and got a poisonous look from Honour History.

Appoint New Prof. To Lecture At SPS

A new member, Assistant Professor William Scott, M.Sc., has been appointed to the Faculty of Electrical Engineering. Professor Scott, a lecturer at the University during the latter part of the war, has been taking post graduate work at the Massachusettes Institute of Technology for the last two years. While there he did extensive study in electrical engineering education and has prepared a paper on the subject.

Mr. Scott is glad to be back in Toronto and is looking to the day when the new Mechanics Building will be opened. When asked how the engineering course at Toronto compares with the one at M.I.T. he replied: "The students here think they work hard. Down there there is no doubt about it."

Ottawa, Sept. 23—(CUP)—Canadian university officials are one in hoping that all their graduates will live long and successful lives—but there is a feeling more of them might remember their alma maters in their last will and testament.

"We haven't been too generously looked after by bequests," said Dr. R. C. Wallace, president of Queen's University.

"Taking the long view—say, over the last 60 years—there is no question McGill University has received more than the University of Toronto in the matter of bequests," admitted Dr. F. C. James, president of McGill.

Mrs. W. Macfarlane, editor of the U. of T. Alumni Federation monthly, revealed that there actually is a "tremendous amount" bequeathed the University of Toronto without any very positive program. Mrs. Macfarlane suggested that it was because U. of T. is a provincial university and substantially supported by the province that more graduates did not leave money to the institution.

AJAX RUMBLINGS

By HAL PLUNKETT

And forsooth there came to pass in the final year of the place of great enlightenment, the land of great rusty red dogs and green dragons, a plague wherein the great ones of the secret order of 5TO SPS were carried off amongst them the great and venerable Guiseppi (whom this scribe doth admire and copieth) to the Elysian fields of TORONTO there to disport in a Valhalla of the New Look. The plague was the rare and unknown disease of "NOSUPPS". And it came to pass that the power 5T1 was in the ascendancy and looked with scorn upon the beardless, shiny-faced ones that descended upon the green fields in a horde tromping, the one upon the other's toes, and crying out "Where is Annabelle this year?" and vieing for honors from the fair ones of steamtable three.

Yea, and in this multitude we spy a few fair ones. Whyfore are they not in the seat of Higher Learning thirty parasangs towards the setting sun? Verily have they seen a great light, and are with great gen, for is it not written that Virtue is its own reward?

And lo, on the first morning a loud roaring and panting was heard without, and the peasants from the Hall of Eating did rush and fall down prostrate on the ground in fright. And there arose from amongst them a prophet bearded and wise of the order Soph, and cried "Arise, fear not, 'tis but the Green Dragon."

"The Green Dragon?"

"Yea, and unto every one of you I say, thou must face this monster or thou comest late into the Halls Of Greater Learning and thou shall have heaped upon thy heads the wrath of ones of stupendous gen, known as the Eaters of Earth, which is in the vernacular 'Demi'." And lo, the multitude descended upon these dragons and yea, did clutch at the sides of them and filled the insides so that from the myriads there did descend scores of bodies to the grounds.

Lo, WHERE IS OUR GREAT RED FRIEND? who did spend many joyful hours with us in the Great Hall of Eating? No one knows, but it is parabled that he was last seen at the Spruce and was incarcerated for disorderly conduct.

And what of the fate of the fair maid of steamtable three? Yea, she waxes more fair as the years pass, and smiles sweetly behind the potato scoop, and hath won the hearts of the beardless ones that inhabit the green pastures of this dominion.

And forsooth there came a time that the shoutings of the multitude died down and there came the gentle sound of many unshaven faces being moved in unison at the Great Hall of Halls, where the horde did partake of the eventide repast. And lo, with great rumblings the darkness did descend, and all was still save for the rush of those great of greats the slipsticks and the muffled curse of the seeker after knowledge as the great scribes of the parchments of learning matched their gen against the poor tattered unshaven ones.

Torontonensis Undergoes Change In Organization

Torontonensis, the University of Toronto Year Book will undergo some changes both in staff organization and general makeup this year, Jack Sullivan, the editor, announced yesterday.

Chief among the changes which have been made in the staff organization are the addition of a layout man and a Communications man. The layout man will be in complete charge of the layout for all pages. This, Sullivan believes, will give a more consistent issue than in former years.

The Communications man will be the official expediter of material. In former years it has always been a problem to have the information required for all the pages, in at the proper time.

The alterations to be made in the general makeup of the Year Book will cover the position allotted to the features on campus life. This year they will be kept in the one section and somewhat more refined than last year Sullivan stated. The second change will be in the layout of the biography section.

The Frats who contribute material to Torontonensis will be placed with the section allotted to University Clubs unless enough of them contribute material to warrant a separate section.

Space contracts for Torontonensis may be obtained in the SAC office in Hart House. "Any organization planning to use space should obtain authorization from their societies or clubs as soon as possible", Sullivan stated.

"The deadlines for material will be strictly adhered to", he said. Sullivan pointed out this would avoid the piling up of work at the end of the year and thus avoid the assembling of the whole book during the last month. Biography cards must be in to the individual college Torontonensis representative by November 11.

The Torontonensis office will be located in the COTC Drill Hall this year. "The quarters are much larger this year than the ones we had during last year. There will

"Imitation is the sincerest flattery."

With a mighty plop the Open Letter to U.C. made its initial appearance in The Varsity last week. The mainstream of university activity that Mr. Rosenthall refers to is, we presume, the fire hydrant that bedecks one of U.C.'s graceful corners ... or could it be the four - legged vertebrates who are strangely attracted by its presence? However, we sincerely hope that the "intelligent, sophisticated and mature column for the deep and genteel enjoyment of the (equally) intelligent, sophisticated and mature ladies and gentlemen of University College" meets with every success during the coming year.

Having dispensed with that painful duty, we now move on to matters of much greater import. Namely Vic. Everyone will agree that the "latest addition to Vic tradition" was a grand success. Jimmie Nethercott and his stalwart social committee have earned for themselves a well-deserved pat on the back. In case you're wondering how many pats that would necessitate if everyone present decided to thank the committee, here's the data; 1,100 resounding slaps, followed by an equal number of groans. We're certain that all concerned would be much happier if instead, you showed your thanks by continuing to support your V.C.U. activities in the same enthusiastic manner.

You'll have an opportunity to do just that this coming Friday. Notices have already been posted announcing the bye-elections, but that's only part of the story. Now it's up to YOU to see that the right people are nominated ... and elected. As usual it's the Chapel on Thursday at 1.30 for election speeches.

As the landlady said when the hurricane bit the boarding house "Roomers are flying." So too at Vic, there is an undercurrent of activity that can only mean one thing — the BOB. According to the campaign speech of one 5T2 executive "that scurrilous swarm, the Sophs" are in for a beating. We don't know what the Sophs have up their sleeves but it will be very humorous to find out. As for the Bob itself, Doug Maxwell, the director, informs us that this coming Thursday, Friday and Monday there will be auditions for all those interested in taking part. If you can write, sing, dance, or act please be on hand. As a matter of fact as long as you have a medical certificate or something similar to prove that you're alive and human, the committee will probably be able to use you. Remember, there's a lot of behind-the-scenes work to be done. Watch the bulletin boards for announcements.

Pat Patterson, Vic Football coach, is still on the lookout for players. The Scarlet and Gold twinkletoes boast only three men from last year's squad. Linemen in particular are needed. The tryout deadline approaches rapidly so if you're interested get out there today. Men of the golf lanes may register now for the intramural tournament which gets underway immediately. Both good and bad are welcome to enter. After all, what have you got to lose? (From personal experience I would say, about six good balls.) The first big event on the fall programme is the Junior Interfaculty meet a week from Thursday. Vic won this very handily last year and are counting on this year's Frosh to return the championship. All Freshmen are expected to turn out for this event as well as the Freshmen Harrier, Saturday, October 16th, when they can prove not only to the Sophs, but also to the rest of the University that they're the best crop on the Campus.

But, you say, what of the Vic women? Very little mention of them as yet. Well, gals, no one seems to have given me any news for you in particular, but don't worry. Things will start popping soon. If you want something to think about here's a little reminder that the "T" Dances will be held in the near future. At Vic we call them "Tummy Rubs", or in the colloquial terminology of "Jake" who wrote this column last year . . . "Dove Shoves." But whatever you call them, the names all mean the same thing . . . an enjoyable hour or two of dancing.

Ye olde graduating class of Vic is reminded to try and make appointments for grad pictures as soon as possible. As logic would have it, the sooner you make your appointments the earlier you'll get your pictures.

That seems to pretty well wind up the corner for this week. Before we close we'd like to dedicate a few lines to a certain group of individuals who may have been lost in the mainstream so long that they went down the river long ago.

"Correspondences are like small clothes bfore the invention of suspenders; it is impossible to keep them up."

And, incidentally, if any of you should take exception to anything that has been said . . . Why not cool off in the mainstream?.

Golfers and Golf Balls Followed by Little Boys

By HANK WESTCOTT

There's a rumor being whispered through the little boys' gangs of North Toronto. Every time one little boy tells another little boy, both pairs of eyes light up, and they whistle off to school, envisioning the ice cream they're going to buy.

Thursday afternoon truant officers may have a bit of a problem on their hands—but not too much, because they'll know where to find the delinquents. They'll be at St. Andrews Golf Club picking up and returning lost balls (for a liberal consideration). That's what all the whispering is about.

And the Varsity interfaculty golf tournament is really their meat. They remember last year when 200 golfers spread dozens of lost balls over the course for two days. This year it's going to be even bigger and better with 300 entrants over three days. Which means even more lost balls. And when the little avaricious urchins think of the price they can extort for a good used Dunlop 65 their eyes get as bright as a Muskoka sunset.

Having been employed in this business for a number of years, we would like to issue the following list of helpful hints for the little tykes:

1—Don't bother to follow golfers like Ernie Bentley who won the interfaculty golf tourney last year with a neat 74. Guys like him break your heart. All day you follow him, and not once does he fire a ball anywhere near the rough. Bentley is in OCE this year and will be back to protect his title after plenty of summer experience.

2—Also don't waste your time pursuing other top notchers like Mossop, Drew Harvey, Ross Hunter, Bill Givens, who were on last year's two intercollegiate teams.

3—Beware of superstitious golfers. They always get attached to a ball and they'll hunt all day to find it if they slice one into the rough.

4—If any of you have big brothers, get them to enrol in the tourney any time until Wednesday noon in the intramural office, and from them find out who are the 'Sunday golfers' in the tourney. Follow them.

5—Be there every day—Thursday, Friday, and Monday; and also at the intercollegiate trials the following Wednesday. The turnover should be terrific.

6—Don't follow me; I'm going to use a ping pong ball.

Inside Ian

Kneeling above is Ian Clark who played a standout game at inside against Ted Reeve's Beaches-Indians. Ian and line partner Dave Copp were instrumental in the downfall of many of the Beaches plunging attempts. This is Ian's third year with the Blues.

Only 3 Entries Left In Doubles Singles Filled

With the entry list of the singles filled and with only three openings left in the doubles, this year's interfaculty tennis tournament promises to be one of the best to date.

Top seeded in the men's doubles is large Art Anderson, defending champion and one of the better players of the Toronto district. Among the top seeded contenders who may give Art a battle for singles honors is Fred Dawes, co-winner of this year's men's doubles tournament in the Toronto Church League.

There is no admission charge for most U. of T. students and a large gallery is expected to be on hand Wednesday and through the week at the beautiful Toronto Tennis Club. The club can be reached by street car or for the more energetic by a ten minute walk from the campus.

In spite of the fact that the full quota of 144 entries had been filled yesterday, Mac McCutcheon said last night that anyone with tournament experience could still be fitted into the draw. "The reason for the limited entries," he added, "is because of the need for a speedy choosing of an Intercollegiate team, coupled with a limit on courts and possibility of rain."

Jim Follwell Succeeds "Buff" As Sports Head

By ED. SOKOLOWSKI

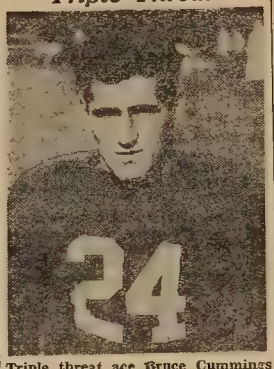
Ajax Athletics will soon start their very extensive sports program this year under its new Athletic Director James H. Follwell. Jim Follwell fills the position vacated by Fred Horton who was the director of Athletics at Ajax for the past three years. Fred "Buff" Horton, after meritorious service with the University, left the Ajax Campus to move to a sunnier climate in California.

Jim Follwell is not new at Ajax as he served as assistant to Fred Horton the first two years. The last year Jim served on the Physical and Health Education staff and now has assumed his new position at Ajax. The sports program is one of the main features at Ajax and in the past years since the inauguration of the campus, has proven to be very successful. Jim intends to carry on the good work that has been done and judging by his past experience in the field of sports he will successfully carry out the program.

The sports schedule at Ajax consists of Inter-resident competition in almost all sport which includes: soccer, basketball, volleyball, hockey, bowling, golf, track and field. As well as this extensive program at home, Ajax enters teams in all Interfaculty competition. Ajax men also are in practically all University of Toronto teams.

Jim Follwell, along with his assistant, Patrick Sheehan, will have a heavy timetable ahead of them and receiving the co-operation from the students they have had in the past, they will carry out the entire sports program without any hitches. As well as heading the Athletic staff at Ajax, Jim Follwell is assistant coach of the senior Blue Rugby team.

Jim Follwell is a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College and in 1942, he received his Masters degree in Science and Agriculture. During the last war he served in the R.C.A.F. He spent two years in Iceland on the staff of the Y.M.C.A., directing all the athletic activities there.



Of all the sports he plays football is his favorite. His career in this sport began at Albert College in Belleville and continued on through his college days.

On his return from the Air Force he joined the Athletic Association and moved to Ajax as assistant to Fred Horton, Director of Athletics at that time. During his second year there he coached the Ajax Junior Rugby team to the Eastern Ontario O.R.F.U. championship. The following year he joined the P. & H. E. staff in Toronto and also coached the Varsity Intermediate Rugby team for that year. This year he returns to Ajax as athletic head and is also helping Bob Masterson produce a winning Senior Rugby team.

This may be the final year of the existance of the Ajax Division of the University of Toronto, and when the last chapter of that campus is written Jim Follwell hopes that this year will be the greatest year for Ajax in the field of sports.

"Felt Like Tackling Him" Says Masterson of Pyzer

Triple Threat

Triple threat ace Bruce Cummings was one of the many brilliant performers in last Saturday's opening exhibition game. He completed seven of eleven passes including a pay-off aerial to Tommy Waldon. Bruce also showed well in the running and kicking departments booting one 65 yards for a rouge point.

By BRIAN LAND

Coach Bob Masterson's general reaction to the 1948 Varsity Blues' first football encounter was one of general encouragement tinged with a shade of disappointment. The Head Coach thinks he should have won.

The brighter side of the picture appears when the relative advantages held by the two squads are put side by side. The Beaches-Indians had played seven games before meeting the collegians, and had time to familiarize themselves with the other faces in the huddle. BBI's present a line-up sprinkled with well known football names. Bob Cosgrove and Shanty Mackenzie, a 1947 All-Canadian selection, bolster a line which out-weighed the Blues 15-20 lbs. per man.

In the Indians' backfield, Johnny Lake, Doug Pyzer (he of the 115 yard scamper), Bob Hazel, Tommy Ford and Ernie Becker are all football "names". The conclusion to be reached seems to be that Beaches should have won, on paper at least. A defeat by Varsity certainly would not have added to the BBI's drawing power.

On the disappointing side lay the fact that the split second timing so necessary to the 1948 Varsity plays was lacking. Masterson attributes this to first game tension and to the fact that 37 players were used, six of them as quarterbacks.

Concerning the Pyzer dash down the left touch line, several of the Blues insist that the Beaches fast-boy was out at least once. Despite all this he wasn't tackled. "I felt like tackling him myself" was Masterson's observation.

Any tackling deficiencies will

Tough Schedule Is Looming

It will be a tough intercollegiate football schedule this year if weekend exhibition game scores are any criterion. All of the other three teams in the loop racked up more than 30 points against their opposition.

Western won 35-3 in their preschedule squabble with OAC, while McGill blasted Ottawa University 35-0 in Montreal. Queen's surprised McMaster 33-9 in Hamilton after McMaster took an early three point lead.

Track Aspirants Practising

Varsity tracksters have started training under the new track coach Harold Brown and are looking for additional talent in preparation for the Intercollegiate Track Meet which will be held here at a date to be announced later. All potential contestants are asked to get in touch with Coach Brown at Hart House.

AJAX SPORTS

Ajax has done it again. Yesterday at the Oshawa Golf and Country Club the fourth annual Golf Tournament was held. It was a delight to watch the skillful driving and putting of the thirty-two eager contestants. As the clear sunny afternoon drew to a close we were astounded by the showing of the Jaxmen. No less than sixteen qualified for the Intra-mural Finals beginning Thursday at Toronto St. Andrew's. Leading the field with a sizzling 79, over a course unfamiliar to them, were: George Smalley, Harry Watson and Doug Easson. Hot on their trail with 80 was W. Tarasick followed by Hanson, Smith, Pavanel, Mumford, R. B., Booth, Willsie, Pezzack, Robinson, Riddell, Heit, Washburn, Sweetman and Mumford, W. F.

These are the boys on whose shoulders lies the honor of Ajax come next Thursday. Judging by their showing yesterday they will be tough to beat.

Any day after five the Ajax Rugby and Ajax Soccer teams can be seen practicing. All those wishing to join as either players or managers are asked to contact the Athletic Office immediately.

Speaking of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

I feel that this business of loyalty cannot be overstressed. For some reason, best known to themselves, University of Toronto students, by and large, are suffering from a bad case of athletic inferiority complex. A look at last year's record should belie this attitude.

There are twenty senior honours placed on the intercollegiate block every year. Varsity presently holds all but five of them. That's right, fifteen out of a possible twenty, with three other universities competing. Why then do we hear only of the athletic prowess of Western?

Well, the chief reason is that Western has the faculty of winning the events which are most in the public eye. Did you realize that of the twenty championships, Western managed to capture only two? But what were they? That's right, football and basketball—and because of two events, Western falls heir to the reputation of a great athletic college.

Western is famous for its track men, the McFarlanes and Parry. But who won the senior and intermediate track and harrier titles?—that's right again, Varsity. McGill has the reputation for superior hockey teams, but nevertheless, the Queen's Cup hasn't left Hart House for the past two seasons, and Varsity even tacked on the intermediate championship for good measure.

And so it goes all down the line. Varsity made clean sweeps in swimming, waterpolo, gymnastics, English rugby, fencing, and wrestling. Bluemen won senior soccer and golf titles, intermediate tennis and basketball. All this, and still we hear the question, "What's the matter with Varsity athletes?"

To the freshmen in particular may I appeal. Don't become infected by the lackadaisical attitude of some of your elders. Don't be ashamed to be proud of your school. You are picking up a great athletic heritage—a heritage of your school. You are picking up a great athletic heritage—a heritage unmatched by any other Canadian institution. And to our lackadaisical sophs and seniors, let's stop blowing Western's horn for her, and start tooting our own. The quality of the music may surprise you.

Last night the first practice for the Women's Intercollegiate Swimming Team was held at UTS ... and practice means practice. In fact, practices for the first three weeks are more like classes, with Miss Baxter on hand to coach. No one will be eliminated at first.

These training-practice periods will continue each Monday, Wednesday and Thursday at UTS at the same times. Speed at 5.30, style and ornamental at 6.30 and diving at 7.30. Be sure to note that these are the times the classes begin, not the times you should arrive at UTS.

Even if you missed the first practice, there is still an opening for you if you are an experienced swimmer. You may want to try out for more than one of the three groups. If so, go to one period one night and another the next but don't participate in more than one group each night. It's too strenuous. You'll agree after one hour of limbering up exercises and splashing around!

So you want to play softball or basketball. Have you had your medical yet or else made an appointment for it? Don't look so blank! Everyone who wants to take part in a competitive sport must have a medical check-up at the Women's Health Service preferably even before practices begin. If a player on a competing team has not had her medical the whole team will be disqualified.

The Health service is very busy right now with first year medical examinations, but have kept time open for the appointments of students who wish to take part in softball or basketball. If there is any possibility of your participating in either of these sports, make your appointment with the Health Service NOW.

Have you ever played lacrosse? Or didn't you know that women can play it too? As there is no body checking or slashing allowed in women's lacrosse, it is not a rough game but a game that depends on the swiftness and dexterity of the players. If you are interested in playing, learning or even watching this game, keep watching your bulletin boards and this column for further information.

Intramural Athletics Hit Peak

"There will be no change in athletic participation by students in intramural activities," Intramural Sports director J. E. McCutcheon stated yesterday in the Intramural Office, "although the present interest shown in fall sports indicates that intramural activities will reach the highest possible peak with the available equipment."

The participation of students in intramural activities has reached its peak for the early fall activities.

The Intramural Office expresses satisfaction in the increasing interest in its athletic program. The first meeting of the Sports Committee, held last Thursday, revealed that interest in intramural sports was high in all the colleges and faculties. In fact, there is an increased interest among the veterans because they have found that they are able to participate and still maintain their standing. The new crop of freshmen from secondary schools has also brought about an increased interest in these activities.

The facilities of Hart House, orlginally designed to accommodate six or seven thousand men are heavily overtaxed with all the maximum space being used. The shower facilities have been improved. "We are working to absolute maximum capacity in every available field," said McCutcheon when referring to the outdoor activities.

The schedules for intramural activities for the early fall sports have been filled to capacity. Although additional entries for football and soccer are pouring in they probably will have to be refused because of the use of all available space by the same entries that were in last year.

The threat of a power cut-off will possibly curtail such indoor sports as hockey. McCutcheon asks students to accept such cut-offs as contributing to the good of all.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

Concerning "Wednesday Night"

This year A. M. & D. intends to pay some attention to radio and, more specifically, to CBC "Wednesday Night". Whether this will take the shape of actual reviews of individual broadcasts, or of occasional contributions of a more general character, remains to be seen.

"Wednesday Night" is important, not only because it aims at the maintenance of high artistic standards and succeeds fairly consistently, but, no less, because it represents radio's first attempt at inducing its listeners to approach it in the same manner as they would approach events which require "going out", the purchase of a ticket and the previous setting aside of the evening for that purpose. Obviously, the institution of the "evening out" at home is likely to affect strongly the leisure habits of a community.

To accomplish this revolutionary thing, to chain the listener to his radio for one whole evening some sort of unity had to be established. The seemingly easiest and most obvious method is the presentation of one large feature to fill the evening, but the fact that the broadcasting of Bach's "Passion according to St. Matthew" in its entirety had to be hailed as an unprecedented and highly courageous feat, proves that the obvious is not necessarily the easiest. That broadcast also served to remind us that in its short thirty-year history radio had worked itself into a very rigid set of conventions. One of them, and, from an artistic point of view one of the most damaging, was the axiom that an evening programme must be adapted to the prescribed length of one hour or a fraction thereof. Wednesday Night, capable of a freedom of enterprise arising, we suspect, from its constitutional position outside the magic circle thus named, has shaken off this convention and seems to be bent on doing so in the future. In the very near future, as a matter of fact, for the October schedule promises two broadcasts of two and one-half hours each, entitled "A Layman's History of Music" (October 6 and 13) and the performance of a complete opera (La Bohème, October 20).

The alternative method of capturing evening-long attention is the presence of a thematic thread connecting various items within the evening and, one step further, from week to week. In this matter of "vertical" and "horizontal" planning, as Mr. Lister Sinclair calls it, the creators of Wednesday Night have produced some interesting experiments with varying success, but, of course, no final or single formula can, or should, be established.

With regard to the future programmes mentioned above, two welcome impressions emerge: Wednesday Night seems to have the courage of being instructive in addition to being entertaining and willing to pay for it, because the list of participants in the "Layman's History" is very impressive both as to number and calibre of participants. Furthermore, by forming its own opera company (closely related to, but not identical with, the Senior School of the Conservatory) and by commissioning four complete opera performances in one season, Wednesday Night emerges as a Maecenas of no mean proportions.

Wednesday Night deserves to be taken very seriously indeed.

Invites Students To Visit Clinic

"New students of the University are urged to visit the Health Service Building at 43 St. George St. any time they feel sick or unable to cope with college life in general", said Dr. Gossage, Health Service director, yesterday.

An important new feature of the regular check-up program is the free chest X-ray, which will be offered this year to all students and faculty members of the university during the last two weeks in October. It will be held with the aid of the National Sanatorium Association (Gage Institute). The Medical Department is conducting an ambitious survey program, which last year found 32 cases of TB out of half the university body.

In the field of mental health the Medical Department has a qualified psychiatrist to give students assistance that is not purely physical.

This year the Health Department will give a series of three lectures on subjects designed to help new students. The first lecture, "Adjustment to University Life" will give advice to new students away from home for the first time. The second lecture will be on the process of learning, the third on the consequences of bad study habits and poor adjustment to college life.

EX-PATIENTS MOUNTAIN SANATORIUM

Students who are ex-patients of the Mountain Sanatorium, Hamilton, are asked to advise Dr. H. T. Ewart, Medical Superintendent, as soon as possible, that they are now enrolled at this University.

THE EDITOR,
The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

The imposing photograph on your front page Sept. 27 is inaccurately captioned. Better make it "Out of the Blue" rather than "into" for the Seafire depicted there is not taking off; it is landing on. Even a U. C. freshie could tell you this from the extended landing hook in plain view, and the batsman in the right foreground, signalling an engine cut.

The Editor, The Varsity:

Dear Arts and Pre-Meds Fresmmen:

We of the better school wish to extend a hearty welcome to you. We feel we must promote unity and amity at the outset and that the stronger link (engineering) should aid the weaker links wherever possible . . . so if at any time you feel lost in any way . . . ask any Skuleman for direction . . . He's sure to tell you where to go, for he is intently bent on your destruction . . er . . . instruction.

You must cultivate deep respect for Skulemen, saluting or curtsying to them on the street; realize the sacredness of SPS grounds, and ask us no foolish, childish, questions about technical material, we are too busy. Instead, outside of 6 or 7 hours per week lectures, stick to your comic books (with all due respect for those over 13 hours per week).

For you who are smiting yourselves for blundering into these courses (?) be not disheartened, you may get some "job", valet or maid for an engineer would be ideal.

I shall outline briefly some cures for arts and pre-meds to be forwarded to President Smith for approval.

(1) Have Honor Arts cover the first year Christmas term of the engineering course for B.A. (two weeks extra for M.A.)

(2 Pre-meds certificates be given as consolation prize on some obscure radio show.

(3) Pass arts degrees for two box tops of flea powder.

(4) Save five precious years of high school and enter these courses directly from public school.

Taking these steps, I am sure, is a definite step in alleviating your inherent problems.

Yours till the new mechanical building falls.

The closest contact Daniel had with the Iron Curtain consisted of a half hour chat across the barrier between the British and Russian zones with a couple of Russian soldiers. The talk centered on the "conditions of the working class in the United States today."

Since returning home, Daniel has noticed in Canadians "a lack of interest, and an unwillingness to take responsibilities in an international way." He has found that "the same question is asked by Canadians because I have been to Germany as was asked by Germans because I came from outside the country—'When is the war going to start?" When I found that I wondered whether Canada was being whipped into the same war hysteria that the United States has apparently been whipped into."

Assist Students At U of T Service In Job Placement

"The University Placement Service has proven to be of great value to those who have sought its assistance. Graduates in Arts and Commerce, technical and non-specialized fields have found it unfaltering with contacts for responsible positions," said an official of that organization yesterday.

Since April of this year the Placement Service has placed hundreds of graduates. Over fifty graduates and undergraduates are interviewed each week. All possible arrangements are made for students who have failed through lack of credits.

Those concerned have to arrange for interviews in which their interests and particular qualifications are kept on file till suitable work is found.

This work was formerly performed by the Alumni Federation Employment Service, which since 1920 has placed 43,000 graduates. The office is located at 67 St. George Street.

St. Mike's Start Year With Rally

St. Mike's frosh began their annual initiation ceremonies with a snake dance last night, which visited each of the college residences in turn, erupted in a Soph-Frosh free-for-all in the tunnel between Fisher and Moore Residences, and ended at Brennan Hall where a dance climaxed the evening's activities.

Although greatly outnumbered, a solid wall of sophomores packed the tunnel and successfully withstood wave upon wave of oncoming Frosh, who tried to break through to Brennan Hall.

Skits by the various residences and a mock trial will be staged on Thursday at Brennan Hall to culminate the initiation celebration.

Especially favored were the freshies at Loretto and St. Joe's who were entertained with impromptu skits, songs, etc., by the frosh snake-paraders. Frosh refusing to perform for the benefit of the freshies were forced to consume onions as penalty. The resulting program included items in their native accents by frosh from the U.S., England, and Colombia.

Members of the initiation week program committee were: Noel Beauchesne, Pete Mosteller, and Jim Wiley, Marg Karns (Loretto College), and Theresa Houlihan (St. Joe's) handled the freshie part of the program.

Two Hour Trials Held to Pick Out New Glamor Squad

Yesterday, at Trinity field, the finalists were picked in the cheerleading contest. It took almost two hours to make the decision, but the six lucky girls were finally chosen.

This year the cheerleaders will include June Pemberton, U. C.; Diana Troop, U. C.; Stella McCord, PHE; Joan Dauphinee, U. C.; Hilka Pilpula, PHE; and Helen Channen, PHE.

As yet, the boys are still trying out, but it is hoped that a decision will be reached sometime tomorrow.

There will nine girls and three boys leading the cheering for the home games and six girls and three boys for the out of town dates.

The judges included Miss Jerry Prizeman from the Pasquale D'Angelo "School of Charm", Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, president of the SAC, Bill Bell, manager of the Blues, Pat Suddick, Men's Athletic Commissioner, Joe ("Coon") Potts, chairman of the Blue and White Society and Jack Pearse, head cheerleader '47-48 and Doug Love, SAC.

The cheerleaders will most likely make their first showing on Saturday when the Blues will meet Assumption College at Varsity Stadium.

World Government Or Society's End Is Hotly Debated

Disagreement over the preamble to the draft constitution created powerful dissention at the organizational meeting of the World Government Association Monday night. It was decided to retain the statement "We are convinced that civilization cannot survive another world conflict," but it will be open for discussion at the next general meeting of the association.

Officers and committee members were elected at the meeting and future plans were discussed.

Boyd Ferris, president of the association, spoke of a recent Gallup Poll indicating approval of world government by 58 per cent of all Canadians. "Towards these people," he said, "our primary purpose is going to be an educational one."

Officers elected were: president, Byod Ferris; vice-president, Phyllis Hicks; secretary, Jean Danard; treasurer, Harvey Riddel. Also elected were committees for publicity, speaking groups and discussion groups.

Board Ruling Stops Credit

The Board of Governors of the University of Toronto has ruled that credit sales to students purchasing books at the U of T Press be discontinued except in special cases.

The ruling was made when it was found that the expense to the Press of handling the credit accounts had increased considerably and that it was necessary to employ extra members of staff to do this work exclusively. An analysis of the accounts showed that a large percentage were for single sales only and had been opened, rather unnecessarily, when the students at the moment had found themselves short of funds.

Jax Debates Club Has First Meeting

"This organization is not for intellectual snobs or conceited prigs," said Dave Coates, chairman of the Ajax Engineering Society Debates Club at the opening meeting last night.

Outlining the club organization, he told new members something of the history and aims of the club.

Plans were made for coming debates, and an appeal was made for all interested persons to volunteer for the job of writing and announcing the newly instituted "Breakfast Melody" program, which the club stages in the cafeteria each morning.

George Powell and Heinz Ferdburg were appointed to act as provisional secretary-treasurer and vice-chairman respectively.

Gandhi's Philosophy Presented In Speech by Indian Professor

If you consider others' problems besides your own when making a decision, you are practising the philosophy of Gandhi. This was the theme of Dr. Amiya Chakravarty's talk in University College yesterday on "The Gandhian Way." Dr. Chakravarty, formerly on the staff of Calcutta University now is on the staff of Howard University in Washington. He is also advisor to the United Nations on Far East Affairs. He was close friend of Gandhi and former secretary ot the famous Indian philosopher and Poet "Tagore".

Dr. Chakravarty told his audience how one of the main themes of the Gandhian philosophy is the emphasis on human adjustment and the attempt to get working principles without recourse to violent action.

All important for this human adjustment is the principle of single standard in morality. Dr. Chakravarty said, "We are inclined to accept and practise the dual standard. A moral law must be universal, or it is not a law."

He said that even in the pacifistic Gandhian philosophy, there is no room for acceptance of evil without offering some opposition.

Opposes Dual Standard

Analysing this problem of dual standard and the moral law, Dr. Chakravarty said that maybe a person is an honourable and good man in every other phase of life, but uses the dual standard in regard to some other group of people. He asked why men are honourable sometimes, and practise racial arrogance at other times.

In this respect he mentioned General Smuts, who "is a good man, except when he is intolerant and practises the dual standard and racial discrimination." "This discrimination is a Nazi doctrine," he added. "The problem is to find the root of how the dual standard operates. Of course the moral law must be on your side."

In peacetime, we must make sure that these evils do not shove us into war. We are in war already if we practise or advocate a dual standard, he insisted. We are all in a common struggle against these enemies that threaten us.

Gandhi was not against the British, or any individual Englishmen, but the dual system they practised was bad for all. Now, he said, there is a better feeling between India and England than ever before. Britain should not have expected to control India against the will of the people, and by bombs and guns.

Stresses Equality

Gandhi stressed equality of all men. "We should try to live together for the flicker of time we have on earth." There is nothing to make us fly at each other. In calmness, we can get the idea of how to solve social maladjustments.

Gandhi's hardest fight was at home. He tried to harmonize internal and external forces, instead of having them conflict.

Why use the atomic bomb? Why use force of any kind? Dr. Chakravarty said that during the time he was in U. S. A., he talked to many Americans. No American wants to use force. A few initiate such action and the nation is told about it, he maintained.

In the question period that followed, Dr. Chakravarty answered questions about conditions in India. He left India six months ago, and made a lecture tour in American cities. He said that the government has an enormous task since India was divided. Seven million displaced people came in needing all kinds of relief and medical help.

India is examining the constitutions of other countries in order to develop a very democratic constitution of her own, which will be suited to the particular needs of the Indian people. The speaker said that they are trying to spread education and make new advancements. In keeping with their democratic principles, New India has legislated that no government department shall practise discrimination towards anyone. This is a great blow to the caste system, to which Gandhi was opposed, and Dr. Chakravarty expressed the hope that castes would disappear in India.

The new country was faced also with the problem of native states, with their injustices of feudalism, barbarism, war-lords, polygamy, and tyrannical oppression. Some of these native states have been absorbed. He spoke especially of the case of the state of Cashmere and how it was handed over to the United Nations. The reference to the United Nations was indicative of the present condition of a new nation that is trying to become a world democracy, and recognized as such by the res. of the world.

Dr. Chakravarty says that India is developing trade and buying as much mechanical and electrical tools as possible in order to further develop the country.

Party's Problem Is Lack of Trust In Their Leaders

One of the main troubles with the socialist party today is that it has great difficulty in trusting its leaders, said Professor R. M. Dawson of the Political Science Department last night, opening the debate from the floor in a Trinity College Literary Institute debate on the resolution "Resolved that Canadian Socialism has a better understanding of liberal principles than Canadian Liberalism."

Speaking on several points brought up in the formal debate, Prof. Dawson went on to say that "the ordinary man cannot possibly have the time nor the knowledge to decide the vital problems of our time. All he can do is put his confidence in his leaders, and trust them as long as they lead. That seems to be one of the critical problems the socialist party has to meet today."

On the subject of "Equality of Opportunity", Prof. Dawson stated that "it opens up the possibilities of a dreary world to me." Professor Dawson said that his sympathies were with the negative and that he felt the burden of proof lay with the affirmative. The house did not feel that the affirmative had proved its point and defeated the resolution by a large majority.

Four graduates of the college debated the formal resolution. D. C. Corbett and John Hawden presented the affirmative argument that "the first principle of liberalism lay in the achievement of a society in which the greatest number achieve the greatest degree of development and fulfillment." They maintained that this principle rests on four things; mass education, democratic government, the freedom of the individual and equality of opportunity. Hawden dealt with the ways in which the Liberal Party has failed to uphold this principle of liberalism.

Bill Somerville and Bill Donkin, speaking for the negative claimed that the real issue was "whether or not we are going to allow the Socialists, whose political garment has become soiled to don the respectable robes of liberalism." Somerville's argument replied to the points made by the affirmative, while Donkin traced the development of liberalism as an opposition to paternal and mercantile philosophies. Claiming that socialism is a form of paternalism, he said that it was impossible for it to go under a liberal mantle.

Students Review World Relations

Students concerned with the present precarious state of international relations have the chance to voice their opinions on what is wrong with the world and to make an attempt at clarifying some of the issues involved by joining the International Relations Club.

One of 850 such clubs throughout the world, the University of Toronto International Relations Club is sponsored by the Carnegie endowment for international peace with the object of discussing world problems impartially and objectively. To bring expert opinion to bear on the problems under discussion, prominent authorities will be presented in a regular series of addresses to lend weight to the scheduled program of group discussions.

A highlight of the club's activities will be a study tour during the spring term of the Department of External Affairs. Club officials hope that arrangements can be made for members to make a similar tour of the Lake Success headquarters of the United Nations.

Honorary president of the organization is Hon L. B. Pearson, who recently accepted a cabinet post in the Canadian government as secretary of state for external affairs. Patrons are: Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Dr. Sidney Smith, B. K. Sandwell, Bruce Hutchinson.

The club executive feels that the prominence of these names is an indication of the place which the club holds in campus activities as well as evidence of the necessity for students to increase their understanding of international affairs.

Oust Birds From Memorial Tower

The pigeon population of the Memorial Tower was evicted yesterday. The students in front of Hart House yesterday noon were craning their necks at two workmen climbing the tower. Investigation at the Works Department revealed a curious tale.

On the tower opening there are wire screens to keep the pigeons out and so keep the bells clean. However, some time ago the screens rusted through sufficiently to allow the birds access to the tower.

Up till now the Works Department has been too busy to do anything about repairing the wiring, but the pigeons were getting to be such a nuisance that it had to be done.

Some men were procured and went to work. With a ladder and a few lengths of rope they scaled the tower and replaced the screens. A spokesman for the works department said that the bells would ring more clearly now.

Look Closely

One feature of undergraduate life which is of vital concern to every student is the opportunity to take part and to observe the activities of political clubs on the campus.

In a few weeks the university branches of the national political organizations will launch their programs for the new term, programs which will enable undergraduates to examine closely the purpose and aims of the various political factions.

The clubs are more than campus debating societies. They are in close contact with the national executives of their parties and their importance in the national framework of political life cannot be overestimated. The provision made for university delegates to attend the Liberal convention and the forthcoming Progressive-Conservative convention reflects the importance attached to campus political clubs by the parent organizations.

During the term these clubs will have much to offer the undergraduate. Prominent political figures from both provincial and federal legislatures will appear on the campus in an effort to acquaint students with their work and to offer their opinions on current trends in political thought. Discussions, debates and forums will be held in an effort to make students aware of the responsibilities they must face in a world that is being torn asunder because of misunderstanding and distrust.

Because it is a responsibility that is the direct concern of every student. From the universities should come the nucleus of an intelligent electorate. It is here that the foundations for your political philosophy may best be laid.

Examine the activities of these clubs. Evaluate them critically. Ask yourself if they offer a political faith whose record can stand close examination. Compare their platforms with their actual record. Do not become confused by ambiguous promises and meaningless phrases.

We are not espousing the cause of any political faith. But we do endorse political activity by students. The need for a sound understanding of political principles is great and active participation in campus political life can go a long way toward clarifying the welter of confused issues that confront us.

It is an opportunity you cannot afford to ignore. And the time to start is not after you leave the University, not next year, but right now.

Letters to Editor

TOOL HOUSE

The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

On reading through Tuesday's Varsity I happened to come across an illiterate piece of prose on the back page apparently concocted by one of the plumbing apprentices. I have learned from inquiry that he is an inmate of that red building which is the only eyesore on the university campus. This red toolhouse (I gather that it is mainly a storing place for tools and is labelled S.P.S.) which I understand is the abbreviation of Sanitorium for Potential Schmoes.

Being a Vic freshman and curious to know who would voluntarily submit to confinement in such a building—for Vic students are continually striving to raise the rest of the university to their own high standards I enquired about the situation from an arts-man. This worthy gentleman pointed out a group of workmen busily pounding stakes into the football field and with a sad shake of his head indicated that they were Skule-boys.

We at Vic realize of course that the openings in our Pass courses are limited to students of ability and therefore some such institution as the Skule must be set up to provide for the overflow. Nevertheless we are looking forward with sincere anxiety to the near future when as executives we Vic arts men will be receiving applicants for office-boy and paper-weight-lifting jobs from this Skule overflow. We are therefore suggesting that the Skule adopt some practical courses such as elementary broom handling or rudiments of emptying a waste-basket which would fit these unfortunates for a useful career.

I hope that these few words may further the amity and general good-feeling which exists between Vic and Skule and show them that we have a sincere interest in their well-being.

Yours truly
Bruce Brown,
I.M.P. & C. Vic.

MECHANICAL BUILDING

The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

There is a slight mistake in the descriptive article on the new Mechanical Building in your issue of Monday, September 27th.

It is there stated that "as soon as equipment is available there will be a well stocked machine shop on the main floor . . ." In point of fact, most of the equipment for the machine shop was bought about twelve months ago and has been in storage since that time. These tools, together with much of the laboratory equipment, are awaiting the release of the space in which they are to be put.

I think also that there should be some recognition of the fact that the staff in Mechanical Engineering, and Professor W. G. McIntosh in particular, have spent a great deal of time both during the last two sessions and throughout three summers in designing and arranging the interior of this building. From your description it would not appear that the Department of Mechanical Engineering was remotely interested in its future home.

Yours faithfully,
E. A. Allcut,
Professor of Mechanical Engineering and Head of the Department.

...uthor to Visit Bookstore Will Autograph New Novel

Long lineups are expected at the new University Press bookstore Thursday afternoon when Morley Callaghan will autograph copies of his latest novel, The Varsity Story. The author has spent most of his life on or around the campus and has always had a keen interest in university activities. He has been associated with many campus drives, including the recent building fund campaign.

The novel, covering the period between 1924 and the outbreak of the war, is in Mr. Callaghan's words, "my own interpretation of this university." The Varsity Story is a combination of fiction and reality. The growth of the University is a subject which has always fascinated Mr. Callaghan, and it is one aspect of local history which he knows well. It is in part autobiographical, and the author has an excellent grasp of his subject, for few graduates entered as many extramural activities as Mr. Callaghan. He has some pithy observations about present-day undergrads . . . "Many people go to University to justify their prejudices" . . . and "Veterans want none of this rah-rah stuff" . . .

The theme of the novel is the controversial question as to the personality of the University of Toronto. Has it qualities of its own which leaves their mark on students, has it an individual pattern and quality? And in answering this question Mr. Callaghan tries to give not only his own opinion, but an analysis which will satisfy even the most radical-minded of his readers. He also spotlights the perennial argument as to the relative merits of a liberal versus a technical education. This is done in a conversation between an engineer and an artsman which is duplicated hundreds of times on the steps of the little red schoolhouse.

The campus scenes which illustrate the book are the work of the Toronto artist, Eric Aldwinkle, who poked around the ground for weeks, making candid sketches of everyday happenings. His drawings, touched with humour, have caught the university atmosphere in as unique a fashion as Callaghan has in prose.

Men's Sanctum Invaded By Pair of Brash Freshies

Hart House, the sanctum for men only is not so sacred any more. On a seat in the common room yesterday sat a little note which read "Two Females sat here."

Two Freshies took a tour through the "well-guarded" Hart House and left on their own volition. Strolling along the corridors, they were drawn into a basketball gym by the sight of two teams of swift, skillful men playing a fast-moving game. The men apparently did not notice their audience, but it seemed to the girls that the game moved just a little faster. After a few minutes, an instructor gently told the "unknowing" freshies that he didn't mean to be rude, but there was a rule.

Accepting the hint, the Freshies walked back to the office corridor. Questioned by the hall porter, they suddenly decided they wanted to go to the S.A.C. and were deposited there. Picking up a Varsity, they went in search of a quiet place to read it and came to the common room, helped along their way by two interested men. Here they were greeted only by an uplifted eyebrow or two and faint smiles.

After requesting the time from an obliging gentleman, they ducked out from behind the "Iron Curtain" and proceeded to their next lecture.

U. C. — It's This Way

Wasn't it a wonderful party? We're speaking of the Frosh-Freshie Fun Fest, of course. Would have been almost perfect if all the frosh hadn't been dragged off en masse. But don't be discouraged, freshies. All your parties won't be like that.

Take the SOPH-FROSH BANQUET AND DANCE for instance. . . It's another affair that's tagged "go-single" but the tag also reads "come-home-double". This "must" on every freshman's and sophomore's social calendar is being held on Wednesday, October 6, at the Royal York Hotel. The Soph-Frosh, a tradition in itself, is full of tradition. There's the candlelighting ceremony when sophomores hand down to freshmen, the traditions of the college. There's the toast to the college always made by the men's sophomore president and replied to by the principal of the college. The University is toasted by the women's first year president and the reply is made by the President of the University. And it's tradition, too, that you'll enjoy yourself. Keep that date open — October 6 — and watch for ticket sales.

There's something that may be puzzling you first year women. Just who is going to propose that toast to the University? Your president, of course. What president? The one you're going to elect. You'll have a chance to nominate candidates for this position on Thursday, September 30, at four p.m. in the Women's Union Theatre. At this meeting all year executives will also be nominated so it's important that women of all years turn out. Second, third and fourth year presidents were elected last spring. Then on Tuesday, October 5, at a Nominee Tea, to be held at four p.m. in the Long Common Room of the Women's Union, freshies will have an opportunity to become acquainted with their candidates. Elections will be held on October 6 and the freshie president will be announced at the Soph-Frosh.

Enough for the first year students. We've news for those in their graduating year. Appointments for grad pictures are being made in the rotunda beginning tomorrow. Appointments must be made by October 8th if students wish to use their grad photos as Christmas gifts. We hate to remind you but . . . there are only 74 more shopping days until Christmas.

You sign for picture appointments. You sign for health appointments. You sign for college teams but five will get you ten that returns from all your signing won't give you as much enjoyment as the and rehearsals will soon be in full swing for the most sensational show on the campus — The Follies — to be presented November 12 and 13.

Feel bubbling over with vim and vigour? Ready to turn cartwheels? signing you did for the Follies yesterday. Auditioning will begin shortly Then you're just the person we want to see today at four p.m. in the U.C. Lit offices (located in the Junior Common Room). University College is looking for cheerleaders, three girls and one boy, to lead U.C. rooters in college yells at interfaculty games. Smart scarlet and white outfits will be supplied but for today bring your own attire to strut your stuff.

How-Gullible-Can-You-Be-Department . . . We'll mention no names but we thought you'd like to hear about the three freshies who were persuaded by a certain young-man-about-U.C. to sign up for the girls' football team and who also allowed themselves to be escorted by this same young man to the U.C. reading room to reserve seats for the year. Oh well, you were once an innocent freshman yourself.

Oops! Almost forgot . . . U.C. students will be welcome at the Physicists' Phrolic, the Maths and Physics Society's first party of the year, being held Friday night in the Womens Union. (What would we do without that Union!). Members will be admitted free but there will be a small charge for others.

See you here again next week.

★ SPEAKING OF SPORTS ★

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

Considerable controversy has arisen out of Doug Pyzer's 115-yard run that gave Beaches-Indians a last minute tie with Varsity last Saturday. Since the game was only an exhibition, the chief worry of the Blues is just how Mr. Pyzer managed to elude twelve young men whose greatest ambition at that moment was bringing him to earth.

In the minds of the fans remains the doubt as to whether or not Douglas stepped out of bonds en route, and numerous ayes and nays have greeted either verdict.

Checking the motion pictures which were made at the game, I'm sorry to report that it's going to be difficult to collect any bets made on the outcome. The pictures do not prove that Pyzer did, or did not, step out of bounds. Chief conclusion is that it can't be proved that he did step out, so that settles that.

Arguments of this sort remind of last season's East-West game, and the offside pass that cost Winnipeg a touchdown, and probably the Grey Cup. I saw pictures of that play three or four times, and was never really convinced one way or the other. It looked offside, but could have been called either way. In this case, like the Pyzer run, it couldn't be proved that it wasn't offside so that ended the controversy as far as the West was concerned.

These are the hair-breadth breaks by which games and even championships are won and lost. In any competitive sport officials are frequently called upon to make close decisions that can turn the tide of victory one way or the other. But that's all part of the game.

While the knowledge that a permanent record is being made of their decisions may spur officials to more conscientious performances, there is another aspect to be considered.

Let's try to draw a picture. It's the final game of the intercollegiate season. My favourite college is trailing by one point, with twenty seconds to go, and have the ball on their own twenty-yard line. But what's this! My favourite halfback has the ball, and he's swinging wide around the right side of my favourite line, and into the open. He's going for ten, twenty, thirty, forty, fifty, he's in the clear and he's over! Hurrah! Ripparty! Rapparty! and all that sort of rot!

But what's this? Our least favourite referee is motioning and blowing his whistle for all he's worth. Seems there was illegal blocking past the ten yard limit. That's all! We lose!

We arrive back at the college en masse, and head for the theatre where pictures of the game are to be shown. And what do we see? We see that beyond any shadow of a doubt our linemen was within the ten-yard limit when he threw the fatal block.

Without a word, the entire body arises, marches out of the theatre and heads for the home of the unfortunate referee, who has been fortunate enough to get wind of his peril, and has hopped the late train for Montreal.

See what I mean!

With the weather man promising cloudy weather this afternoon the Varsity Interfaculty tennis tournament gets under way as the 144 entrants invade the Toronto Tennis Club on Rowanwood Ave. This tourney will decide the interfaculty championship of the University and also Sid Hermant will be on hand to pick the team to represent Varsity in Intercollegiate competition.

In the event of the matches being cancelled on account of rain, they will be played the following day at similar times.

Two time singles champion, Art Anderson of PHE, again heads the list of entries and he promises to give plenty of competition. Len Turner will be another one of the PHE lads who will attempt to help carry their faculty over the top. Two of Trinity's top contenders will be W. Brewer and Ernie Howard. Fred Dawes in Architecture may also prove one of the better men in the tourney. Other entrants who may give plenty of competition to all are, Jack Langley, Dents; Adams of St. Mike's, and Powell of Ajax.

The Athletic Office expect this tournament to be very successful as shown by the enthusiasm of the entrants. With many good men at Varsity this year, the Blue team may well make a powerful entry in the intercollegiate competition.

UNITED EFFORT NEEDED IN BUILDING MEMORIAL

Co-ops To Raise Rentals

Students living in campus Co-op residences had better get ready for a rise in room rent, George Umhara, publicity director of the houses, indicated yesterday. Although prices have not been hoisted yet, costs are going up, and new rates will probably go into effect soon, he said.

Umhara said the executive had not yet received the financial statement for last year, and it was hard to say just what the new rates would be.

"We'll do our best to keep prices as low as possible by cutting costs," Umhara promised.

Present costs for a co-op student run about three hundred dollars a year, with board at $28.50 a month and rooms between $8.50 and $12.00. The prices are set to allow a ten per cent profit to take care of administration. Incidental fees are still in the neighborhood of six dollars—about the same as last year.

Choose Bernhardt UNESCO Delegate At Paris Session

Dr. K. S. Bernhardt, Professor of Psychology at the University of Toronto, has been chosen as Canada's representative for a meeting of the Social Science Division of UNESCO in Paris next month. Dr. Bernhardt has made air reservations which will permit him to attend the five day session and yet be away from his department for only ten days.

Fifteen countries will take part in the discussion. Asked by the Department of External Affairs to recommend Canada's delegate, the Canadian Psychological Association chose Dr. Bernhardt. He has been making a study of "Tensions Affecting International Understanding", a subject not unrelated to the main theme of the meeting.

Dr. Bernhardt leaves for Paris October 5th.

UC Scheme Gives New Look Redecorate Old Building

University College, one of the oldest landmarks of the campus, and at one time an insane asylum and then King's College, is gradually shaking off its appearance of antiquity.

This summer U.C. redecorated two more rooms in its annual plan to gradually modernize the college. Last year lecture room eight (8) in West Hall was painted and two years ago four rooms were decorated in the woman's section of the basement. This year's additions include the Registrar's outer office and lecture room six, West Hall.

The decoration has been designed to raise the standard of lighting and generally increase the serviceability of the rooms. The Registrar's office was done over in light green, while the lecture room became an attractive grey. Indirect lighting was installed. This tends to spread the light evenly throughout the rooms.

Another feature that was again used is acoustic wallboard, more commonly known as sound-proofing. This wallboard serves various purposes the most important of which is its tendency to reduce the sound reverberations caused by the shuffling of feet and the rattling of books and papers. Then, too, it decreases the echoes caused by the lecturer's voice. This wallboard works on a very simple plan. When sound hits a flat surface like the walls, it bounces off to be reflected against another wall. The wallboard is made of thick paper or cardboard. One quarter to one half inch thick, and has a rough rippling surface with a series of holes bored in it. The theory behind this is, that sound enters these holes but instead of being reflected it hits the cardboard and is absorbed.

On the whole, the rooms present a very bright and pleasing appearance, and have been found by both the lecturers and the students alike, to give very satisfactory service.

First Plans Laid For Construction Of Student Center

Proposed plans for the erection of a Students' War Memorial Building to house facilities for undergraduate activities on the campus were outlined at last night's Students' Administrative Council meeting by SAC president, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy.

Originally conceived last year, the plans call for a building to fill the need of a cultural and social center for student affairs. Preliminary arrangements got under way last night with the appointment of an SAC Initiation Committee to set up the groundwork for a united student effort.

"I want to emphasize the fact that this effort will be primarily by the student body," said Gwynne-Timothy. "This committee is set up to get things rolling—to set up a coordinated student effort. At the same time many more students will have to be brought in and organized into committees if we're going to put this thing across."

Need Co-operation

He called for co-operation from all members of the SAC and from the student body, asking that college differences be submerged in the interest of a united student effort. "We've got to remember that we are working for the university," he said.

Designed to be a "sister building" to the proposed Women's Athletic Building included in the University's own expansion plans, the structure would stand approximately on the present site of Holwood House, UC men's residence, he said.

"The still somewhat nebulous plans call for a large lounge which could be converted into a dance hall. As well, we would have offices for The Varsity, Torontonensis, radio broadcasting rooms where undergraduates may act, produce, and direct plays which they would write in actual studio conditions," he declared. "These then are some of the major activities our new building would house. I do not say they are all, because since this is primarily a student building, naturally students on the campus will be given adequate opportunities to express their opinions on what they want in the building", he added.

The building would also contain clubrooms, faculty rooms, a tuckshop and perhaps a cafeteria. In addition, provision might be made for an auditorium to provide for some of the lighter student productions, Gwynne-Timothy explained.

No Conflict

To guard against the possibility of conflict with other proposed or existing buildings, a Steering Committee has been set up which includes the warden of Hart House, the president of the University or his assistant, Dean C. T. Bissell. The proposed plans of the SAC would be presented to the Steering

Canadian Author at Press To Autograph Novel Today

The Blue and White will be out in full force this afternoon when Morley Callaghan will autograph copies of his novel, "The Varsity Story" at the University of Toronto Press. Eric Aldwinkle, who did the pen and ink sketches which illustrate the story, will also be present in the bookstore between one and three p. m. to add his signature to that of Mr. Callaghan.

"The Varsity Story" will be of vital interest to all students and graduates of the university because of the author's view of the role of the University in the national scene. The novel is all the more real because of its appeal to past experience—it recalls memories which are as much a part of the undergraduate career of every student as is Hart House. Mr. Callaghan's latest book has received the acclaim of critics everywhere, and it is expected that a large crowd will be on hand to welcome him.

Eric Aldwinkle, who illustrated the novel is a native of England who has for the past twenty years been free-lancing in Canada. During the war he worked with the camouflage division of the R.C.A.F. and in 1942 was made official war artist and sent overseas to paint for the Historical Records. But he is best known to Torontonians for the murals which ornament the walls of Sunnybrook military hospital. His free use of perspective in the illustrations of "The Varsity Story" is particularly interesting, and gives the composite effect for which he is aiming throughout.

MORLEY CALLAGHAN

Mr. Callaghan who graduated in Arts from the University of Toronto in 1925, wrote for the Toronto Daily Star during his undergraduate days. On graduation he attended Osgoode Hall Law School, and since then has taken his place as one of Canada's leading authors.

Student Covers P.C. Convention

Each night until the close of the Progressive Conservative Convention in Ottawa, The Varsity has arranged to have Ian MacMillan, the Publicity Director of the University Progressive Conservative Club, cover the convention. He is expected to send a night letter of the day's proceedings for up-to-the-minute news.

Long Will Speak On German Future At O.C.E. Tonight

Dr. Marcus Long, M.A., Ph.D., will speak on "Germany at the Crossroads" at the opening meeting of the United Nations Association in Canada held in the Ontario College of Education at 8.15 tonight.

Dr. Long has just returned from Germany where he was Director of the first "International Summer Seminar". Under Canadian sponsors this seminar was the first of its kind ever held.

University professors and students from 16 countries met in desolated Germany to analyze the trends of thought affecting the Eastern and Western worlds. Coming direct from Germany, Dr. Long has a wealth of knowledge on the problems of Europe's future that the United Nations General Assembly in Paris is now facing.

Dr. Long is a graduate of Toronto University.

IRC's President Outlines Plans For Year's Work

When interviewed yesterday, Ed Cosford, President of the International Relations Club, explained the object of the club, the work done and the future plans.

According to its president the object of the club is two-fold. Firstly, it informs students of important international problems by means of prominent guest speakers who discuss different subjects. Secondly, direct research is conducted on international affairs such as that done by the International Summer Seminar in Europe last summer.

In connection with this the club is holding its first open meeting on October 7 in Cartwright Hall. The students who attended the seminar will hold a quiz on international affairs, the main topic being Germany as it was studied most fully last summer.

B. K. Sandwell, Editor of Saturday Night will address the second meeting this fall and it is hoped that the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and Lester Pearson will speak later in the year.

In November a conference of the International Relations Clubs of North America is meeting at the University of Pennsylvania and a number of University of Toronto members plan to attend. They also plan to go to Ottawa in March and observe the workings of the Department of External Affairs.

Last summer Ed Cosford attended the International Summer Seminar. He said that his affiliation to the club proved invaluable to him as it gave him a wealth of background for the topics discussed. He urges anyone who is interested in international relations to join the club as it is an excellent way of keeping abreast with the latest international developments.

Know Your Professor

One of the prime difficulties faced by the University in providing facilities for so many thousands of students is the deterioration of a desirable professor-student relationship. Without going into the many complex problems arising from a swollen post-war registration we would like to discuss the attitude of the individual student towards his professor.

There is often a tendency for the undergraduate to look upon lecturers as being set apart, as individuals whose only contact with the student is in the lecture room and whose only medium of expression is in formal instruction. Too many students regard professors as unapproachable creatures who stride solemnly into lecture halls, deliver a long address, and then retire in dignity to some obscure professorial sanctum.

Sad as it may seem, there are many undergraduates who spend three or four years at the University without ever getting closer to their professor than the first row (or even the last row) of seats in the lecture room. Though the over-crowded conditions prevailing today are responsible to a large degree, much of the blame can be laid directly at the feet of the student.

One of the great advantages of university life is the opportunity for personal contact with men whose wisdom and reason are second to none, men who are experts in their field of study. No amount of formal learning can compensate for the rich and living education to be found in personal contact with members of the faculty. The fundamental purpose of your university training is not to learn facts. It is to learn to think. And important as it is to learn what the professor is saying, it is equally important to learn why he is saying

The ease of contact between student and professor of pre-war university life has disappeared to a great degree. Overworked, harried, pressed for time, professors can no longer devote much attention to the problems of individual students. But the varied interests of most of the staff enable them to meet many students in extra-curricular activities and functions outside the classroom. It is this personal contact that is invaluable to the young undergraduate.

Cultivate an interest in your professors. They are not cold automatons whose sole functions are to dispense fifty minutes of academic lore during the lecture. They are a warm hearted congenial lot who are interested in your problems, your ideas, and your plans. Even with the limited amount of time at their disposal you will find them eager to help you.

Engineers Strike Oil

The engineers have struck oil on the front campus. Late last night it was discovered by the cat on one of his midnight rendez-vous.

"It's most embarrassing," said one of the skulemen. "We were looking for water or something else to drink."

The engineers were seen all yesterday afternoon looking through pipes and holding sticks. The cat found, on investigation, that the telescopes were focussed on the length of skirts worn by some freshies in front of Universal College.

When asked for his observation by a professor, a south-campuser replied, "Ankles."

Late reports on the gusher said that it would be piped to Arabia where it is badly needed.

Acting as the representative of The Varsity, the cat interviewed Kidney Myth in a late interview. He said that the oil was discovered on university property and nobody said they could have it. They will have to put it all back. When they sign the proper forms and go through the proper ivy tape they can start digging again.

Warden Ignatius-Good-Gracious of Hart House said he would form a new club—the Oil Club. All members would have to own a share in the Imperial-Sovereign-Royal Oil Co., which is owned by ordinary $100,000 a year citizens.

Once the oil had began to gush, the engineers, civic and mechano, began shouting for a text book. One said, "I don't know what to do. My professor never told me."

How the actual discovery took place is a problem. Two engineers were standing on a piece of scaffolding which looked like a derrick. Measuring with their trusty slide-rules the distance from the new Mechano Building to the old red skule building, they aimed the skule cannon.

"Was my face red," said the one with the red nose." It was aimed straight down."

The rest the cat leaves to your imagination.

Father Bondy Greets Students At St. Michael's

"Education is the making of a human being", said Rev. Father Bondy, C.S.B., at the official opening of St. Michael's College yesterday morning, the feast of St. Michael.

In welcoming both men and women students, Father Bondy, superior of the college, pointed out that the academic year would be useless, even harmful, unless Christ were an integral part of their lives. He said that the college exists within the University of Toronto in order to help students achieve the aim of a university education. This, he said, was the discerning of "what is true from what seems so".

"Education is a lifelong process" Father Bondy explained. He pointed out that our brief stay at college is only part of that process, but that our time here must be well spent, if we are to derive the utmost benefit from our training. He warned the students not to lose sight of their Christian values while surrounded by the many un-Christian influences on the campus and in the world at large.

He encouraged the St. Michael's men and women to work hard during the year. Recreation should be used wisely, he said, as an aid to better work and should not be based on a false sense of values.

Harold Neal Recommended As Conductor

Harold Neal, last year's assistant conductor of the U. of T. Symphony Orchestra was recommended for the post of conductor in a report presented by the Music Committee of the Students' Administrative Council at the SAC meeting yesterday afternoon. Suggested tentatively as Neal's assistant was Lee Hepner, second year student in the Mus. B. course. The recommendations were confirmed at last night's SAC meeting.

Both Neal and Hepner have had considerable conducting experience in the past and both are students of Ettore Mazzoleni, Principal of the Royal Conservatory here. Both Hepner and Neal, who is in III Pass Arts at U. C., are ex-service students.

For the past two years, Harold Neal has served as assistant to Hans Gruber, conductor of the U. of T. Symphony who is now in charge of the Symphony Orchestra in Victoria, B. C. Neal's experience also includes other orchestra work besides much choral conducting. His program for the year, which was submitted to the Music Committee with his application, includes major works for the Orchestra and the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus whose members are to be chosen entirely from the student body of the University with the exception of those enrolled in University Music Courses at the Conservatory. Rehearsals will follow last year's pattern as to time.

Hepner, 27 year old R.C.A.F. veteran from Edmonton, acquired much of his experience in organizing and conducting a concert orchestra in that city. In addition, he led bands in western Canada while in the service.

Student's Bible Costs a Quarter At SAC Offices.

The jingling of quarters across the desks in the SAC offices does not mean that this organization is making a small mint on the sale of the Student's Handbook. Rather, it was a choice between raising the fees, due to the increased cost of printing the various SAC publications, or finding some new means of raising funds. The logical conclusion was to charge the small sum of twenty-five cents for that indispensable little book—the Bible.

Between the dark blue covers of this book is a wealth of interesting information about the innumerable clubs, organizations and activities on the campus. Coming sports events are listed, college yells and songs provided, and full descriptions of Hart House and the workings of SAC. Maps of the university grounds at both Toronto and Ajax can be found at a glance. A large, detailed map of the city has been attached to the back cover.

A diary containing the important events of the year is included in the Handbook. Adequate space for the student to make entries of his own engagements enhances the usefulness of the diary.

The Student's Handbook can be purchased at the SAC offices in Hart House in Toronto and the branch at Ajax, as well as in the women's SAC office in the basement of U.C.

Players' Guild Plan New Plays

An organizational meeting of the U. C. Players' Guild was held in the Women's Union building last night. The purpose was to recruit new members. Duncan Greene, the president, spoke of the purpose and plans of the organization. "This year," he said, "we will present 9 plays in the Women's Union Theatre, and 4 plays in Hart House Theatre. One of these plays will be produced for the Drama Festival."

Robert Gill, Director of Hart House Theatre, spoke of the plays which were to be produced there. He also mentioned that if the Players' Guilds in the different colleges wished, he would give a series of lectures on the theatre and acting.

British Dominions Promise Delegates For NCCU Meeting

By LOIS MARTIN

"Australia, New Zealand, India, Pakistan, and other sections of the British Commonwealth will send delegates to attend the sessions of the National Conference of Canadian Universities next spring," said President Smith in an interview this week.

The decision to augment the Canadian conference came as a result of meetings attended by the President in July at Oxford of the Association of Universities of the British Commonwealth. It was hoped, he said, that the Association itself would be able to meet more often in the next few years than ever before.

Oxford Conference

The Oxford conference, which the President attended with 300 other delegates from educational institutions as widely scattered as Northern Ireland, Malta and South Africa, was in favour of more exchanges of graduate students and teaching staff between the British Dominions as well as between the Dominions and the United Kingdom itself. The meeting, the first since 1936, when the Association was known as the Bureau of Universities of the British Empire, was especially significant, the President remarked, because of its change of name. "This change," he said, "may be regarded as an indication of a great alteration in political thinking."

Among the other delegates were Dean H. A. Innis of the School of Graduate Studies, Dean J. A. MacFarlane of the Faculty of Medicine, and Dean H. Bennett of Victoria College. Before going on to Oxford, Dr. Smith spent five days in Bristol at the preliminary conference for the executive heads of all Universities in the Commonwealth.

Steps were taken, in the following week at Oxford, to promote exchanges. It was recommended that a clearinghouse be set up to enable students in the British Isles to gain information about the courses, facilities, teaching opportunities and fellowships offered by institutions of learning in other parts of the Commonwealth.

Discussions regarding the relation of the university to the state were high on the agenda of the Association's meeting. Both the necessity of financial support from the state in running a university and the desirability of intellectual freedom were factors which entered into a philosophic exchange of viewpoints.

Toronto Professors

Toronto's Dean Innis and Scottish philosopher Professor John MacMurray were in charge of important debates on the effects of industrial progress and technological education on the universities. It was felt by many of the delegates that an increasing emphasis on professional courses such as engineering was prejudicial to programs in liberal arts and the pure sciences.

From Oxford, President Smith proceeded to Cambridge, where he received an honorary degree, and thence to Scotland for a holiday and literary pilgrimage to the scenes of the births and writings of Thomas Carlyle and Sir Walter Scott. After a week spent in London interviewing prospective staff members of the U of T, the President returned to Canada. He arrived in Toronto in mid-August.

Men's Glee Club Plans Busy Year With Dr. Peaker

With the first full rehearsal attended by over 100 students and faculty members, the Hart House Glee Club is looking forward to a full and melodious season.

Under the baton of Dr. Peaker, F.R.C.O., male voices were raised in rollicking song Tuesday afternoon. Beginners who affirmed that they couldn't sing a note were, by the end of the meeting, warbling like thrushes.

The plans of the club include participation in the Yuletide Festival which will take place at Eaton Auditorium in December. This engagement is shared with the Canadian Drama League.

One out-of-town trip is probable this year, and a concert in the Casavant Series is definitely planned.

The Club hopes to broadcast over C.B.C. before Christmas a program of Christmas Carols. These are sung along with the student body in Great Hall. The last Hart House Sunday Evening concert of the term will be performed by the Club.

Functioning for the purpose of teaching part singing to students, the Glee Club specializes in Old English, Scotch, and Welsh folk songs. A classical note is present in the works of Schubert, Handel, and Bach.

Senior Officers To Co-ordinate Club Activities

In the future there need be no confusion on the campus caused by overlapping club activities, since now there is a master committee designed to alleviate troubles. It is called the Club Coordinating Council.

The Club Coordinating Council, as the name implies, is not a club but an organization made up of the senior officers of the various clubs in the University. It was started in the early part of last January with the aim of informing all the college clubs and organizations with each other's individual affairs and activities. Ed Cosford of Trinity College (president of the International Relations Club), chairman of the Council states that the organization did much good work last year in promoting a better understanding among club members and keeping them informed of activities of their neighbor associations.

"There is a great deal of confusion and disunity among the separate associations in Toronto University," said Cosford. "Therefore the need of a control and advisory committee, which the Club Coordinating Council is, it can be an asset in straightening out affairs," he stated. Cosford also believes that the more actively engaged and intellectually inclined undergrads can gain from the guidance and work of the Council

R.C. Student Activities Centred on Newman Club

To create "a home away from home" is one of the many aims of the Newman Club. To many Catholic students on the campus Newman Hall, 89 St. George St., is a familiar place for it is the centre of all club activities. But to those who have not yet become acquainted with the Newman Club the question arises: What is it? What does it do?

The Newman Club is an organization for Catholic students. Its aim is threefold: to provide an intellectual, social, and religious stimulation for the student. In order to achieve these aims a well-organized program is carried out. Such activities as hikes, parties, discussion groups, glee clubs, a debating club, are encouraged. There is also a French Club, a Dramatic Club, a Poetry Club and a student newspaper, The Forum, to satisfy the desires of the members.

There are twenty-one such organizations across Canada. "Every Catholic student is a potential member," said Father McHenry, resident chaplain of the Toronto Newman Club. "Last year we had over 350 active members."

Alumni Clubs have also been established. These follow similar lines to the undergraduate organizations.

Gibed by Sophs Harried Freshies Wander Campus

Freshies and initiation go hand in hand; so it is not unusual these days to see tyrannical sophs lording over brightly clad and harried first year gals, who are undergoing the miseries of initiation week. Among the most miserable appearing Freshies are the gals in Meds. Over their mouths they have been forced to wear gags and don the spotless white garb of their profession. Their faces have been smeared with bright crosses of lipstick.

The St. Mike's Freshies were observed being chased across the campus by their Sophs. Discomfort seemed to be the outstanding trait of these Freshies. On sticks protruding from their heads bobbed bright blue balloons proudly bearing their college's name. The Freshies were further inconvenienced by being forced to carry overnight bags in one hand, their books in the other. Wearily they plodded along in heavy rubber overshoes.

However, the Meds and St. Mike's Freshies have not been alone in their misery. The Victoria college girls have been appearing for classes bearing large, self-insulting placards on their backs. Apparently their Sophs wished the freshies to realize that Victorianism in fashion is in vogue because pantaloons are extremely popular among the Vic freshies. Added to these embarrassing forms of attire are pretty heads of hair tied up in rags and pin curls.

Yesterday found the phys-edders cavorting around the campus in fetching blue rompers and slacks, with dashing white beanies. Sporting their trade implements, a ski or skate, they were paraded over and around the campus during the noon hour, much to the enjoyment of their overlords as well as all skule men.

U. OF T. SPANISH CLUB

The Spanish Club will have its first meeting of the year on Tuesday, October 5, at 8 p. m., in the U. C. Women's Union. Watch posters for program.

Vic Music Club's Annual Operetta To Be 'Iolanthe'

Victoria Music Club will continue its traditional policy of presenting Gilbert and Sullivan operas this year with a production of "Iolánthe". The show is tentatively slated to open Dec. 7.

The announcement was made to about 300 Victoria students who packed Wymilwood last night for an open meeting of the club, and took a backward look at last year's show. The program included solos from the 1948 production of "Pirates of Penzance" by Barbara McGowan and Francis de Carroll, who took leading roles last year, as well as the policemen's chorus.

The Glee Club is planning a major production for the Easter term, it was indicated by the executive. Directors for this year will again be Godfrey Ridout and Geoffrey Hatton.

Dr. Walter Brown, the president of Victoria, welcomed first-year students to the club.

United Effort

Committee and then the working committees of the SAC would put them into effect, he said. "These working committees have yet to be appointed but I can give you an idea of some of them: committees on finance, public relations and publicity. We must try to have these committees hard at work within a month."

Plan Finance

The immediate problem facing the SAC, he said, was the problem of financing the building. "There are several proposed methods which the Council should consider", he asserted. "First, a bond issue on the SAC. We can be fairly certain of selling a bond issue on the SAC for $1,000,000 for fifty years. At 4 per cent per annum we would have completely paid off interest and capital by paying $46,550.17 per year, beginning the year after the bond issue was made. If we reckon on the student enrolment levelling off at 10,000, we can see that this would mean an annual cost of $4.66 per student.

"Another suggested method of financing would be through an interest-free loan from the provincial government. This was done in Alberta, where the Social Credit Government gave the Student Council an interest-free loan of $653,000. Their government recognized the need for such a building. It is not inconceivable that our government might do the same. At all events it is a scheme worth considering."

A combination of a bond issue with a government loan or maybe a government gift would further lighten the load on the individual student, he said.

"Some students have felt that a student drive for the money would be the most effective way to raise it. There are limitations to this idea. Building drives tend to be very long and drawn out. Through an immediate bond issue or a government loan, we the students would pay for the building from our own pockets, but over a prolonged period of time."

An estimated cost of $1,000,000 is only a guess, Gwynne-Timothy admitted. "We must consult the Faculty of Architecture and decide on what kind of building we can hope for with that much money."

Council approved the establishment of the Initiating Committee, to consist of the president of the SAC, the SAC chairman, the SAC vice-president, the General Secretary-Treasurer and Associate Secretary of the SAC, the Public Relations Commissioner, the editor of The Varsity, the chairman of the Blue and White Society, the Student Service Commissioner, and the NFCUS chairman.

Movie Review

So This Is New York

So you want to see a movie?
So you go to the Biltmore.
So what's playing?
So THIS IS NEW YORK.

The picture is based on The Big Town by Ring Lardner. Radio comedian Henry Morgan takes the lead role and whether they should lead him away is a good question.

Nevertheless along with a cast of Rudy Valley, Hugh Herbert, Bill Goodman and Virginia Grey he cracks his way through.

It is shortly after world war I and Henry, who portrays a small town boy, is married to the elder of two (not so bright sisters) who are heirs to a cool sixty grand. Unfortunately the girls are sick of the small town and want to see a little of the big town (New York). Not only do they crave a little excitement but also a husband for the younger sister.

Naturally the only qualifications are a romantic soul and a bank roll that will carry on where the inheritance leaves off. Henry is definitely agin the whole idea, as is the disqualified butcher boy friend.

But women will have their own way, especially when they own the will. The plot from here is anybody's guess as a series of eligible bachelors make their play. Those who qualify are a Wall Street Joe who crashes for the wrong sister; a hunter and collector (Hugh Herbert) who keeps a beautiful collection of shrunken heads and (wives); a gambling race horse owner (Rudy Valley) who gets beat out by his jockey, who is fixing a few races, and who is being used by his girl for race info.; and finally a broken down actor (Bill Goodman) who finishes off the sixty grand on a flop show.

Everyone is very sad indeed except Henry who is crying a lot of I told you so's. The butcher boy friend is called in at this crucial moment and proves that anything from a butcher shop isn't to be sneezed at.

The gay ninety setting requires a combination of flicker flash back and modern photography.

Fortunately the gags are not as ancient as the characters or the setting, but whether Henry Morgan will get another sponsor is another good question.

Trinity To Stage The Linden Tree

The Linden Tree by J. B. Priestley, was chosen by the Trinity College Dramatic Society as its Hart House production for the coming year, at a meeting Wednesday.

"A new play, The Linden Tree has just finished a year's run in the West End of London," Vice-President Michael Shenstone, IV Hist., said. "It has not yet been performed in Canada. Not a pure comedy, but with fast pace and light touch," he continued, "it is in some ways reminiscent of Shaw."

The play is a skilful characterization of post-war England with types from Catholic to communist, from socialist to Spiv, represented.

The Linden Tree will appear in Hart House, on November 8, 9, 10.

Haworth Reviews New Collection At Hart House

Peter Haworth, director of art education at Central Technical School and lecturer at the Department of Art and Archaeology at Toronto University reviewed the current Art Collection of Ontario Women Painters now at the Hart House Art Gallery at an informal meeting earlier this week.

Charles Comfort of the Art and Archaeology Department introduced the speaker and gave an account of Mr. Haworth's background. He came to Canada from England following World War I, bringing a wealth of talent and enthusiasm, Mr. Comfort said. He was an art teacher as well as a painter of great originality and a member of the O.S.A.

Mr. Haworth stated that these women artists, of which group his wife is a prominent member, are exhibiting paintings showing the influence of the Group of Seven. The paintings had quality of feeling going back to different stages of their careers and marked a development of art over twenty years.

More Animals Around Campus

By Harry Rasky

The University of Toronto is one big zoo.

The Varsity has located more animals around the campus than are found in Riverdale Park. Years ago it was a wandering cub reporter that discovered mice in the cellar of the Skule building.

The nose for news was able to uncover a rabbit-eating student. This particular rabbit was dead and pickled in formaldehyde and the student ate part of a candied kidney on a dare.

It was not so long ago that we followed a student holding a talking lamb on the other end of a leash. When asked for a few sheepish words, the lamb replied to the question "what degree he would like his skin turned into" — "BA. BA."

A year later the family journal looking for more animal antics, dug up a duck. On investigating it was found that the duck was a fraternity mascot and would be eaten the next day. It was not housebroken.

And of course, the university horse is as famous as many a university president. Through many years it managed to survive and prove that the horse is here to stay. By the way, has anybody seen that old grey mare this year?

Chickens have been a standard object in the Varsity's private zoology department. It was in Hart House that a cub reporter was investigating the rumor that there was a chicken loose. The Varsity thought that it was a girl but found it to be a lady chicken. While comforting the old hen, which turned out to be a prop for a college show, the nosey newsman found himself an egg the richer.

Mysterious cackling sounds had been heard rising from the cellars of the College Street church, now used as a lecture hall. The Varsity was there. The church chickens turned out to be part of cancer research. Anybody want to buy a chicken.

A skunk is the newest addition to our version of Noah's Ark. This skunk can't. No matter how it tries it just can't. A skunk may be a peculiar companion. But in this case it is completely safe. It is the Biology Club that has taken this de-oderized walking gas bomb on as companion and friend.

Then again, there is the Campus cat.

Vic Bob Casting Starts Monday For New Talent

Casting for the 76th Vic Bob starts Monday, followed by rehearsals Tuesday. The 'Bob' is an all male affair originally started by Bob Blare, Vic's janitor in the days when the college was located at Cobourg. It was Bob's way of initiating freshmen and sophs.

After Vic moved to Toronto the 'Bob' was traditionally carried on in memory of its first promoter.

The Bob is not a show. Its purpose is to initiate members of the first year, and to quote from the constitution. . . . "The Bob is to express that feeling of friendly antagonism universally existing between first and second year."

Secret practices are held by frosh and sophs and a variety of yells, and stunts are evolved. Each group tries to discover the plans of the other.

The climax of their 'friendly antagonism' is reached on the night of the Bob. It begins with a bedlam of yells, cheers, songs and noise makers, accompanied by all sorts of antics. The Bob is not a polished show. The whole thing is offered in a spirit of loose informality.

This year the Bob is to take place on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 19th and 20th, at Central Technical School. Ticket sales start October 12th.

Seeded Players Survive First Tennis Round

Cupid's Understudies

Something new has been added. Interested in archery? This year the University of Toronto hopes to accept McMaster's invitation to the Women's Intercollegiate Archery meet on Oct. 15. Queen's, McGill and McMaster have held an annual archery meet for quite a few years but Toronto has never sent a team. Equipment is available here this year and if four women archers of satisfactory calibre can be found, they will represent Varsity in Hamilton. The first practice for this team will be held today from one to two at Varsity stadium, and future practices will be held on all following Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, same time, same place. If you are an archery enthusiast, here's your chance to make an Intercollegiate team. Every undergraduate is eligible, and equipment will be supplied. All that's needed is your presence from one 'til two today. Peter Hare (right), Phil Cascallen (second from left above) and friends examine some of their tryout shots.

Tennis, Trackman Ken Mohun Hurt Anderson Whips Past Opponent

The opening matches of the Varsity interfaculty tennis tourney were played yesterday at the Toronto Lawn Tennis courts with many of the top-rated performers displaying their wares on the clay.

Forty matches were carded for the day, of which 37 were played to a conclusion. Two were defaulted by failure to appear at match time and Ken Mohun was forced to concede his match after playing two sets, losing one and winning the other.

Ken was forced out by a back injury which he contracted shortly after last year's track meet and picked a very unfortunate time to recur. It is doubly unfortunate time in that Ken is one of Coach Harold Brown's most promising sprinting prospects this year.

Top seeded Art Anderson got off to a fast start by besting Fraser Mustard 6-1, 6-1. Jack Langmaid took two sets to down G. Defosse, 6-0, 6-0. Dawes of SPS, fourth seeded man, eliminated Hoag, OCE, 6-1, 6-0.

For today the weather man predicts light showers in the morning and a very cloudy afternoon much the same as yesterday. The remainder of the first round will be played this morning.

Queen's Backfield Shines Behind Sagging Wingline

By WALT MacKENZIE

The Hopes of Queen's in the coming football season although not shining, are at least brighter than in the past several years.

In winning their first game in two seasons last Saturday, the Gaels attacked McMaster with a terrific display of backfield power which compared favorably with any in the Intercollegiate loop.

Leading the offensive were Al Lenard and Ross McKelvey, veterans of last year's squad. Lenard's passing exhibition was both versatile and effective. His bullet-like baseball pitching and long looping efforts produced two touchdowns and set up another.

McKelvey's running game was fast and deceptive. Playing in the safety spot, his long run-backs nullified most of Rams' kicking. He also worked well on the receiving end of Lenard's passing. Sharing the limelight in the running department was Russ Steeves, who alternated in the safety spot.

A new name on the halfline wears a very familiar sweater with a big 55 under a smiling face which strongly resembles Dave Rosumniak. And under any name, it is the "Rosey" of old, cavorting the gridiron. The colorful Queensman whose fame has spread far and wide in Intercollegiate circles had his name changed legally last spring to Dave Bryane. But it is very doubtful that this will dampen a big "Yea Rozumniak" when the Tricolor, or any other team for that matter, trot out into the sunny Varsity Bowl.

The most impressive newcomer to the squad is ex-Argo Billy Bell who played a very good all-round game to round out a very solid backfield. Bill Hoose called a steady game in the quarter spot and brings with him two years of Senior experience.

Any backfield is only as good as the line in front of it, and it is along the front wall that the Gaels are found lacking.

Both running and passing plays were bogged down on Saturday by unsteady blocking in the line. At times the Intermediate McMaster line actually outplayed their more experienced opponents. Jim Charters and Bob Stevens are still the only exceptional performers among the linemen. These two veterans are still capable of outstanding efforts in any company but need more assistance than their mates could produce against the Rams. One huskie newcomer who will make his presence felt is Keith Christiansen, Intercollegiate heavyweight boxing champion for the past two years.

The big question mark will be line. As they stand on past experience, the Tricolor are not championship contenders, but should the newcomers show well in league play, Queen's will once more be at least a power not to be considered lightly by the Blues and the Western Mustangs. One certainty is that the followers of the Intercollegiate football will see a wide-open game when the Tricolor come to town.

Coach Brown Issues A Call For Trackstars

Harold Brown, Class of '41, O.C.E. '42, and now a teacher at North Toronto Collegiate is the new assistant coach for the Varsity track and field team. Commenting on his return to Varsity, he said, "it is really good to be back, especially following the coach we have had here. As to track and field, prospects are very good. However, we need a lot more men out, especially from the freshman year."

Thursday, October 7, the junior track and field meet comes off, when all those who have not previously placed in an intercollegiate sport may participate. PT credits are given for participation.

Golf Tourney Starts Today Rain Predicted

University of Toronto golfers will invade the St. Andrews golf course today in the first of the three-day Interfaculty golf tourney.

Nearly 300 golfers will turn out for the tourney, the largest enrolment on record. Last year's entry was 200 in a two-day meet. The 300 entrants have been spread evenly over the three days, today, tomorrow, and Monday and the hopefuls will leave the first hole at few-minute intervals.

Last year Ernie Bentley took the tourney with a sizzling 74 but few predict what could be the title-winning count this semester. Rain, predicted for tomorrow, could easily skyrocket the scores into the eighties.

Soccerites' First Test Is Saturday

The senior intercollegiate soccer team, which boasts the best record of any Varsity squad—24 titles since 1904—is hitting the final stages of pre-schedule training. But newly appointed coach Brian Barton makes no predictions other than that "he hopes to have a good team".

First test for the clubs will come this Saturday when his senior and intermediate squads meet two Toronto Greenwood teams on the front campus at 2.00. The Greenwoods, junior champions of Toronto last year, will provide some of the toughest opposition that the Blues will face this year.

Barton, who last year played inside right for the Varsity team "has played every position on the team at one time or another." He is a graduate in Economics and won his Blue at Cambridge University in England.

This year's senior has been chosen and includes: Goal, Reed; backs, Small, Peters and Scott; half-backs, Evans, Critchley, and Thompson; forwards, Glass, Barton, Antoni, Colvin, Conyers, Barbour.

Nineteen soccerites are still trying out for the intermediate team which will likely be chosen tonight.

Speaking Of Sport

Although the views offered in this column do not necessarily coincide with the views of the editors, The Varsity pursues the policy of printing opposing views providing they appear in a signed column of the paper.—Ed.

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

Well, the moans and groans have started again about the undergraduates being charged admission to the senior intercollegiate football games. We listen to the students' side of the picture—now let's take a look at the situation from the Athletic Association's viewpoint.

In the first place, the charge is not large. Anyone who really has any desire to see the games will dig up the necessary dollar and a half which entitles him to three league games and two exhibitions.

If you still cry that it's not the price, but rather the principle of the thing, there are other arguments which should cut the pain at least a little.

The Athletic Association claims that, because of increased costs, more money is needed, and who is prepared to say that this is not true. Plans are under way for an enlarging of the stadium and this certainly cannot be undertaken without the necessary funds.

Many claim that if more money is needed, the athletic fee should be increased so that all the students would be taxed equally.

The old system required the student to show his Admit-to-lectures card, which was stamped and a ticket issued to him. That this was abused badly was common knowledge. Students were borrowing the cards of their friends, and bringing numerous non-students into the games. A great diversity of student types can be found on the campus, but none so great as the crowd that was seen using student tickets for both intercollegiate and Big Four football games.

What the students fail to realize is that they themselves are paying for the seats of non-students. The more money that enters the coffers of the Athletic Association, the more privileges that will be available for the student body.

If the admission fee has done nothing more than to eliminate this abuse, and terminate the need for those half-mile lineups, then it will certainly be considered worthwhile by a large number of students. Anyone who has spent two hours or more at Varsity Arena waiting for those two precious ducats will bear this out.

Certain concessions must be made to the general public, many of whom are ex-Varsity students. Since the University is an institution, a certain amount of public good-will is highly desirable. For numerous Toronto citizens, only contact with the university is at the football games.

Some talk is abroad about married students not being allowed to bring their children to the games. This accusation has provided no end of mirth to the staff of the Athletic Association, none of whom have been approached on this question. Certainly, the number of students with children far enough away from swaddling clothes to enjoy football, will be very small. However, Warren Stevens says that consideration will be given children of any students, as long as the children aren't blond and in the neighourhood of twenty years of age.

A university is an ideal place in which to voice dissension. Survival of many campus organizations depends on healthy controversy, and intelligent presentation of arguments.

OUR READERS WRITE

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Fellow non-Skulemen,

With reference to Mr. Dutton's article in The Varsity of the 28th instant, we of the Arts and Pre-Meds Course feel that there are some things that should be made clear to members of the University, particularly freshmen.

For many years Artsmen and Pre-Medsmen have been subjected to numerous uncomplimentary remarks both written and spoken from our self-esteemed neighbors to the south, the Skulemen. Now we fully realize that we live in a democratic country where the privilege of freedom of speech and press alike is everyone's, but when that freedom is cluttered with a lot of pointless and useless banter, it is time that certain offenders shake off their mental lethargy which is obviously retarding their moral progress.

Certainly if the Arts Course were the picnic that Mr. Dutton apparently thinks it is, we wager that every engineer in the province would drop his instruments there and then and avidly proceed to study Arts with the view of "making easy money" three or four years from now.

However, if those of the southern exposure and our friends (?) on the farm do finally decide on playing with their little toy gun and confining distasteful rumors within their walls, we of the culture-clan shall much more enjoy "studying to show ourselves approved".

Sincerely,
Ken. Davis,
II Arts.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

On reading through Wednesday's Varsity, I happened to come across "an illiterate piece of prose" on the second page apparently concocted by one of the Fuller Brush apprentices. I quote as follows, "This red toolhouse, (I gather, etc.) which I understand is the abbreviation of Sanitarium for Potential Shmoes."

What happened to the verb VIC?

We at the Skule appreciate that the openings for the Pass Course at Vic are limited to students who haven't enough guts or ability to take anything else, so any time youse wants some help with your English, just ask a Skule-man—and see what happens.

Sympathetically yours,
John Willmot,
IV Elect. Eng. Sci.

The Editor, The Varsity:

I have read with consternation in your issue of Sept. 28 a vicious attack on us Artsmen by Eddie Dutton. I am alarmed, shocked and also slightly surprised. In our midst we have a slide-rule psychotic, and you, Mr. Editor, print his twisted, contorted, perverted aggressions. Where are the campus police? Is Dutton to be allowed to attend classes unescorted? Are there those uninformed people who do not realize that a slide-rule, besides giving the diameter of a square, can poke out people's eyes, can pinch their ears, can practically ruin a good esophagus?

Sit on my knee, little Eddie. I, too, once had slide-rule phychosis. I had schizophrenia in my scapula, I had paranoia in my lower ribs and a wet sock on my left foot. I was in Mechanical. I, like you, belittled the ridiculous Artsman, like you, scorned, "Child's play!" I, like you, lived in hallucinations. But, Eddie, I was young. One day I grew up. Eddie, when I got all growed up, I became an Artsman! It's glorious!

The only cure, little Eddie, for slide-rule psychosis is to become an Artsman. Rid yourself of prejudice, rid yourself of resentment. You'll love it.

Now get off my knee, you're getting heavy.

Bill Hine,
First Year Social Work.

Hart House Ball Is To Feature Native Costumes

Last year's International Ball will be repeated in Hart House on Friday, Nov. 5, with several campus clubs co-operating, it was decided at a special meeting Tuesday night. National costumes will be a feature of the night.

The International Students' Organization, which handled the ball itself last year, has arranged for the executives of all international clubs on the campus to participate in the arrangements.

Executives concerned said the ball had two main objects: to promote greater unity among the international clubs, and to make students from other countries feel at home. Ticket sales will start Oct. 20.

Henry V

Olivier's Henry V is back in town, at the Hollywood, and we are happy to report that the Globe Theatre is just as round, Henry just as stern and Princess Katherine's "bilbow" just as alluring as ever.

It seems hardly necessary to add, that the whole film bears re-seeing very well indeed and that the only change, the lowering of admission to the popular (i.e. sensible) level is a welcome one from the groundling's point of view.

Opera And Everybody

The Varsity does not run a financial section, and, consequently, this department felt obliged to struggle with the economic aspects of opera in its own amateurish way. Here are the fragments that came to the surface.

If the best things in life are free, why is opera, the very best of them all, so expensive? Answer: Opera will be expensive until everybody is convinced that it is the best thing in life, because, until then, it will be considered a luxury and dispensible. Fire engines are pretty expensive, too, but who thinks of their price first and of the necessity of buying them afterwards?

No one minds paying taxes for fire engines.

It is really almost as simple as that, because all the other ingredients of opera, voices, ideas, skill, enthusiasm are being supplied in abundance by the Senior School of the Conservatory, which we are determined to regard as a part of the University of Toronto, although it would take a pamphlet with diagrams and footnotes to determine its exact constitutional position, in relation to the University.

This Opera School is really highly astonishing. In 1918 an article appeared in a local daily paper in which the creation of such an institute was suggested, probably for the first time. Then followed an incubation period of no less than twenty-eight years, but in 1946 the School was founded and began to grow at an amazing speed. In a few months' time a performance of the "Bartered Bride" left Toronto gasping for breath and superlatives, as the cliche goes, and ever since a steady growth in both quantity and quality has brought definite assurance that, artistically, the operatic future of this part of the world was guaranteed. At the same time, smaller cities and towns have shown themselves receptive to the blessings of opera, London in particular, which almost reconciles one to the existence of the Mustangs. This winter will give us four complete operas produced by the CBC and at least one full stage production, "The Marriage of Figaro."

What is all this leading up to? A plug? Yes and no. The Opera School will undoubtedly be able to fill its halls (no Opera House, you know) without any fanfare from this corner. But there will be a time, and it is almost at hand, when the first set of student-singers will have to make a living here . . . . or elsewhere. And there will also come the time when the School must come to the public with works, more difficult and less accessible to the listener than "Bartered Bride," "Rosalinda" or even "Figaro," modern works, if opera is to go on as a living art form. So this may be called a long-range plug.

It is easy and pleasant to be all for the Opera School, now, but it is in its state of charming adolescence (though by no means independent of assorted economic vicious circles and spirals; later on, when Canadian Opera will have grown up and will require a certain minimum of living space lest it suffocate, when most of those who read this will be full-fledged taxpayers with lean and hungry looks, then the true friends of opera will have to be called into action.

And they will respond, if they are really convinced that opera is among the best things in life. The Opera School has done much to increase the ranks of the faithful. But no group of performers, however great, will ever be able to go all the way beyond the footlights to guarantee the type of experience that depends on so many personal factors. The individual may have to search for a long time to grasp the unequalled totality of experience, the feeling of the added dimension, the exhilaration beyond compare that a good opera performance can convey. But it is certain that he will go on searching for more and more.

The time to set out is now.

Vic Student To Nominate Tory Leader

Special to The Varsity

Ottawa, Sept. 30—Allan Lawrence, III Victoria, national president of the Progressive Conservative Student Federation, will second the nomination of Donald Fleming, (PC, Eglinton), as national leader of the Progressive Conservative Party at the party convention here, Friday, it was learned tonight.

On the eve of the three-day convention, Lawrence addressed a banquet meeting of student delegates Wednesday. Calling for a definite and unmistakable policy on such current issues as oleomargarine, butter imports, social security, taxation, national defence and housing, Lawrence issued a forthright challenge to the top men in the party.

Leaders Listen

Attentive listeners to Lawrence were leadership candidates Premier George Drew of Ontario, John Diefenbaker, (PC, Lake Centre), Donald Fleming, (PC, Eglinton) and Garfield Case, (PC, Grey North). After the dinner, all four candidates were generous in their praise of Lawrence's remarks.

"If we continue feeding the public at large with the vagaries and double talk which we have called party policy in the past," said Lawrence, "the Progressive Conservative party as a dominating, vigorous political force in this country is and will be finished."

"What we have produced in the past as party policy has been so ambiguous, so vague, so unspecific that anyone could take it to mean almost anything. If we continue in that vein, we will always be the opposition or, at least, never the government."

Warns Listeners

Reminding his listeners that there are now three major parties in Canadian politics he issued the warning that "if we don't provide what the people want in clear unmistakable terms, there is an alternative to the present government and it is not this party."

Students from right across the Dominion, from Dalhousie to the University of British Columbia mingled with the crowds thronging the capital wearing delegates ribbons and buttons proclaiming their favorite candidate for leader.

The convention was officially opened Wednesday with the singing of "O Canada" in both French and English and an opening address by Grattan O'Leary, associate editor of the Ottawa Journal who accused the Mackenzie King administration of "pursuing a course of government by anniversary."

Bracken Pledges Aid

Retiring leader John Bracken gave his farewell address, pledging himself to support the new leader wholeheartedly and calling for the co-operation of all party members.

Wednesday evening's banquet saw a number of delegates put forward views on party policy. Jim Robins, a Navy veteran from Queen's University suggested that a special cabinet minister be appointed to handle the present dispute over Dominion-provincial relations and revenue issues. The minister should be assisted by an advisory council of 10 citizens from each of the provinces.

A. William Cox, a New Brunswick Army veteran from Dalhousie University, criticized the proposal to outlaw Communism. As a substitute he called for a more vigorous police check of their activities, a strict enforcement of anti-sedition laws and the removal from government service of known Communists and persons whose "reliability may be doubted."

Delegates from the University of Toronto are: Allan Lawrence, III Victoria; George Hogan, President of the Toronto P.C. Club, III Arts; Ian MacMillan, II Victoria; Gowan Guest, III Poli. Sci.; Ted Eisenberg, III Arts, U. C.; Frank Greene, U. C.; Pat Johnson, III U. C.; Art Davies, Mary Skeans, I U. C.; John Sibbald, Jack Sims, Ajax.

Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Sept. 30—(Exchange)—Would-be swimmers at Louisiana State University are being foiled by the leakage of water from the pool.

It is not known whether the pool itself is leaking or whether the pipes are to blame.

Students, Faculty Seek Callaghan's Autograph

"How does it feel to be a famous author?" This is the number one question writers are usually asked by fans and fatuous readers. But when Morley Callaghan autographed copies of The Varsity Story in the University Press bookstore yesterday it was different. Were the students lively, talkative? Not according to Mr. Callaghan and his illustrator, Eric Aldwinkle. In fact they described Toronto students as among the shyest and most self-effacing they had met in years. Unlike bobby-soxers, they seemed content to stand and stare. Not without reason of course, for Morley Callaghan is one of the famous names in Canadian literature, and his latest book has met with great success.

While the students were lining up for autographed copies of The Varsity Story the Blue and White band was providing an appropriate background of university songs. One blond six-footer confessed that he was buying several copies for relatives who were graduates of former years — With Christmas in mind no doubt. Both Mr. Callaghan and Mr. Aldwinkle sat patiently behind a desk piled high with copies of the novel while a battery of photographers flashed cameras in their eyes. Just as they began to get caught up with the backlog of autographs, along came another crowd of students.

Knew Lost Generation

Even the odd professor was to be seen poking around the stacks and chatting with the publisher's agent and Mr. Callaghan. Perhaps, like many of the reporters, they were after a chance to inquire about Mr. Callaghan's friendship with such members of the Lost Generation as Ernest Hemingway, Dos Passos and Thomas Wolfe, all of whom he knew well. But despite that fact he dislikes being grouped with the Lost Generation, and with reason, for he was not contemporaneous with these writers although he worked with them.

Mr. Callaghan is at present engaged in writing two novels, one of which is set in Montreal, and the other taking place in New York. But he hasn't abandoned short story writing, which still intrigues him. Some of his best work was done when he was an undergraduate student at St. Michael's College, from which he graduated in 1925.

Student Purge At Law School Halves Classes

Last year's "purge" of law students at Osgoode Hall in which 87 out of 323 first year students failed, seems to have been duplicated when it was announced that only 41 out of 114 students passed the supplemental examinations. This meant that two-thirds of those writing sups were out of this year's enrolment entirely.

Failure in the supplemental exams, plus the failures of students in the first-year exams, chalked up a record in the history of Osgoode Hall. Failures were due to the higher standards being set by the Law Society of Upper Canada, accohding to senior students and lawyers.

Foreman of Grounds Tells of Reseeding University's Campus

In Simcoe Hall, there is the office of the superintendent department. This department is responsible for maintenance of all university property. A branch of this office is the grounds department, which, as its name implies, looks after the care of the university grounds.

In an interview yesterday, Mr. Corbett, foreman of this branch, told how the Front Campus is cared for. This campus is reseeded and top-dressed once every year after closing in order to be ready for the convocation in June.

The fence, symbol that it is time to start studying in earnest for the annual examinations, is put up primarily to protect the campus and prepare it for the spring seeding. The fence is removed just before the June convocation.

"We regard the campus as a playing field and a place for heavy traffic of people going to and from lectures more than as a lawn," said Mr. Corbett.

Realize Your Ambitions, Follow Great Traditions, President Smith Tells Ajax

"Will you work and will you labour for an objective far and beyond that of being called a good engineer?," was the question asked by President Sydney Smith in an address yesterday afternoon to the students of the Ajax division.

Emphasizing strongly the need for competent leadership in the world today, President Smith urged the student body to cherish their ambitions and dream their own dreams, but at the same time to work hard toward their fulfilment. Testifying to his experience as a lawyers to the blinkers of professional societies, he urged all engineering students to devote their energies not only to science, but also to the elevation and improvement of human existence. While following the traditions of engineering, he stated that they should keep their "bounce and buoyancy."

In asking the students where they were going, he invited any of them who were there only for their own pleasure to "leave us as soon as you can." Although praising the desire to acquire enough training to earn a living, he stated "We are not engaged in moulding clay figures in an upper room, we are not engaged in training hermits." Earning a living is not sufficient. Engineers must be prepared to "live a life", and they must be artists as well as artisans.

Speaking of the opportunities offered by the University beyond preparing for a living, President Smith cited Sir Frederick Banting who first became interested in the problem of diabetes while at the University.

Regarding work, he said that all that professors can do is to help students think for themselves, and described the staff as inactive partners "in your self education."

Describing briefly the history of the Ajax division, he welcomed members of the whole University.

He described Ajax as a bold step, and stated that it would have been impossible for the University to have provided for the great influx of exservicemen who wished to take Engineering without the setting up of the Division. As it was, he said, it was difficult even with Ajax to provide for the educational wants of veterans.

There would have been no success at Ajax without the devotion and hard work of the entire University staff. Far beyond the call of duty, the administrative and supervisory staff worked to set up the successful functioning of the Ajax division before the great enrolment in the session 1945-46.

Seventy-six per cent of the enrolment in Engineering 1st year, he recalled, were veterans.

In a message addressed to graduates of high school who had just entered the University, he said that they had "a fine and unique" opportunity to benefit especially from University, since they were working beside veterans.

Veterans have within them, he said, the very stuff of which nations are built.

At Ajax, he said, the freshman class will be animated and motivated by ideals to great efforts.

Warden Nicholas Ignatieff of Hart House told the audience of the organization and aims of Hart House. He emphasized its facilities for extra curricular activities and its value as a medium for the formation of lasting friendships.

In conclusion he stated that although this is definitely an age of technology, engineers should realize their obligations to society.

Portuguese Books At Main Library

An exhibit of books dealing with the culture of the Portuguese, in Europe and in Latin America, is currently on display in the main hall of the University Library.

These books represent a crosscut of Portuguese culture and deal with such varied topics as exploration, in "Henry the Navigator" by Elaine Sanceau, and music, in "Music of Latin America" by Nicholas Slonimsky.

The purpose of this exhibit, stated Mr. Wallace, Librarian, is to call the attention of the students to the existence of a new course, Spanish, Italian and Portuguese, where there previously had been only Spanish and Italian. The course in Portuguese was originally limited to C. & F. students, but is now available to students in the first and second years of the Pass Course.

In addition, a rapid reading course in Spanish and Portuguese is being offered to grads and undergraduates in the Science departments.

It is hoped that interest will be stimulated in the culture and history of Portugal. The library has an outstanding collection, donated by Professor Buchanan, on his retirement, consisting of rare volumes which constituted his personal library. Also, any of the books on exhibit may be borrowed and examined, Mr. Wallace said.

Included in the exhibit, which will be found in a lighted cabinet, are "Os Lusiadas" by Louis de Camoes, "Brazil, Land of the Future" by Stefan Zweig, and "Amazon Throne, the Story of the Braganzas of Brazil" by Bertilda Harding, as well as those mentioned above.

"Os Lusiadas," a history of the Portuguese people in verse, deals particularly with Vasco da Gama's first voyage to India. Stefan Zweig justifies his title by calling the nation "daughter of the South surpassing the Motherland" with over 46 million Portuguese speaking inhabitants, and a territory larger than the U.S.A. "Amazon Throne" is in English, a history of Brazil.

Miss Nora MacKenzie Ends Long Service

Deans and professors met at the School of Graduate Studies yesterday for a presentation tea in honor of their retiring secretary, Miss Nora MacKenzie. The current secretary, Mr. Sword, requested Dean Hunter to present to Miss MacKenzie a handbag as a token of the esteem of her colleagues. He stated that her efforts from the School's inception in 1915 had developed the organization to its present status.

Miss MacKenzie has been regarded by all as the motivating force of the school, advising and encouraging both students and professors for over a quarter of a century. Dean H. A. Innes, congratulating Miss MacKenzie on her fine work expressed the wish that her retirement would be pleasant and profitable.

LSU Students Gripe Phone Calls Stopped

Baton Rough, Louisiana, Sept. 30—(Exchange)—Students at Louisiana State University are not too pleased about the new telephone regulations that went into effect recently. The system now provides that there be no calls to or from living quarters after 8 p.m.

One irate student declared: "I don't think there has been any change in the amount of noise after eight. All you can hear now is griping because there aren't any calls and that's as bad as the phone ringing."

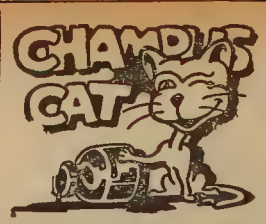
Student Union

Representing the largest single venture ever attempted by the student body of the University, the proposed erection of a Students' Union Memorial Building will meet with the overwhelming approval of undergraduates.

A survey conducted last year to determine the type of war memorial most acceptable to students resulted in a demand by the majority for some form of students' building in which facilities to house campus organizations and activities would be available. The report outlined by SAC President Gwynne-Timothy at this week's SAC meeting was the first step in the development of the plan.



The idea of a students' building is one that had been discussed for years but one which always remained as nothing more than a pipe-dream until it was translated into a semblance of reality near the end of last term. Now, with the wheels slowly beginning to revolve, it is important that undergraduates realize the gigantic task that confronts them.

It is almost an accepted fact that students are highly volatile individuals whose enthusiasms are easily fired and intensely exhibited. There are some who will cynically regard a student undertaking of this nature as an impossible one. It is too big, they will say. Students can't be expected to put forth the effort required to launch such a project, they will scoff. There lies the challenge.

If you accept the idea of a students' building in principle and then sit back and wait for it to materialize, it will fail before it starts. If you recognize the great need for such a project (and you should), but are not prepared to do your part so see it carried out then it will fall and the prestige of the student body will fall with it.

A terrific effort will be required. The nature of such an undertaking is such that a small group, no matter how energetic, cannot accomplish it. It will require the concerted planning and tenacious resolve of many hundreds of students. There will be no room for bickering. College and club differences will have to be submerged in the interests of an all-university campaign if the organization is to function properly.

The Initiation Committee will meet soon to set up the framework of decentralized committees which must be formed. From the wealth of talented and aggressive members of the student body will be chosen those who will be charged with the responsibility of developing the campaign. Whether the part you are asked to play is big or small it is vital to the overall success of the building. And remember that the cynics will be watching.

A Yank at UC or Why Boys Leave Home

The girl sitting next to me in Psychology was blond, beautiful . . . AND. She had everything Hollyway exports and reminded me of Betty Grable, Betty Hutton, Lana Turner in reverse order. I was glad I had come to Canada to study. Why this babe had more than they had. She had PLUS. (PLUS standing for the fact that she was sitting next to me).

I leaned sideways, stuck my mouth next to her, sniffed the delicate fragrance of her golden curls, and whispered softly in my best Canadian accent,

"I say, old girl, howa bouta date ternight?" The Canadian accent didn't fool her. I felt like a winter's day in Northern Ontario.

A half hour later, while everyone else was squinting deep into their notebooks and writing like mad, I turned to her, abashed but unafraid, and said,

"I'm American. I'm also abashed but unafraid." Her lips pursed into a delicate "oh" of full comprehension. She smiled, placed her pinky at a perpendicular angle to her pen, and turning, whispered back with blushing lips,

"Everybody else is writing like mad." Our friendship was established. My heart started racing my pulse to the roof of my mouth. I felt like banging on the desk and shouting, "Bravo, old girl, Hear! Cheers!" and all that sort of rot, but I felt it would seem out of place in Canada.

Notebook to notebook, we tiptoed out into the corridor. I looked at her and sighed. She looked at me and shuddered (as a draft, er beg your pardon, as a draught swept through the hall.)

"Draughty here, isn't it?" she murmured, "But I'm glad you're an American. You see, I believe in international love and all that political stuff. Especially in these days." The way she said these days would have made a lump of plutonium melt in my mouth.

"R-r-ather-r-r-," I stammered, "sort of hands under the border thing, eh what?" She grimaced gently at my political naivete.

"My name's Mable Leaf," she said, "You're from New York, aren't you?"

"Hip! hip! Rather! Aren't I though," I replied sounding very cosmopolitan, "But how did you know?"

"From your garments, silly chap," was the answer. There was an awkward pause as I rolled down my trouser cuffs and slipped a jacket over my undershirt.

The next hour was pure heaven. Mable showed me around the University and I made the appropriate New Yorkian (U.S.A.) comments. Our conversation went something like this.

Mable: (pointing) There's an outstanding University landmark.

Me: I say! Raather! Shall I whistle?

Mable: (a bit put out) Not the girl, silly, the building.

Me: Hmmmm. Yeees. Oustanding. Ratherrrrr!

Mable: (Pointing with her pinky) There's Simcoe Hall, Hart House, the New Book Shop, the Library, the Medical Building, U. C., and Queen's Park. What do you think of it all, Jack?

Me: Hmmm. Yes. Rather. It's . . . it's . . . poifect Why the air, the atmosphere, the very atmosphere is pungent with Canadian pomp and peasantry.

Mable (still put out) You mean of course, pagentry.

Me: (absorbed) Hmmm. Outstanding landmarks . . . oh! Er . . Yes, pagentry, I meant pagentry, of course.

We parted as all international lovers must, soon after-soon after

Clad in Pajamas Frosh From Vic Visit Royal York

Two pyjama-garbed Vic Frosh got a ride home from Front Street last night, courtesy of the Toronto Police Department. It all started when the seniors led a group of eight frosh to the Union Station where they leap-frogged about until discovering the tunnel to the Royal York.

In the hotel a Kinsey-type survey was conducted among the guests. Typical questions were: "Do you like climbing stairs? Are you interested in your neighbor's wife?" At this point the house detective requested them to leave.

Outside, however, it was cold, so they went back in, only to be asked to leave again. Then the seniors disappeared and the bewildered frosh split into two groups and two directions. Four got a ride home with a passerby while two others "borrowed" car-fare from a pedestrian. The other two were cold, their feet tired, so they accosted a local gendarme and asked him for a ride home. To the gates of Victoria College they rode in the police wagon.

Remove German Neurosis Prior to Education—Long

Relating his impressions of German student life after spending a few weeks in Germany last summer, Dr. Marcus Long of the Philosophy Department last night told an audience at OCE there were characteristics evident in the German people which must be removed before they could be trained in the ways of democratic living and thinking. These characteristics were a deep-rooted fear, pessimism, apathy, a sense of isolation and a sense of unreality, he said.

Dr. Long spoke under the sponsorship of the Toronto branch of the United Nations Association in Canada. He spent six weeks of the past summer as director of an International summer seminar, sponsored by the Canadian International Students' Service, held near Kiel.

At the seminar were 50 Canadian students, 40 German students and 40 representatives from 14 other nations. The six weeks were spent in study and the exchange of ideas and had not been designed to preach democracy but to show it in practice.

Break Down Suspicion

Dr. Long said that there was suspicion by the Germans of anyone connected with the conquering powers and that at the beginning of the seminar all actions were misinterpreted by these students. Their suspicions were gradually broken down by bull sessions, free discussion and constant assurance that the Canadians were not drawing out information to give to the occupying powers.

The Germans are fatalists. They feel that a war is imminent but that there is nothing they can do about it but sit and wait. Connected with this is their apathy about any kind of political life. They fear that any expression on their part will make them marked

Manitoulin District Scholarship Offered

A scholarship with the annual value of $300 is being offered to second year students by the SAC.

This scholarship has its limitations. The students applying for it must live in the district of Manitoulin, or the part of Ontario north of the 46th parallel of latitude, excluding North Bay, Sudbury, the Soo, Port Arthur and Fort William. First class honors in Grade XIII must be obtained as admission requirements for the course which he wants to enter. The faculties open to this scholarship are: Meds, Applied Science and Engineering, Forestry, Dents, or in the first year course, leading to a B.Ph. in Pharmacy.

This scholarship lasts for two years, providing the student gets at least 66 per cent in the first year exams. Last year the first scholarship was offered, but no one qualified to win it. At an SAC meeting recently, it was proposed that in such a case the scholarship be given to the faculty of Arts. However, it was decided that this would defeat the initial purpose of the scholarship, as it was felt the Arts faculty had enough scholarships to offer.

Idle For Two Decades Towing Machine Ready

"The towing machine which has been in wraps in the basement of the Mechanical Building for the last twenty years will soon be put to work," said Dr. G. R. Lord yesterday.

The machine has not been used in all this time because the hydraulic channel was not long enough to allow the machine to run at a constant speed for a sufficient distance. The new channel is 200 feet long or twice the length of the old channel.

The machine looks like a carriage, is drawn along rails on each side of the channel by a cable. There is a bench wide enough for two people to sit on attached to the machine which also carries the instruments used to record the performance of the ship hulls, aircraft floats and current meters being studied.

The machine was made by the firm of A. Ott in Kempten, Bavaria. It is made of aluminum tubing (a comparatively new method 20 years ago) and weighs about 300 pounds.

During the past twenty years the performance of current meters was studied by having someone walk along the side of the channel pulling the meter.

The machine will be more accurate than this method. Ship hulls were seldom studied in the old lab.

The old channel will be covered over and used as a reservoir. The water used in the channels and other experiments is used over and over again.

Blues Try Raiders In Last Exhibition Ere London Battle

Cooler weather, a most necessary ingredient for football fever, is predicted for tomorrow's clash at Varsity Stadium between the Assumption College Purple Raiders of Windsor and the Varsity Seniors. Last week the warm weather took much of the starch out of the Varsity rooting section, even before the kick-off.

Very little is known about the Raiders beyond the fact that they are reputed to have a serious contender for Intercollegiate recognition and a regular spot on the C.I.A.U. schedule. In the past Assumption has been playing exhibition games with Canadian Intercollegiate teams, while carrying on as a member of the Michigan College League.

Playing centre for the Raiders is Bill Kohlman, known in Varsity sporting circles as a star centre on the Assumption basketball team. Tommy O'Hara, and Al Angus at outsides and Bob Temmerman at quarter are also renowned for their cage ability with the Windsorites basketball team, which has certainly rated senior status.

The game offers the Blues their last opportunity to sharpen their ball handling in actual competition before the regular opener. They will be strengthened by the appearance of Joe Upton, a former Intermediate, and Phil Austin, a hefty from Forestry.

Nick Volpe and Tommy Waldon, both collision victims in the Beaches game, will return to the line-up in the Blues backfield. Waldon, incidentally was unaware he had scored the Varsity touchdown until he was told by his mates after some of the haze had cleared.

The fact that Western has resumed its high scoring ways as seen by its crushing 42-0 win over O.R.F.U.'s Sarnia Imperials (a team that Varsity's first opponents the Beaches-Indians beat by only six points) falls to dismay Bob Masterson. He puts no stock whatsoever in comparative scores. The real test will come Oct. 9th in Little Memorial Stadium when the Mustangs meet the Blues face to face.

The Blue and White Society has completed the tedious job of selecting the nine cuties and three sturdies who will form the Varsity cheer leading corps. Bob Cringan also hopes to have the band in attendance. All they need now is an audience, so how about it?

Saint Michael's Bereft of Water Students Unclean

"Hey!" What's the story?" "Where's all the hot water?" "I hate cold showers!"—Such were the cries that rang through St. Michael's College residences this week, when the freshmen and the sophomores returned after hours of strenuous initiation ceremonies about the campus.

Tuesday evening, school officials discovered a break in a hot water pipe-line leading from the boiler-room to the various college buildings.

At 4.00 a.m. Wednesday morning the city contractors arrived to begin their search for the location of the break. All that day the students and faculty of St. Michael's were hampered by the lack of hot water. Especially at the Brennan Hall dining room was the trouble felt. With no water for washing dishes, they had to use paper plates, cardboard milk containers, and straws.

Those who wanted hot showers had to go to Hart House. All those who needed hot water for shaving—well, they just went to lectures unshaven.

All's well now. By 9.00 p.m. water was running through all the pipes again. The S.M.C. men are clean-shaven again; they have had their showers, and Brennan Hall has returned to regular plates, glasses, and silverware.

Professoy McCurdy Talks on Freedom To Philosophy Club

"To defend freedom, even political freedom, we will always fight fascism or any kind of dictatorship," said Professor W. J. McCurdy addressing the first meeting of the Junior Philosophy Club this week. "But when the war is won, then we ask ourselves, 'What, after all, is this thing we call freedom? What did we really want it for?'"

"These questions show just how closely this problem of freedom concerns each one of us—and how it both intrigues and baffles us. In answering we run up against the great argument of Determinism vs. Indeterminism. For before we can worry about what freedom is, or what exactly it means to us, we must determine whether in our universe, in our world as it exists today, such a thing as freedom is at all possible. If the world is run by mechanical determinism, or even by all the various types of determinism put together—psychological, neurological etc.—if any aspect of every act is definitely determined by previous acts, then there can be no possibility of initiating any new thing. The very possibility of freedom must be excluded from our world."

Strangely enough, although we all live and act on the assumption that we are free, to some degree at least, yet argument is so heavily weighted in favor of Determinism, that it seems we almost want to exclude freedom from our world.

The organizational meeting of the University Rifle Association will be held at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, October 6th in the Debates Room of Hart House.

To Form Campus Club, New Meeting Place For Nisei Students

A new club will make its appearance on the university campus early next week. The club, which is being formed for the benefit of Jananese-Canadian students at the University, is to be called the Nisei Club.

The primary purpose of the new club, John Yoshioka, its Publicity Director, stated, is to form a meeting place and to hold get-to-gethers for the 45-odd Japanese-Canadian students on the campus.

The Nisei students hald a few meetings last spring but were not incorporated into a club. "This year, more Japanese-Canadian students enrolled at the university and this factor gave us the incentive to open a club of our own," Yoshioka stated.

The majority of the new students come from British Columbia he said. Many of them have spent one or two years working in lumber camps and so on in order to obtain enough money to attend university this year.

"We hope the new club will be able to aid them to get settled," he said.

Once the club is organized they hope to have some prominent speakers address some of their meetings. It is not a club exclusively for Japanese-Canadian students Yoshioka stated. Anyone interested may join.

Nisei, (pronounced nissay) is the Japanese word for second generation.

Inika, D.P. Student, Attends U. of T.

By JANICE JOHNSON

From Prague University in Czechoslovakia has come Inika Janecek to study at the University of Toronto, and although she has been in this country only 15 days, she has already caught the Canadian spirit. She has travelled extensively and had a variety of experiences, all of which make her a very interesting person.

She grew up in a small town, attending the local public school and a high school 5 miles away. (Imagine, walking 5 miles to school every day!) At the age of 20 she went to Prague University where she spent one term majoring in Philosophy. From Prague, Inika escaped to Geneva, Switzerland, where she spent 2 years in Modern Languages. A lucky opportunity came and she was sent to Cambridge to take a summer course in English. Although Inika says she doesn't know how she did it, a combination of intelligence and hard work won for her a Proficiency Prize in English and also an opportunity to come to Canada to study. She arrived in Montreal at "five o'clock, evening, Sept. 8th, one day retarded." A week was spent in Ottawa where Inika was particularly interested in the experimental farms. Then to Toronto where she took up residence in Whitney Hall.

An ambitious and hard-working student, she is registered in Soc. and Phil. while the French and Music clubs take up some of her spare time.

We as university students were very interested to find out about student life in Europe. Here, in Inika's own words, is a comparison between the university life in Prague, Geneva, and Toronto:

"An old woman, seeing a train of students manifestating in the streets said: 'Students are the same all over the world'." Students — perhaps; but their life differs from one university to the other.

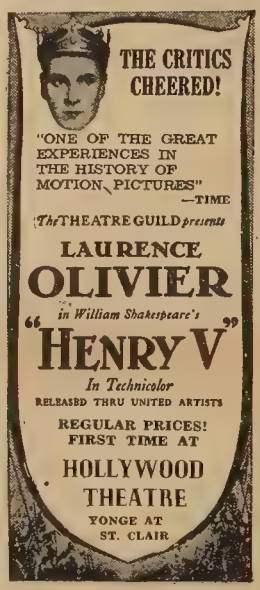
Let us watch a student coming to the University of Prague. First of all, before entering the University buildings, he has to decide what "faculty" (college) he is going to join. Every "faculty" has its own building and its own registrar, and the faculties are sometimes several miles from each other. The "faculty" decided, the student enters the faculty building, where his first steps are to the information office to ask what lectures he has to take. After having stood in a line for half an hour, he is told by the information officers that they are not informed on that subject. The investigations continue. Our student buys a "Program", decides what lectures he shall take and asks a senior (they can be recognised after their self-conscious behaviour) for the registration office and gets a brief answer: "The line upstairs." There are four lines upstairs and our student joins one, daring not to ask what it is for. At the end of the line he may discover that it is for lunch or for a new edition of "Anthropology", which subject our student does not take.

In Geneva there is one building only where the students register for any subject. The list with directions is hanging on the front door. Students usually register 3 weeks after the beginning of lectures, for they are supposed to go to the lectures "to have a look" before they register, to make sure that it is really the subject they want to take and to avoid change-overs during the term. When at last the student decides to register, he picks up a number at the inquiry office; this number is a sort of appointment; the student knows when he has to come and has not to wait.

When a Freshie comes to Toronto, she need not bother about the confusing thing called registration. She finds herself soon surrounded by seniors, who, feeling responsible for the inexperienced newcomer, show her around in a friendly way.

In Toronto, students are mostly living in residences or boarding houses recommended by the University. In Geneva they have no residences belonging to the university; most of the students live privately in a family. In Prague there are three residences only; as they are comparatively cheap, they are for poor students only. They have one disadvantage: They are far from the University.

The next question of interest concerns fees. They are about the same in Geneva and in Toronto. In Prague, studies are free. The University is run by the state, and this gives the same opportunities for rich and poor.



Another interesting thing are the relations to the foreigners. Prague does not come into consideration; there are not many foreigners so far. Toronto is favorable to foreigners; students are usually interested in them, for they are something new, something rare. It is almost the contrary in Geneva. In Toronto, a student might say to his friend: "Do you see that fellow? He is a foreigner." In Geneva he would say in the same tone: "Do you see that fellow? Imagine, he is Swiss; moreover, he is Genevese." For in Geneva about two-thirds of the students are foreigners, Americans having the majority.

If there are many differences, there is, too, one thing common to all universities. No matter what department of whatever university the student enters, he gets numerous pamphlets to read and even more forms to fill in.

Such is life in universities all over the world. Are you surprised that it differs so slightly from our own little world here at University of Toronto?

At The Movies

Oliver Twist

A very pleasant two hours at the Odeon, Toronto, awaits moviegoers who have not yet seen the British production of "Oliver Twist." Never departing too far from the Dickens text the movie version of the great master's novel is as genuine and sincere as it is brutal.

The plot concerns the orphan whose schooling was under the direction of an arch criminal. The school is in the slums of London and the students are street waifs who are taught to pick pockets to enrich the avaricious "Fagin." The orphan is finally rescued from the clutches of the villainous principal by a perhaps too-kindly Mr. Brownlow who turns out to be—well, you can pick it up from there.

The picture, which runs for one hundred minutes, is remarkable for the number of outstanding character portrayals it contains. There must be at least five or six. Well out in the lead is Alec Guiness' portrayal of "Fagin", the crafty principal of the crime school. The "Fagin" of the movie is a thoroughly despicable fellow, perhaps even more so than Dicken's original, who was merely "villainous-looking and repulsive." Close behind and giving another capable performance is the talented Robert Newton whose "Bill Sykes", the murderer, is masterly. Kay Walsh makes "Nancy" sympathetic and understandable. Francis L. Sullivan does a grand job as the bullying beadle, while looking like a caricature out of Punch. John Howard Davies as "Oliver" is refreshing if not always convincing.

A new high in movie realism is the scene in which Bill Sykes murders Nancy while his mad mongrel dog tries to escape from the room. Hollywood seldom if ever reaches similar heights.

It is as unfortunate as it is inevitable that Alec Guiness' fine portrayal of the Jew, Fagin, will be for many confirmation of much of what they were taught in their youth about the Jewish people. Coming at a time when a more enlightened and healthy understanding of the dangers of racial intolerance is sorely needed, this reviewer is of the opinion that in this respect the "Oliver Twist" of the movies will not be the savage attack on social evils that Dickens intended it should be.

The Odeon is one of the five most modern theatres in the world with many sciences contributing to the comfort of the movie-goer. The many fine appointments include a modern restaurant on the second floor.

Tramp Steamer Travellers Now Students At Trinity

Two Trinity students, Rodger Eaton and Jeff Pearson, spent part of last summer working aboard a tramp steamer.

Both Rodger and Jeff signed as cadet officers with the Montreal Shipping Company but their duties were those of ordinary seamen, ranging from the proverbial deck swabbing to taking their turn at the wheel.

It was hard work on the freighter but on the whole not as bad as was expected and the seamen were not only a friendly lot, but tolerant as well. Jeff found the watches the most interesting feature of life aboard ship.

The route taken was from Montreal to Scotland and thence to Hamburg, Rotterdam and London. The crossing took fifteen days but the schedule allowed for shore leaves for the ship's complement and the boys made good use of their time.

Jeff Pearson estimated that 65 percent of Hamburg is utterly devastated. What is even more appalling, however, is the fact that there has been no apparent effort to do more than clear the rubble from the streets. Hamburg's citizens have little time or desire to rebuild their city. Women's skirts

Rain Fails To Halt Tennis Matches

Schedules Changed For Doubles Games

Despite heavy rain on Thursday morning, several matches were played in the afternoon on the all-weather courts of the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club, in the second day of the Interfaculty Tournament. There were no upsets during the day as third-seeded Jack Langmaid, only seeded player in action, won an easy victory over Whyte of Ajax 6-1, 6-0.

McCutcheon was on hand to direct operations and announced the first round doubles originally scheduled for Friday will be played on Monday at the originally scheduled hour. All singles matches not played on Thursday will be played at the originally scheduled time today. No doubles matches will be played on Saturday but the singles semi-final round in each flight will be completed.

Playing times for third round survivors will be found on the draw sheets. Those who won semi-finals on Thursday are asked to check with the Intramural office for Saturday playing times. Playing times for the finals of each flight will be announced on Saturday. Second round doubles originally scheduled for Monday will be played on Tuesday at the originally scheduled times.

AJAX SPORTS NOTES

The Ajax sports program is starting to swing into high gear under the able directorship of Jim Follwell and his assistant Pat Sheehan. Third year men will remember Jim as the man who coached the Ajax junior football a season ago. Last year he was coach of the Intermediate Blues, and has now been appointed Athletic Director at Ajax.

The first event on the books for an interfaculty team is the Junior Track and Field meet to be held in Toronto Oct. 7. The Ajax team is far from being complete and anyone interested in making the team should drop around to the track any night of the week at 5 p.m. Such veterans of last year's team as Bill Gray will be around to give tips and instruction.

The gym in building 2012 will open Oct. 2 for those interested in boxing, wrestling and gym work. There will be instructors on hand to dish out gen.

The inter-residence sports schedule won't start for a while. Until it does, the Rec Hall will be available from 4 p.m. until 5 p.m. every night of the week except Wednesday and until noon on Saturday. Inter-residence teams wishing to reserve the hall for 45 minute periods to practice basketball or volleyball may do so by getting in touch with Pat Sheehan in the Athletic Office.

Blue and White Sells Colors At Games

The Blue and White Society of the S.A.C. has come forward with another new idea to boost Varsity spirit. It announced last night that it will be sponsoring the sale of Varsity colours at Saturday's football game.

The plan calls for ten beautiful co-eds to distribute the 15-inch non-fraying satin ribbons for only fifteen cents, as a service to the students and to eliminate the present profit being made by outsiders. The girls are to be recruited by the Blue and White Society today. (See ad elsewhere in The Varsity.)

Included in the Society's future plans are post-game dances and celebrations. The climax of the football season will be reached for the gigantic Home-coming week, which extends over Nov. 12, 13, and 14th. The week-end will feature the game with Western, a dance for the grads, undergrads, and Faculty at the Royal York Hotel—which has been reserved for the occasion.

SPORTSWOMAN

Referees club has been formed this year to train women to referee their own games. This means that they will no longer have to depend on the men to referee intramural games such as softball, basketball, hockey, volleyball and badminton.

The first meeting of the Referee's club will be a general meeting held next week in room 62 UC but after this one, their meetings will take the form of classes in the individual sports to teach anyone who is interested in becoming a 'ref', the rules and general refereeing procedure.

Any business that arises will be taken care of by the executive that was elected last year. This executive is comprised of Fern Watson, PHE, president; Helen Ferguson, UC, vice-president; Nancy Goetz, St. Mike's,, secrteary; and Mable Slack of the Physical Education Dep't, staff advisor.

As baseball is the first major sport to be played, classes in umpire will begin immediately. Any woman at the University can take these classes and they are free, but it 'pays off' to take them because umpires are paid. No uniform is necessary for 'umping' or 'reffing', but white blouses and shorts will be worn if required.

Fern Watson, president of the club, expressed the hope that many first and second year girls will join to insure a firm foundation for the club, which will go on from year to year. "This is a new venture," she said, "And to succeed will need the support of every girl interested in sports."

The eight Victoria Women's residences have set up a program of inter-house sports that will be carried out during the next two terms.

Sparked by the enthusiasm and planning of Jean Fraser, the president of the Annesley Student Government Association (ASGA) the girls in the residences elected Athletic representatives from each house to form a commitee for planning the sports program. At the first meeting of this committee, Doris Brent was elected chairman and a baseball schedule was drawn up.

Softball, basketball and hockey will be the three major sports with all the houses trying for a trophy which will be awarded at the end of the second term to the house that has the most points.

Despite the difficulties in obtaining the Vic playing field, the houses were able to play four softball games on Tuesday. Enthusiastic Vic women turned out at seven o'clock in the morning to play two games and at one o'clock, their lunch hour, to play the other two. The umpires for these games are no other than the Dons of the residences!

VARSITY TEA

Sports reporters and those aspiring to same are notified that their attendance is requested at the forthcoming Varsity tea to be held at Wymilwood at 4.30 today.

Intermeds. Prepare For Season

By ED. SOKOLOWSKI

So far unheard of, Varsity's second Rugby, the Intermediates, are planning a big season this year. Both coaches, Al Brown and Don Bark, have been working since the beginning of the season and to date have a fairly smooth running club.

With a few of last year's stars and many new men, the team this season will be built on the same style as their bigger brothers, the Senior Blues. A new strategy has been mapped out for them and coaches Al Brown and Don Bark, promise many victories.

Over seventy men turned out at the beginning of the season and now over forty players are still making a bid for positions on the team. The players are giving their best and it looks as though the Intermediates may pull plenty of surprises in the Intermediate Intercollegiate loop.

Dave Graham, a tricky little end, is back with the Intermediates this term as well as Kilpatrick, another fast man. Al Sivell will again be with the team taking care of the middle position on the line. Art Bell and Hubie Sinclair, last season's quarters will take their place in the back field with the new club. Wigle, another fast back, plays a repeat performance this year.

Errington is the new man with the Seconds and also new to the university. Last season he played with Queen's Intermediates. One of Victoria College's Stars, Rich Howson, makes his first appearance with the team this year. Roberts, another new man will fill an inside position. Another promising star is Garside, an Engineer from Ajax, and he fills the backfield very well.

The first intercollegiate game scheduled for the Intermediate team is October 8th and will be played at Western, with the Western Colts as their opponents. Last season the Colts split two games with the Blues and both will attempt to do better this term.

One Over Par Lead Tourney By Five Strokes

Bill Givens from O.C.E. took a large lead in the Interfaculty Golf Tournament at the St. Andrews Golf Course yesterday with a neat one over par 72. L. Smalley of Ajax with a 77 and G. Burgess of PHE with a 78, followed Givens.

Givens' 72 is one of the best scores recorded in interfaculty golf and it looks as though he may continue to hold the lead for the rest of the tourney. Ernie Bentley won the meet last year with a 74.

In the first day of the tournament nearly one hundred enthusiasts trampled over the damp fairway; the rest of the 250 golfers will continue the match today and Monday. The tournament is scheduled to be played rain or shine.

The top 30 men of the three day Interfaculty tourney will play a rematch to decide the Intercollegiate team. Out of these, eight will be selected to represent Varsity in the Inter-Collegiate meet later on in the season.

Speaking Of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

Our friends at Western must have really put on a show Wednesday night when they beat Sarnia Imperials 42-0. From all available reports it seems the McFarlanes, Parry, and company were well ahead of last Saturday's win over the OAC Aggies. Everything was clicking, and Parry in particular had one of his best games since joining the Mustangs.

Parry has been plagued by injuries in the past, and has a leg that a solid smash can put on the hum. If he manages to last the season, Western is just going to be that much tougher. As a matter of fact Don McFarlane is the only member of the threesome who can be considered as a healthy footballer. Brother Bob also ran into a leg injury in the Olympics, and right now the Blues are probably drawing lots to see who'll have first crack at that susceptible member.

Football is one of the most difficult games to figure. For example, last Saturday Western defeated OAC 35-3, and Wednesday they swamped Sarnia 42-0. A look at the scores would indicate that OAC is better or at least as good as Sarnia, a conclusion that is hardly conceivable.

To continue this trend of thought, Argonauts defeated Beaches-Indians 13-9 in the opening game. Beaches-Indians just managed to scrape out an 8-2 win over Sarnia. Again considering these scores one would conclude that Western should beat Argos—and somehow I can't be convinced of this.

Maybe it's just as well the Mustangs got that game out of their system. They can do all the scoring they wish as long as it's confined to exhibition games. I have no doubts that Varsity will run up a pretty fair score themselves this Saturday, unless some of our spies have sent along some faulty information from Windsor.

Not much information is available from the Assumption camp, but advances warn the fans to keep a watchful eye on one Curt Dunham, who is rated tops on the Purple and White squad. As you probably know, Assumption's colours are identical with Western's—so we can be pretty sure that the Blues will defeat at least one Purple and White team this season.

Certain local odds-makers are quoting Varsity at prices as high as 3-1, with no takers. This alone should be enough to spur the Blues on to greater efforts.

Everything is happening in the world of women's sports here at good old U of T. Here's hoping that this summary helps you to find your athletic niche.

Archery—More co-eds are needed to try for the Intercollegiate Archery team we hope to find to represent us at McMaster on October 15. Turn out Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from one to two at Varsity Stadium and get the feathers flying.

Softball—Intramural games begin on Tuesday (October 5). Yesterday two Trinity men batted out a few fly balls to the hardworking UC'ers and were amazed when the fielders didn't miss one. We thought that they were just enthused by the game but a further probe revealed that they were spies for the red—and black. They were the Saint Hilda's coaches, no less, sounding out their opponents . . . A Czech girl turning out for her first taste of softball remarked in a dazed voice after her first contact with the ball. "But THAT isn't soft!"

Tennis—Each College tournament will have to be completed by October 7 if that college wants a team to represent them at the Interfaculty meet on October 12, 13, and 14 at the Toronto Tennis club. So hurry, hurry girls, and get racketting those fluffy balls around.

Golf—Don't forget that UC Invitation meet at Saint Andrew's on October 13; it may NOT be your unlucky day. You needn't worry about your handicap, you don't even have to have one this year, so Shhh, keep it stricly under your hat-o'-cap. Grab your ATL and fifty cents, shine those clubs up and C U there!

Basketball—There's not much happening doing in this sport yet. (I hope the basketball rep doesn't catch up with yours truly. She's been after me for the last couple of days to get me to tell everybody that the lists are up, everybody has to play, and that the games will start about October 18—Yikes—there she is now—don't tell her I went this way . . . Please . . . PLEASE.)

Swimming—Intercollegiate practices are still going on at UTS, Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. The dashin' splashin' starts at 5:30, stylish and cutting a pretty figure at 6:30, and going in head first at 7:30.

If that isn't enough for you, enthusiasts are trying to start Lacrosse and Ground Hockey.

"Touch Wood"

Last night at Hart House Theatre the Koenig Players presented C. L. Anthony's "Touch Wood".

One could see that the play as written was probably a lot of fun, but the failure of the directress, Josephine Koenig, to pace the dialogue a little faster ruined some of the carefully built-up effects. The plot is rather complicated, and I'm still not sure what it was all about, but there was some vague pother involving sundry married and unmarried couples at a Scottish hotel. One of the couples, by the way, had spent their honeymoon at said hotel some 15 years previous—you know what to expect!

One of the things which this reviewer has noted time and again is the hideous plays which amateur groups insist on performing. We know it is early in the season for commencing a tirade of this kind, but surely from the vast literature of the stage, amateur and semi-professional groups can choose something a bit more distinctive than the tripe usually dished up.

We should like to see someone do a production of something with a little more dramatic appeal this season: Anderson's High Tor, perhaps, or Capek's R.U.R., Shaw's Bury the Dead, or Morley's Trojan Horse. Too often a group's attempt at innocuous comedy turns out to be a painfully dull experience for the play-goer. And for heaven's sake either leave the English plays involving accents to the Trinity Dramatic Society or forget about accents.

The Koenig Players proved they are a group possessing real talent. Barton Stevenson, Elizabeth Estaken, and Jim Barron were all first rate, and were ably supported by a clever cast. The setting designed by David Powrie and Gord Drew was both decorative and well planned. But let's not kill the Little Theatre with second-rate plays.

Dr. Philip G. Ashmore Chairman-Elect S.A.C.

Philip G. Ashmore, currently interning in the Toronto General Hospital, was recently elected Chairman of the Students' Administrative Council. The election of Dr. Ashmore will be a great help to the Council as Phil is no stranger to the business of the Council. During the session of 1947-48 he was president of the SAC and as such began the campaign for the erection of a student War Memorial.

Dr. Ashmore hopes that the SAC will continue its activities while placing more importance on the larger administrative duties instead of the small trivial formalities by which some student councils ruin their effectiveness. On stating his part to be played in the council's activities, Dr. Ashmore said, "I will attempt to make the meetings concise, productive, and business-like."

Phil gives his full support and enthusiastically endorses the campaign for the new Student War Memorial. He is full of confidence in the conscientious, and interested present council, and said that with their support he intends to make this year's council one of the best ever.

Phil is a native of Braylorne, B.C., where he received his primary and secondary education. After two years' pre-med in U.B.C., Phil came east to Toronto where he finally received his M.D. in June, 1948. At present he is doing his junior internship at Toronto General Hospital.

During his stay at the University of Toronto, Phil, an average student, was very active in student activities. Last year he was elected Commissioner of Athletics in SAC, which post he relinquished in order to take over the presidency of SAC on the resignation of Jim Walker. He was President of the Medical Society for 47-48.

are shorter than ever before and makeup is non-existent. The black market is the only thriving organization. Hamburg's vista stretches no further than the day's survival.

Rotterdam, the Trinity students found, in direct contrast to the German city, was a bustling, prosperous Dutch harbor. In its old sections Rotterdam has a network of small, cobbled streets that have a charming old country flavor. The canals are almost as numerous as the paved roads and provide an ever ready supply of fish, even, if you can believe it, at the principal intersections of the city.

If he had been one day earlier, Jeff would have seen Berlin. As it was, the Russians were adamant in their refusal to let the Canadians or anybody else through. Theirs was the third car to be stopped. The Russians had bayonets to back up their demands so Jeff decided he would rather visit the Harz Mountains to the south, which he did. That was the first day of the Russian blockade of Berlin.

Although life in London is not anything like its pre-war affluence, it is certainly not the drab and colorless existence some of us have been imagining. It is still possible to find good food in London, though there is not much of it. The ruins have long since been cleared away and the few gaps that are left around St. Paul's are softened by the overgrowth of weeds. The people of Britain are working hard, yes, but they still know how to play.

Both Rodger Eaton and Jeff Pearson feel they spent a pretty successful vacation. Travel by tramp steamer is a very practical way to see the world.

men in any future regime. Even if they did participate in politics they are convinced that all power is vested in the occupying power and that the part they would play would have no effect on any action taken or policy formed. Added to this is their political history which makes them incapable of understanding and taking part in democratic procedure.

The Germans, Dr. Long found, were incapable of facing a situation as it really is. They accept the occupying power, British in this case, with good grace but blame it for all difficult and unpleasant situations.

Tells Seminar Success

In spite of these characteristics that seem to be holding the people back, at the end of the six weeks Dr. Long said that he felt among the students a new spirit of hope and understanding.

Germany is at the crossroads. Directions signs are blurred but with help from Canada through the medium of books, scholarships, and student exchanges, the people may be helped to find the right way, he concluded.

BLUES SINK RAIDERS 37-11

BY BRIAN LAND

Taking freely to the air, the Varsity Blues scored in every quarter to subdue the Assumption Purple Raiders 37-11 at Varsity Stadium Saturday before more than 6,000 onlookers in an Intercollegiate exhibition game. The contest was a wide open affair with six of the eight touchdowns resulting from passing plays.

Throwing from behind some solid blocking by their mates, Bruce Cummings and newcomer Norm West responded with two touchdown strikes apiece as Assumption failed to crack the Blue wing-line. Outstanding in the Raiders' cause was Freddie Thomas who ran for one touchdown and converted the other one, as well as playing a fine kicking game.

Quick Scoring

At the kick-off Varsity rolled up four consecutive first downs to move from their 42 down to the Raiders' seven-yard line, where Alec Lawson pulled down a 35-yard pass from Waldon. John Chorestecki took it over for the first of his two major scores behind some fancy deception in the Blues' backfield. Joe Kane converted.

Shortly after Assumption recovered the ball on a fumble and Roy Battagello tossed a floater from the mid-stripe to fleet Fred Thomas who spend twenty-five yards for the score on their first play. The convert attempt was wide making the count 6-5 for Varsity.

A pass interception by Archie Jones and Cummings to Huyke pass paved the way for the second Toronto score as Cummings hoofed a 15 yard field goal from in front of the posts.

Then Cummings used his good right arm to hurl a 20 yarder to Jack Gray who raced 35 more for the second Varsity T.D. Cummings converted to leave the first quarter score 15-5.

Toronto soon threatened again after blocking Temmerman's kick and advancing to the Windsor 25 on a "no yards" ruling. Ted Toogood took Cummings' pass over his shoulder in the end zone to increase the count to 20-5. The attempted convert was blocked.

West Shines

Cummings started the second half march with a long boot which penned the Windsorites deep in their own zone. When Varsity took over,

Experiences In DP Camp Behind For Joan Balas

Pert, pretty, petite: that's Joan Balas. While classed by the Germans as a D.P., "displaced" is hardly the word for this first year Maths., Physics, and Chemistry students of St. Hilda's. Joan comes originally from Warsaw, Poland, and has been in Canada only a year, but already she has taken her place here.

In Warsaw at the time of the revolt in 1944, Joan told of being a member of the underground scout movement This was an organization of Polish youths who were learning nursing, wireless and first aid. She said these groups lived in constant fear of being discovered by the Germans who had banned these groups as well as all books and radios. However, illicit B.B.C. broadcasts provided a welcome respite from the constant German propaganda.

In late summer 1944 the Gestapo entered her home in Warsaw and gave her family fifteen minutes to get ready to move; whereupon they were taken to Berlin and later Hambourg. There Joan worked in a dairy, but also found time to attend the University of Bonn.

She was greatly impressed by University life when she started here a few weeks ago Previously she had seen classrooms that were mere shambles, and had never known friendliness by those around her because she was treated as an outsider at Bonn. Above all she was impressed by the way students at Toronto were going out of their way to be friendly to her.

Being one of the uninitiate, Joan found "halos" and "teas" rather strange. But she is so fond of lectures and problems that receptions do not generally interfere anyway.

VARSITY CO-ED MISSING 4 DAYS

Twelve Shows To Go on Air In Fall Term

The radio committee of the S.A.C. will be "new from the ground up" this year, according to Peter Dobell, IV Modern History, director of programs. "Even the name of last year's program, Entertainment 1-A, has gone," he said.

"The CBC is co-operating with us in every possible way," he went on. "They have appointed Ross McLean to act in a liaison capacity with the committee and he will be responsible for final production."

Morley Callaghan's recently-published "The Varsity Story" will provide material for a series of four broadcasts. In addition, there will be two other series of the same length. All the broadcasts will be transcribed and reproduced between November 11 and Christmas.

Alternate Programs

The three series will be intermingled so that no block of four programs will run consecutively. One series will consist of group discussions conducted under the chairmanship of the CBC talks department. The third series will consist of miscellaneous programs including a student-written musical comedy and a drama on a script chosen in competition and paid for by the CBC at their regular rate. Content of the two remaining programs will be announced shortly.

Recruiting is now going on for students to fill posts in the revamped University radio workshop. Elsewhere in this issue appears an advertisement calling for applications for the positions of production director and publicity director on the program subcommittee.

Experience Needed

The student production director will be responsible for all casting, direction and production except when the show goes on the air, at which time McLean will take over. Requirements for the job include experience in all these fields and ability to direct the activities of several junior producers.

The publicity director will be expected to have had some newspaper experience since he will be required to deal with the downtown newspapers as well as The Varsity.

Applications for either of these posts should be handed in to the S.A.C. office, Hart House, or to the women's S.A.C. office in room 62 of the U. C. basement before noon Thursday.

UC Soph Frosh Dinner To Be Held Oct. 6

The annual University College Soph-Frosh Banquet will be held on Oct. 6 in the Royal York Concert Hall at 7 p.m.

The banquet and the dance which follows is one of the biggest, most enjoyable affairs of the College year. It has become a tradition, as has the motto whihc will be introduced to the new students at the affair, "come single, go home double."

Music will be provided by Art Bell, an ex-U.C. Lit. man, and his new band Since the U.C. Lit. and W.U.A are subsidizing the affair, the number of tickets sold have to be limited. The tickets are on sale in the U.C. Rotunda now, and it's first come, first served.

Such distinguished patrons as Principal Taylor and Miss Ferguson, Dean of Women, will be present.

Missing

June Baker, second year medical student has been missing since Thursday when she failed to attend an afternoon lab. The missing girl is known to have been carrying $90 in her purse at the time of her disappearance. Despite innumerable leads by helpful citizens from points as widely scattered as Lockport, N. Y., and Vancouver, B. C., the police are completely baffled.

Industrial Design Course Formed by Nieboer at OCA

"The training of industrial designers in Canada for Canadian industry is of great importance and far seeing on the part of those who conceived the idea to inaugurate this course," said Mr. H. A. Nieboer. He was speaking of the new course in Industrial Design he is currently organizing at the Ontario College of Art.

One of Britain's leading industrial designers, Mr. Nieboer is an Associate Member of The Institution of Mechanical Engineers of Great Britain, a member of the Society of Industrial Artists, and a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts. A graduate of the University of Dordrecht in the Netherlands, he was before the war consulting engineer in the Far East for the St. Regis Paper Co. in the United States. During the war he worked for Coastal Defence and for the British Admiralty in South America. In 1944 he lectured for the British Ministry of Information on the general topics "The Far East" and "Freedom". At the end of the war, Mr. Nieboer set up his own business in London, England.

In 1946, he was commissioned by the British Government to investigate the position of industrial design, the value attached to it, and the advantages from a commercial point of view to the manufacturer in the British, French and American zones of Germany.

Among the many products that Mr. Nieboer has designed are radio cabinets, toys, furniture, modern plate racks for prefabricated houses, hearing aid equipment, and institutional cooking equipment.

Mr. Nieboer came to Canada last spring to visit the International Trade Fair being held in Toronto. He was particularly interested in the position of industrial design in Canada and the United States and in making contacts and contracts with Canadian manufacturers. It was as a result of this trip that he received his appointment to the staff of the Ontario College of Art.

His job at OCA will be to start and integrate a four year course in Industrial Design. "Canada with her expanding industrial economy, requires such a course to train industrial designers if she does not want to rely permanently on the United States for such services," said Mr. Nieboer.

He went on to say that there was one point he wanted to stress. "In Canada one should realize that good industrial design is good business. If approached from this standpoint, the remuneration of the designer will be on a professional basis which will benefit all. In industrial design it is often not realized that a constant and healthy co-operation must exist between the designer and the manufacturer to solve this complex problem. It is with this view in mind that I approach the subject."

City Police, Student Body Hunt In Vain

By DAVID BUTTERS and LOIS MARTIN

Thursday afternoon, June Baker, a University of Toronto Co-ed, in second year Medicine, left the campus to join an unknown girl for lunch at Little Denmark, and no definite trace of her has since been found.

Police across Canada and the northern part of the United States, together with friends and undergraduates have joined in the four-day hunt, but the disappearance of the 21-year-old co-ed is still a complete mystery.

Seen That Night

Reporters of The Varsity learned Friday that Miss Baker had lunch with an unknown woman Thursday at 1.30 in a restaurant near the campus. Miss Vera Gibbons, 137 Shuter St., Toronto, and Miss Verna Hoag, 112 Maitland St., Toronto, both waitresses in Little Denmark, said they had not only seen the girl having lunch in the restaurant, but also had seen her in the Plantation Room of the Colonial Restaurant between 12.30 and 1 a.m., Friday morning. This report has been substantiated by the service bartender and two waiters at the Colonial. When Miss Baker was seen in the Colonial Restaurant she was accompanied by a gentleman.

Miss Hoag stated she had gone to the wrestling match with other employees from Little Denmark on Thursday evening. Following the match the girls went to the Colonial to have lunch and it was there they saw Miss Baker for the second time that day.

Mr. P. L. Baker, 33 Burnside Drive, father of the missing girl, estimated she was carrying almost ninety dollars with her when she disappeared. She had received this money from her parents for the purpose of paying fees to the treasurer of the Alpha Phi fraternity and the purchasing of medical text books. Joan Crysdale, III U.C., treasurer of the fraternity, said the money had not been given to her.

Carried Lunch

June Baker carried with her a lunch prepared by her mother; this she presumably ate, as she sometimes did, at some time during the morning's work. When a friend, Murray Day, also in second year Medicine, saw her at 1.05 p.m., just after their lecture had been dismissed, she told him that she had an appointment for luncheon with a girl at Little Denmark on Bay Street, but that she would cancel the date if Day wished to go for a walk with her. He, however, told her to go ahead with her previous plans. "She did," he said, "and off she went, and I have not seen her since."

Day said Friday evening at the Baker residence that he and Christine Pegg, June's lab partner, were not seriously alarmed until they discovered, late in the afternoon, that the other had no knowledge of her whereabouts. "The lecture at 2 o'clock was important," said Day, "and so was the lab clinic scheduled for 3 p.m. at Banting Institute." It has been established that June had lunched in the Little Denmark with a woman who has been described as slightly taller than the missing co-ed, who is 5'6". The woman was about thirty

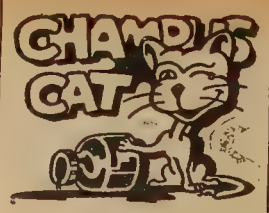
For The Experts

Two recent reports by experts seem worthy of consideration by the local experts—both those on the faculty, whose claim to expertness has been sanctified by a string of letters added to their names, and the undergraduate, or would-be experts, who are legion.

The first, which came some weeks ago from a world congress of scientists, was to the effect that population was increasing so rapidly that there would not be enough food to go around in another fifty years or so—unless, of course, we are mercifully spared through the intervention of an atomic war which would rid us of our surplus population.

The second report was from the United States Secretary of Agriculture, and it came only last Thursday. He said that the United States might not even be able to feed its own people by 1975, if present population trends and wastage of soil and forests continue.



Now, for our local experts. The Socialists have been preaching for years that there is enough for everybody, and have based a whole political theory on it. From these reports, it is apparent that there isn't going to be enough for everybody. The experts at the world congress say that the science-fiction dream of capsule foods just isn't practical.

Is socialism then to become a policy whose net result will be to "share the misery" rather than to "share the wealth"? It appears that the local Marxists will at least have to consider the question.

The exponents of capitalism cannot sit back and rub their hands with glee, either. Capitalism only prospers—really prospers, that is—in an expanding market. And when population reaches the saturation point, it is bound to level off simply because the weakest under a capitalist economy would probably starve. A man starting a new business could only get customers at the expense of a business already established. The market, like the population, would level off. And competitive buying would make today's inflation look like penny-ante stuff.

Canada's Dr. Brock Chisholm, always ready with a quotable—and provocative—answer to most questions, says that the answer is birth control—now. The Varsity, which ran an editorial on birth control two years ago, and dodged stones for months, hesitates to go through it all again. But it is obvious that there must be some solution to the problem.

So far, Dr. Brock Chisholm has offered the only one that would resolve the difficulty but neglected to point out a good way of convincing people that birth control is desirable, let alone necessary. In the meantime, the local experts are no doubt already busy composing their own forthright programs for a world otherwise doomed.

Fresh

I'm thrilled. The other day I was accosted by my first freshman this year. He wanted the Biology building.

Obsequiousness gives me a wonderful lift. Address me in a timorous, quavering voice, and I will beam and respond in my most poised, cavalier manner. It does me good. For a moment my back straightens with a new confidence. I lose my doubts, grave doubts, over the significance of life. I get excited.

So excited that I forget where we left the Biology building last year . . . if I ever knew.

But the innocent awe of the freshmen must be respected. His hopefulness must not be repressed by adverse fortune, surly strokes of fate. I mean, he must not learn that I don't know the whereabouts of the Biology building.

I smile benignly, not too patronizingly. "The Biology building?" I repeat smoothly.

"Well, yes," he murmurs deferentially. This is all very fine. I like deference almost as much as obsequiousness.

I make conversation, very polished and ingratiating. After all, it's good to get to know new people. Even freshmen may grow up to be important people and it won't hurt if one of them knows me. "You have a lecture there?" I stall.

"Yes. Biology." His tone was apologetic. I guess he hoped I didn't mind.

I saw things were coming to an issue. I smiled again—that's always helpful.

A look of mild doubt came into his eyes. There may be limits to even a freshman's trust in the senior student.

"Well, now, the Biology building," I begin with a sinking of the heart. Out of the corner of my eye I see a group of two freshmen bearing down on us. Of course, it was their eager sensitivity that marked them as freshmen. They look at me. I foresee a probable bit of embarrassment looming. I begin to wish that I had graduated last year.

Swinging slightly around, I beamed my welcome-to-college-and-what-can-I-do-for-you smile. "Looking for some . . . ?"

They cut me short. "Fred! Geez. We'll be late. We got to hurry." This sort of conscientiousness lasts only a few days, I remember.

"You know where it is?" asks my young friend of the moment before.

"Yeah. Yeah. Come on."

He scampers off with them. He doesn't even thank me. The other two hadn't so much as looked at me again. Oh well. The freshman is a hasty, unthinking creature. Why otherwise do so many of them go into Pass Arts?

A sudden thought occurred. "Hey. Where is the Biology building?" I called after the scampering trio.

I regretted the impulse as soon as I had produced the query. What would they think?

But they didn't ever hear. They were already halfway across the front campus.

I pieced together my composure and went somewhere to study a map of our university. Among other things, I made an effort to locate the building of Biology. I must prepare for next year.

Students Demand Stronger Policy At PC Convention

Ottawa, Sept. 29—Premier Drew and the whole Progressive Conservative Party were censured by half a dozen youths from the universities of Canada

Allan F. Lawrence, 22-year-old navy veteran and University of Toronto Arts student, summarized the complaints of junior party members and voiced his hope that the present national convention would remedy matters. He stated that many young Progressive Conservatives were irritated by a lack of definite policy in the party. For it to gain the support of the common man, he said that a well-defined policy regarding oleomargarine, social security, taxation, and housing was imperative.

"Let's not beat around the bush," Mr. Lawrence argued. "What we have produced in the past as party policy has been so ambiguout, so vague, so unspecific, that anyone could take it to mean almost anything."

Jim Robins, another navy veteran, of Oro Township, Ont., a Queen's University student, suggested that to handle the present dispute over Dominion - provincial revenue and responsibility a special federal cabinet minister be appointed, with assistance from an advisory council of 10 citizens from each of the provinces

A. William Cox of Queen's Co., N.B., an army vetern enrolled at Dalhousie University, criticized the proposal that Communism be outlawed. As a substitute called for a more vigorous police check of their activities, a strict enforcement of anti-sedition laws, and the removal from government service not only of known Communists but also of "persons associated with them in such a way as to raise legitimate doubts as to their reliability."

Leadership candidates Drew, Diefenbaker, and Fleming congratulated the students on their criticisms

Liberal Club Hopes To Present Cabinet Members at Meetings

The Liberal Association hopes this year to have four cabinet ministers as guest speakers, it was announced Friday.

The guest speakers are expected to be the Hon. Milton F. Gregg, Minister of Veterans Affairs, the Hon. Paul Martin, Minister of National Health, and the Hon. Farquhar Oliver. Negotiations are under way with the Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent, Acting Prime Minister, but as yet this itinerary has not been planned.

The first meeting of the year will be held tentatively on Tuesday, October 14. Mr. David Croll, Liberal member for Toronto-Spadina will speak about labor problems. Plans for this year include participation in the Mock Parliament, discussion meetings, and the sending of representatives to the annual meeting of the Ontario Liberal Association. The President this year is David C. H. Stanley, IV Trinity.

Dr. McKenzie Opens NRC Lab U of Sask.

The work will be mostly concerned with chemical and biological subjects and their engineering applications. The main projects under consideration are mycology, vegetable oils and seed oils, and organic residues.

Soph. Advice To Freshies On ABC's of Campus Life

By FRANCES KEATON
University of Michigan

If you're a wise freshman who wants to stay four years, you'll be quick to discover that it doesn't take a wand and a book of necromancy to get you through college, but good hard work—plus. From the time you rip open that acceptance letter to the time they hand you your B.A., you are on your own. This is not so bad as it sounds, if you learn some fundamentals.

Look Around

First of all, leave mystery to the movies. If you do not understand something, do not be afraid to ask. Take a good look around, open doors, peer into rooms, and when it says freshman tea at four, go drink tea. In fact go to everything. Nobody has to tell you to be nice or not to be a snob. An open mind is indispensable the first week of college, but be sure it isn't open at both ends, for a week later it is much nicer to remember which name goes with which face and what building goes with what course.

In choosing your courses, don't wait until you are standing in front of your counselor's office. By this time your catalogue should be one of your best friends. Ask your big sister or one of the old girls in the house, which prof is tops for the course you want to take. Get to know your academic advisor, ask him questions and tell him your problems. Three to one he will not tell you to look it up in the library. And he means it when he says that getting those essentials out of the way the first two years gives you more time to breathe and to take what you want the last two years.

Extra Curriculars

After making sure that your courses are straight and all your pencils are sharpened, it's time to decide where else you want to make your mark. If in High School you make a good Portia, look up the dramatic club; if you are the type who is always writing letters to the Editor, volunteer your time to chase deadlines for the campus Daily. Or maybe you would rather bat birdies with the badminton club. Whatever you decide don't try pulling too much. Enjoy your outside activities for their own sake as well as for the number of pictures they will rate in the yearbook. And remember that many employers count extra-curric high up in judging a person who wants a job, so be enthusiastic about what what you do. Be in something; don't be a tourist. Watch the college Daily or read the handbook someone will give you, for the time and place of your particular activity's call to order.

Study

Need anyone say study? Some people like to think that they were born knowing that the female drosophila has two X chromosomes and, come the end of the semester, will insist that the low grade must have been a misprint. Study. Take it in small but concentrated doses. Do not gulp all at once.

As soon as possible, try to develop some kind of system in which to fit all the things that share your day. With studies, laundry, outside activities and dates bumping into one another, something is sure to get knocked out of the picture—probably you.

Watch your health even if it is not showing. If eating a candy bar makes your teeth talk back, stand in line at the Health Service. And try not to be the last one to turn out the light every night.

Dating

If yours is a co-ed college, do not wait for the boys to discover you. A week of sitting by a phone that always rings for someone down the hall ought to convince you that something should be done. Now mixers may be obnoxious to the girl who is used to causing her own stir, but you do meet people, and a start is all you need. If yours is a girl school, do not be bashful in accepting group invitations to visit nearby male colleges. And the blind date is now an accepted custom. A friend of a friend can often be quite interesting. Another hint—common sense should tell you that if you are an honor student, play it down on dates or you will limit your field. Lots of really intelligent boys have a way of getting B's to your A's because they spend too much time on the baseball diamond. On the other hand, this does not mean that you should not let your thoughts show once in a while during your evening together.

Nobody can tell you all the

U of T Homecoming Plans To Be Integrated By The Blue and White Society

Plans, for the gala "Home Coming and Open House Week-End" to be held November 12, 13, and 14 at the University of Toronto, received the "green light" from the SAC and university officials last week. Joe Potts, Chairman of the Blue and White Society announced Saturday.

The scheme, which has never before been carried out in the university, embraces a three day program filled with everything from trips through the university buildings, faculty receptions and dances, a football game between Varsity and Western to an Open House day for the members of the faculties of both graduates and undergraduates.

The rough plan, which was initiated last year and on which work has been carried out all summer, received the full approval of the SAC at the meeting held last Thursday.

"It has a fourfold purpose," Potts stated: "First, to promote an All-Varsity spirit by extending an invitation to the Alumni to visit the university; second, to strengthen the existing bonds between the staff, the Alumni, the administration and the undergraduates of the university; third, to assist the various Alumni organizations to renew old acquaintances and to maintain an active interest among their members; lastly, to provide special facilities and functions at a suitable time and within a flexible frame work with a view to encouraging the various Alumni organizations to co-ordinate as far as possible, their annual meetings for the benefit of all."

Program Started Last Year

Last year, when the program was first conceived, the Blue and White Society was faced with two alternatives, Potts said. If the cost proved to be too prohibitive and the undertaking too great for such a short period of preparation, the plan would have to be scrapped for some future date. Or, he said, they could proceed in a small way this year and thus sow the seed for future years. It was with this latter fact in mind, that the Committee decided to proceed with the present flexible program.

The plan in its present organizational set-up embraces eight committees, namely: parade, catering in charge of the luncheon, athletic and band in charge of tickets, bands and cheerleaders, liaison, social, regalia, service and open house. At the same time, liaison work is being carried on with the SAC, the various Alumni associations and the university administrative offices.

The program has been arranged in its flexible state in order to co-ordinate and supplement those which are being worked out by the various constituent organizations of the Alumni and the separate colleges and faculties.

Plan to Integrate Activities

"The idea is not to override the activities of the various college organizations," Potts stated. "But to absorb their plans into the master plan. In fact, the success of the weekend will depend to a large extent on the individual effort put forth by these organizations," he said.

Potts urged all presidents of student's undergraduate associations, or someone with power to act, to attend a meeting to be held in West Hall, University College, Tuesday, October 5 at 5.00 o'clock. "We want to achieve every objective we are undertaking this year," he said

U of T Student Tours Norwegian Forests

"With their system of management, Scandinavian forestry methods are more advanced than ours, but in the mechanical field they fall short of Canadian achievements," said George Wilkes. He made a trip through Europe and the Scandinavian countries during his summer vacation.

George is a fourth year forestry student and on this tour he observed the various forestry practices in the Scandinavian countries and their methods of tree breeding and research in the forestry field. He was able to talk with students, faculty staff and business men regarding post-graduate work in Norway and Sweden and found that they were extremely interested in exchanging studies with Canada and the United States. George examined student unions and the possibilities of international affiliation, in addition to student union buildings, which in view of the fact that such a building is soon to be commenced in Toronto, had special interest.

ENROLMENT DROPS BY 900

University of Saskatchewan, Oct. 4—(C.U.P.)—Enrollment at the University of Saskatchewan is calculated to be about 900 students less than last year. Last year registration figures were 4,014, whereas this year's consists of 3,190. The total veteran registration is decreased from last year's figure of 2,276 with a possible registration this year of 1,600 veterans.

Students Human—Lose Things Too

The pressure of University life has finally produced a rather serious form of mass amnesia on our campus. Plenty of evidence can be found to support this statement by going through the lost and found department in Simcoe Hall.

Macy's bargain basement pales into insignificance beside this overflowing warehouse stored with a year's supply of articles lost by absent-minded students in their campus wanderings.

One can perhaps understand the carefree attitude of a scholar who has merely lost a Parker 51 pen, but what about the people who have lost overcoats, diamond rings, expensive textbooks and yet are still able to continue the even tenor of their life. Perhaps the case of "Clueless Clem" may be of assistance to these bewildered students.

Suppose that Clem has just lost his treasured copy of "Thesaurus novus Anecdorum" in one of the university buildings. Naturally Clem is very much upset about his bereavement but finally he is reassured, "Keep cool Clem, the caretaker of the building will probably have your precious volume since he is instructed to keep such articles for one week." Alright, alright, so it wasn't at the building . . . . no need to bet into a tizzy. Just trot over to the lost and found in Simcoe Hall where all the lost goods are channelled into a central storage room. Make sure to get there between 1 and 2 p.m though because those are the business hours.

Well, say, just look at Clem. His noble brow is shining with scholarly joy as he pours through his "Thesaurus"(Clem just likes to look at the pictures.) Life has again taken on meaning for our hero.

Remember, when the goods are missing, take a tip from Clem and head for Simcoe Hall. If he can do it, why can't you?

LSU Vet Enrollment Decreased by 800

LSU, Baton Rouse, La., Oct. 4, 1948 -- (Exchange)--Veteran registration drops at the Louisiana State University. The Veteran registration total has reached a total of 4,210. These figures indicate a drop of 800 veterans from the peak veteran enrollment of 5,100.

Vic Dramatists To Present Famous Play

Vic's drama club is lining up another full season of activity. This year's main production will be a three night showing of the Hart and Kaufman production "The Man Who Came to Dinner," on November 15, 16, 17. There will be one play in Alumni Hall at Victoria College before Christmas and three one-act plays in Hart House sometime after school re-convenes The Vic club will also participate in the drama festival in February.

All new members of the club were officially welcomed by college president, Dr. Brown in the club's first meeting in Wymilwood Thursday night. Dr. Brown said that drama is one of the oldest forms of art and would be of benefit to those interested in public speaking

Professor Hare, honorary president, and president Jim Johnson also extended a welcome to the members. The meeting was concluded with a pantomime act and a short skit, staged by several of last year's crew.

Canadian Students Attend Conference

WARREN GOLDRING

(Warren Goldring was one of the six Varsity delegates to the International Summer Seminar in Germany during the past summer. A fourth year student of Political Science and Economics, Warren is this year chairman of the International Student Service committee on the Toronto campus. This is the first in a series of articles by different members of the Seminar.)

In 19 universities across Canada last May special committees consisting of faculty members, student government leaders and undergraduates, chose 48 students to attend the I. S. S. International summer seminar. The qualifications were a high academic record, an all-round participation in student activities, a special interest in international affairs, and preference was given to those who upon completion of their graduate year would be going into public service or the teaching profession.

At Toronto each candidate was interviewed personally by such a committee and six were chosen. Each university selected a number of representatives to the Seminar in the proportion of their student population to that of the whole Dominion. That meant there were 14 French Canadian representatives, approximately 1/3 of the whole group. The uniqueness of this occurrence — 48 students gathering from all parts of the Dominion can best be understood when the discussion happened to centre on Canada. Soon Europe and the weighty world problems were forgotten, and terms such as 'freight rates' and 'provincial rights' were the objects of lively discussion.

The methods of selection were highly important to an undertaking such as this. For instance it was necessary that the Seminar be on a scholarly basis, otherwise only a limited number of those students who could afford to pay their own way would attend. Although sponsored by I. S. S., the Seminar was entirely financed without the use of funds collected by I. S. S. from the students. Since education is a provincial matter, each of the eight provinces (P.E.I. has no university) were approached, and each government contributed the funds necessary to send the students from that province to Europe and back.

At Schloss Ploen, the location of the Seminar in north-east Germany, the Canadians were surprised to find a huge castle situated on a promontory overlooking a lake. Upon entering the castle they found it adequately furnished and a staff of over fifty. This part of the undertaking was arranged by C. C. G.—Control Commission for Germany, British Element. Their attitude was this: The western allies are spending huge sums of money on material reconstruction. While Germany definitely needs this, she also needs new beliefs for which a people with shattered and crushed faiths can grasp. The Canadians with a strong sense of the value of representative and responsible government, freedom of speech, and the fundamental importance of the individual, would help in this direction.

While it was recognized that this intellectual reconstruction was of great importance, UNESCO also looked on the project as one way of helping alleviate the difficulties harrassing the German and European students. Shortages of food, of books, of paper, and of writing instruments place almost insurmountable obstacles in the student's pursuit of knowledge. So the Canadian Council for Reconstruction through UNESCO contributed funds earmarked solely for the use of European students. So the food was much better than average German rations, and there was a canteen at which each European student had a credit of 13.00. This canteen had many articles which Germans had hardly ever seen before—such as shampoo—besides adequate supplies of paper, pencils, soap, and other hard-to-get items. To see the expression of amazement on their faces as they saw the canteen display, or as they received their weekly ration of 80 cigarettes and 4 chocolate bars, gave many of the Canadians a strange sensation.

These actors combined to provide an ideal environment for study. There was a library of 3000 books, all of which had been brought from Canada. The majority of these were in English but French-Canadian works were represented too. All the lectures were conducted in English as the ability to speak English was one of the qualifications required of European students. These lectures, —2 each morning—were directed towards the one theme — modern trends of thought. Professors from Canada, England and Germany gave lectures on the modern trends in a wide range of subjects from philosophy to the physical sciences. And in the afternoon the students were given the opportunity of attending seminars either in some subjects of which they knew little and wished to know more, or in a discussion group in more advanced parts of their special studies. Points of view were as varied as the 16 different national backgrounds could make them. Students had come from parts of Western Europe.

Schloss Ploen was like an ivory castle—both literally and figuratively. It not only looked like one, but it provided the ideal atmosphere for study and free discussion. This ivory tower was the place where a great ideal was demonstrated—the principle of intellectual freedom at the university level. This principle was part of the academic life at the Seminar and its effects were great on all those present. The Germans were amazed, and even the Canadians felt strengthened in their desire to make this ideal a part of their own life and university.

Letters to Editor

The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

In a recent article regarding Dr. Long's experiences in Germany, it is noted that, "connected with German fatalism is their apathy about any kind of political life. They fear that any expression on their part will make them marked men in any future regime." Dr. Long also found the Germans "incapable of facing a situation as it really is."

We in Canada are guilty of a similar lack of insight. Beyond the shadow of a doubt, political sympathies are as dangerous here as in modern Germany. A recent active member of the Victoria College C.C.F. club obtained an excellent position with a Toronto firm. When the president discovered that his new employeee had been guilty of the heinous crime of being pro-C.C.F. to the extent that he had belonged to the Victoria College club, the new employee was hailed into the plush presidential office, informed of his sin, roundly rated for his boldness and fired.

Because the young man was socialist minded he lost his position. This is not an isolated example (government positions are worst) but it serves to illustrate the reasons for that political disease known as "political lassitude." One hears a great deal about freedom these days. Does the right to belong to any legal political party not constitute freedom? We are living in a dream world worse than that in which Dr Long found the German students if we are not aware of similar conditions here in Toronto.

Lack of interest in a country's politics is generally considered to be a sign of deterioration. Everyone should be concerned about how his or her country is governed. A good citizen should do all he can to promote such an interest. Employment according to politics cannot be considered helpful.

Yours very truly,
Michael Roberts,
II Mod. Hist., Vic.

The Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

I almost cried when I read George MacFarlane's sports column in Tuesday's Varsity. He talks about the lackadaisical attitude of the senior students!!

Maybe someone should warn the freshmen to believe only one quarter of what they see in the Varsity's sport section. It seems every year about this time the Varsity always gives the Blues the Rugby championship because they have beaten some intermediate team by 20 points or so. It's just like the "kiss-of-death". So many of us would be very thankful if The Varsity sportswriters would stop their moronic write-ups of the Blues and just report what actually happens. We can always spend a nickel on the Globe and Mail if we want the experts' opinions.

Personally, I think this year will be different what with the absence of "prima-donnas" on the team and also of coaches who are only interested in the name players. And with Bob Masterson as coach I think we will be in for a new deal and even if the team loses, it shouldn't matter as long as the team is fighting and trying.

As for myself to disprove my lackadaisical attitude, I have a ten dollar bet on with my wife who is a Western fan from way back I hope I win but she has the ten dollars spent already. So you see what I am up against.

sincerely,
J. H. Woodrow,

Mossop, SPS Tops Golfers On Friday

School's Doug Mossop topped the Varsity Intramural golfers with a 78 last Friday at St. Andrew's over a wet course. The second day of the qualifying round saw the scores shoot up as a result of the rain and slow greens. The low score on Thursday was Will Givens' 72, par for the course.

Close behind Mossop was Bob Gems of St. Michael's College. Tied for third position were Home of Victoria and Harvey, another Vic man, who both came in with respectable 80's.

Hunter of Trinity, B. Mossop of Victoria, and Sheppard, Meds, all finished with 83's, to round out the first half dozen finishers.

Divers Attractions Slated for Medsmeet Tomorrow Afternoon

The Medical Athletic Association have revamped and expanded the annual Meds Track Meet to embrace an Athletic Day which includes football, interfaculty attractions and a track and field competition.

The big day is tomorrow afternoon in Varsity Stadium, with the kick-off of the football game between the Varsity Intermediates and the Senior Meds, winners of one group in last year's Interfaculty competition. This will be the first opportunity for local fans to see Toronto's entry in the Intermediate Intercollegiate loop in action. It will also be Meds' first trial of the season and should give some indication as to whether they are the threat to the Mulock Cup they appear to be on paper.

Following the game there will be a football throwing competition between representatives from each of the Interfaculty football squads. These competitors will appear in their respective college and faculty uniforms.

Kent Armstrong, who last year amassed the most points to take the individual honours in the track and field will be back to defend his title against such fleetfooted medicos as Jim Smith, all-round backfielder of Senior Meds football squad, and Jim Colquhoun. There is also the possibility of an upset from among the ranks of the Pre-med I year.

The afternoon will be concluded with a tug-of-war match between the Pachyderms of Pre-meds and the Medical Mammoths.

Scores

Eric McMillan, paying his second year at end for the Senior Blues, was on the scoring end of one of the six touchdown passes in Saturday's game against Assumption. Eric thus adds offensive possibilities to his sterling defensive play and makes a fine wingmate for Jack Grey.

Art Anderson Is Closing In On 3rd Straight Singles Title

By BOB REID

Although interrupted frequently by showers, several matches were decided in the Interfaculty singles tourney before a heavy downpour ended play on Friday afternoon. Top seeded Art Anderson advanced easily with a 6-1, 6-0 win over Ferguson of S.P.S. on Friday morning.

The weather is held responsible for the number of defaults so far in the tournament. Mac McCutcheon issued a warning to all players to check with the Intramural office when in doubt about starting times or condition of the courts. "The Toronto Tennis Club's all-weather courts can absorb a considerable amount of rain and remain playable," he stated.

Semi-final rounds in all flights were completed on Saturday morning under cold threatening skies, with few upsets recorded. Second seeded Len Turner P.H.E. scored a 6-1, 6-1, victory over Gombita of U. C. Turner displayed some fine ground-strokes, his backhand being particularly effective.

The opening round of the doubles tournament starts today with good weather predicted for the next few days.

St. Mike's Lose 20-11 To Dundas

Dundas, Oct. 2—(Staff) — St. Michael's interfaculty football team travelled some fifty miles on Saturday afternoon to be given the atomic treatment by Dundas Bombers in an exhibition game played before a small crowd in extremely cool weather.

The college boys, who finished on the bad end of a 20-11 score, were playing their first game of the year and gave ample evidence of the fact with frequent lapses in the blocking, tackling and ball-handling departments.

The lead was exchanged freely until the fourth quarter when Dundas used a driving ground-attack and an intercepted pass to score two touchdowns and ensure the victory. The double blue showed to best advantage in the first and fourth quarters when they moved the length of the field with a diversified attack to score two touchdowns.

Soccer Blues Divide, Play, Please Coach

The first real test for the new edition of Varsity's Soccer teams occurred on the front campus Saturday afternoon. Coach Barton was well pleased with the turnout and with the excellent calibre of play exhibited by all aspirants to Intercollegiate Soccer.

By pitting the senior forward line of Antoni, Barber, Barton, Colvin, and Conyers, with the intermediate defense of Horney, Cossato, W. Mercer, Quenell, Anderson, Kennedy, against the intermediate forwards Montemurro, Beckwith, Williams, Morgenstern, and Delfosse, with the senior defense of Thompson, Critchley, Evans, Scott, Peters, and Small, a very hotly, evenly contested game resulted. The senior forwards line counted thrice, twice with Jimmy Colvin and once with Jim Barber doing the honors.

The intermediates were sparked by "Monty" Montemurro who scored their only tally. Both forward lines missed numerous chances around the goal, but what they lacked in finesse, they made up in determination and their will to win.

The conditioning system being executed by Coach Barton, in the training schedule showed results by the excellent condition of all players. Best on the defense for the seniors were Ted Evans and Bill Peters. Ted came from last year's Ajax team and Bill came up from the intermediates after captaining the Orono soccer team last summer.

"All players are to be commended for their regular attendance at practice", says the Coach, "and if they perserve in their co-operation, Varsity can hold high hopes for its 25th Blackwood Trophy, and for two teams of Intercollegiate calibre."

Afterthoughts

Have A 'Mr Bong' Says He Tis Toogood Meeting Boot

By WALT MacKENZIE

'Tis nice to see the Blues fall into winning habits before their opening tussle with the Men of Metras come Saturday next. With a little less holding and a little tighter blocking, our boys in blue would have been terrific. As it was, we enjoyed the exhibition of passing by Cummings, West, and Waldon and the illusive running of Ted Toogood. Ed Huycke's bull-like plunging was about as spectacular as anything shown by either team.

Bob Masterson and crew are doing a mighty fine job in the deception. On the second touchdown play, a certain Varsity photographer, standing deep in the Assumption backfield was hoodwinked into a shot of an empty-handed "ball carrier" crossing the line and being hit by two defenders who were equally taken in on the play.

We did not think much of the rather rousing razzberry which greeted Toronto's successful field goal instead of trying for the major count. If you will remember, a single point in London last fall would have upset the Mustangs. Perhaps a field-goal will do the trick this year.

It looks as though Bruce Cummings' good right shoe needed a little polishing. He was probably saving those home run punts for London where the fences are a little closer to the goal line.

Toronto, we find, has its own "Mr. Bong," as all who heard the reports of those two resounding boots in the head that Ted Toogood absorbed during the course of the battle can testify. Ted hasn't quite the stature of our Dogpatch hero, but if does not have a headache until along the end of the Michaelmas term, he certainly has no challenger to the "Bong" title.

Norm West looked right at home on the business end of some very nice passing.

The Blue and White band promises to do its part in boosting the Blues this year. Their renditions of solid college music such as the Engineers' Song, gives the friendly collegiate atmosphere that puts college activities in a class by themselves. That Western routine on Saturday was a rehearsal for next week's trip to the west.

We wonder just how many years Freddie Thomas has been around Assumption. That matters little for it is a treat to watch the big fellow turn in such effortless and spectacular exhibitions consistently, whether it is football or basketball.

While on the subject of Assumption, it brings to mind the question as to who forgot to set the alarm clock in the Varsity line on that first Purple and White touchdown.

In a land which has become almost completely impregnated with the south-of-the-border type of play, it was interesting to watch a team which habitually plays over there.

Tiny John Evans finally beat the injury jinx long enough to get into the regular Blues line-up after sitting out over a full season.

Next week, Beat Western—We'll beat Western.

on the sideline

By JUNE BELL and CONNIE EASTCOTT

In spite of the cold, damp weather of Saturday, twenty-two enthusiastic U.C. and St. Hilda's women met at Trinity field at twelve o'clock to play the first women's Lacrosse game ever held on this campus. In one-ten-minute period, U.C. downed their opponents 2-1.

In the future, the women are planning to have two ten-minute periods constitute a game; however, it was decided to stop at the half-way mark on Saturday to use the time to teach some of the team members how to play. A few of the players showed considerable skill, but most of them had never played before and one attacker, after receiving the ball, called out desperately, "Which direction am I supposed to be going?"

There was no referee—the captains maintained one was not necessary as it was a non-contact (?) game. The play began with a 'Ready Go' from one of the team members.

Kit Tyrell and Marilyn Craig of U.C. and Donna Long, Marg Leitch and Pauline Smith of St. Hilda's were the main driving force behind the organization of the teams. As yet, the women have not made up a schedule as they are hoping other teams can be organized. Only twelve players are needed to make up a team, so let's go gals!

Speaking Of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

If Assumption College hopes to enter the intercollegiate senior football league on the basis of the showing Saturday afternoon, I'm afraid it's doomed for disappointment. It was very evident that the Purple and White squad was playing out of its class.

However, there's one Windsorite that can play on my football team any time he wants. That's Freddy Thomas, big negro halfback who carried practically all the Assumption load. Thomas is renowned for his basketball prowess, but until yesterday, he had been almost unknown in football circles.

On a basketball floor, he's recognized as one of the top operators in the country. Saturday he proved his versatility with as great an all-round performance as has been seen at Varsity Stadium in some time.

Thomas is built along the lines of Bob McFarlane, perhaps a little heavier—and he's just about as fast. The fact that nobody else in the Assumption backfield was doing very much, gave him a chance to really shine. He had the Blues clawing at his back every time he carried the ball.

He kicked well all afternoon, and his kick-offs (of which he had several) were especially outstanding. He didn't pass often, but threw one that would have brought a gasp from Joe Krol. It was on the last play of the first half, that Thomas faded back and launched a long high one cross-field that travelled a total of fifty-some yards downfield.

On the defense he made a large share of the secondary tackles. The only one he missed all afternoon, was in the third quarter, when Teddy Toogood left him eating the dirt.

ART MUSIC DRAMA

Agnes Butcher

For her Eaton Auditorium piano ital last Saturday night, Agnes tcher selected a most taxing and et interesting programme. The ncipal works were the Brahms minor Sonata," the Chopin cherzo in B minor," and a group short spasmodic piano witticisms Bela Bartok, with a Bach-Liszt relude and Fugue" for a curtain iser and Balakirew's "Islamay ntasia" to give a properly pia- stic finale.

Miss Butcher has been closely as- ciated with Bela Bartok and ere is a special interest in her rformance of his work for this ason. The selections chosen for r Bartok group belong to the ass of clever epigram (the "Petite uite," "Evening in Szekely," and Mikrokosmos" rather than of stained expression. The per- rmance was handled with light recision in the fingers and a ngue-in-cheek, intelligent bright- ss both of which were highly ap- ropriate.

The programme as a whole pre- nted a highly frustrating experi- nce. The frustration lay in the ternation of patches of exquisite erformance with patches of mus- ally dead technical struggle. When she had technical control over a passage, that passage was played with crystalline clarity, good sense of phrase, and recognizable responsive artistry. But it was manifest that she had not technical control at all times. When she came to such a passage, she seemed to be able to think of nothing but the technical aspect of it; the light of artistic intelligence died out, replaced by dogged finger- work.

This inability to fake through a shaky place, preserving the musical line and hoping for the best (much the usual attitude), indicates to my mind that Agnes Butcher must be an uncompromising perfectionist. It is refreshing in these days of appalling musical carelessness to witness such a performance. Yet, for all the honest excellence bodied forth in last Saturday's presentation, it cannot, unfortunately, be called an artistically satisfactory evening.

It must be said, as it was of another young woman, that 'When she was good she was very, very good, and when she was bad she was horrid.'

—Douglas Valleau

Jean Young Appleby

Jean Young Appleby appeared in ecital at the Museum Theatre Sat- rday night and revealed a contral- o voice which possesses ample ange and volume and which has ossibilities of brilliance and of ramatic expression. Unfortunate- y, a general lack of freedom in oice production was made evident uring the evening by unsteadiness n the lower voice, hardness of one and deviations from pitch in he upper and, occasionally, in the niddle voice, and a tendency to nonotony of colour. On the other and, there were frequent indica- ions of a good dramatic sense, particularly in Gluck's "Divinites lu Styx" and in Diacks "All in the April Evening." The latter was al- o characterized by excellent phras- ng and effective tonal contracts.

Probably the most generally sat- sfactory groups were the Ger- man lieder of Franz, Schumann and Schubert and the two Italian songs by Gluck and Paisiello. The middle section of Schumann's "Wid- mung" was done with the requisite legato and breadth of phrasing to achieve a satisfying contrast to the preceding and succeeding passages with their more impassioned and urgent character. Schubert's "An die Musik" and "Lachen und Wei- nen" were presented with interest- ing diversity of mood but we notic- ed that here, and at other times, during the evening a commendable effort to emphasize the text some- times resulted in a loss of legato and of tone. Perhaps a closer at- tention to what is often called "singing on the line" would help to correct this tendency.

In the English group, Head's "Ships of Arcady" was well done and Woodman's "A Birthday" was given an imaginative and drama- tic treatment.

The French art song is not a genre into which any singer should venture without considerable ex- perience and a reliable technique. It demands perfect control, almost unlimited resources of tone colour, a sensitive feeling for the shaping of phrases and an ability to see the song as a perfectly integrated work of art. Mrs. Appleby's presenta- tion of Faure's "Apres Un Reve" fell considerably short of this standard.

We feel that this singer needs to avoid heavy singing for a time and to concentrate upon the develop- ment of a lighter attack of tone, more variety in colour and a more dependable legato.

The accompaniments of Muriel Collen were at all times highly satisfactory both technically and in virtuosity of style and mood. They revealed a pianist who real- izes that the art of the accom- panist entails much more than the supplying of background and sup- port for the singer.

years of age, with brown hair, short and recently permanent-waved, and wearing a black dress. From the statement of Verna Hoag, waitress at Little Denmark, police believe that the unknown woman and June Baker were not very well acquainted.

Leads Fail

Scores of leads received by police and the Baker family have been investigated with no results. A report that the missing girl was seen in Lockport, N.Y., has since been dismissed as false. Descriptions of June, who is five feet, six inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, has brown hair, and wears clear-rimmed glasses, have been forwarded to police and immigration officials in Canada and the United States.

At the time of her disappearance, June was wearing a bright green suede jacket, black full-skirted dress and black ballet shoes. She carried a note book containing medical literature and lecture notes and a small black wallet. It is believed that she was in the possession of $90.

Detectives at City Police Headquarters, College Street, say that everything possible has been done to locate the girl. "This is a most unusual case", said one official. "Irregularities at the University generally occur towards examination when students are worried about their work."

The failure of the older woman with whom June had lunch to come forward with an account of their conversation is viewed with concern by the investigators. The fact, however, that June left the restaurant before 2 o'clock, and a considerable time before the woman left eliminates the theory that the woman was the direct cause of a possible abduction.

The Baker family say their daughter was especially considerate of her parents. She was almost always a happy person, and she had no worries about academic work. "June had no possible reason for leaving her home," said Mr. Baker.

Over the week-end, the search has continued. Police have combed the Toronto islands, the location of the Baker summer home, and neighbors at Ward's Island have kept a close watch on the family's cottage. Murray Day and other classmates, including Christine Pegg and James Ferns, have conducted a search of the surrounding district by automobile. Mr. Baker has made and is making every effort to contact people who have, at one time or another, known his daughter, and it was, for a time believed that the unidentified woman with whom she lunched Thursday was a Queenston, Ontario, woman known only to the family as "Dorothy" with whom June had been friendly while the two were members of the Ontario Farm Service during the war. "Dorothy" has since been a resident of Toronto. She was not the woman who met June Baker on Thursday.

tricks of campus life. During your four year stay you will do a lot of reaching in and pulling out for yourself. But it is worth it. Where else do they offer Plato and J-Hop, bull sessions and writer's cramp, football and economics all on the same program? Maybe when you are old and gray and looking back over your college scrap book, it will seem as if somebody was holding a wand, but if you will look again, that somebody was you.

CREATE SUPERMEN?

Johannesburg, South Africa (CP) —H. C. Barnard, 27-year-od radio engineer, of Germiston, thinks human beings can be transformed into supermen. He has developed an apparatus intended to stimulate the brain with electric rays.

We find it rather paradoxical, in these troubled times, that talk about peace is inevitably tied in with the need for an increased armaments program. It would be very refreshing for a change to hear a statesman on the world scene step up to the rostrum, and just for once, mention peace and its attainment without an accompanying appeal to swell the ranks of the armed services. It seems obvious to us, anyway, that the ardently pursued Dove of Peace must have an almost impossible time to straighten out and fly right over a bristling array of new and shining ack-acks and field guns. Are you trigger-happy, son?

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The impertinence of first year arts men who seem to have a grudge against the school has finally moved me to speak in protest.

In previous years I have not replied to the remarks of these freshmen since they seemed to be well penned and had a certain number of vaguely humorous statements in them.

However, the situation has degraded into a mess of name-calling that would not look good in a political paper.

Let us settle it once and for all time. If the schoolhouse is so obnoxious to the artsmen, an invitation is extended to all to come and take it down.

In this manner the seeker of a liberal education can learn the art of demolition; if he can prove his ability to down the "office boys".

The Editor, The Varsity.

To All Students:

Could it POSSIBLY BE that a custom or at least a practice at the U. of T. has outlived its usefulness and is now utterly foolish and superfluous?

What about freshies cavorting uncomfortably about the campus (as described in Thursday's Varsity) in all odd sorts of attire and awkwardness?

Do the freshies gain any significant degree of self-confidence from this practice? Does it help to make them known? (Who can recognize them anyway?) Does it really entertain anyone? It seems to me and to many others . . . tres feble. In a word it seems an antiquated way of ridding the High School GRADS of their childish inhibitions (or sumpin'),; which in this modern, socially conscious, and enlightened day, no longer occur in the same immature forms (?) which were characteristic of days gone by.

May I suggest in their place a self-controlled and Torontoized version of the Paris "Bal des Quartres Arts" or other stimulating, interesting, fun provoking and casual social events. Perhaps they really would be more successful in satisfying the varied motives of the originators and participants. What about it . . . SAC . . . men, women, and freshies?

Bill Frise,
I School of Social Work.

The Editor, THE VARSITY

Dear Sir—

Perhaps when the learned discussions on the relative merits of Skule and Arts have subsided, you will be able to print these remarks on examinations. A topic of interest to Skuleman, Artsman and Professor alike; it can be viewed now with a perspective not possible later in the year.

Examinations should be designed primarily to measure the student's mastery of a section of knowledge. In this letter we shall question their reliability as measuring sticks. Examinations are used to ensure the student's attempting to master his courses of study. We question the advisability of their use as "hickory sticks".

Under our present system, the student acquires a large part of his learning from the reading of notes written while he should have been engaged in concentrated thought. In April he is expected to repeat the contents of his notes to his professor. His mark consequently depends to a large degree upon the professor's teaching ability and standards of excellence. While the mark can therefore have no absolute significance, it may be useful in determining the student's relative standing in his class. We contend that its usefulness here is greatly overestimated.

To assess the value of the examination, we shall classify into three groups the factors influencing the student's response to an exam paper. The first group depends on the student's mastery of the subject. His time devoted to careful study, his comprehension and retention of the subject material and his ability to think independently are illustrations. The second group contains constant factors not related to the student's work or knowledge in the subject of the exam. Examples are his memory for detail, his handwriting and neatness, his powers of expression and his ability to work rapidly under stress. The third group contains entirely irrelevant factors most of which are variable and unpredictable. The student's physical and nervous condition, his time available for cramming, and his ingenuity in "spotting" exam questions are typical examples. In this class we might place those unnatural handicaps imposed by the examiners. For example: Think of a student forced to write for several hours at a small desk with direct sunlight glaring down on glossy paper in a hot drill hall on a Saturday afternoon. Or think of a student who has drawn a complicated diagram and is compelled to keep referring to back pages in an awkward examination book when normally he would do the work on separate sheets of paper.

A properly designed examination system should be able to distinguish groups one and two in the work of any student. It should suppress the effects of group three. Failure to recognize these three groups of factors can lead to grave injustices. Consider a student, with average group one factors, who fails because of weakness in group two. Under our present system, he is required to repeat his studies in the "failed" subjects. By extreme exertion, he increases his group one factors and passes in spite of a low group two rating. He will probably fail again next year because of the uncorrected weakness in group two.

Our conclusion is inevitable. If we must have final exams, let us make sure that their results indicate standing in group one factors only. As group two factors can influence greatly the student's chances of eventual success, let there be separate tests—preferably made upon entrance to University—for the student's constant factors. Then let there be the same opportunities for him to improve group two factors as there are for the improvement of group one factors. Finally let us make sure that the variable group three factors play no part in the permanent records of the student's work.

In view of the tremendous importance placed upon a student's marks whenever he seeks advancement; I believe the problem outlined above deserves careful attention. Perhaps some fellow readers of The Varsity can offer a few suggestions.

Blues Sink

Norm West threw a 15 yarder to Chorestecki in the end-zone. Waldon's convert was low to make it 25-5.

West struck again minutes later when he hit Eric McMillan with the pigskin on the seven from where McMillan scored. Waldon kicked the extra point.

The final quarter witnessed a revitalized Raider attack but only after Varsity again had drawn first blood. Battagello was rouged on Cummings' kick for a single point. Play began to roughen up as Varsity's Petrie and the Raiders' O'Hara and Bamaan were thumbed to the bench.

Eddie Huycke added the sixth and final Toronto touchdown when he sneaked twelve yards through the middle on a fake pass formation. Cummings' convert try hit the cross-bar.

Assumption Revives

Assumption came back with a pass interception, and with Bob Temmerman throwing to Kaloogian, they finally cashed in on a major score as interference was ruled on Kaloogian behind the Blue's goalline. Thomas pulled in Temmerman's toss to add the point after touchdown, to end the scoring.

Assumption takes credit for uncorking the most spectacular play of the afternoon. A series of three laterals from Gribben to Warwick-to-Smith-to-end-man Thomas took the play from the Blue's 45 across goal-line. The razzle-dazzle went for naught though as the Raiders were called for an offside pass.

STILL HUNT CO-ED

$1,000 In Reward Offered By Father Of Missing Co-ed

By LOIS MARTIN

As Mr. Paul Baker, father of June Baker, U of T medical student missing since she left the campus Thursday, offered a reward of $1,000 for the finding of his daughter alive, police continued yesterday and last night to investigate a lead furnished by Marie Savage, waitress in the Bay Street restaurant in which Miss Baker is reported to have had lunch the day of her disappearance, and Verna Smith, cashier in the same restaurant. Police officers, however, are still uncertain as to the possible value of this inquiry and the disappearance of the coed is still a complete mystery.

Could Be June

Miss Savage told a Varsity reporter that her identification of a girl she had seen in a Yonge Street restaurant late in the evening of the day of Miss Baker's disappearance as "quite possibly June Baker" was not in any way connected with the girl's visit to Miss Savage's place of employment earlier in the day.

"I was not the waitress who served June Baker during the lunch hour when she is supposed to have been here," said Miss Savage. 'However, I did notice a girl who looked very much like a picture of her I saw the next day, sitting at a table across from ours in the restaurant downtown." The time, the two girls believe, was between 12:30 and 1 a.m. Friday.

Marie Savage and Verna Smith attended a wrestling match accompanied by two friends on Thursday night. After the match, they stopped in at the restaurant on Yonge Street. Across the aisle from them was a girl whose description tallies in most details with that of June Baker. "The girl was in the company of two men," said Marie Savage.

Girl Resembled Picture

"She did not wear glasses," continued Miss Savage, "but she looked as though she ordinarily did." Miss Baker's eyesight, without her glasses, is known to have been poor. "She was wearing a dark coloured dress, and some sort of shorter coat or jacket." The colour of the jacket worn by the girl Miss Savage saw is not certain. "It was her face I recognized when I saw the newspaper photo," the waitress said. Miss Smith also believes the girl she saw late Thursday night bore a very strong resemblance to the picture.

One of the men with whom the girl was sitting was described as "pleasant looking, young, with a nice smile which made his face dimple up when he laughed." The men, however, left before the girl did, and the girl was still in the restaurant, sitting at another table, when the waitress and cashier left with their two friends.

Other details of the girl's appearance were black ballet shoes with a small amount of gold trim and a gold-coloured shoulder bag. Attempts to discover where the missing girl might have obtained this bag have been unsuccessful.

Blatz Consulted

Police tonight expressed continued fears of death, amnesia, or abduction. Dr. W. E. Blatz, U of T psychologist, called in an advisory capacity by police, said last night: "I am too far involved in the details of this case to make any definite statement at this time."

It is now believed that June Baker left the campus carrying a dark coloured rain coat. The identity of the woman whom she is believed to have joined at lunch is still unknown.

Police believe the missing girl would have returned home now unless she was being detained against her will or unless she had become a victim of amnesia. "Every lead we have been given by the public has been followed," said a police official.

Mystery Woman

Some investigators now believe that the "mystery woman" with whom June had lunch may have had nothing to do with her disappearance. Two waitresses who saw the girl at lunch said they could not be absolutely sure which of the two women left the restaurant first, nor could they be specific about the degree of acquaintance noticeable between them.

"There is no actual evidence that the woman and girl knew each other," said an investigator.

Vic Institution To Appear With Can-Can Chorus

Casting for a baby, a babe, the Ghost of Bob and a Can-Can chorus line for the Vic Bob was held yesterday in the Vic Common Room. Bob Director Doug Maxwell, IV Victoria, his script writers, and Bob Committee explained the show and held auditions for the various roles.

This year's Bob will be the 76th held since the traditional initiation show was instituted. Begun in the days when Victoria College was located in Cobourg, and Janitor Bob Blare used it as a means of bringing Frosh and Sophs together, the Bob in recent years has grown away from the old tradition, according to Director Maxwell.

"We want to revert to the old style Bob," said Maxwell. "The Bob is not meant to be a regular show, but rather an institution peculiar to Vic, and forming part of the Freshman initiation." The show this year is being cut to an hour. The Frosh will be "liberally razed." For half an hour before the show actually begins bedlam breaks loose as the different classes try to yell each other down. Trumpets, bells, and yells practiced in secret rehearsals all add to the fun. The tradition of Founder Blare is retained through the appearance of the Ghost of Bob, worked into the various acts of the show.

The Bob is intended, in the words of the Vic Constitution, "to express that feeling of friendly antagonism universally existing between the first and second year." This feeling was well shown a couple of years ago, said Director Maxwell, when Sophs advertised that buses would take the Frosh to the Bob. The buses arrived, the Frosh piled in, and that trip ended in Stouffville.

The Bob will be held for one night only this year, on Tuesday, October 19th, at Central Technical School. Director Maxwell announced that tickets will be sold to Freshmen and Sophs first, with any surplus going to Juniors and Seniors.

Americans Come North For Scenery, Redskins

"Say, girlie, where can we see some real Indians?" Asked in the middle of the downtown section of a large Canadian border city, this question would have startled anybody except the young lady in the Ontario Government Tourist Reception Centre to whom it was addressed. Without batting an eyelash, however, the receptionist politely explained to the crestfallen Yank that no longer do Indians roam at large in Canada dressed in their furs, feathers and beads.

Fortunately the questions asked in these [illegible] Centres are usually sensible requests for information, but occasionally an enthusiastic tourist displays pathetic ignorance of our fair country. For instance, this summer many tourists expected to make a return trip between Windsor and Quebec City, a distance of fifteen hundred miles, in an afternoon, and once the girl had to explain to a very confused man why he could not go to the North West Territories and back in a day—by car that is.

Nor was miscalculation of distance the only stumbling block. One man picked up the Windsor telephone book expecting it to be the phone book for the whole country. Often people were amazed when the girl didn't know personally friends of theirs in Canadian cities hundreds of miles away. A good number thought our monetary system was the same as in England, and practically every day I was asked if Canadians drive on the left hand side of the road.

Most of the Americans who came through this summer thought Canada was still tied to Britain's apron strings. When mentioning the Parliament Buildings in Toronto and Ottawa the girl was often asked what parliament she was talking about. The Canadian climate came as a shock to many a traveller. On a broiling hot day in August a Florida native came in looking completely wilted. "I came to Canada to cool off," he gasped, "but it's worse here than it was at home." The girl took a quick look at his car

Engineering Dean Tells Jax Frosh Institute's Aims

"Painless education, unlike painless dentistry, is a delusion and a snare," said J. M. Finlayson, Dean of the Faculty of Engineering at the University of British Columbia, and President of the Engineering Institute of Canada.

Dean Finlayson was addressing Ajax freshmen in a class in Engineering and Society yesterday at the Rec. Hall.

"Education should be easy of access to everybody; it should never be easy of acquisition to anybody," he stated.

Comparing the accommodation at U. B. C. with Ajax, he told the class that 300 Army huts had been erected at the University to cope with the tremendous demand, since there was no accommodation available close to Vancouver. Even the President of the University, he said, lived in one of the huts.

In the field of engineering education, he said, liberal subjects were extremely important, as well as technical training. The great question facing engineers, he stated, was to combine humanism with technique.

In closing, he urged all present to join the Engineering Institute at once.

All-Varsity Show Needs Producer For New Effort

Plans for the All-Varsity Revue are already underway and a scheme has been set up for its presentation. Joe Potts, chairman of the A.V.R. Committee of the S.A.C. announced yesterday. Last year's Revue bogged down in a sea of complication but the committee hopes this year's show will be presented without too much difficulty.

The week of Jan. 10-15 is the tentative date set for the presentation and Hart House Theatre has been reserved. Six evening performances are planned with a possible Saturday performance.

"The show is to be planned as a revue rather than as a script or book show," said Potts. "Each college and faculty will be represented, and members of each of the campus shows will act in an advisory commitee."

Potts said the organization plan set up by the committee consists of three interrelated branches working under the chairman. These branches are production, direction, and advisory. A capable producer is still one of the committee's big worries. Direction will be in charge of Bob Cringan. The advisory committee will consist of the various college reps, and S.A.C. members.

In establishing a budget for the Revue, the committee has followed the principle of minimum receipts and maximum expenditures. "The final budget should also be put upon a self-liquidating basis so that the S.A.C. would not be committed to any major expenditures," Potts said.

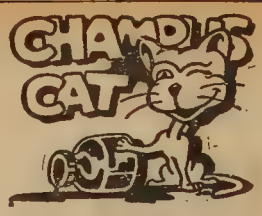
Airborne

Plans for this year's activities by the Radio Committee of the Students' Administrative Council, outlined in yesterday's issue, indicate the increasing interest in and importance of radio as a university function.



The establishment of a radio workshop on the campus where undergraduates could learn to write, direct, and produce their own programs could do much to make the University as a whole more radio-conscious. The workshop established last year was a step in the right direction and with the reorganization and gradual growth this year it may become possible to give more thought to a radio station owned and operated by the University.

Certainly the idea is not a new one. In the United States the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System, made up of more than sixty college stations, has been functioning as a network since 1940. It has been a valuable training ground for professional radio work and the students involved have gained a fundamental insight into radio which might otherwise have been difficult for them to get.

In addition to providing a training school for students, it can serve an even greater purpose, namely, the establishment of a closer relationship between the University and the people off the campus. As tax-paying citizens who help to support a provincial university, the public should be made aware of the nature of the institution. True, much of the important work of the University is explained to the public, but one facet of university life about which many citizens remain ill-informed is the character of undergraduate opinion and expression. Except for the more colourful aspects of college life, such as rugby games and initiation, many citizens do not realize the wide range of talent and ability that abound amongst fifteen thousand students. A university radio station where students could produce dramas, variety shows, and forums of student opinion would do much to acquaint people with student affairs.

Further, through faculty guidance and direction, many of the benefits to be derived from a college education could be made available to thousands of individuals who otherwise might have no opportunity to attend college. More than one American university has already embarked on such a scheme whereby members of the listening audience can take part in the academic life of the university by hearing lectures beamed directly into their homes. The educational process is expanded to reach thousands of listeners who have neither the time nor the money for formal university training.

A university radio station, serving the educational needs of the community and the creative needs of the student body, could be a valuable addition to the life of the University. At any rate, it is an idea worth considering in the near future.

Oh! Julius! Oh! Marx! Oh!--Gosh!

He stood at the long desk with an anxious, expectant look about his eyes. It was the freshman of the Biology building again.

He was in obvious need of assistance, for he had an unmarked book-slip in his grip. I saw my chance.

I felt the weight of a vast responsibility. To this young man, a lad, really, I was The Senior Student—and I had once failed him. His faith in university training must have had difficulty surviving the evidence of my ignorance in the matter of Biology buildings. I must repair the harm.

I approach dignifiedly. I open my mouth to speak.

But ah! these impetuous freshmen!

"Why hello!" he exclaims first, brightly. "Why you're the fellow that didn't know . . ."

"Yes. Sh-h." For really, after all, he was speaking rather loudly in an establishment devoted to intense and silent study. Besides, why dig up the past?

I come right to the point. "You're going to get a book out?" I'm efficient that way. No time wasted.

"Well, yes," he murmrs shyly. He is shy, but not apologetic now like the usual senior student caught at the library in the first week of school. Further experience and an awakening to the more accessible delights of Varsity - Epicureanism will bring him around to normal in time.

"Look. Here's how you do it," I plunge in. A dynamo of resourcefulness, as well as efficiency, I seize a book-slip from the desk, at the same time disengaging a fountain pen from the inner recesses of my suitcoat. With one motion of the wrist I unscrew the top of the pen and drop it on the floor.

"Oops."

"That's O.K. I'll get it." This freshman is certainly quite amiable.

He finds it after a while.

"Now," I begin. He looks wide-eyed. I laugh in a fatherly manner. "Now, to get a book out, all one does is . . . ." I speak rapidly and forcefully. "You see, you put your name here where it says, and course and year . . ."

The girl, a mere girl, behind the desk waved a big book at me. "Marx?" she asked. My name is O'Julius. O. X. O'Julius, that is. Some mistake?

A long arm brushed my ear, the left one. My freshman takes the book and grins down at me. "She showed me how," jerking a side of his head at the girlish librarian, whom I evidently underestimated.

"Oh." I think of something more to say. All I can think of is what shade of red I am turning despite the extravegant air of nonchalance I am assuming as hard as I can.

And then I think of "Das Kapital" under his arm. Mother has warned me of people who read Marx. What shall I do? What if he were to turn on me, as Communists do? What shall I do?

A moment of frienzied indecision.

"Be seeing you," and he was off. That's all he said. I didn't have a chance to say a thing.

I looked jaunty and carried it off rather well, I think.

O'Julius

U of T Symphony Plans Are Given By New Maestro

Harold Neal, newly-elected conductor of the U. of T. Symphony Orchestra, says he intends to continue the practice of recent years and plans to present four concerts, two auditorium concerts, and two or three chorus concerts through the coming year.

Neal was born in London, Ontario and began the study of music at the age of eight. He specialized in violin and general music theory. At fourteen he was sufficiently successful to be the youngest member of the London Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Cesar Borre From London he came to Toronto with a music scholarship which enabled him to study violin and conducting under Ettore Mazzoleni for six years. He worked at various occupations during this time, ranging from bookkeeping to washing out milk cans. After four years in the Army as an infantry instructor and bandmaster, he came to U. of T. For two years he was assistant conductor of the University Symphony Orchestra until this year when he replaced Hans Gruber as full conductor.

The annual project undertaken by the Orchestra and the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus is scheduled to take place in February. The Orchestra will accompany the Chorus in Mozart's Ave Verum and in Requiem by Faure. Mr. Neal states that he will feature the familiar Symphony No. 5 by Anton Dvorak at the symphony concerts. He expects to feature, also, an original composition by an undergraduate at University.

At present Mr. Neal is enrolled in III Pass Arts at U. C. He says that after he has obtained his degree he intends to proceed to an M. A. in music. His ultimate goal is a professorship in music at university.

Medical Society Committee Seeks Book Prices Cut

Among those who are hardest hit by the spiralling cost of books are the medical, students. Numerous committees have been sponsored on the campus to investigate prices in the past, and this week the Medical Society set up its own.

M. L. Bunker, IV Meds., admitted that the committee had been formed, but was reluctant to state what results it hoped to get from its report. "The committee has been formed," he said, "and is at work now. However, we will not know whether we will have enough evidence to merit presenting the report to the S.A.C. until after we meet next Friday."

If the findings of the committee are thought to be important, they are to be set before the S.A.C. on Oct. 13.

If that hazy shut-eye feeling creeps over you along toward the end of a lecture these days, do not blame it on the prof. The University heating plant, shown above, has taken steps to meet the chilly weather that has come our way, but it is still encountering some competition from the waning rays of old sol who has not quite given up the fight as yet.

Hit Song Writer To Visit Kappa Sigma Fraternity

Popular song writer, and movie star Hoagy Carmichael will be the guest of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity Brothers, Thursday evening at their Fraternity house. Hoagy was a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity, when he attended the University of Indiana, as a law student.

Mr. Carmichael will be a busy man during his one day stay in Toronto. Besides the time he will put in at the reception the Kappa Sigma boys have planned for him, sometime between 5.30 and 7.00, Hoagy will appear in the Coliseum Treatre at 8.30 with his show, "Star Dust Review." This performance will feature a number of talented singers, acrobats, aerialists, and comedians, together with Hoagy, who will sing his unique songs to his own piano accompaniment and chat in his own inimitable way.

Hoagy has just recently returned to this country after a four weeks engagement with the London Casino Theatre. He is now on a tour of North America, doing a number of one-nighter appearances with his own show.

Hoagy became nationally famous a number of years ago, in America, when he published a song called "Star Dust." Upon hitting the market "Star Dust", sky-rocketed to fame. This song in fact became one of the highly acclaimed music "hits" in the United States. Hoagy has composed a number of other hit tunes enhancing his reputation since it was built by "Star Dust." Some of these are: "The Sad Cowboy," "Bubble-OO," "Riverboard Shuffle," "Washboard Blues," and "How Little We Know." "How Little We Know," was first introduced into Hoagy's first picture, "To Have and Have Not," which featured Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall.

Like a number of Hollywood actors Hoagy Carmichael seems to have started upon his acting career quite by accident. The former Mrs. Howard Hawks, wife of the prominent film producer, was visiting Mrs. Carmichael one day. She happened to notice Hoagy out of the window in his gardening clothes and thought of the idea of trying out the song writer for the part of "Cricket" in Mr. Hawk's forthcoming production of "To Have and Have Not". That the idea proved to be a stroke of genius is now of course past history. From then on however, the little man with the wistful expression has proved himself a strong attractor of movie crowds and an asset to any picture he has played in.

Two of Hoagy's early day companions in show business and the American musical field were Bing Crosby and Paul Whiteman.

Freshman Meeting Starts St. Mike's Drama Season

A sample meeting of St. Michael's Music and Drama Society was held Sunday evening for the Freshmen.

Jim Hamelin, President, opened the meeting with explanatory remarks about the nature and scope of the society's activities. "Last year", he said, "many of the freshmen were too busy to start with, to be able to fully appraise the society and when they came to appreciate it later on in the year it was too late to join." He then introduced the officials representing the various aspects of the society and the affiliated colleges—St. Joseph's and Loretto.

After an interlude of gramophone records, of classical overtures and waltzes, the matter of the annual one-dollar subscription was touched on lightly by the president who also outlined the Society's plans for the year. These are to include one-act plays both at the College and at Hart House Theatre in conjunction with Trinity and Victoria Colleges, an exchange of plays with U. C. and of course the usual entry for the drama competition.

The formation of a glee club, to give the Christmas Entertainment and an operetta was announced. Other activities are to include classes in make-up by artists from the other side of Queen's Park, and scene-painting.

The meeting was continued with two humorous monologues, by Hamelin himself, and by Audrie Lowrie of Hart House fame. The meeting was concluded with some modern records.

University Band Features Bugle Routine at Western

The University of Toronto Band spends many an hour whipping up their surprise program for the game with Western next Saturday. The band this year consists of 49 regular men and three spares. There are eighteen new members to keep Bob Oringan, the band leader, on his toes to turn out a traditionally well organized group.

"Last Saturday was only a rehearsal," stated Bob in referring to the role played by the band at last Saturday's game, "and I am glad of the result for the boys now realize there is room for plenty of improvement". He says that he was fortunate in acquiring the assistance of a drill man, Hugh Watson, from the Toronto Scottish, who is enrolled as a fourth year Arts student at the University.

Marjorie Dunn, III U.C., will strut her stuff in her role as drum majorette as in the two previous years, while Bob himself will be showing off his brand new uniform which he recently obtained.

The band will parade the visiting members of the Alumni up from Union Station at the "Homecoming and Open House Week-end", and will also be on hand at the football rally this week.

Elect CCF Club Representatives To National Meet

At a meeting of the University of Toronto CCF club held in Wymilwood last night, Doreen Anderson IV Vic. and Harvey Hay IV, Vic. were elected delegates to the 15th annual convention of the Ontario CCF.

Gordon Milling, III, Vic., Mike Hicks, IV, Trinity and Don Evans, II U. C., were chosen as alternates.

Discuss Policy

Students at the convention, which will take place Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week at the King Edward Hotel will help to determine C.C.F. policy on specific issues for the coming year. Student delegates will also vote for Provincial leaders, executive officers and Council for 1948-49.

Resolutions

The members approved a resolution proposing the teaching of both French and English in Primary schools. However, an introductory course in Economics for secondary schools was considered impractical by the University Socialists. It was unanimously agreed that at least one of the delegates speak in favour of increased provincial grants to Ontario Universities in order to reduce or at least maintain the present level of fees and provide more scholarships for deserving students. Further resolutions on which the delegates will be expected to vote include one proposing equalization of qualification standards and salary of Primary and Secondary school teachers. Another suggests that teachers be given a greater part in the forming of school policies.

Discussion Groups

Organizer Mike Hicks outlined plans for college discussion groups at open meetings to be addressed by such prominent C.C.F. ers as M. J. Coldwell, E. B. Jolliffe, Agnes McPhail and Reid Scott. Other activities planned by the club include regular membership meetings, dances and other social events to be announced shortly.

The two delegates from the University club will be joined on the Convention floor by several other U. of T. students, who are delegates from C.C.F. Riding Associations and clubs of the Co-operative Commonwealth Youth Movement in the Toronto area. These will include Ron. Compton, IV U. C., Norman Chalmers, II Sociology, Al Beckett, graduate studies, Joan Fraser, I Soc. & Phil., Bill Nobleman, I S.P.S. Bert Bloom, I U. C. will attend as an alternate delegate.

Vice-President

It is expected that Mr. Beckett, Vic class of 47'8, now doing graduate work in Economics is expected to be a candidate for one of the five Vice-Presidential posts in the Ontario C.C.F. at stake in the annual convention.

Program of Russian Club Gets Underway With Meeting Monday

Last night at 8 o'clock, the Russian Club held its first meeting for the benefit of all those interested in the Slavic people and their culture. Honorary president of the club is Professor B. E. Shore, who will return tonight from Czechoslovakia. The President is George Denbeigh, while Vice-President is Lidia Lagolich and secretary-treasurer is C. H. Bedford. At future meetings, a sample will be given to all interested in Russian food, literature, art, and music. A concert has been planned, for which any new talent is desired. At this meeting, it was stressed that the club is definitely non-political. Although this may disappoint many of Stalin's more rabid followers, a consoling factor is found in the news that all meetings are held in English. Thus there is an open invitation to all interested in the finer side of Russian life.

Provost Seeley Outlines U.C.M. To Trinity Club

Provost Seeley of Trinity College addressed the Canterbury Club at their first corporate Communion, held Sunday morning at St. Stephen's Church. He emphasized the purpose of the University Christian Mission was to present the Christian faith in the interest of the Kingdom of God, rather than affording any group or club a proselytizing opportunity.

The general picture of the Mission was set out as a series of evening addresses by Bishop Neill, the Chief Missioner, assisted by some fourteen others who will conduct discussion groups, chapel services and bull sessions throughout the campus. The Provost stated that the success of the Mission depended not only on the five days from January 16th to 20th, when the central series of addresses will be given. Rather, the preparations which are made for it now, and the arrangements which are drawn up for the follow-up, will play a large and important part. He thought special attention should be given to the fact that the Mission must grow from within becoming more and more the conscious desire of a larger and larger group that such a mission should be held.

In referring to the manner of appeal, the Provost said a balance must be preserved between the intellectual and the emotional. Since the Mission was aimed especially at the unconverted the idea might be inferred that it would offer nothing to members of the Church. Let no self-righteousness make such a false distinction.

As one of the co-operating groups who are sponsoring the Mission, the Editorial

In a response to a growing demand for more space in The Varsity for women we are instituting a women's section to appear each Tuesday if the interest in such a page warrants its continuation.

In an effort to cover wide fields we have first started a column called Thumbnail Sketches which deal with women graduates of the University of Toronto who have had interesting and varied careers. It is hoped that we will be able to touch important women in the fields of business, medicine, teaching, teaching law, in succeeding weeks and through such stories help you in your own future.

Crossfire will be a discussion panel concerning many of the student groups interested in human welfare and understanding. We hope that you will respond with your own ideas to the subjects suggested and will offer concrete recommendation to the various clubs or groups concerned.

Between lectures will be purely chit chat about many things and will perhaps acquaint you with some interesting incidents around and about the University and her coeds.

Articles of interest to women in particular will be featured in this section while news of Pan-Hel will have a regular column.

This is a bare outline of what you may expect from the Women's Page in the future if you so desire.

Discrimination Important Topic To Campus Group

By JANET HARBRON

It's amazing what turns up in "small talk" and while having small talk with Sue Burgess (Trinity III) I discovered that there is a subject of interest to all women on the campus which perhaps should be re-introduced. The subject . . . a campus bay now three years old . . . the Anti-Racial Discrimination Committee. Its three-year roots are already somewhat buried in haze and obscurity as far as the causal observer is concerned. But there is in the process of formation this fall a small group which will inherit a pilgrim past of some proportions.

The first committee evolved with a campus free-for-all, resulting from the eviction of a young man from a bridge tournament . . . you may remember. The real issue, relating to the privileges of this university student, could easily have become obscured in confusion and misunderstanding. The day, however, was saved by questioning students who, wondering why all being "fair in love and war", the same didn't apply to bridge tournaments.

Meetings, discussions, plans, are all on file now at the SAC office and it remains a matter of record that a committee was formed to investigate the issue at stake and proceed "with caution" from there.

Investigation was carried on unobtrusively in many directions by a small group of willing workers. As a matter of fact this particular fire-brand became universal in interest. Staff students and friends debated the work, its usefulness and the possibilities of the group. As these students proceeded from the campus scene to larger fields of endeavour, the much maligned torch passed to junior pilgrims was carried at a level worthy of much comment. The SAC adopted the wandering child and a new official committee was born.

The embryo committee endeavoured in three major fields: investigation of 1. university admis-

Former University Student Gains National Prominence

Although related to an admiral, Adelaide Sinclair didn't consider that a special qualification when in 1943 she was named as head of the Canadian Wrens.

Starting her colorful career at Havergal College, she came to University College at the close of the last war and graduated as Valedictorian of her class. A popular sportswoman, she later became grand president of the Kappa Alpha Theta Fraternity. Among other things she held the position of captain of the Intercollegiate Hockey team, president of the Tennis Club, and president of W.U.A.

Miss A. E. M. Parkes, one of her classmates tells this amusing sidelight on the well-known graduate. While still a student Bess Cringan, Dr. Catherine Baldwin, Miss Parkes and Mrs. Sinclair went on several canoe trips to Algonquin Park. On one of these trips they discovered that one of the lodges there was having a masquerade. Nothing loathe for a bit of fun, the four girls decided to go. Although somewhat handicapped by their lack of materials, nevertheless, they used their ingenuity and came up with some very original costumes. Miss Cringan and Dr. Baldwin arrived as Tweedledee and Tweedledum, while Miss Parkes and Mrs. Sinclair went as the Organ-Grinder and his monkey, with a Weston Biscuit Box serving as the hurdy-gurdy. And who was the monkey?? You guessed it, Mrs. Sinclair.

The three following years she spent working as the assistant to the Dean of Women while studying for her Master's Degree. Mrs. Sinclair did further graduate work at the London (Eng.) School of Economics; and before returning to lecture on Political Science she spent some time at the University of Berlin.

Unwilling to combine a career and marriage she stopped teaching when she married Donald B. Sinclair, K.C., in 1930. Four years after her husband's death in March of 1938 she returned to active life when she was appointed to the research department of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in Ottawa.

Then in her forties, Mrs. Sinclair, after four months training was chosen to be Commander of the W.R.C.N.S. And the day of her appointment, as a high-light in her brilliant career, she was selected to christen the Fort Esperance in Montreal, an honor never before awarded to a member of the WRCNS.

Now chairman of the programme committee for the International Children's Foundation of the United Nations, Adelaide Sinclair, former head of the WRENS, has led a varied and interesting life since she graduated from University College in 1922. She did graduate work in Political Science and Economics at the University of London, and spent some time at Berlin University.

Mrs. Sinclair is at present living in Ottawa since her resignation from the WRCNS in 1946. Her most recent appointment was as chairman of the program committee for the International Children's Foundation.

Portrait of a great Canadian woman: This former Varsity co-ed has proved that there is a definite place for women in the world of active affairs and has shown herself to be an example for her followers of U of T.

Between Lectures

And have you ever ridden 4,000 miles on a motor cycle? That is 4,000 miles on the back of your brother's motor cycle when the temperature sometimes reached 120 degrees.

Zaira Murray, II UC did just this, when she was returning to university from her home in Costa Rica this fall. Zaira maintained that it was fun, although a little hot and dusty. The only trouble, she said, is the fact that she is now out of condition for the swim meet as a result of her two week jaunt. Zaira was on last year's Intercollegiate Swimming Team and is trying for a berth on this year's team.

Travelling seemed to be the vogue this summer with the campus co-eds. Nancy LeSueur, Nora Beacock and Marilyn Snider covered from New Orleans to Guatamala in a jeep station wagon, while at the other end of the world, Jane 'Curlie' Matthews visited England, France and Switzerland.

Various summer jobs were held by women of this campus, but among some of the more original was Ginger Nairn's. She wrote obituaries and weddings for the the Ottawa Journal.

Three more adventurous students, Mary Ritchie, Peg McKelvie and Joan Irwin, trotted down to New York to hunt for jobs. Mary came up with one at Veteran's Affairs at Columbia University while Peg and Joan got theirs at the Teacher's College, also in the University.

What happens when tourists come to Canada?

Shirley Skeans, who was on hand to help the summer trade as Information Guide for the Ontario Tourist Bureau at Fort Frances and Niagara Falls, has many interesting tales to relate, as have her fellow comrades Sally Stewart, Vic II, and Joyce Harman, Vic III.

Although it amounted to a lot of work, Opal Miller enjoyed her summer with the Straw Hat players at Bracebridge. The venture filled a gap in the summer entertainment in the Muskoka Lake district as well as providing a good opportunity to do summer stock work for the players.

What can happen at 7.15 a.m. at the University is a topic in which the Freshies at Whitney Hall are well versed.

It all started with a rude awakening by enthusiastic Sophs. The Freshies ran down on the double to Whitney Hall Quad in initiation garb, all wearing red and white bonnets, either broad brims quaker style, baby bonnets, sailors, or beanies; and parasols from large decorated umbrellas to small home-made 4 in. ones.

Ambitious sophs escorted them out to morning constitutional in the way of exercises led by Loretta Proctor and under the vigilant eyes of tormentors from the College Annexes. Weak with hunger and exhaustion the bewildered freshies then trooped into breakfast probably earlier than they have or ever will.

Looking after two children aged four and six earned Joan Eddis, II UC, a trip to Saint Andrew's-by-the-Sea in New Brunswick. En route she spent two days taking in the sights of Montreal. During the month she spent by the sea, her job consisted of watching the children on the beach while she improved her tan. Her comment on this summer job was . . . . "And I got paid for doing it."

Pan-Hel Donates New Timepiece To U.C. Library

"It is only another evidence of the student's efforts to aid in beautifying our college," said Principal Taylor, speaking about the new clock which was given to University College by the Pan Hellenic executive of last year.

Installed last Saturday in the U. C. library, the clock has a colorful setting of intricate woodwork, accented with gold, several coats of green, blue, white and red paint. The brass numbers on the face were cut by hand with modern simplicity.

Scott Carter, already known to many for his map of the university grounds which hangs in Hart House, was the designer of the frame. He placed the lamp and college crest above the face and a rose, thistle, shamrock and maple leaf in each respective corner around the face.

Student comments on the clock, taken at random, were as follows: A second year man said, "It's just beautiful", while a less enthusiastic V... in III and IV Sociology said, "Kind of gaudy; all the colours of the rainbow are in it." "It's the first thing I noticed," was a comment from the distaff side. "It's a big addition, making it cheerful in here."

Other remarks included, "Pretty sharp; I can't read it that's all." "Very nice," and "Very pretty but more ornamental than useful as far as I'm concerned." The night watchman's only remark was "Quite a job, isn't it?"

Everyone will agree that the new time-piece and its vivid setting are a contrast to the dull grey wall around it and brightens the entrance to the reading room.

sion requirements, 2. athletic activities (The Toronto Ski Club) and 3. employment service membership. Definite accomplishments can be stated in each field. It is interesting to note that in this riotous baby-stage, women for and against the issues at stake were willing to rise and fall on the crest of opinion.

Last year undergoing a battery of verbal assaults, a second group followed their forebears. They accomplished in the educational field some of the things that the committee had set out to do.

Of interest to women? Yes as are all other topical issues. In the last two years, the university has had two rational and intelligent "weaker sex" members to carry this torch . . . Marjorie Lick and Sue Burgess. They have realized that it is a women's world.

Distaff Side

By PAULA ZUMSTEIN

Varsity co-eds, though fashionably attired, suffered from the cold wind which swept through the stadium at Saturday's game. The players were really better off, in their woolly parkas. Since most girls have a minimum of attention paid to their attire by their escorts during a rugby game, it would seem more sensible to wrap up in three or four sweaters, ski pants and mitts.

However, the students were unprepared for Saturday's wintry blasts, and no matter how close you huddled up or how much you jumped up and down in the exciting moments of the game, you were still chilled to the bone. The cheerleaders who appeared in their short pleated skirts and bobby sox in the early part of the afternoon drew pitying glances from those in the bleachers.

Plaid suits, shorties and saddle shoes were on the agenda for the previous Saturday's tussle, what with old Sol shining brightly and reminding us of the warm lazy days of summer. Such togs were hardly appropriate at the skirmish with Assumption.

Let's hope for warm, clear weather when Varsity meets Western this week-end, but let's make sure we don't shiver through the spectacle. In case that bright plaid suit needs some extra warmth, drag along the old faithful racoon.

VIC'S CORNER

'Tis with a note of curiosity that we write this column today. As we sit at our worm-eaten desk in our moth-eaten underwear pecking away at our dust-ridden typewriter, we wonder just exactly what the future holds for the V.C.U. Assembly. It requires very little thought to realize that there will be numerous problems and pitfalls to overcome during the coming months. After three long years of hard work our predecessors have drawn up a Constitution that undeniably provides us with the most progressive form of student government on the campus. But the new Assembly will have to make the Constitution work ... and to do that they will need plenty of perseverance, enthusiasm and patience. The members will have to attend the monthly meetings, pitch in to work on the Committees and debate intelligently on all matters. Finally they will need the whole-hearted support and co-operation of the student body at large. Can such an ideal situation be achieved? Your guess is as good as mine. In fact it's even better ... because you see, YOU are one of those persons that can provide the interest and support that the Assembly needs. Should you choose to hazard a guess let us know by participating in your V.C.U. activities to the best of your ability. Then perhaps we at Vic can also lay claim to having the most progressive student body on the campus.

Several odds and ends in the line of news, have cropped up this week. Just take one deep breath and read on while we go over them with you. Here goes. One ... two ...

The V.C.U. office phone is almost certain to ring if you dial RA. 0415.

The deadline for the second edition of Acta Victoriana has been set at October 22nd. Be sure to get your copy in on time. If you have hot tips, news, information or gossip of any kind that merits print simply drop the info into Vic's Corner in the V.C.U. office any time during the week from 10 a.m till 2 p.m. And finally a word to those with a touch for art. Your Publicity Committee is in dire need of people who can make posters. We're willing to pay ... so if you're willing ... contact any member of the executive.

The residence sport league is in full swing and the girls are really enthused. Wymilwood fields a pretty smooth softball team. At least the Burwash boys have been awakened at seven in the morning to the chant (and we insist that this is relevant to the game) "Wymilwood, Wymilwood. Some girls wouldn't ... but Wymilwood!" The Vic girls' softball team is shaping up very well under the watchful eye of coach Harry Boyd. The two teams chosen yesterday are expected to show well for the Scarlet and Gold, and above all to make this an important season in their fight for fun on the diamond.

The football team has been narrowed down to forty knuckleheads who are willing to go out each night and mow the Little Vic grass. Crania are especially suited for this purpose. With only four men back from last year's squad coach "Pat" Patterson faces a difficult task. The boys from U.C. and Skule are certain to take exception to anything that the coach attempts. The results should be very interesting.

The Bob Committee have settled down in earnest to tackle their annual problem of putting on a programme. You are probably used to the old line that "this show will be different", However, this time we really mean it. During the past few years the Bob has been growing and growing and growing—to such an extent that it has been compared in scope to the U.C. Follies, Dentantics and so on. But there's one little catch. The Bob was never intended as such. In the beginning it was a show for the sophs and the frosh, depicting that friendly (?) rivalry that exists between the two classes. This year the Bob will get back to that old atmosphere ... which means that the upper years may not get a chance to see the show. But don't be disheartened. Rumour has it that there may be a Vic show presented that will really be in the class of the other college productions. However keep it under your hat. It's not official yet.

Next week there's big news in the offing. Browse through the Corner then ... and get the inside dope on the Victoria College Handbook coming out in the near future.

Line Up at 4.30 For Tickets

Who wants to go to the Varsity-Western football game this week? Well, by the look of the lineups in Hart House gym this morning there will be some very enthusiastic Varsity supporters when The Blues tackle their toughest opponents, the Mustangs in the W. J. Little Memorial Stadium in London.

At 4.30 a.m. yesterday morning eager students began to line up. Benches were hauled from Queen's Park to accommodate the masses. Bill Thompson, one of the caretakers of Hart House, let the boys and girls in, and between 8.55 and 10.05 a.m. the complete allotment of 1688 tickets was sold.

By HELEN PROVERBS

A few ambitious girls are again trying to scare up a few games of ground hockey. Last year, due to the combined efforts of Liz Holmes, now a grad, and Ruth Bynoe, a UC enthusiast from Trinidad, two teams were formed. Games were played for fun, not for competition.

This year, working alone, Ruth is trying to persuade girls from Whitney Hall and St. Hilda's to get some more fresh air into their lungs. The Phiz Edders are also producing a team, so probably some competition will result.

In Toronto, field hockey, an English game, is played only at Havergal College. At Varsity it hasn't gained as much popularity as other high school and university sports. However, it could become an interfaculty competitive sport if some eager beavers from Vic, St. Mike's and the other faculties would get busy.

If you are interested, speak up. Give Ruth Bynoe a ring at Whitney Hall and get out to some practices. It's fast and it's fun. After all, girls, why diet and starve when you can exercise and eat?

The first softball games of the season will start today on Trinity field at ten after one. PHE I and Vic I, the two top teams last year, will fight it out in the southeast corner of the field, while PHE II and St. Hilda's I contend for top honours in the opposite corner. Follow the example of the Trinity men. Come out and root for your team. The games never fail to be entertaining in one way or another.

The basketball practices start tonight at OCE and Lillian Massey. If you haven't already been notified, you will find the time and place for your practice on your notice board. Whether you have signed the lists or not, go to your practice and help out your college or faculty.

Top-Seeders Remain Tops In Doubles

The second and third rounds of the Interfaculty tennis tourney were unravelled yesterday afternoon with top-seeded players continuing to justify their positions of honor.

Art Anderson, who, to date is leading candidate for the "Mr. Tennis" title came through again with partner Len Turner to defeat Mahn and Armitage with little trouble 6-1, 6-0. Seeded men Powell and Little downed Ettles and Stewart 6-4, 6-0. Jack Langmaid and Fred Dawes, highly rated in the doubles eliminated the West-Kawaga combination 6-4, 62.

Three unusually close matches took place yesterday. In the only singles contest of the day, Bob Watson edged out R. E. McKnight 16, 6-1, 6-0. Charlie Seath and Hill beat out Plattes and Thompson 6-3, 4-6 and 13-11. Hague and McArthur eked out a victory over Dorsey and Bell by a 6-4, 11-9 score.

In yesterday's play the following doubles entries were successful: Anderson-Turner defeated Mahn-Armitage 6-1, 6-0, Cohen-Cooper defeated Payen-Peacock 6-2, 6-4, Gretex-Kingston defeated Treen-Heney 6-4, 6-4, Ryan-McCreedy defeated Fair-Brown 6-1, 6-0, Hague-McArthur defeated Dorsey-Bell 64, 11-9, Smythe-McClure defeated Poole-Stone 6-1, 7-5, Murphy-Eberle defeated Marklin-Barford 6-0, 6-0, Howard-Conyers defeated Topp-Thornloe 6-3, 6-4, Powell-Little defeated Ettles-Stewart 6-4, 6-0, Biddell-Brewer defeated Dawson-Dawson 6-1, 6-1, Fletcher-Watson defeated Small-Steele 6-3, 6-3, West-Kagawa defeated Fine-Sipson 6-1, 6-1, Langmaid-Dawes defeated Brown-Brown 6-2, 6-3, McKnight-Andreson defeated Weatherhead-Roberts 6-1, 6-4, King-Dunlop defeated Warring-Wong 6-1, 6-2, Langmaid-Dawes defeated West-Kagawa 6-4, 6-2, Seath-Hill defeated Plattes-Thompson 6-3, 4-6, 13-11.

REFEREES DOCTORED

Prospective football referees will take part in the rules clinic which starts this week under the directorship of Alec Campbell.

Graduates of the clinic will become officials in the interfaculty league which starts October 13, with pay from $3.00 for a referee to $1.50 for a head-linesman. The games last only a little more than an hour.

Ed Kryzanowski Moves To U.S. As A Pro

Star defenseman Ed Kryzanowski of last year's senior Blues left for Hershey, Pa., last week to work out with the Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League.

Ed was a standout performer in the defense spot with Bailey's Blues for the last three years. His distinctive skating style and rink-long rushes supplied many a thrill for college hockey spectators and his bone-breaking bodychecks earned for him the nickname of "Krusher". Ed was even known to give pointers on figure skating to Olympic contestants of the female variety in his spare moments.

"Kryz" has been on the Boston Bruin's list for several years so his tryout with the Bears, a Boston farm team, is no surprise to Toronto hockey enthusiasts. If Ed can continue to play with the same "college try" spirit which he displayed in such abundance while here, he will certainly be a valuable addition to the Bears.

Newest Version Of Handbook On Stands

The newest version of the Athletic Handbook, with all its statistics, schedules, rules, and records hit the Athletic Office newsstands yesterday.

The book, free to all, is obtainable at both the athletic and intramural offices. In most cases it is similar to last year's with all sports records brought up to date.

It lists the constitutions of the various athletic bodies, eligibility rulings for various sports, schedules, trophies and their winners, colour winners of last year, and numerous other titbits of invaluable information.

250 Golfers Fail To Best New Titlist

Bill Givens was declared Interfaculty golf champion last night when no one came close to his Thursday score of 72. Nearly 250 golfers tried to crack his one over par count Friday and yesterday over the St. Andrews course, but the closest anyone came was a 77

Top golfer yesterday was H. W. Watson of Ajax who carded 77, while the next best score was the 80 shot by fellow schoolman Grey. McNiven of Vic also came home in 80.

The top 30 in the interfaculty tourney will essay the same course Wednesday in the intercollegiate trials, with the best four making the senior intercollegiate team, and the next four the intermediate.

Yesterday's scores:

Name	Faculty	Card
1—H. W. Watson,	Ajax	77
2—D. N. Grey	SPS	80
3—I. McNiven	Vic	80
4—B. Easson	Ajax	84
5—T. H. Lloyd	Vic	85
6—B. Master	UC	86
7—G. P. Nablo	Vic	88

Big Pep Rally To Be Staged Thursday Nite

The Blue and White Society is organizing a pep rally to be held Thursday night at Varsity Stadium to send the Varsity team against Western with, they hope, the cheers of Varsity students ringing in their ears.

The rally will be held at 8.00 Thursday night at the south end of the stadium with the cheerleaders, band, and players making an appearance.

The Blue and White Society chiefs hope to add a giant bonfire to the festivities. "We hope to make it a terrific show", Keith Davey said yesterday.

Shattered Hopes

Eager Raider Team Out Of Class

By ED VOIGHT

Any aspirations of entering the Senior C.I.A.U. that Frank DeMarco, Assumption Raiders coach, had about 2.00 p.m. Saturday afternoon must have been thoroughly shattered as the game unfolded.

DeMarco confided before the game that he wasn't sure just when his Raiders would be playing Intercollegiate rugby.

"We've been admitted into the C.I.A.U., but when the schedule was drawn up, we weren't included. I hope that next year we'll be able to get into the Intermediate league, even if it's only on an every second year basis," the former Balmy Beach and Toronto Indian player continued.

He also remarked in the Assumption dressing-room that he didn't know just how good his boys would be, but that "we'll be flashy anyhow." He couldn't help it if his squad didn't get the ball often enough to back up his prediction.

DeMarco Not Depressed

In spite of the lop-sided score, DeMarco wasn't too depressed. "That was Assumption's first Canadian rugby game in years. Most of our boys aren't familiar with the Canadian game yet."

DeMarco certainly wasn't kidding there. Pity the eager Raider lineman who snagged a blocked kick and boomed off on a bull-like rush to the Varsity goal-line, only to have the play called back and Assumption penalized.

Thomas Surprise Starter

Freddy Thomas, starry negro athlete from Assumption, was a surprise starter in the Raiders backfield. Saturday's game was his one and only for the year—the fact that he had played against Varsity so often in basketball exhibitions convincing him to don the moleskins. Thomas has just finished a successful summer with Wilkes-Barre of the Eastern Baseball League. He's on Cleveland Indians list.

Tom O'Hara, the most genial player in the Raiders dressing-room (before the game, that is), was thrown out of the game early in the fourth quarter. Yes, you guessed it —the reason, rough play. O'Hara felt rather confident of Assumption's chances when interviewed before the game. He must have been thinking of Assumption's hoopla conquests over Varsity during the last two years.

Kane Hurt

Joe Kane and Ken McIntyre were the only two serious casualties in the Varsity camp. Kane had his face massaged by a Raider lineman's knee — the result, a badly-broken nose. McIntyre was forced from the game when he ran into a stiff tackle that just about sank his "floating" ribs.

The Varsity cheerleaders, in case you're wondering, were down at Trinity field breaking in the new candidates. Five girls and one male cheerleader waltzed in in front of the band before the game, but left shortly after the first Varsity touchdown.

Gray Impresses

In our book, the nicest Varsity T.D. was end Jack Gray's. Streaking in between the two Assumption tertiary men, Gray seemed to pluck the ball right out of Freddy Thomas' sweater. Thomas had come up fast from his safety position to try for an interception, but when Gray snatched the pill, the Raider player had no chance to thwart Gray's 35-yard T.D. run

Thomas also figured in the best play Assumption pulled off all afternoon, even though it was nullified because of an off-side pass. Late in the fourth quarter, a Raider plunger broke through the Blues line and lateralled to a team-mate. Before the play was over, five or six Raiders had handled the ball. Thomas was the end-man on the play, and he just outran the Blues to go over the goal-line standing up..

The only hitch was the fact that the first lateral had really been an offside pass, and therefore play was brought back to that point. Nevertheless it was a lovely run by Thomas. The over-all gain on the play was almost 65 yards.

37 Dressed

Varsity coach Bob Masterson dressed 37 players for the game, with the result that the Blues seemed to have a small army on the field for their pre-game warm-ups. Some of the Varsity subs got almost as much exercise lining up on the sideline for the after-touchdown kick-offs as they did in the game.

Although Intercollegiate rules allow only 24 players to be dressed for each game, Masterson plans to carry 30 men on the big Blue squad. It's still quite a cut from the 48 candidates at the Lake Couchiching training camp.

Movie Review

La Traviata

The International Cinema on nge Street, whose general policy to bring foreign films to Toronto, now showing "The Lost One," a een version of Verdi's opera "La aviata".

The scenario is presented in a nner which seems at first to be iculous. However, after seeing it e method is quite acceptable, mely that of the dialogue being oken in English and the vocal rtion sung in Italian. Unfor-nately the opera is not sung in its tirety but rather is acted out ac-rding to Dumas' novel "The Lady the Camelias" on which the era is based. Consequently only e principal arias are sung. The oduction and acting are quite erdone in the fine tradition of and opera and for this reason un-s one likes Italian opera and sl..ging, "The Lost One" will not appeal to them. Only the superb singing of the principals and the chorus redeems this movie from mediocrity.

McGill Blasts OAC 24 to 1 In Montreal

Special To The Varsity

Montreal, Oct. 2 (CUP)—McGill Redmen exploded for 19 points in the last twenty minutes to blast O.A.C. 24-1 in a pre-season exhibition game in Molson Stadium Saturday. Al Nann, tackle of Vic Obeck's new football squad, led McGill's scoring spree with 8 points, as well as playing an outstanding game.

Obeck's Redmen brought the crowd of six thousand to their feet in the early minutes of the game as they marched sixty yards down the field for a major. Lehnan ended the march after catching a pass from Robillard for the touchdown. The convert was disallowed due to holding by the McGill line.

Al Nann started the McGill's scoring again in the final twenty minutes when he tackled Kennedy behind O.A.C.'s goal line. He later downed Calverly behind the line for another point. Heron added three points when he kicked a field goal. Nann downed Anderson behind the line to add another point. A fumble behind OAC's line gave McGill a major when Nann fell on the ball. Robillard made the convert good. Heron ended the scoring for the Redmen when he kicked into deadline. Calverly gave his team their only point when he kicked into deadline.

Queen's Tricolor Blanks Ottawa

Special To The Varsity

Kingston, Oct. 2—(CUP)—Queen's senior Gaels rolled to their second straight triumph of the season, as they downed the tough Ottawa University intermediates 17-0, in an exhibition contest at Richardson Stadium on Saturday.

Sparked by the running of Lenard, McKelvey, and Dave Bryane, the Tricolor moved the ball deep into Ottawa territory and tallied their first touchdown on a pass from Bryane to Steeves late in the second quarter, to make the score 5-0, at the half.

The second Queen's major came in the third stanza, again by the aerial route, on a forward from Bahner to Falconer, with Lenard converting. After a gain of 26 yds. by Huntley, on a quarterback sneak, McIntyre took the ball on a reverse, and scampered the remaining 15 yards for the score, Huntley making the extra point good.

COLE SCAN

In a movie we saw recently, the dewy-eyed hero gazed into his heaving heroine and choked out this monumental tribute, "Darling, you remind me of the earth!" She melted in purring delight and we, unfeelingly, got up and left the theatre. If we were on more intimate terms with the earth, we might, conceivably, believe that to be the highest compliment possible. As it is, however, we're sure it would turn to dust in our mouth. And with most of the smooth, city women of our acquaintance we feel that such terms of endearment would hardly be cherished. A variant in the same mood might go something like this, "Ah, you ravishing mud-hen, your figure rivals our newly-painted silo and who, but the crowing cock, can match your raucous screech." Try it some time and let us know what happens.

Whitney Mystery Fire Gets Wide Attention

At the unearthly hour of 9.30 p.m. last night, Whitney Hall co-eds were rudely awakened from their genteel snoring by the arrival of fire trucks and press photographers at the corner of St. George and Hoskin.

But the beneficent old fire-chief, who preferred to investigate himself rather than trust one of his handsome young assistants inside the sacred precincts, could not even discover a trace of smoke inside. Probably the Freshie who was smoking rolled-up wide leaves in bed got a wet towel out before the engines arrived.

After three engines had rolled up, Whitney Hall was invaded by several firemen, much to the dismay of the pajama-clad inmates.

Our Readers Write

The Editor, The Varsity;

Dear Sir:

It has been found necessary to alter the distribution of tickets for Varsity home games. This has insured a fair allotment of the available seats.

However, the method of ticket distribution for out-of-town games is totally inadequate. This was well illustrated this morning when hundreds of students who were legitimately entitled to tickets failed to get them. Failure to check A.T.L. cards allowed some students to procure two sets of tickets. A great number of students arriving late, cut into the line or "meet friends".

If the student today is incapable of policing itself, it is up to the Athletic Directorate to provide a method of allotment which will protect the rights of all.

To replace the present antiquated set-up we suggest a numbering system and marking of ATL cards.

Sincerely,
R. J. Whitten, IV Trin.
P.E. Schweitzer, IV Vic

The Editor, The Varsity;

Mr. Editor:

The argument Skule vs Arts seems to have missed the point.

An Arts man learns to be cultured, learns that money is not everything.

A Skuleman says pretuina laborum nonvile . . . freely, the labourer is worthy of his hire.

—Vid Coronet

1. Sanitary engineer, $4,150 (US) per annum.

2. Naturalist, (BA, MA, etc.) $2,150 per annum.

In New York city a street cleaner earns almost twice as much as an Artsman. In Canada a bar man earns more than an economist, statistician, or social scientist in Ottawa.* An Artsman would say that he serves humanity, a Skuleman would say he is a d—n fool.

Yours truly,
Gordon Ramsay, IV SPS.

The Editor, The Varsity;

Dear Sir:

I have noted with consternation that you are continuing your policy of printing so-called "Letters to the Editor" which are in reality nothing but a series of insane, childish insults passed from one school to another. Realizing that there is a shortage of paper as well as a shortage of what the average reader will stand, I have the following recommendation to make:

(a) Make a canvass of the schools concerned in this unending brawl in order to collect all the ephithets which will be made in the course of the ensuing feud. (Should be fairly easy as all the letters have a definite pattern). This might take as long as a week as considerable time is expended on "thinking-up" fresh terms.

(b) print these "pearls" on the bottom right hand corner of page 8, placing them in appropriate columns so that each school could know who was the donor and who the recipient.

(c) place a ban (shades of freedom of the press) on any more of these puerile notes and make it clear to the readers of The Varsity that Our Readers Write is a column where student thought is expressed.

Surely the readers of Varsity have many ideas worthy of print. I suggest that so far they have been frightened off by the drivel which often appears. I further suggest that the Finance Committee is justified in recommending a cut-down in the size of the paper, as long as your present policy of printing these ridiculous letters continues.

Charles Godfrey, II, Pre-Med.

To Hold Ajax Nominations Later In Week

Nominations for House, Arts and Cafeteria Committees of Hart House Ajax open today and close at 5.00 p.m. on Friday, October 8th.

Following the tradition begun by Hart House in Toronto and carried on by Hart House Ajax, the care of the House and its welfare are in large measure entrusted to the students themselves. The three standing committees, elected annually, undertake extensive responsibilities in their respective fields.

The House Committee, besides its general function of overseeing all House activities and attending to the convenience and comfort of its members, is responsible for maintenance and repair of the structure and equipment, and for the supervision of the Tuck Shop.

Fortnightly art exhibitions in the Common Room and supervised art classes, purchase of records and books, are among the duties of the Arts Committee.

Closest to the heart of the Ajax student body are the activities of the Cafeteria Committee, which of the undergraduate, and makes general decisions affecting cafeteria keeps a finger on the dietary pulse policy.

Ajax students are urged to seek election by submitting a nomination form, obtainable from the general office, Hart House Ajax, and to encourage qualified men to run for these committees. Voting will take place on Tuesday, October 12.

ART — MUSIC and DRAMA

Macbeth

Margaret Webster, author of "Shakespeare Without Tears", turns to the production of "Shakespears With Tears", in the two tragedies "Hamlet" and "Macbeth" this week at Eaton Auditorium.

The Bard himself had to play to a jostling pit crowd, and so, unfortunately, did this fine New York Company. The juvenile attitude of the whooping high school students was extremely embarrassing both to the actors and to the small section of the audience who appreciated the Monday afternoon performance of Macbeth. The lamentable lack of manners reached such proportions that Miss Webster had to close the curtain and address the throng in an appeal for maturity.

Despite such competition from this side of the footlights, the production was excellent. The opening scene, with the weird sisters, was played in shadow sequence up-centre stage with the battlefield in the foreground. In the effective combining of these two scenes, the director stressed the martial action of the play and kept the motif of the supernatural in the proper proportion of mood background. The rest of the show unfolded with speedy pacing, brilliant costumes, and good character portrayals.

Mr. Joseph Holland's Macbeth was vital and rich; the internal strife was evident in his facial expression. Lady Macbeth, Miss Carol Goodner, had poise and mysterious intensity. However, Macbeth seemed too strong to need goading, in his "bloody deeds", and this detracted somewhat from Miss Goodner's role of help-mate in crime. The elder son, Malcolm, Mr. Alfred Ryder, built from youthful indecision to the final strength of rightful heir. The restraint of Mr. David Lewis' Macduff was a highlight, and the porter's comedy was enjoyably exploited by Mr. Carl Don. Other members of the cast were actors of merit, and particularly in crowd scenes they listened quietly heightening the production.

The architectonics of metal standards, changes in backdrops, and platform steps facilated the presentation; further the lighting was in tune with the sombreness of the tragedy.

May we express the hope that true Shakespeare lovers will avail themselves of the opportunity to view this pageant, thus dispelling Miss Webster's first impression of Toronto audiences.

but there were no skiis strapped on top. In fact, happily, the only skiis she saw come through all summer were water skiis. Nor did anyone ever ask in Niagara Falls, as is supposed to have actually happened once, what time the falls were turned off at night.

In spite of frequent amusing incidents the American tourists on the whole showed an active interest in our country and seemed eager to learn more about it. They were usually quite surprised to discover how little apparent difference there is between the United States and Canada. They were often disappointed too, especially when they came over expecting to see ice and snow, Indians, igloos and mounted police.

JUNE BAKER LOCATED

Found In Ottawa

Climaxing a widespread five-day search, June Baker, University of Toronto medical student, was found yesterday working as a waitress in an Ottawa restaurant. A tip to the police from a Toronto delegate to the Progressive Conservative convention is credited with the discovery of the missing coed.

Tired of Life In Toronto Working In Restaurant Spotted By P.C. Delegate

By LOIS MARTIN and DAVID BUTTERS

In a long-distance telephone call from Ottawa last night, Dr. W. E. Blatz, University of Toronto psychologist, told The Varsity that June Baker, found yesterday after missing from her home since last Thursday, is physically well but terribly agitated. "She is partly delusioned but is very glad to be back with her parents", he said. Dr. Blatz, who flew to Ottawa with the girl's parents yesterday, said June required a prolonged rest. He gave no indication of the reason for her disappearance.

Wanted to Work

Miss Baker last night was reported to have said she was tired of her life in Toronto and "wanted to see whether I could make my way in the world as an ordinary working girl."

The twenty-one year old medical student was found yesterday morning in an Ottawa restaurant where she had been working as a waitress since Saturday morning. She is reported to have told the proprietor, Demetre Milonas, that she was a widow whose husband had died in an automobile accident in Toronto three months ago.

PC Delegate Gives Clue

R. Bruce Wallace, an employee of the Manufacturer's Life Insurance Company and a West York delegate to the Progressive Conservative convention, was the person who furnished the clue which led to the finding of June Baker.

Wallace told Toronto police he had seen June Baker working as a waitress in a restaurant a mile from the Capital. As a result of his co-operation police found and identified the girl yesterday morning. Wallace has refused to accept the reward of $1,000 offered by Mr. Baker for information leading to the finding of his daughter alive.

Wallace first noticed the girl Saturday morning in a restaurant where he had breakfast. He returned to Toronto Sunday night, saw June's picture in the papers Monday, and contacted the police immediately. The girl was found early Tuesday morning.

Baker Relieved

Mr. Baker's first reaction when he heard his daughter had been found was one of relief. "Thank God she's alive!" He expressed his sincere appreciation to the press, the radio, and the police who assisted in finding his missing daughter.

Murray Day, second-year medical student and close friend of June Baker was overjoyed when he heard the news. "I am very happy that she has been found," he said. "I was up most of the night helping in the search", he said. "The Bakers didn't waken me when they got the news and by the time I was awake they had left for Ottawa." He said the name Grace Gray—or Betty Gray as police first reported she was calling herself—meant nothing to him. "I've never heard either name before. I can't give you any clue as to why she chose it," he said.

Wearing Ring

Miss Baker was reported to have been wearing a wedding ring and a diamond engagement ring when she applied for the waitress position. "She was pleasant and seemed happy, and ate good meals," explained the restaurant manager, Milonas. "She was a very good waitress and was very pleasant to all the customers she served. I didn't know that she was the girl that they were looking for all over the country."

Her frantic parents who had been in a state of nervous tension since last Thursday, disbelieving that the girl had left home voluntarily, had feared she had met with foul play or had been suffering from amnesia. Reunited with their daughter yesterday, the Bakers gave no indication when June would return to Toronto.

Hart House Explorer Group Will Show Arctic Scenes

Stories and pictures of the Arctic wastelands and Central American jungles will be features at the first meeting of The Hart House Exploration Society.

The Society, founded last year, presented opportunity for discussions between University explorers and would-be travellers. Some of the men who visited Northern British Columbia, Alaska, the Canadian Arctic, Europe and Central America during the summer, will be present to tell of their experiences and show some of the pictures they took.

Brian Bird, a geographical surveyor of the Baker Lake Region for the Canadian Government will show slides illustrating his description of the north. Allan Bruce Robertson, a fellow explorer, will tell of the growth and origin of glaciers in Alaska.

Many of the members of the Society managed to find varied summer jobs in the North. Trevor Harwood, IV Engineering, commanded a fleet of small freight boats operating along the shores of Hudson's Bay. Hal Walkley, IV Modern History, and J. W. Hillborn, IV Trinity, were aboard a United States Navy ice-breaker acting as supply ship to numerous weather stations in Greenland, Elsmere Island and Baffin Land.

Two other students from the University, Farley Mowatt, III UC, and Andy Lowrie, Graduate of the Department of Zoology, were the first members of the society to undertake an extended program of scientific research. Assisted by the Society in making contacts with the Department of Mines and Resources in Ottawa, they were engaged by the government to make detailed study of caribou migration in the Barren Lands. At present they are established at Nueltin Lake in the Keewatin Territory.

The Arctic did not appeal to Warren and Doug Wilkens, of U.C., who managed to reach Central America early in the summer and spent the next few months wandering through jungles and mountain ranges, taking movies all the way. Some of the film shot will be shown at the meeting, which will be held on Monday, October 18, in the Music Room of Hart House.

The Executive for the year will be elected at the close of the meeting. All interested members of Hart House are invited.

Individual Advice For Carleton Registrants

Carleton College, Ottawa, Oct. 5—(Exchange)—Faculty members were on hand in the auditorium to assist students registering at Carleton College this year. Individual expert advice in choosing their courses of study were offered by the Professors. As a follow-up to this service it is hoped that the students will approach the members of the staff should they encounter any difficulties during the year.

Medical Chief Praises COTC's

Forty-six university under-graduates in medicine have recently completed a period of summer internship in Canadian military hospitals, Brigadier W. L. Coke, director general of Army medical services, said in Ottawa today.

The students, members of the C.O.T.C. at a number of universities, served in hospitals as far north as Fort Churchill and Whitehorse. A number of them did valuable research work in sub-Arctic localities, Coke said. D. Bowers and J. K. Armstrong of the University of Toronto were stationed in Whitehorse, and a total of 13 students of the University of Toronto served under this plan.

The Army medical chief went on to say that "whatever aspects of their profession these young doctors may follow, they will have a broad understanding of military medical practices, and fill a vital need in the future defence requirements of the country."

All students have now returned to their universities for further academic study.

P.C. Convention Sees Students' Policy Adopted

Young Conservatives, University students from all over Canada made their influence felt at the recent Progressive Conservative Convention in Ottawa. They contributed by participation in debates far more than their total voting capacity. Al Lawrence, Victoria, seconded. Don Fleming's nomination. Ian Campbell of Carleton College, Ottawa, spoke in favor of outlawing the Communist Party. The vigor with which the young people voiced their views was rewarded when the Convention adopted the Progressive policy they had favored.

The most impressive single event at the Convention was the return of French Canadian support for the Conservatives; French speaking delegates felt that the Liberals have failed them. Mrs. George Drew's ability to speak French accounted for part of her share in the tremendous ovation given her husband after his nomination speech on Friday evening, indicating which way the delegates would vote on Saturday.

M.P.'s John Diefenbaker and Donald Fleming pledged the new leader their whotehearted support. John Bracken, the retiring speaker, referred to his visit to the University of Toronto last year, when he was guest speaker at the Hart House debate, "Resolved that this House would welcome a Progressive Conservative Government at Ottawa."

Rabbi A.M. Kamerling Head of B'Nai B'Rith To Speak To Hillel

Rabbi Aaron M. Kamerling, director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation is scheduled to speak at a meeting to be held tonight at the Women's Union at 8 p.m.. He will discuss the objectives of the organization.

"Hillel is now entering its third year on the campus and through its progress it has provided a platform for Jewish cultural and religious expression. The purpose of Hillel is in fact a medium for the creation of an awareness and an appreciation among college students of Jewish spiritual value. In addition, social and artistic programs are sponsored regularly at both large and small gatherings," said a club official.

President Hart Rotenbery will outline the major plans for the ensuing year.

UBC ON AIR

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 5.—(CUP)—A milestone in campus broadcasting was marked when the Radio Society of U.B.C. opened its own studio in Brock Hall, the Students' Union Building.

Present at an informal ceremony were representatives from both the C.B.C. and Vancouver's commercial radio stations. In the evening the event was celebrated with a Huckster's Dance.

U of T Liberals Formulate Plans For a Full Year

The Liberal Association will hold its first meeting of the year next week, probably October 14, said David C. H. Stanley, IV Trinity, president of the organization yesterday. At this time the activities of the Liberal Party at the national convention of last August will be reported in detail, and definite plans will be formulated for the coming year.

Many prominent members of the Liberal Party will address the club during the course of the year. Some names to look for in the near future are the Hon. Milton F. Gregg, V.C., and Farquhar Oliver, provincial leader of the Liberal Party. Exact dates have yet to be set.

The association takes an unofficial interest in the Hart House debates to encourage its members to attend them and partake in them. On October 20 Mr. Stanley will speak on the government side of a debate on the subject: resolved that the House condemn the C.C.F. platform. Sen. Gouin, Liberal senator for the Province of Quebec will be present as a guest.

An outstanding innovation this year will be the holding of caucuses prior to debates concerning the Liberal Party. On November 16, it is hoped that Paul Martin, Minister of Health and Welfare and honorary president of the Canadian University Liberal Association, will address the club in one of these caucuses. Mr. Stanley said that the club intends to participate in the mock parliaments of the University of Toronto Debating Society.

The Workers' Educational Association as a part of its series of forums on current events will sponsor three forums under the general heading, Youth and Politics. The first of these, scheduled for October 29 in the Great Hall of the Economics Building, will concern Liberalism and will be addressed by David Stanley. Miss Rae Evans will be chairman.

The Liberal Association was formed to acquaint students with the aims, activities, and policies of the Liberal Party. Through it, students are able to join in political life. It acts as a representative of the viewpoint of young Liberals in national politics.

Not Enough Housing For Western Couples

London, Ont., Oct. 4—(CUP)—Thirty-eight married student couples at the University of Western Ontario are without housing accommodation, despite all-summer efforts of the housing bureau to find rooms for all students requiring space.

The bureau has found rooms for 567 single students and 45 married couples.

Although the bureau had a better supply of accommodation this year than in previous years, finding homes for married students was still difficult.

"More students are depending on the bureau than ever before," stated the director, Mrs. L. Bourne.

Government By the Press?

Canada has long rejoiced in what is called a free press. Actually it is free to the extent that anybody with four or five million dollars can say whatever he wants—within the bounds of a deteriorating public taste, and the restrictions imposed upon him by the laws of libel.

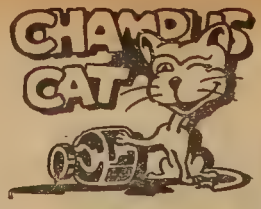
For a period extending, roughly, from the end of the robber baron period of the late nineteenth century to about 1930, Canadian (and American) journalism tried, on the whole, to put news in its news columns, and opinions on its editorial pages.

There were exceptions to this rule. When political issues were at stake, stories were frequently 'coloured' and headlines always reflected opinion rather than factual news stories. There were also papers like the Hearst group which had few scruples in distorting or fabricating stories to suit their own ends. But most papers looked for accuracy and integrity as part of what they were selling to the public.

With the advent of "Time", freedom of the press took on a new meaning. The press now undertook not only to tell people what was going on, but to label events as good, bad, or merely interesting. And, unlike the standard newspaper, which often ran columns of speculation or comment, but always separately, and under the name of the writer who was doing the speculating, 'Time' put out an unsigned tangle of facts, judgments, and opinions.

It is one of the minor signs that our free democracy isn't all it is cracked up to be that people liked 'Time'. Mr. Luce's omniscient and anonymous correspondents saved the readers the trouble of thinking about events by serving them up with ready made conclusions at the same time.

The movement has been spreading ever since. The speculative story, pinned to "informed sources" or "observers" got a big boost during the war as a means of getting news out in spite of censors.



Two instances of how serious the situation has become have occurred within the last three weeks in Toronto. First, the noisier of the two afternoon dailies proclaimed that compulsory power cuts would come into effect the week following, adding as its authority the ambiguous phrase "Hydro officials said". How much panic the announcement caused can only be guessed. Investigation proved that no Hydro official said any such thing. One suspects that the newspaper thought cuts probably would come, and tried to be "first with the news". The week came and went without any power cuts.

Then the morning paper told us on Monday, quite unequivocally, "Kennedy Will Be Prime Minister". The story, which they at least had the good grace to print under the name of the crystal-gazer who wrote it, was equally forthright.

It said that the Minister of Agriculture would be the next premier of Ontario. No authority was quoted for the statement. Yet the statement was made as a fact.

Are we to assume that the province is governed in the board room of The Globe & Mail?

The Varsity would be the last to suggest that there should be any curbs on freedom of the press. But today's press, by its lack of responsibility to the public, seems determined to prove that it is not worthy of freedom.

Envoi

With my last lone wit unhinged
I am going on a binge;
I am through. As for you,
You may sneer,
Call me a weakling, call me a cad,
Say I'm of the living dead—
It matters not,
Sooth to a sot.

If the cowl makes not the monk,
And a deed undoes no punk,
Then let me go. For all I know
It's better so.

I have read old Plato's book,
And Will Shakespear in a nook
And I'm a fool. Pushed and pulled,
I'm still a fool.
I've tried to rise and been rebuffed.
Tried anew and had enough.
Now give these bones back to the clay
Let the elements decay,
As for today:

To the postulated premise
That an ant
In a low antpile in the pasture
Should possess a geographic knowledge of the land,
I reply,
I'm not an ant. Mach and Kant
Lie past my ken.

There's a moon over the church spire
And the roofs are tinged with gold.
I'm growing old.
Put out the candle and save the light
Because I won't be in tonight.

There was a quiz show on the air
And the quiz man said "Miss Smith,
"Now think carefully, Miss Smith:
"Who was the heroine, Miss Smith,
"Described by Gauthier
"In Cleopatra's nights?"
For a space Miss Smith stood glum,
(Ah! Beautiful but dumb.)
"Could it be Cleopatra?" she hazarded at last.
"Could it be! Not only could but is!
"Congratulations!" the quiz man effervesced,
"Because you've won
"A Cadillac
"And ten mink coats, a string of pearls
"A five thousand dollar trip around the world
"And ninety pairs of nylon hose.
"A ten gallon jug of rare Taboo
"A bank account,
"A two year stock of frozen foods
"And nine hundred other items
"Too miscellaneous to list.
"Thank you, Miss Smith. Good luck and now
"The next contestant . . . "

Go put on your high heeled pomps Smith
And the sheerest hose in stock.
Smear your lips with carmine too
And perfume your hair with rare taboo—
I'm putting out the light. And tonight
I dedicate to you.

Give back Plato to the Greeks
And deduction to the ants.
Let the cobwebs hang and grow
Row on row, while others throw
Lives to science and the arts.
Strive and seek!
The earth now belongs
To Smith and me and the meek.

There's a moon over the church spire
And the streets are plated gold.
Unbar the hold.
Snuff out the candle, save the light:
Smith and I are out tonight.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

George Washington Slept Here

art and Kaufman's "George shington Slept Here", presented the Civic Theatre Repertory mpany at Hart House, is still d for a gratifying number of ghs. Some lines, such as refer- es to Mrs. Roosevelt and the '29 pression are fading a little bit, the authors have provided this nedy of the impact of history and al tribulations on the suburban- with sufficient plot complica- ns, alcohol and invocations of the gian divinities to make it last a few more years to come.

The real fun began with act two d a genuine Gluayas Williams bleau of a frustrating siege by n. Up to that point things had n rather static, the authors' lt perhaps, but remediable by ater speed, if necessary at the ex- se of total clarity.

The quality of the individual con- butions varied. Frank Scully, as ie Stanley, was the most im- essive, buoyed by the fattest part the piece. Russ Waller's Mr. ller was competent and lovable roughout. Nan Reid's Mrs. Ful- ler sailed along nicely after she (or the spectator) had got over a cer- tain gap between lines and her gen- eral interpretation of the charac- ter. Sid Furig as Raymond (Huckle- berry Capone) was outstanding in unforced stage presence and move- ment, an example to some who in- dulge in the distressing habit of leaning forward to express all sorts of emotions and age categories. Robin MacBeth as Kimber (shrewd earthiness), Kay Dray as Hester (naive promiscuity), Helen Lord as Miss Leslie (the budding T. Bank- head), Sheila Watson as Miss Wil- cox (silent and shapely) and sev- eral others served the cause with gusto and success. Incidentally, it was felt that the easily forgivable quota of lapses of memory was somewhat exceeded. Allan McLean's set was neat and suitable.

One question pursued this re- viewer into his dreams: did pro- ducer Roly Young allow a Star Weekly to reach the stage as the re- quired Sunday paper?

Mayfair

Variety is the keynote of the ex- bition now being shown at Eaton's llege Street Gallery, yet a cer- n sameness in the universal diocrity, the absence of original- and the taint of commercialism d Americanism is apparent.

Yarwood's "Crucifixion" is by far e most significant and powerful mposition of the ensemble—a tiless portrayal of suffering and signation, unredeemed by any gestion of saving grace or of vine exaltation. Considerable romise is also evinced by Wm. inter whose canvases have an il- sive quality of romanticism es- ecially apparent in twilight and oonlight moods.

Most of the flower sketches may e ignored as trivialities while, in ontrast, the outlandish 'grotes- erie' of several artists presents an ually objectionable spectacle. ome exception may be made for arold Town's "Cripple" with its benevolent aspect and glowing stained-glass harmonies with their requisite abstraction. Oscar Cahen's work typifies the extreme charac- terized by meaningless depravity and inordinate malignity.

In the field of landscape we can safely report that the laurels of the "Group of Seven" are intact and seem likely to remain that way for some time to come. Crosth- wait's town scenes are vigorously executed, particularly his "Ottawa Bridge" with its notable wash tech- nique and swirling rhythms.

Kissing Spree Leads to Injury Of Three Co-eds

Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Oct. 4.— (Exchange) —Three co-eds were injured at Louisiana State Univers- ity recently in a melee that began with freshman hazing.

It started when Treshmen were ordered by "leeringly superior" sen- iors to kiss the co-eds. "I was coming out of a restaurant," re- counted one of the co-eds, "carry- ing a bunch of sandwiches for my roommates when a whole crowd of boys swarmed up. They kept com- ing after me. It was horrible." All the co-eds objected loudly to the attempted kissing.

Their protests drew a crowd es- timated at 200, which blocked the intersection. Female screams and male yells pierced the air.

Before the disturbance was over at least three co-eds had been pushed around by the crowd. As reports of violence reached the campus, dormitory doors were closed for a time to outgoing women.

Guelph Vets' Housing Solved With Trailers

London, Ont., Oct. 6—(C.U.P.)— Forty-five home-seeking families of veterans attending the Ontario Ag- ricultural College and the Ontario Veterinary College of Guelph will be able to move into a trailer camp on the campus in the near future.

The camp, authorized by the On- tario Government last Tuesday, will be supplied with free electricity, wa- ter, steam, coal and heat. In mak- ing the announcement, Col. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, added no rent would be charged.

U.C., it's this way...

We notice with sincere regret (but very little surprise) that Vic's Cor(o)ner in attempting to answer our little quips at Victoria's expense, had to resort to a crudeness and vulgarity that would have shamed a Skule sophomore. However, we tolerantly assure our country cousins that we bear no grudge and that our hearts hold no malice toward them. Victoria, like the wayward woman in that old-time song, is "more to be pitied than censured". . . . . .

U.C. is a tremendous hive of buzzing spirit and activity during these happy and hectic fall days. Tonight four hundred frosh and sophomores will attend an affair which is regarded by many as one of the most important U.C. functions of the year. Dinner at the Royal York and then dancing to Art Bell's all-coloured orchestra is the pro- gram that awaits those who have been fortunate enough to obtain tickets. We know that it is a shame to have to limit the number of people who are able to attend. However, the $1.25 paid for a ticket does not even begin to cover the expenses for the evening, making it necessary to heavily subsidize each student attending and therefore their numbers have to be restricted.

Tonight's function is a go-single-come-home-triple affair . . . and we promise the freshies that this time the boys won't be spirited away by the cruel and heartless senior men of the residences. . . . . .

The preliminary work of auditioning has already been started by Mary Ritchie and Harry Rasky of the U.C. Follies. We will be using a lot more space to report on the progress and personnelle of the Follies in future columns. But for now we just want to say that we were tremendously impressed by the enthusiasm and spirit of the great number of potential cast and crew that turned out last week for Follies work. We confidently proclaim that we will be spared the tre- mendous disappointment that was felt at the feeble production that was last year's Follies. We hope that the Follies is well on its way to regaining its former glory as the top variety show on the campus. Lots of luck to all those working hard for its success!

We have been informed by genial Jim Cairns that the first T dance of the year will be held this Friday to officially proclaim the opening of the Junior Common Room and the snack bar. Perhaps the dance will convince the first year ladies of the college that the Common Room is definitely co-ed and that the old J.C.R. is for their pleasure and convenience. The Common Room is meant to be a centre of student life at the college and it is hoped that all new students will look upon the J.C.R. as a meeting place between lectures . . . . . .

U.C.'s political year begins with the opening of parliament on Thursday, Oct. 14. The subject to be debated is Resolved—that the Western powers should get out of Berlin now. Pat Daniel and Warren Goldring, both of whom travelled in Germany this summer, will debate from opposite sides of the house. We urge as many first year students as possible to come out to watch and participate in the oratorical gymnastics of parliament. . . . . .

We have a memo from Tom Sloane, IV yr. president, who reminds all students who have even the faintest hope of graduating, to make appointments for their graduation pictures now——in the U.C. rotunda. He also stresses the fact that those who do not keep their original appointments will have to wait a long, long time to get that cherished picture taken. . . . . .

The girls' athletic director reminds all girls of the university that a U.C. invitation golf tournament will take place Wed., Oct. 13, at St. Andrews, the girls teeing off at 9:30 and at 2:00. If interested, sign the lists that will be in the rotunda, the Women's Union or in Whitney Hall.

Prediction-of-the-week.——It looks as if that explosive and bitter dispute over amalgamation of the U.C. Lit and the W.U.A. will be ter- minated once and for all. There is nothing official about this, but we predict that the entire matter will be put before the student body in the form of a plebiscite to gauge student opinion on the matter. There is no doubt that the college will split down the middle over the issue and that fierce and fiery argument will be heard within the next few months. Watch for the fireworks when the plebiscite is officially an- nounced. . . . . .

We hate to end the column on a plaintive note but U.C. still is without cheer-leaders. Can't we find just three cute girls to turn cart- wheels for the old red and white?

We'll see you here next week——if you (and we) survive the forth- coming London orgy!

Speaking OF Sport

By HANK WESTCOTT
Sports Editor

If you think there is no relation between surrealist art and football, you belong to the has-been sporting era. Probably you think too, that Canadian football is better than American, that the forward pass has ruined the game, and that Assumption College belongs in the senior intercollegiate loop.

Since Dali and Picasso started to stretch a series of daubs into a cobwebbed impression, football coaches have cast a wary eye at the apparently disconnected lines. They came periously close to giving away some of their top plays they thought.

One enterprising surrealist is known to have studied the Chicago Bears for three successive games, copying down every play they made. Later he superimposed the charts one onto the other, and came up with a drawing that won three national art contests. He was later sued by the Chicago coach for plagiarism, and was seperated from a cool $50,000.

But that is an exceptional case. Usually the plagiarism is of a vice versa variety, with the coaches lifting plays straight from the canvases.

It is a well-known—though little talked about—sportive fact that Knute Rockne was peering raptly at a Dali original one night, when all at once, he shouted out in very great volume indeed. "Eureka", he cried, in a tone as closely resembling Archimedes as he could muster. "Eureka."

The great Rockne had in the Dali painting, discovered the principle of the T formation.

With this in mind, a first year schoolman wandered into the Hart House gallery yesterday, thinking to assimilate a morsel of culture. One surrealist picture caught his eye. Of all the things in the world it looked like the best football formation since the 'T'. He bounded up the stairs to report to Head Coach Bob Masterson, all the while working out the details of the shift on his sliderule.

Masterson was impressed. "We will," he said, "have the boys practice this tonight, and we will unveil this formation Saturday. There is no possible defence, so we don't have to worry about a London, Ontario institution anymore. He phoned bandleader Bob Cringan and outlined the details of the play. Cringan was impressed. "We too, will use the formation, Bob" he enthused, "and we will put to shame the band that comes from a London institution." The cheerleaders were phoned and they too decided to use the formation, regarding it as the greatest advance in cheerleading since the megaphone was invented.

So all three will be using the new formation on Saturday, and if you don't notice it, you just don't understand the intricacies of football.

And the guy that invented it, the schoolman, gets the highest award Varsity can give—a ticket to the Saturday's game in London.

Mulock Cup

Vic, Trinity Rebuild Some Prospects Good

By BOB JONES

October 13 will witness the resumption of scheduled intramural athletic competition when representatives of nine faculties assemble on the Varsity back campus to open the 1948 struggle for local football's most coveted trophy, the Mulock Cup. While the situation will by no means be a replica of pre-war days, there is evidence that certain dislocations caused during the past three years by a surplus of manpower, have been eliminated.

The huge increase in post-war male enrolment, in company with the influx of athletic-minded servicemen, has resulted in the filling of senior and other intercollegiate football berths by full-grown name players who had the advantage of reputation and experience.

Consequently, for the past three seasons, players who would have had a crack at a position on at least one of the minor intercollegiate squads in ordinary times, have been playing under faculty colours. A look at the Blues' roster this year will reveal that many of these "youngsters" have at last made the grade.

What has all this to do with this year's intramural play? It means simply that the calibre of back-campus football will not be impaired but that you can expect to see a lot of new faces carrying the ball through the same old plays. A more vital consequence is that it will probably be the team that can muster sound reserve strength that will get the jump in the Mulock Cup race.

Vic's Slip Showing

Take the case of last year's champs for example: Vic's crimson tide romped through last year's playoff games almost three deep in every position. This year the faculty found itself deprived of a first-class coach and opening practice found only four of last year's regulars reporting for action.

The coaching situation has been solved by the appointment of "Pat" Patterson as head mentor with Bamber Allen to help along the line; both are well-versed in the Bernie Taylor tradition and should prove equal to the job. Their task is merely to find a front line which can open holes like the Peppiatt-Celotto-Fisher combo of last year and to develop backs like London, Patterson and Howson who can use such holes to good advantage. Three-year men such as Damp and Dowsett will aid the title-defense in great measure but nobody's throwing any fancy odds around in the north end of the campus this year.

Trinity Rebuilds

Vic's co-finalists of 1947, Trinity, are faced with the similar necessity of a rebuilding program as the bulk of last year's scrappy squad have moved on in one way or another. However, coach Chad Bark has been greeted at practice by a large freshman turnout and, with the aid of such veterans as Lawson and Emery, should field a team worthy of Trinity college seal of approval. Red and Black teams have a strange propensity to upset the "expert's" calculations by playoff time and are always a safe bet for a pre-season "dark horse" tag.

The two remaining semi-finalists of last year, St. Mike's and Sr. Meds, face slightly brighter prospects as opening day draws near. The skull and crossboners can count their missing regulars on the fingers of one hand and the addition of potential threats like Gabe Varga will more than overbalance any loss. The return of Smith, Vargar and Cecutti ensures that the team upset by Trinity in last year's semi-finals will be offensively well-equipped to gain revenge. The line, one year older and one year bigger, will provide adequate protection up front.

Coach Lew Barnes of the Double Blue is sauntering around the eastern campus with bowed head and tear-filled eyes, while muttering about injuries and graduations but it is significant that the athletic association applied for and obtained berths in two groups for St. Michael's teams. Backfield powerhouses—Neill, Brown and L. McIntyre—are making good use of the coach's fast-breaking plays and they are fronted by at least one hard-charging line. The weakness here, as elsewhere, stems from a lack of surplus brawn; whether this counts for a great deal in the short inter-faculty games remains to be seen.

Groupings

The groupings, which were decided last Thursday, are substantially the same as last year except that Sr. SPS replaces Ajax in Group I. The first and third groups are composed of four teams each while Number two contains only three squads. Other features of the latest intramural switching are the elimination of an extra Ajax team and the combination of the UC and PHE material.

Tennis Tourney Continues As Players In Semi-Finals

All singles and doubles seeded players moved ahead in the intramural tennis tournament at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club, as perfect tennis weather continued throughout the day.

Jack Langmaid had a tough match but succeeded in winning over McClure, 6-3, 13-11. Three matches in the doubles and three matches in the singles went to the limit of three sets with Powell-Little defeating Biddell-Brewer 2-6, 6-3, 6-1, McKnight-Andreson winning from King-Dunlop 4-6, 6-2, 6-0, Murphy-Eberle over Smythe-McClure 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, Andreson topping Glen 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, Watson outsing McKnight 1-6, 6-1, 6-0, and MacDonald downing Herman 6-3, 2-6, 6-0.

The remaining doubles results were as follows: Anderson-Turner defeated Cohen-Cooper 6-0, 6-0, Ryan-McCreedy over Gretrex-Kingston 6-4, 6-3, Smythe-McClure over Hague-McArthur 6-0, 6-0, Murphy-Eberle over Howard-Conyers 6-4, 6-3, Fletcher-Watson over Seath-Hill 6-2, 6-4, Langmand-Dawes over West-Kagawa 6-4, 6-2, Anderson-Turner over Ryan-McCreedy 6-0, 6-1, Powell-Little over McKnight-Andreson 6-1, 7-5, and Langmaid-Dawes over Fletcher-Watson 6-1, 7-5.

In singles we saw: Anderson over French 6-0, 6-1, Powell over Hilburn 9-7, 6-0, Eberle over Kagawa 6-3, 6-2, Herman over Thompson 6-2, 8-6, MacDonald over Seath 6-3, 6-1, Dawes over Wang 6-1, 6-0, Langmaid over Dancy 6-3, 6-3, McClure over Goodman 6-3, 6-3, Howard over Small 6-3, 6-2, West over Greber 6-0, 6-0, Harris over Wells 6-3, 8-6, Farrell over Enson 6-4, 6-4, Turner over Weichel 7-5, 6-3, Stewart over Little 6-2, 6-3, Andreson over Andreson 6-0, 6-1, Powell over Eberle 6-4, 6-0, Dawes over Watson 6-1, 6-3, Howard over West 6-2, 6-2, Farell over Harris 6-2, 6-1, and Turner over Stewart 6-0, 6-1.

Weather permitting doubles semi-finals and singles quarter and semi-finals will be played today but the ominous weather report, cool and rain, may force a postponement until Friday.

on the sideline

By JOAN EDDIS

Softball is under way.

In the first two games of the season played at lunch hour yesterday on Trinity field, the two Phys-Ed. teams outclassed their opponents. PHE I defeated Vic I 11-6 while PHE II topped St. Hilda's I 14-3.

All four teams need more practice. There were very few solid hits in the PHE-Vic game although there were a few Texas Leaguers over the basemen's head. Quite a few batters were walked or else got on base through errors, but this type of playing will clear up when the teams settle into the routine of the schedule and have a few more games behind them.

Vic was winning the first league game 5-4 at the end of the second inning and then PHE, who were playing better ball, pulled ahead and scored seven runs. This same PHE team, most of whom were dressed in white blouses and shorts, really heated that ball around between plays in professional style.

In the deciding third inning, Fern Watson, PHE first baseman (or should it be basewoman?) hit a hard line drive past Vic's third baseman. This three bagger sent two runs across the plate, and started the scoring spree which chalked up seven runs for the Phys. Edders.

The Vic catcher, Anna Staples, was on her toes both behind the plate and beside it, getting on base both times she was up. Alison Jefferies, quick, neat Vic short stop, scored two of the six runs, and her team mate, Jean Meyers, centre field, slid safely into the plate to rack up another run.

At the other corner of Trinity field, Donna Haley, St. Hilda's short stop, not only fielded all the balls that came near her but was the strongest hitter on the team. Tall Mildred Aitkenhead, on the opposing PHE team, made good use of her height to nab all the throws that came to her at first base.

Starting with these first games, women have taken over the job of the much berated umpire. Despite their critical audience and last minute confusions, these umpires carried on nobly and showed that women CAN umpire their own games successfully. By the way, if you want to umpire or referee, go to the general meeting of the Referees' club at four o'clock next Wednesday in the UC basement.

Beat Western! Beat Western!

That's all we seem to be hearing around the campus these days. And rightly so. For this coming Saturday, the Varsity Blues face their first big test of the year when they tackle (and tackle hard, we hope) the Metras Mustangs in Little Memorial Stadium.

Undaunted by the fact that the Toronto Beaches - Indians went down to defeat last Saturday, 12-5, to the Sarnia Imperials, and that those same Sarnia Imperials disappeared under a 42-0 Mustang avalanche a week or so ago, nevertheless we decided to solicit opinions of The Varsity's board of experts as to the Blues' possibilities for 1948. Herewith are the views of the sports staff of The Varsity:

Hank Westcott, sports ed: I think we'll do better than last year. We're a definite threat to Western's supremacy.

Bill Ross, Assistant Sports Ed: We'll probably win three games and end up in a tie for second place with Queen's. Two wins over McGill, a split with Queen's, and two losses to Western.

Brian Land: We'll win four. We'll beat Western once, probably here, but we'll blow one to McGill or Queen's.

Walt Mackenzie: The Blues will win five games, splitting with Western for our only loss. The other games ought to be interesting.

Ed Sokolowski: "We'll win four. We'll split with Western and also with McGill. The Blues can take Queen's twice.

Bob Jones: "We'll lose two to Western, but the Blues will take all the rest.

Bob Reid: I can't see the Blues winning any more than two games. We'll beat Queen's and McGill here, but that's all.

George MacFarlane: "I think we'll win five—splitting with Western, and beating them in the playoff."

Intercollegiate Team Golfers in Test

Starting at 8:00 o'clock this morning 36 of the University's top golfers take off on a 36 hole fling at St. Andrews Golf Club to determine the intercollegiate teams.

The 36 are those with the best scores in the interfaculty meet whic hended Monday. Headed by Bill Givens, who fired a hot one over par 71 to win the interfaculty crown, the golfers will play two rounds over the tricky course.

The top four will place on the senior intercollegiate club, while the next four will settle for the intermediate.

terfaculty Track arts Thursday

Thursday at 1.30 p.m. the first track meets to help determine Intercollegiate track teams ake place.

The sprints, Garissino from St. winner of last winter's in- 100 and 220, is the favorite, but expect tough competition from ackon of Vic and Kettle, a first PHE man.

e 880 should prove a tussle Bassingthwaite, a North To- o Track Club ace, and Hryshko, U.C. freshman, providing the petition.

Bruce Rawlinson, Ajax, one-time holder of the Dominion Junior pole vault title, should not have any trouble in his event. In the high jump, Ron Can, winner of this year's Ontario junior championship in Hamilton, should go very high. Don Salustior, OCE, a Varsity footballer of note, will lead the way in the javelin and discus.

Aside from the Junior track meet there is the possibility, pending O.K. from the Athletic Office, that 5 distance runners from U. of T. will run for West End Y in the 30-mile relay in Burlington this week-end.

School Men Form New Grid Team

By ED SOKOLOWSKI

"We may not win," says Jim Vann, coach of the School Rugby team, "but we certainly will let the other teams know that we're in the league."

A renovated rugby team representing S.P.S. will take the field next week in the intramural league. Featuring a Canadian "T" formation in the backfield, the team is shaping up into a smooth working unit, and Jim Vann is quite happy at the rate things are going. Jim still says that the team needs more practice before they can become a powerful threat in the intramural league.

Jim Vann, a fourth year Mining Engineering student, although not new to football, is coaching the S.P.S. team for the first time and the Schoolmen think even at this early stage of the season, the team is much better than last year's.

The Schoolmen were a little behind in beginning practices but they are shaping up very nicely, according to the coach.

The School line is much heavier this year and in scrimmages holes were very easily made for the backfield. Lapp, Kidd, Coates, and Heslop are the linemen that are back with the team from last year and with the new men, the SPS line will be one of the heavier in the league.

Returning to the backfield for the second time are Shaw, Powell, and Trist. A new member to the squad is Cluff who will quarter the new formation. Littlejohn and Lang are two of the new men making up the backfield. Four ends are out for Senior School for the first time and they are Arnott, Foster, Medland, and Brookes.

Lyons takes over at centre position and it is expected he will handle the job very nicely.

The SPS team practice every night in the back campus along with the other teams and in rainy weather they adjourn to Room 9A in the Electrical Building for chalk talks.

For some time now, a young lady of our acquaintance has been fuming and feuding with a young male friend of hers. As a neutral observer, we've always thought that an equal amount of blame attached to both parties, so we hadn't felt compelled to intervene until the feud boiled over just the other day. It all happened because of the young man's unwillingness to act as her escort for an important social engagement one week off. Our young lady insisted upon it as payment for past favours, but he, on his part, didn't quite see it in that light and stubbornly refused to commit himself. Completely at her wits' end and bursting with frustration, she dragged him over to the telephone and shoved his nose in the dial. "Arthur," she threatened, "if you don't go with me I'm going to put you in there and number you all up!" That's where we stepped in. She's only six and could probably have done just that.

OUR READERS WRITE

Examinations

The Editor, The Varsity:

Dear Sir:

The letter about examination difficulties was interesting not only for the complaint against the examination system but for the grouping of the various types of difficulties. In this grouping lies the answer to the writer's question.

In normal and uncrowded times it is possible for the professor to get to know his student's capabilities in all but group A (the pupil's ability to know the course material) and make allowances for him if he fails.

If Mr. Mack is a graduate of this university he will know that in the case of a failure the whole work of the student is reviewed by a board of the faculty. It is here that the student's personality will be discussed. The University should not, I feel, concern itself with the personal qualities of the student who has passed.

Now-a-days neither the professor nor the board of review can get to know the student, and so be able to make these allowances. The student whose make-up is such that he is not able to cope with an examination, though familiar with the course should attempt to gain self-confidence, assurance and sympathizing ability through, perhaps, University activities.

Recently, I believe, a system of individual ability-ratings was tried in a U.S. College. The student was required to equal or surpass his rating in all tests and examinations ie: he was to do his best in order to proceed to the next year. Such a system certainly meets the needs of the individual, but hardly meets the needs of the university which would be obliged to graduate a moron with a B.A. if he did his best.

Although, to some, it may appear that the present examination system has results similar to this latter possibility it is possible that the system here is a good system working under severe handicaps.

Defends System

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Mr. Mack's interesting letter on our examination system has prompted me to present a defence of that system.

Mr. Mack places the factors relevant to success in an examination into three groups, as follows: Group I, knowledge in the subject, and related factors; Group II, constant factors irrelated to Group I, such as memory for detail, neatness, power of expression, and ability to work rapidly under stress; and Group III, variable factors irrelated to Group I such as the lighting in the examination room, physical and nervous condition of the student, time available for cramming, and ingenuity in "spotting" questions. He then proposes that, in view of the importance placed on marks whenever a student seeks advancement, examination results should indicate standing in Group I only in as much as examinations should be designed primarily "to measure the student's mastery of a section of knowledge."

I disagree with Mr. Mack on his description of the basic function of an examination, on what the examination result should indicate, as well as with his proposed treatment of Group II and III factors.

I believe that an examination should determine the composite standing in all three groups, for the very reason that marks are so important to the student when he seeks advancement because, whether he seeks advancement in his year at Varsity, or seeks employment with a firm in any capacity, or whether he proceeds to post-graduate work, he will find that Group II and III factors are not merely temporary influences imposed by a faulty examination system. Instead, he will learn that these factors—his memory for detail, his neatness, his power of expression, his ability to work under stress, the physical conditions under which he works, his own physical and nervous condition, the time available for grasping fundamentals, and his ingenuity in foreseeing the other fellow's move — these factors are eternally present in the world. He will see that his reaction to these factors forms, not only an important part of his success, but often a deciding part. As to improving the Group II and III factors by tests to measure them, and steps to reduce their ill-effect, it seems to me that another aim of an examination is to measure one's ability to cope with adverse conditions, both without and within.

Mr. Mack's picture of the intellect which is totally unaffected by the nervous strain of conditions about it, or by the possession or lack of certain 'knacks' and aptitudes, is fascinating. Unfortunately, the present examination system is not concerned either with measuring the capabilities of a machine or with producing one, but rather with human beings, their capabilities and production. That is the primary function of our examinations, not to measure our pure, vacuum-encased knowledge, but our abilities as rational animals.

More About Tickets

The Editor, The Varsity:

Dear Sir:

A letter in the October 5th edition of The Varsity very ably describes the unsatisfactory arrangement for distributing out of town football tickets. I should like to offer a suggestion for the consideration of the Athletic Directorate which I think might improve the present set up.

If prior to ticket sales small cards were printed with numbers in sequence, these could be given to the students as they lined up. This would cope with the two-fold problem. No one could step in the line ahead of others because he would have no card to present at the wicket. At the same time people would be prevented from securing any more than their fair allotment.

The added costs of printing and distribution would be negligible. The results I am certain would be worth the effort.

Platter Men Gain Victory Over Sharks

The age-old feud between Hart House card players and chess players is over. The music lovers won.

Equipped with $600 worth of records purchased by the Board of Stewards this year and last year, Hart House's new Record Room will be opened this year.

The stewards decided last year to turn the former chess room into a record room and it was equipped this year with an amplifier, record player and records.

Their decision was taken after the near-breakdown of negotiations between the feuding chess and card fiends.

Originally intended as a haven for chess fans, the record room was invaded by bridge — and sometimes poker — players. Occasional outbreaks of gambling brought frequent warnings from the stewards.

The Hart House Chess Club will continue in new quarters.

Members using the record room, open from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m., must first register at the office of Hart House Secretary Peter Bryce. They may play indefinitely — except during rush hour when use of the machine is limited to one hour.

It's furnished with blue leather easy chairs and couches, wine-colored drapes and grey carpets.

Only Hart House records may be used on the machine, but House officials said they expected few complaints. The records were picked to cater to all tastes.

Equipment even includes a set of directions for operating the record player.

Editor Reports Several Changes In UC Undergrad

The Undergrad, University College's student magazine, will undergo several radical changes in its content, general design and dates of publication, Garry Clarke, editor of the Undergrad, stated yesterday.

The Undergrad, a literary magazine, has added more non-fiction and a section for activities in the first issue which will be distributed this Friday. It will appear four times this year, every six weeks, instead of the three issues of last year.

The Undergrad, an enterprise of the student body, forms an integral part of University College, Clarke said. It aims to encourage literary expression and an attitude towards language in action as a real force both in college life and the world at large, stated Garry Clarke.

Two groups are influenced by the Undergrad. The group who work on the staff, submit contributions and gain experience in producing a magazine, and the larger group who read the issue and get a glimpse of the attitudes of their fellow students towards the art of writing, he said.

T.B. Hits At College Age X-Ray For All on Campus

Had that cough quite a while, haven't you?

You may have T.B. and not know it. It is insidious. Last year 2.5 out of every thousand students walking around the U of T. campus had tuberculosis and did not know it.

That 2.5 of the student population was found through the Health Service X-ray Survey. This year the survey has a new angle. Not only will the Service examine the compulsory list of students but also any students not in this class and any member of the academic and administrative body, who will like to take advantage of the x-ray service offer.

It is our disease. Tuberculosis of the lungs is most prevalent in the university age group, and for this reason, the Health Service of the university is pushing this survey.

The survey starts Monday, October 18, through to November 4.

If you have any doubts about the health of your lungs avail yourself of this opportunity and watch. The placards on the campus grounds for the day on which members of your faculty or college may be surveyed. It will take you fifteen minutes from the time you walk into the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall, 119 St. George St., to give your name to a secretary and line up until you turn from the board against which you lean fully clothed to have the actual x-ray taken, and walk out the exit.

"Compulsory" students are new students, those in their final year, meds and nurses of every year, those whose domiciles are not in Canada, and dental students of the first and last two years. Arts students are to make their appointments direct through the Health Service and faculty students through their class presidents.

McGill Inaugurates Faculty of Divinity, Ceremony Yesterday

Montreal, Que., Oct. 6—(CUP)—The new Faculty of Divinity was officially inaugurated yesterday in Divinity Hall before an assembly of high church dignitaries, faculty members and students. Rev. John Dixon, in emphasizing the importance of the occasion, said: "This morning marks the official inauguration of the Faculty of Divinity at McGill—to the best of my knowledge, the first university faculty of Christian theology in Canada which is not specifically associated with one of the Christian churches to the exclusion of the others."

Save Time, Light With New System In Main Library

One of the changes with which the University library has come up as the college year once more begins, is a mechanical method of handling overnight books. A numbered card is placed in each book that is taken out and as the book is returned, the card is put in a box. Perforations in the cards enable the staff to arrange them in order, and also learn what books are late. Returned books can be put back on the students' shelves almost at once, and long, early morning line-ups thus are avoided, saving the staff time.

The library will be closed Saturday evenings since attendance is poor on this evening, saving electricity and staff working hours. Although the cost of circulating a book any other evening of the week is two or three cents per book, it costs ten cents on a Saturday evening and the financial saving will be considerable.

Plans for an extension beside the library to the north drawn up last year by the sub-committee of the library are now in the form of a report before the Property Committee of the Board of Governors.

Now serving approximately five times as many students as the three or four thousand it was originally intended to take care of, the library finds that its stacks are overflowing with books. Storage rooms in the men's residences are packed with 75,000 books, including those not in urgent demand, periodicals that can be found in other Toronto libraries and the library of the Canadian Institute which was recently purchased by the University.

"Herbie" Plans A Big Time For The All-Varsity Dance

There are reports of a mysterious character who has been seen in Hart House lately. He isn't registered in any course or any college, and he doesn't seem to have a last name. Members of the House Committee say they know him only as "Herbie".

"Herbie" has been seen on two or three occasions at the tail end of the line-up for lunch, and those who have talked to him say he must be real because he has told them about his mother. Anybody with a mother must be real, they say.

One of the things Herbie wanted to know was what he should tell his mother about the All-Varsity Dance, according to the House Committee.

The Committee told him that the All-Varsity was definitely the sort of thing Herbie's mother would approve. Four bands, led by Benny Louis, Bas Cheeseman, Johnny Crinigan, and Johnny Perkins will provide the music. The entertainment, the Committee says, will be of a sort that everybody would approve.

Herbie, they say, was sold on the All-Varsity right away. The House Committee plans to give Herbie a major role in the evening's entertainment, and let everybody meet him.

Now there's only one thing worrying Herbie.

He was going to take a little Freshie he sat next to one day on the Wellesley bus. But since he told his mother about the dance, she wants the boy to take her.

CANCEL PEP RALLY

The pep rally scheduled for tonight in Varsity Stadium has been postponed, Keith Davey of the Blue and White Society announced yesterday.

Plans are already underway for the rally to be held Oct. 15 before the Queen's game. The postponement, Davey said, was to allow the committee to enlarge and develop the scheme further.

Dr. Smith Appeals For Scholarships In Law Research

"To assimilate legal principles and to absorb knowledge of the individuals and the society for whom these principles have been evolved, the law student should devote his full time to lectures, clinics and study," said President Sidney Smith, speaking to the Fall Convocation of McGill University yesterday afternoon.

Poor Interest

"There are some law schools in Canada," he went on, "which, in their faiths in the benefits of concurrent attendance at the classroom, the library and the office, command only the partial interest and poor attention of their students. In such a situation the student may well be content to learn the tricks of trade and fail entirely to appreciate the importance and significance of his future status as an officer of justice."

Dr. Smith was delivering the Convocation address on "Legal Education and the Universities" at McGill University. The convocation marked the 204th anniversary of the birth of James McGill as well as one hundred years of teaching in the faculty of law in the university.

Highlights

The highlight of the program was the luncheon during which Viscountess Alexander, Premier Duplessis, Professor A. H. S. Gillson and Dr. Sidney Smith received honorary degrees.

President Smith was presented with an honorary D. L. C. Viscountess Alexander upon whom was conferred the degree of Doctor of Law, is one of the few women ever to receive an honorary degree from McGill University, the last one given to a woman having been granted in 1940.

After the luncheon the student body and staff gathered in front of the tomb of James McGill where Viscountess Alexander inspected the guard of honor provided by the Canadian Grenadier Guards. From there all moved into the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial-Gymnasium where degrees were conferred on more than 300 students, many of them in the graduate faculty.

All classes scheduled for three o'clock and later were cancelled in order that as many of the student body as possible could attend the Fall Convocation. The gymnasium was filled to capacity as Dr. Smith delivered the address.

In his address Dr. Smith made an appeal for the encouragement and recognition of legal scholarship in Canada by the Bench and Bar.

"For the better use of law as an instrument in adjusting human relations, research by legal scholars is essential," said Dr. Smith. "The full time law teacher has a detachment that a judge with crowded lists or a lawyer with many clients cannot have for studying the origin of legal principles, for tracing their development, and for testing their validity in a modern milieu," went on Dr. Smith.

Law For Man

To strengthen his appeal President Smith said law was an instrument of progress and "law was made for man and not man for the law."

The near-sighted and narrow-minded law practitioners of today, Dr. Smith blamed partly on our own Canadian schools which "often obscures for the student, the purpose of his legal education—the preparing of him for a profession, and not for a trade or occupation."

In receiving the degree of Doctor of Civil Law, President Smith accepted it in the name of the University.

Women's Frats Start Fall Rushing

This week the various women's fraternities on the campus are entertaining those women eligible for informal fall rushing. Included among the rushees are second year U. C., and St. Mike's women, second year P and H. E. students, and some O. T. and Physio women. The rushees are invited to attend lunches, teas, dinner and evening parties, and even breakfast parties are on the list of invitations.

Must Form Unity Among Colleges Says Dr. Bissell

"The University stands, first of all, for unity within diversity," said Dean C. T. Bissell in an address to the U.C. Soph-Frosh Banquet last night at the Royal York Hotel.

"But the miracle of unity is achieved," he said, "not by accepting an easy and uncritical principle of inclusiveness. From each member, the University demands the attainment of a degree of excellence. It is the diffusion of this ideal of excellent that creates the real University, that makes all of us, whether students of the humanities, of the social sciences, or of physical science, whether preparing for exacting demands of a professional career, associates together in a stirring enterprise."

Dr. Bissell said this new world in which the freshmen find themselves, seems to split into a number of distinct parts made up of colleges, faculties, schools and institutes over which broods mysteriously the concept of the University. "Concepts and ideas are centres of energy from which radiate much of man's most fruitful work", he said.

W. Green, II year President, Men's U.C. Lit. and Athletic Society, told the audience University College was the axis around which the University revolved. "Let the traditional tolerance and desire for harmony as exemplified by U.C., be a shining example the world over."

Dr. Taylor, President of University College, in a reply to Green's toast to the College, said no college lives on its past; it must have a succession of students to add fresh lustre. "Accept this challenge," he said, to the new students, "to add lustre to its name and be loyal to its tradition and uphold it on every occasion."

University PC's Now Linked With Hansard Society

George Hogan, president of the U. of T. Progressive Conservative Club, after a meeting of the P.C. Executive yesterday, announced the club had decided to join the Hansard Society of Canada as a corporate member.

The Hansard Society is a non-partisan organization formed for the purpose of stimulating public interest in parliamentary affairs and widening the knowledge of democratic government. Among its activities are the organization of local Hansard clubs to follow the activities of parliament and to distribute documentary films on parliamentary government. Wilson Woodside is the National Director and B. K. Sandwell is Honorary Secretary.

The first major activity for this year will be the holding of a youth conference at which various prominent parliamentarians will discuss some of the aspects of the machinery of parliament at work.

The speakers will be Paul Martin, John Diefenbaker, Agnes McPhail, and J. F. Pouliot. The conference is called for Saturday, November 13, in Convocation Hall, commencing at 10 a.m.

A report of the National Convention of the P.C. party will be given to the P.C. Club at its organizational meeting today at 4 p.m. in Room 11, University College.

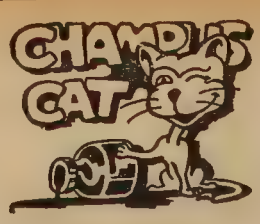
The Old Refrain

The current discussion in the "Our Readers Write" column regarding the value of written examinations is one that is a perennial topic of debate among undergraduates and staff members alike. But it reflects the growing concern and dissatisfaction with traditional methods of determining a student's ability.

The assembly line method of turning out graduates year after year on the basis of what is mainly an impersonal and superficial standard has reached a new peak with the recent introduction of "labour-saving" devices in the United States which enable judgment to be passed on students with a minimum of human effort.



The University of British Columbia last year tried the mechanical marking of examination papers. Students in certain subjects were given prepared papers on which they could indicate what they thought were the right answers by pencil marks in appropriate squares. The papers were then fed into a complicated machine, the marks made electric contacts which told whether the answers were correct or not and the results were tabulated, all at the rate of five hundred an hour. The personal factor, the character of the student, was completely eliminated. Such a method, which is nothing more than a projection of the conventional written-examination system, merely aggravates the problem.

Most educators agree that the present examination system is inadequate. They realize the deficiencies inherent in a system which reduces the student to a rigid adherence to lecture notes and textbooks but they offer no remedy. They are handicapped, they say, because swollen registrations make it impossible to judge an individual student's ability on a more personal level. That is true to a certain extent, but the problem was apparent long before the war when student enrolment was relatively small and did not present the difficulty that it does now.

In all the detailed and varied arguments one salient factor stands out. The present system is conducive to the production of graduates whose knowledge of their courses is quite superficial, especially in the liberal arts courses. The student who knows that the only criterion of his academic ability is the written examination is tempted to pursue his studies in that direction by concentrating only on possible examination material.

The graduate who comes through his examinations with flying colours may have proven nothing more than a talent for second-guessing, an ability to concentrate without a real mental stimulus, and a flare for written expression. But the superficial nature of his education may be totally inadequate.

A university education, in its broadest sense, cannot be reduced to pencil marks on a piece of paper, to a conglomeration of memorized facts. It must be a means rather than an end.

A Cat's Tale or How Base Our Race

(The first in a series)

If you think a dog's life is not a happy one, you, dear student and human being, should take a look at the life you lead. Disgusting.

Here's the way the human beings look at me. I'm not prejudiced. I'm a cat.

One thing that has always bothered me on my nightly prowls about the campus is the boy-girl situation. Let me trace a date from beginning to end, if I may.

A boy sets his sights on a girl. He wants to ask her out on a date —a peculiar custom in itself. Does he ask her outright or right out? You foolish human. You know the answer. Of course not.

After mooning, swooning and crooning, our hero is ready for spooning. He picks her up—not literally. She blushes. He blushes. They are ready to leave her house to go out. They get to the door and a very interesting thing happens. Every day, ten times a day, this co-educational cuddlebunny opens that door with her own two hands, or one depending on the vitamin contents of her dinner. Now, all of the sudden, she is too weak. The manly man shows how really manly he is and with one push he opens the door. She leaves gracefully.

Boy—Do You Look Silly

They are now walking along the street. She eyes him bitterly. He notices the invisible daggers and begins to check, trying to find what he has done wrong. No, he has not committed a great sin; he is wearing a tie. His clothing is further examined. His pants are still with him. Then, like a flash it strikes him and his pride. There is no greater sin. He is not protecting his date (an old Anglo-Saxon expression) from falling garbage. He is not walking on the outside—towards the gutter. He begs for forgiveness. She sheds a few tears and all is well.

Now, please don't think me catty. But, let's examine the appearance of this lady student. Take the length of this lady's skirt for instance. It is exactly ten inches from the sidewalk and eight inches from the ankle. Of course she can hardly walk. But, after all, a girl dresses to be seen and not to move. Why, the Egyptian mummies had more leg room than these a-i-n-c-h-with-every-two-steps women. What's that she wears around her neck,—a necklace. What can you use it for? A leash, maybe? For cat's sake! What's all that paint on her face. Her lips look like she's bleeding. Her eyebrows are painted black; her cheeks pastel; her hair—your guess is as good as mine.

What happens at the front door, when they get home? As a cat I have been able to examine this amazing phenomena many times. I can tell by the smile on your face. You have experienced the same situation yourself. The event is enough to make Dr. Kinsey blush.

The girl giggles. The boy giggles. They both giggle. He decides to get some of the $25 he has spent on her back in the way of a kiss. (Note for cats: kissing is like rubbing whiskers.) She wants to be kissed but, of course is shocked, by the suggestion. Well, what happens?

That dear humans, is just between us cats.

Harpo.

Dora Moore Will Direct 'Linden Tree'

Mrs. Dora Mavor Moore, founder and director of the New Play Society, is directing "The Linden Tree", by J. B. Priestley, for the Trinity College Dramatic Society, it was learned yesterday. This will be Mrs. Moore's first university production. However, Mrs. Moore was one of the adjudicators in the University Drama Festival last year.

"The Linden Tree," Mrs. Moore said, "is in the main a good medium for students. The meat of the play is appropriate. It gives opportunity for character portrayal and the lines are full of meaning." She added, "Priestley knows how to write for the theatre." In the London production the leads were played by two old friends of Mrs. Moore, Sir Lewis Cassen and Dame Sybil Thorndike.

When asked what she thought about student productions in general, Mrs. Moore asserted that good students can sometimes give a better over-all presentation of a play than a professional company with good leads but a poor supporting cast. "Students can give an intelligent interpretation of minor roles," she explained.

Mrs. Moore confided that she had always taken particular interest in the university. She had watched it grow up; she had spent her youth on the university grounds, living in a house where the university press is now. Outside the press, underneath the squat tree, which was cut down only last year, Mrs. Moore used to hold her dolls' tea parties. "Sliding down those hills by the library and riding about the wooden sidewalks, which were all around the university, were our great sports," Mrs. Moore said. "I remember there were two lovely apple trees where Convocation Hall is now."

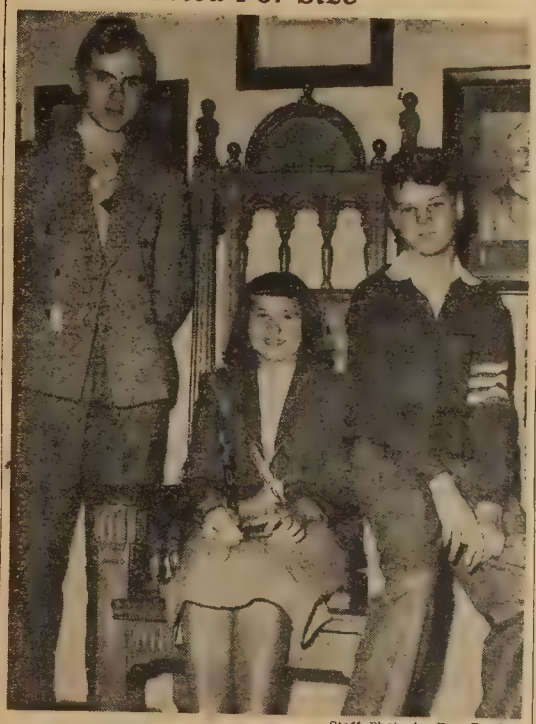
"The Linden Tree" which Mrs. Moore is directing will be presented in Hart House on November 8, 9, and 10.

Toronto Police Use Set Policy To Find Missing

Toronto's police force is well equipped to handle cases of missing persons such as that of June Baker, U. of T. co-ed, who disappeared one week ago.

Yesterday, a sergeant of detectives at the Toronto Police Station outlined to The Varsity the procedure followed in such cases. The detective who refused to be named, said that the first step in such cases was to get a complete description and history from families or friends. Then an "occurrence" form is filled out listing full description, peculiarities of feature and where last seen.

This information is then radioed to the active prowl-cars. If the person is not picked up within a "reasonable time", the police make an appeal to the radio and press to obtain wider distribution of the description. Following this appeal the public usually comes forward with large numbers of clues.



Although less than nine-tenths of these clues lead to concrete facts the sergeant said that every one of the leads is followed. "Sure as we don't check on one, it turns out to be a hot tip," he said. Officers are dispatched to ferret out the truth of every lead.

Usually this methodical checking uncovers some facts that lead to the finding of the person. If, however, the missing person cannot be located the "occurrence form" is wired to police stations all over the country. "The Baker circular was sent all over Canada and most of the U.S.," said the detective.

In addition, the detectives working on the case cover all the known haunts of the underworld. "Any good detective has lots of contacts, shady and otherwise," said the sergeant.

The file of the missing person is never taken off the police books, he said, until the case is closed.

More than two hundred Thorold High School students visited Toronto University to take a look at their future Alma Mater. Following a visit to the Parliament Buildings and the Museum, the students toured Hart House. Here three of them try out the Speaker's Chair. From left to right they are John Allan, Francis Shugan and Frank Gough, all first year students.

Students See Hart House In Get-Acquainted Tour

Many Varsity men in the library or common rooms of Hart House looked up with a start Tuesday afternoon. What they saw was a large number of boys and, yes, girls, sporting ribbons, and trooping through the halls and peering in the library windows. It wasn't a figment of anyone's imagination nor a hangover from the last cup of seven-cent coffee. It was a group of some 200 students from Thorold High School who came to Toronto to pay a visit to the University and its surroundings.

Mr. Bryce of the Hart House staff, gave the Thorold students a welcome to the House, and took them through the building. It must have come as a shock to the casual student walking along the upper hall and glancing into the debates room to see the government benches filled by a group of intent young ladies. For possibly the first time in the debates room's history, the house majority was composed of women.

According to the teachers who led the expedition, it is becoming a popular annual event in Thorold High School to take a day off for an educational tour of Toronto. The students, who, incidentally paid their own expenses, spent most of the day on the University and Museum grounds.

The purpose of the one day invasion is to help acquaint the students with the facilities that exist in the University and to help them to appreciate the contribution of such educational institutions as the Royal Ontario Museum.

Three years ago, only a few of the students made the trip to Toronto, but it was so successful, that last year the teachers planned it for the whole school. The plan worked, and once again this year, all the students from Thorold High School took the opportunity of taking a look at the institution which they are preparing themselves to attend sometime in the next five years.

Majority Vote Elects First Year UC Pres.

In the Women's Undergrad Association elections held in U.C. yesterday Marilyn Craig, I Pass Arts, was elected first year President. The two candidates elected for the positions of Literary and Social Directors were Pat Scott, II Phil. and Eng., and Olive Jane Piper, II Pass Arts, respectively.

More than fifty per cent of the first year women voted in the elections, while voting in the second year was light, perhaps, because the second year president was elected last year, an official of the W.U.A. announced.

Artist Aldwinckle's Mural Now Rests In Simcoe Hall

Two years ago in the university exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition a large mural map of the world was displayed, showing countries from which U. of T. students had come and those to which grads had gone. After the exhibition was over the mural was permanently hung behind the information desk in Simcoe Hall.

Painted in red, blue and gold the mural depicts, besides the world's geography, a representation of the University, purposeful striding students, and numerous small U. of T. crests dotted over the map. The small red crests represent countries from which students have come and the blue crests where grads have gone. Naturally it was impossible to place individual crests on the map for each student, so Eric Aldwinckle the artist, used the crests to represent general areas only.

Extensive Damage In Victoria Row V.C.U. Head States

As a result of what started out as friendly rivalry between two class years, (the sophomores and freshmen of Victoria College) and ended up in a general free-for-all Tuesday night, the College was damaged, to what at first appears, an amount around $150 to $200.

Full Damage Not Known

"At present it is difficult to assess the damage," Keith Davey, President of the Victoria College Union, said last night. The total extent of the damage will not be known until we find out whether the walls and paintings sprayed with water can be washed or whether they will have to be completely done over," he said. "If the walls have to be refinished the cost will be increased. The main damage at present is that which was caused to the north basement door."

The fight started as a result of the efforts of twenty-five sophmores to break up the "Bob" practice of Vic freshmen. The sophs broke down the north basement door and sped rapidly up the basement stairs to the main floor. From the main floor they charged up the stairs to the second floor raising a clamor all the way by shouting their class yells.

The frosh, who were practicing for the "Bob" in the Chapel heard the noise and proceeded to the head of the stairs to stop the invaders. It was here the struggle began. Before it was over, firehoses were brought to play, and two of the invaders went out minus their trousers.

Walls Sprayed

The walls of the staircase, the stairs and the lower floor were covered with water, which finally wound up in the women's section of the basement and covered the floor to a depth of four inches.

"We expect a certain amount of rivalry of this kind between classes while practice for the "Bob" is going on," Dr. H. Bennet, Dean of Victoria College stated yesterday. He said that this was a little out of the ordinary and that the matter was being investigated.

"At present I have not received a full account of the damage. If the damage warrants it, disciplinary action will be taken," he said.

Full Report Friday

When contacted last night Keith Davey said a full report of the incident and an estimate of the damage was being prepared and would be presented to the Dean on Friday.

"At present, as far as we can ascertain, no parties can be definitely pinned down with the damage. But fines will be imposed," Davey stated.

Open Hart House For Big Display In New Program

Hart House is inaugurating a new program in the form of an Activities Night scheduled for this Tuesday night. It is for all the new men on the campus and will present all the activities in Hart House in full swing. Although designed especially for the frosh, third year engineers, graduates from other universities and new members of the faculty, Carman Guild of the Warden's staff emphasized that everyone will be welcome.

The program will start at 7.15 with a brief gathering in the East Common Room. There will be a few short talks to acquaint everyone with the plan and purpose of the activities and from then on everyone is free to follow their bent in visiting the various groups. Refreshments will be served in the Great Hall from 9.30 until 11.00.

The equipment for all the activities will be supplied and the idea is for the men to participate in the groups that take their interest.

There will be a full dress debate in progress for prospective orators. Down in the rifle range, the Rifle Association, the Pistol Club and the Archery Club will be demonstrating their various weapons. The Bridge Club will be running a tournament of duplicate bridge for the fiends and there will be instructors on hand to assist beginners.

The deeper minds will find a haven with the Chess Club which will have both tournaments and pick-up games available. Down in the Art Gallery there will be a regular sketching class under the direction of Carl Schaffer. There will be plenty of charcoal and paper for those who want to try their hand.

Table tennis will be going on in the Lunch Room. One table will feature tennis table as it can be played and the others will be open for the visitors. The Camera Club is opening its rooms and will show the best of its pictures. Members will be there to explain all the equipment. Others will find the Squash Courts a centre of interest. An exhibition match and commentary has been arranged and there will be instructors on hand to show beginners how to play the game.

Upstairs various musical groups will be active. The Glee Club offers choral singing and the Record Room will be open to play your favorite music. For quieter chaps the Library will offer an opportunity to browse around, and the pool will be open for a cooling swim.

7 Vacancies Filled In St. Mike's Senate

Earlier this week, trials were held for the Senate (debating club) of St. Michael's. Would-be members were given four minutes to prepare a two minute speech on 'The place of extra-curricular activities in the life of a university student'. There were seven vacancies to be filled in the society which has a limited membership of not more than 16. As a result of the trials, the vacancies were filled on a competitive basis, over a dozen applicants being turned down.

Movie Review

The Babe Ruth Story

This picture is worth seeing if you aren't a sports writer, for sports writers know too much about Babe Ruth to enjoy the picture. Anyone wishing to be entertained for an evening will not go wrong by going to the Odeon Toronto this week.

This picture is neither a monument nor a text-book history of Babe Ruth. It was meant to be a film for the enjoyment of theatre patrons, and director Roy Del Ruth has made it just that. Ruth's life is not depicted as it really was, but as most idolizers imagine it to have been. The reaction of the audience is to forget reality and Ruth and to treat the story as fiction.

In spite of his commendable acting, William Bendix was a poor choice as Babe Ruth, although he was unquestionably the best of a small field. It is hard to assimilate him and his mannerisms to the Babe. The supporting cast does a mechanical job of portrayals which serves the purpose, but will win no one an Oscar. Claire Trevor as Mrs. Ruth is another victim of poor casting, as she is too young and good looking for realism.

Ruth is portrayed as a carefree, boisterous lover of baseball and children. His faults are shown as the results of a too playful nature and his punishments the results of misunderstandings and other people's dislikes for him, to wit: he is shown as getting suspended and fined $5,000 for missing a game when he saved the life of a little boy's dog.

His early life on the Baltimore waterfront and in St. Mary's Industrial Training School is well shown and the influence of Brother Mathias on him is skilfully emphasized. Of course, being a Hollywood production, the picture has a love story in it, but strangely enough the love angle is justified, for Ruth's relations with his wife were strictly storybook. Her restraining and inspiring influence is not understated.

The rest of Ruth's life on the screen is a series of scenes at the various stadia in which he played. The high points of his career—his sixty homers, the four-homer game and his years with the Yankees, are depicted in a quick, pat, blatantly dramatic way. Along with the poetic justice climaxes, this has the audience screaming "That's it! Good for him!"

Bendix's personal mannerisms and ability as a comedian provide some bright humorous spots in line with the theme of the picture. The picture will further the Babe Ruth legend and bring him to many too young to remember the Bambino.

Al Bollington's request program of organ music is an enjoyable feature of the program. His stupendous repertoire is remarkable and his improvisations nothing short of genius.

"I Like It Here"

"I Like It Here"—a title open to obvious but deserved remarks from venomous critics—is a comedy on display last night and tonight at the Museum Theatre. It's about an aged professor and his family whose minor domestic difficulties are inflated into two hours of tedium. Into their troubled home comes an ingratiating young immigrant, reminiscent of Saturday Evening Post's "Hilda", who sets everything right. He reconciles the professor and his wife (it seems they hadn't been on good terms), starts daughter's fiance on a dazzling political career and eliminates an obnoxious rival for her hand.

Reduced to these essentials it doesn't sound very funny; padded with three acts of cliches it still doesn't sound very funny. In fact, it is thoroughly mediocre. Perhaps to cover the play's poverty the Midland Players violently over-acted. Least overwhelming were Joan Armstrong and Frederick Gordon as the ingenue and her nasty suitor. In the explosive category Rolf Kenton, as the Mr. Fixit, at least gets away with it. You might say stole the show, an inconsequential theft.

It would be unfair to judge the group from this effort; they'll have a better chance to show their stuff later on in "Angel Street" and "Blithe Spirit".

W. Givens Wins Intercollegiate Trials

Fires Warm 75-76-151 Takes 1st Team Spot

Firing a warmish 151 for 36 holes, Bill Givens of OCE won first spot on the intercollegiate golf team at St. Andrews yesterday. Givens, who won the interfaculty championship last week with a 72, shot a 75-76 yesterday to lead the field of 36 who went to the post.

The three others on the senior team on the basis of yesterday's play are Ross Hunter, Trinity; R. Easson, Ajax, and H. Watson.

Hunter put together an 84-74—155 for second place on the team, and Watson counted 82-74—156, for third. Easson tallied 81-76—157, for the last place on the senior team.

The next four best players in yesterday's tourney will make up this year's edition of the intermediate intercollegiate team. They are Don Home, Vic, 78-80—158; S. McLennan, UC, 78-81—159; R. Morris, SPS, 79-80—159; and G. Button, SPS, 78-81—159.

Knapp of Meds barely missed an intercollegiate spot, coming home in 160 for the two rounds. A pair of hockey stars also placed high up on the lists yesterday, with Paul Hutzalak, Varsity Junior and Dents goaltender, Bill Spence, star centre on the Varsity intercollegiate ice squad both firing 163. Harvey and Little of Vic also shot 163.

Schoolmen predominated in the day's play, with four of the eight intercollegiate spots going to them. Two were from Ajax and two were from Queens Park campus.

Hunter and Watson, who both made the senior team, had the best one-round scores of the day, both touring the course in 74.

JUNIOR TRACK MEET HAS 130 ENTRANTS

A record entry of more than 130 will go to the post today in the junior inter-faculty track meet, according to applications received in the intramural office.

With competition in 14 events, the 100 yards is the most popular with 32 entrants. The 220 has the next highest entry list, with 26.

Barry Lowes, who is time-tabling the meet, is tackling the problem of getting the meet run off before dark, and has set the starting time at 1:15. "I wish I could start it earlier," he commented. Competition in the meet is open to all who have not placed in an intercollegiate contest in the event entered.

Vic Footballers "Dark Horses" Says Patterson

Coach Bill Paterson is faced with a man-sized rebuilding job in his first year as mentor of Vic's Mulock Cup-winning gridders. Only four of last year's squad have returned to the fold, making the team pretty much of an unknown quantity in the Intramural football race.

Returnees in the backfield are Harry Damp and Jake Morrow while Alex Watson and Bob Dowcet figure to be the main blocks in the front wall.

Despite the lack of experienced members, skipper Paterson is happy in the thought that he at least has ample reserve strength. "I have two full teams," he said, "and one is as good as the other."

Paterson stated that he was counting on newcomers Keith Sumner and Tom Dryden to share the load of backfield duties with Damp. "These three will do most of the kicking and passing," he said.

A star of last year's Vic outfit, Paterson was reluctant to discuss the style of play or the formation to be used this year but he did say that the average weight of the squad was about 180 pounds. Rival coaches can draw their own conclusions.

Not having seen his charges in a game, Paterson also declined to predict the amount of success his team would have in league contests. Said he: "I feel we are the dark horse this year."

Intermediates Play Opener On Friday

By EDWARD J. SOKOLOWSKI

The Varsity Intermediates have their first test at football this season when they meet the Western Colts from London on Friday, in Varsity Stadium. The Second Blues have been practising ever since the beginning of the school term and Al Brown, assisted by Don Bark, have moulded a new team that has not been equalled in the past.

With new strategy all mapped out for the players, the team takes on a new form that promises to bring much football fame to the University of Toronto. The spirit of the team is at an all time high and the players are giving all they have in practices. Brown and Don Bark have received much co-operation from the players and have found it easy to mould a new Blue grid team.

The competition in this league is very tough with O.A.C. as the top team, winners of last year's Intermediate league. The Western Colts wound up second in the league last season and this year they have a small but very tricky backfield to aid their cause. The McMaster entry in this loop also have a new team this season and they hope to pull plenty of surprises.

The Intermediates have not had a chance to show how well they can do against real opposition but in scrimmages with St. Mike's and the Senior Blues they have proven that they can take as well as give. Their defensive work was very noticable and they have a very effective aerial attack.

The game this Friday should be a good one to see. The Intermediates this season should do very well in their loop and with this first game against the Western Colts, they will find out how well they do stand up in the circuit.

No admission will be charged at the Varsity Stadium for the game and it will be well worth the while to miss a few hours of labs and lectures for this game.

TENNIS BALLS SALE

"Get them while they last," Miss Boyd in the intramural office commented yesterday. She was talking about the tennis balls the office has for sale at three-for-a-quarter. The balls were only slightly used in the interfaculty tennis tourney which ends today. "Come in and pick them over," she added.

SPORTSWOMAN

Two softball games were played on Trinity field yesterday between one and two. In the third league game Meds swamped St. Hilda's II 14-1.

The Saints' one run was scored in the last inning by Jean Kerr who was the first one of her team to get safely to first base. Those before her were either struck out by the fast pitching of Meds' Irene Haines or else cut off at first base by the excellent fielding and receiving of Irene's team mate Sally Sarles, first base. Irene's batting average is just as commendable. Out of four times at bat, she got on base three times, hitting a homer in the second inning.

The Trinity team made a very poor showing. Their fielding was poor, their throwing wild. One bystander said, "They seem to be afraid of the ball." However, the Saint's catcher Sally Lou Sneath played will throughout the game, despite a hard blow on the hand from the bat of the first batter, and the team, along with their loyal, gowned supporters helped make up in enthusiasm what they may have lacked in skill and practice.

In the other corner of the field, PHE II downed St. Mike's 7-2, in a more evenly matched contest. Each member of the Phys. Ed team pulled her own weight, doing her own job in field and getting on base at least once.

The St. Mike's team was held together by two star players, Vic Baechler, third base, and Nancy Goetz, short stop. Besides being a hard hitter and a veteran base stealer, Nan Goetz, who scored the first run, is a roving short stop who catches most of the balls which come her way.

Anderson and Turner Reach Tennis Finals

With weather warm and no wind, conditions were ideal for playing the semi-finals in the men's intramural tennis tournament at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club yesterday.

The only upset of the day occurred when the third seeded doubles team of Powell and Little from Ajax won over the second seeded Langmaid and Dawes, 6-4, 6-2. In the other doubles semi-final the first seeded Anderson and Turner had no trouble with Murphy and Eberly, 6-0, 6-2

Singles

In the singles the Langmaid-Howard match was long and tiring, lasting the full three sets and close to two hours, with Jack Langmaid winning 6-3, 3-6, 6-2. The other set matches saw Anderson beat Powell 6-0, 6-0, Dawes win over MacDonald 6-3, 6-2, and Turner over Farrell 6-1, 6-0 for the semi-finals. Anderson crushed Dawes 6-0, 6-0, and Turner defeated Langmaid 8-6, 6-4.

Finals

Big Art Anderson, last year's singles champ will defend his title in the singles finals against Len Turner at 11 o'clock this morning with the match being lengthened to the best three of five sets.

At three p.m. the erstwhile rivals, Anderson and Turner will join hands to oppose Powell and Little of Ajax to decide the doubles titlists.

Both games will assuredly be in the expert category, so persons wishing to come out and watch can be certain of picking up a couple of new tricks to add to the bag.

Doubles

Anderson and Turner defeated Ryan and McCready, 6-0, 6-1.

Murphy and Eberly defeated Smythe and McClure, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Powell and Little defeated McKnight and Anderson, 6-1, 7-5.

Langmaid and Dawes defeated Fletcher and Watson, 6-2, 6-4.

Semi-Finals

Anderson and Turner defeated Murphy and Eberly, 6-0, 6-2.

Powell and Little defeated Langmaid and Dawes, 6-4, 6-2.

Singles

Anderson defeated Powell, 6-0, 6-0.

Dawes defeated Macdonald, 6-3, 6-2.

Langmaid defeated Howard, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

Turner defeated Farrell, 6-1, 6-0.

Singles Semi-Finals

Anderson defeated Dawes, 6-0, 6-0.

Turner defeated Langmaid, 8-6, 6-4.

Speaking Of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

Well, this is the big Saturday. This is when the Blues start playing for keeps. All that work that's been going on since early September, get's a chance to prove itself this Saturday.

This is the chance the boys have been waiting for. WESTERN—and somehow the name doesn't strike the usual cold chill down the spine of Varsity students. Nobody says we'll definitely beat the Mustangs—but there's an interest and anticipation around the campus these days that's a distinct novelty. Sure, there's been interest before, but this is the first time I have seen students keeping watch at 4:30 a.m. for a precious ducat for the Western game—or any other game—And the game's in London yet. (The word "seen" is not to be taken literally.)

Now is the time to rally—now is the time to show the Blues that the student body is behind them body and soul. In the past there's been too much soul, not enough body. Let's get a little fanatic—let's act like students, and forget for awhile that we're supposed to be little ladies and gentlemen—let's work up a good solid hate. Aincha been told?—Ya gotta hate 'em!

The long and short—

For an example of sheer fortitude, did you notice Joe Kane nonchalantly walk off the field Saturday with his nose practically hanging out on his cheek-bone. Joe's proboscis has a bad habit of getting in the way—he's had it broken several times. He's presently sitting it out in the hospital, with splints trying to hold the smashed member in place long enough to heal. Two weeks is what they're telling Joe—more likely it'll be close to a month before he gets back in action.

That was the long—now for the short.—"Beat Western! !"

Soccer Blues Edge Ajax 4-1 Small at Helm

Yesterday afternoon John Small skippered a Varsity soccer team of mixer Senior and Intermediate men to a 4-1 win over Ajax.

Play was indifferent on an under-sized field which further complicated matters by the tricky bounce it gave the ball owing to its uneven dirt surface.

In the first half the Varsity men were undoubtedly the better team and the half-time score of 2-1 was a very fair statement of affairs even though the Ajax goal scored from near the half-way line by Norwegian left-half Finn Dahlin was a lucky shot. The Varsity wingers, Jim Barber and especially Neville Conyers both played very steady games with repeated and fine centering.

Al Beckwith deserved his opening goal of the game and Bob Antoni's goal was no surprise either after his consistent play.

The second half saw far more of the play up in the Varsity half owing to the arrival of Mefim, Ajax dynamic Ethiopian left winger whose play was quite the most outstanding of the afternoon and well worthy of a ballet dancer. Ajax were fortunate not to score whereas Antoni and Beckwith, although playing well were lucky to get in another goal apiece.

The interest of the game lay not so much in the patchy play as in the practice it offered all the players. One interesting aspect of the game was the cosmopolitan nature of the teams; Varsity went prepared to meet a very representative team and indeed they were not disappointed, but it was not until the return journey that they realized how wide were their own places of origin—India, China, England, West Indies and Scotland.

Interfac. Soccer Opener Today

Today the business of thinning down the number of Inter-faculty soccer entries begins, for of the fifteen teams entered there is only room for six in the play-offs. The teams are arranged in four groups. Two of the first group, consisting of Trinity I, Vic. I, Jr. S.P.S. Ajax, will advance and two of the second also but of the third and fourth groups only one from each will be in at the kill.

Second group is: Forestry, Sr. S. P.S., Meds., and U.C. Third group is: WYC., Knox, Emmanuel and Trin. II. Group four is made up of Dents., Vic. II, St. Mike's, and Pre-Meds. Tomorrow Trinity I plays Vic. I at four o'clock on the South Campus.

The head of a New York model agency has been under concerted attack lately by the aroused defenders of the American type of beauty. He merely came out flatly in support of the more fragile, beefless type native to England and the Continent, as opposed to the "scrubbed face American type". We imagine that the supposedly outraged beauties themselves are not too strongly behind their defenders. What pulsating young beauty, (they all pulsate, presumably) cares to claim as her deadliest attraction, a well scrubbed shining face? We may be falling victim to that much abused "bourgeois decadence", but give us the exotic type every time. Cheers for the head of that model agency, and a cake of soap to Miss Scrubbed Face of 1948.

Sailing Club Out To Win Grant Trophy

Fred Baker, newly elected Commodore of the University Yacht Club, Tuesday night told of plans for an intercollegiate racing meet to be held Sunday, Oct. 17, at the Toronto waterfront. Elimination series will be held at the R.C.Y.C. next week in order to choose racing crews for this meet.

Before the war the club won and held the Colonel Grant Intercollegiate Racing Trophy. With a good turnout of crews U. of T. should again capture this prize from rivals Queen's and R.M.C.

This week-end the club is sending a select crew to represent Toronto at New London, Conn., where the eastern division of American colleges is holding its final races. Crews from such universities as Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard will oppose the following four-man U. of T. squad: Rycken Suydam, Guy Mills, Mert Yolles, Fred Baker.

Commodore Baker will be assisted in arranging such club activities by B. Whitten, R. Bele, P. Pangman, David Hague, who were elected at yesterday's meeting. During the winter the executive plans to provide movies and lectures for all members new to the art of sailing. Such preliminary training will be invaluable to any students who hope to begin sailing next summer.

Vic Married Couples Elect New Executive At Initial Meeting

The election of the executive and the planning of a full season of social activities were the highlights of the first meeting of the Victoria College Married Students Club. Meetings will be held fortnightly with the next one Oct. 12.

The slate of officers for the forthcoming season is as follows: President, D. Allen; Secretary, K. Lambert; Treasurer, R. Goodenough; Entertainment Committee, Mrs. Ferguson and J. Harris, chairmanned by D. Wanless.

INCREASED EXPENSE

Montreal, Oct. 7—(C. U. P.)—At a meeting of the McGill Students' Athletic Council held early in the spring it was decided that a charge of $1.50 should be levied on students to cover the cost of a season ticket to all home football games.

This step was necessitated by the increased expenses incurred by the Athletic Department during the past two years.

Our Readers Write

CORRECTION

The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

The report of the opening meeting of the University of Toronto Russian Circle which appeared in the Tuesday, October 5th issue of The Varsity contained a political comment which was quite uncalled for, and could possibly be prejudicial to this club.

It is assumed that this indiscretion was due to inexperience as were other inaccuracies in the report, but it is part of the editor's responsibilities to avoid such statements which might injure the good name of any organization on the campus.

As was stated, our club is definitely non-political and was formed to promote interest in the various Slavic peoples and their cultures. It is not in the least concerned with one's politics any more than with one's taste in food, clothes or cigarettes.

Speaking on behalf of our membership I would appreciate it if you would correct the unfortunate impression created by the report, by publishing this letter.

G. Denbeigh, IV U. C.
President of the Russian Circle

The comment referred to came after a description of the club as "non-political," and read "although this may disappoint many of Stalin's more rabid followers . . . .". The Varsity sincerely regrets the misunderstanding due to negligence of the editors. Such comment is directly contrary to the policy of the paper and will be watched carefully in future.-Ed.

LA TRAVIATA

The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

I have the deepest respect for those who write for The Varsity.

But there are statements which should not be made unadvisedly, and which would seem to indicate a lack of knowledge of the subject treated.

My friends and I feel that the write-up of the movie "La Traviata" (Oct. 5) belongs in this class.

Take, for instance, the remark, "The production and acting are quite overdone.'" I do not know how much opera your columnist has been exposed to. However, I know that I have rarely seen a more restrained performance of any opera—even at the Metropolitan. I was particularly attracted by Gino Mattera's delivery of "Un di felice" while leaning on a table.

No faces, no gestures, no sobs. Could this be called overdone?

As for the statement that "only the superb singing of the principals and chorus redeems the movie from mediocrity"—I would like to point out that Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, allowed by some to be an authority on the subject, has praised the film as being "the most outstanding operatic achievement yet to reach the screen."

Yours truly,
Joan-Mary Attwood,
II Vic.

Book Hunting

One of the modern additions to the campus is the spacious new building beside the old observatory, which houses the Press Book Store. Hunting for books "at the press" is not nearly as hazardous as it used to be in the years gone by, when anyone who couldn't hold his breath for at least half an hour just might as well not attempt a purchase.

Satterly Condemns Kissing Machine Designates Invention - - "Silly Thing!"

Difficult are the ways of Scientific invention. Last week an enterprising student of the U.W.O. invented a machine that allegedly measured the potency of kisses. Banned by Dean J. B. Collip of Western before its initial try-out at a freshman dance it received a further set-back yesterday afternoon when Dr. J. Satterly of the Physics Dept. of the U. of T. declared it scientifically impractical.

"The machine is to test the strength of the ordicularis oris muscle (lips to laymen)," explained a Western student.

"An electrode is placed between the lips of the couple and the tension during osculation is measured in "alpha waves a second."

When asked if the idea of the machine was scientifically sound, Dr. Satterly said. "Of course not; silly thing!" Pressed further the professor added that he classed it as the product of a moronic brain of the same type that parade freshies around the campus in outlandish costumes. "Should cut their heads off," he said and added that the world would be a better place for it. After divesting himself of this comment, Dr. Satterly ordered. The Varsity reporter from his office.

Dean Beatty of the Faculty of Arts of U. of T. said he could not say if the machine would be allowed at dances on the Toronto campus. Chuckling, he said that Professor C. McAndrews should be consulted.

The atom bomb is the most discussed gadget of the year but this machine, outdoes the atom bomb in sheer dramatic effect. If specialized kissing is indulged in, the machine hoists a red flag and a sign lights up saying "tilt."

Summer Scholars Tell Of German Restoration

The Germans are sick in body and in mind but with education and leadership there is hope that their nation will recover. This was the thought stressed by four students who addressed the International Relations Club yesterday afternoon in Cartwright Hall on aspects of German life, as they found it.

The students, Mary Stevens, B.A., School of Graduate Studies, Warren Goldring, IV UC, E. Cosford, III Trinity, and Peter Dobell, IV Trinity, spent six weeks of the past summer at the ISS seminar in Germany. Their opinions were based on their life and work with German students, visits to D.P. camps and German homes, and conversations with German people in all walks of life.

Miss Stevens, speaking of the social-economic life in Germany, described housing conditions with 13 million refugees without adequate accommodation, the clothing situation where people were still using old uniforms to keep themselves warm, the low calorie diet which rations permitted, and the meagre allotment of fuel. These conditions, she said, have completely demoralized the people.

Ed. Cosford, president of the club, read an article which he had contributed to a German paper giving his impressions of the German people. He criticized their hesitancy in taking part in their representative government and their lack of interest in political parties. He pointed out, however, that they were not familiar with the operation of such a type of government and needed to develop tolerance, the mental approach and the methods of open discussion which are prerequisites to the parliamentary system.

Warren Goldring, chairman of the ISS Committee, spoke on the economic financial position and explained the currency reform which began on June 20. He described the situation in the words of a German, saying that before the reform there was nothing in the stores and lots of money, but now there is lots in the stores and no money with which to buy the goods. He explained why the limited amounts of money and the stringent regulations were necessary.

The last speaker, Peter Dobell, described Germany's position in Europe today and stated that Germany was the key to the political future of Western Europe. If all Germany became Communist the remainder of Western Europe would become Communist but if the Allies gave support and encouragement to the Germans, there is hope of stopping Russian expansion.

Debates Planned With U.S. Teams

Several new activities are being planned by the Hart House debates committee this year, it was announced yesterday.

Informal noon hour debates, which will commence later this month, are designed to give both beginners and experienced debaters practice in public speaking. Members of the debates committee will give assistance and advice, and it is hoped to organize public speaking classes at some future date, although so far plans are in the nebulous stage. The organization of noon-hour debates is in the hands of Fred Giles, III U.C.

Debates with American universities are also planned for some time this year. A small travelling allowance has been included in the budget, and arrangements are going forward to set dates and subjects of debates. So far, no announcement can be made of which American institutions will be challenged.

Ramsey Says Group Unique In Functions

Elections for the executive of the Student Association of the School of Social Work will take place next week.

"The Student Association fulfills many functions," said its president Dean Ramsey. "We think the Students' Association is unique for the part it plays in the professional world and its relation with the faculty."

Ramsey cited two examples of the work of the association.

The executive has been instrumental in doubling the starting salary of social workers in the short time of six years. The executive prepares a brief which is presented to the association for approval, and then copies are sent to each social agency.

The second example given by Ramsey was the Curriculum Committee, that sends out questionnaires to each student asking questions about the curriculum. On the basis of this the committee makes suggestions to the staff.

The Student Association plans to conduct a series of Wednesday afternoon lectures presenting well-known speakers.

BEAT WESTERN

Less Last Year's Aces Blues Deserve Support To Humble Mustang Ego

With the initial test of the '48 season for the Varsity Blues coming up tomorrow afternoon in London, it's all very well for you guys and gals to sit on those plush seats up in the K.C.R. and mumble through your brews "Beat Western," as if there were nothing more to it than that.

Memoral Stadium

As if all the Blues have to do tomorrow is to run out onto the sod of Little Memorial Stadium, and forthwith to snatch a victory from John Philipio Metras; as if all Masterson has to do is to send any 12 beefies on the field at once, and triumph is ours.

But leave us not be hastily carried away by our emotions. Leave us examine the situation more closely. Yes, leave us.

In the first place, and we hate to bring up the ghastly thought, the Western Mustangs are still the reigning Intercollegiate rugby champs, and on this basis alone, must be treated as the team to beat. They're the champs until some other team comes along and knocks them over.

They Did Before

Now we all know that the Blues tied the Mustangs 12-12 right out in London in the last game of the '47 season. Some observers believe that in that game the Blues played over their heads, and that the Mustangs had a poor day. I didn't see the game, but do not subscribe to those theories.

Leave us look, firstly, and note the Blues of that fighting '47 crew who are not back for tomorrow's game.

The first name that comes to mind, but natch, is that of Intercollegiate all-star Steve Karrys. Steve last year was the best secondary defense player in the league, and along with outside wing Jim Grierson, another all-star of '47 who has graduated from the U. of T., combined to thwart the feared Mustang end-sweeps before they ever got started.

Stars Missing

Karrys and Grierson will undoubtedly be missed greatly. Pete Bennett is another whose absence will be felt. Bennett, a hard-charging middle who earned the reputation of being "the cleanest and most gentlemanly lineman of '47" (Yak, yak) failed (as did Karrys) and is now playing with Argos. Karrys is a starting back with the Ottawa Roughriders.

The other first-rate players of last year's team who are not back are Jack McReynolds and Johnny Roe.

So there we have five members of the '47 Blues who are not with the current edition of the squad. Whether or not Masterson has found capable replacements for them we should all know by dusk tomorrow p.m.

American Style

Then too, there is the fact that the Blues this year are playing, offensively at least, what is essentially an American style of rugby. Masterson himself admits that his system is a bit difficult for the boys, and that he isn't quite sure just how well the team has mastered it.

In the first place, the Mustangs are only a bunch of ordinary bums —correction, ordinary Joes who are far from invincible. Take last year's game for instance.

Then too, the new players who will meet the Mustangs tomorrow have none of that personal awe and respect that Varsity teams of two and three years ago had. As far as they are concerned, the Mustangs are just another team which can be beaten as readily as any other.

Olympics

Lastly, the recent Olympics are in the Blues favour. The McFarlane Brothers and Parry are back with Metras, and for tomorrow's contest should be accustomed to seeing opposing Blueboys buzzing past them. After all, it happened often enough in Wembley Stadium last summer.

As far as coach Masterson knows now, his starting team will consist of Gray, Clarke, Jones, Copp, Hardman, Mustard, and Stockman on

Ronald Compton Elected Member CCF Committee

Ron Compton, IV U.C. was elected to the six-man resolutions committee of the Provincial Convention of the CCF, Ontario section, meeting in the King Edward Hotel yesterday. Compton, a 29-year-old ex-service student who is representing the East York CCF at the convention, will help word and reword resolutions which will determine CCF policy and organization in the Province during the coming year.

Student delegates to the Convention yesterday participated mainly in closed sessions which discussed internal CCF party organization and details of constitutional amendment. However, they also heard Ontario CCF Leader E. B. Jolliffe outline the present situation of the CCF in Ontario, and helped to overwhelmingly endorse the actions of the Party's provincial Council in expelling R. H. Carlin, former member of the legislature for Sudbury, who contested the last Provincial election as an independent candidate in opposition to an official CCF candidate.

W. Allan Becket, Graduate student at the University of Toronto and delegate from the Eglington CCF, yesterday confirmed that he would be a candidate for one of the five vice-presidential posts at stake in the elections of officers to be held Saturday afternoon. A preliminary survey of delegate feeling revealed that Beckett, who graduated last year from Victoria College would receive the support of at least 90 of the over two hundred delegates, usually enough to elect an aspirant to this position.

Aid To Athletes Topic of Debate In House Opener

With one eye cocked at advertisements of tomorrow's football game with Western, the Hart House debates committee last night approved the resolution: "That this university should grant athletic scholarships" as the topic for a special debate on Tuesday, October 12.

The debate will be part of an expanded program sponsored by the debates committee this year, and is especially designed to welcome freshmen to debating in Hart House. One of the reasons given by committee members for choosing the athletic topic was that it demanded no knowledge of politics, and gave every new member of the house a chance to air his views.

Another unusual feature of this debate will be that all the speakers on the paper are Skulemen. Debaters from S.P.S. have never before filled all four of the lead-off spots. The speakers for Tuesday will be Drew Douglas, John Woodrow, Ray Webster and V. L. Richards, all of IV S.P.S.

The Speaker of the House will be Harvey Hay, IV Victoria, and he will call the house to order at 8 o'clock to begin the debate. Speakers on the paper will be allowed ten minutes each, and when they have finished, the debate will be thrown open to all comers. Although the evening is designed especially for freshmen, all members of Hart House are, as usual, invited to attend, committee members said.

Books

Every day for the past two weeks, students have walked out of the shiny new structure just to the south of the old Observatory, shocked and saddened by the amount of ready cash they have left behind them.

Like everything else, books have gone up. There doesn't seem to be much that publishing houses can do about the higher cost of labor and materials. But there is a more sensible attitude towards textbooks that can—and should—be adopted at once.

There are two reasons for buying books. One is to make a permanent addition to a personal library. The other is to add the contents of the book to the store of knowledge of the reader. And, although textbooks may often be valuable permanent additions to one's collection of books, they are not likely to be bought primarily for that purpose.

A textbook, carried to and from the campus, read, re-read, perhaps lent to other students, annotated, rained on, dropped, snowed on . . . the vicissitudes are innumerable . . . such a book ordinarily loses much of its pristine freshness by the end of the college year, and is relegated to the attic, or sold to someone else who will give it the same rough treatment. If a copy of that particular book is desired as part of a permanent library, it usually has to be bought again.

The only useful function of most textbooks is to serve as a working copy, to be used for a year, and then discarded. Why, then, do the publishers continue to give us expensive hard covers, costly linen bindings, slick but pointless coated paper stock, broad, wasteful margins, and three or four flyleaves at each end of the printed matter?

In Europe, where the external form of a book is sensibly considered to be less important than its contents, textbooks have long been available for a fraction of the cost of ours. They are printed on cheap pulp stock, with narrow margins, and no covers. The province of Quebec, following the sensible French rather than the ostentatious British trend, is full of cheap books.

The saving on a year's books for many students would come to thirty or forty dollars, especially now.

The University Press could well set a trend by publishing its texts in cheap editions. Or is the object of even the academic publishers, like that of the out-and-out commercial ones, to charge all that the traffic will bear?

Geometry Shmometry Pwogwam

"Modern educational practices," said Anitole Snarque Phd. at a recent gathering of pedagogues "are hopelessly outdated. Why can't the techniques of those master purveyors of information, the advertisers, be adopted to the classroom?"

(Quote from Tecumseh Times)

Announcer: The Faculty of Arts takes great pleasure in presenting its all star geometry show and your master of ceremonies is——

Musicians: Fanfare: first four bars of Sharezade.

Announcer: Professor Whortleburry.

Whortleburry: As you will remember from last Friday's show Jim Straightline was torn between Jessie and John Straightline (better known as an AB and CD) and the situation has resolved itself into a triangle. The story was further complicated by the appearance of three little angles, one of them acute angle. Now, before we go on with our show a word from our sponsor . . . .

Quartet: Singing to the tune of "you call everybody darling."

Things that equal to the same thing
Are equal to each other. Axiom one.
Which twin has the Toni?
Which one is the phony?
Learn this axiom for tomorrow's class
It will be fun.

Announcer: That's right folks . . . things which are equal to the same thing are equal to each other. No other geometry class can make that statement. Ask the man who owns one. Try it and see for yourself today . . . . just get two things that are equal to the same thing . . . . you'll find that ten times out of ten they are equal to each other. AND if you are not completely satisfied with the result, just tear the hypotenuse off a right angled triangle and mail it to us. We will send you free of charge two equal things.

Whortleburry: Jim Straightline has forgotten Jessie and Joan. For a while he was attracted by a nice set of curves (parabolic to be exact) and they met at infinity where they had cocktails. Then had a quarrel as you remember and Jim left in a huff. The huff driver let him off at the corner of XY and YZ. There he fell for another line, Janis by name. Now we find them in a cozy dance hall doing the rhombus.

Jim: Darling you rhombus divinely.

Janis: You should see me in a square.

Jim: You've got a good angle.

Janis: Oh, I've geen going around in the best of circles. But lately, I've been going straight.

Jim: Why can't we get together?

Janis: Because we are parallel honey.

Jim hums a few lines of the Parallel Line Blues (to the tune of Blues in the night) then breaks into song.

My Mamma done tole me
When I was a short line
My Mamma done tole me, son
A line's the short distance
Between two points,
A parallel thing that leads you to sing
The blues in the night.

Janis: Oh Jim, we'll have to run parallel just because of that old theorem.

Jim: We'll never meet. We're fated to run side by side forever. We can't even meet at infinity.

Whortleburry: (sobbing violently) Will Jim ever meet with Janis or will that nasty old theorem stand between them?

Announcer: And now the big feature of next week's show. It will be called "Stop the Theorem." Four beautiful girls will recite a theorem, and the student who recognizes it first will win . . .

2nd Announcer: . . a trip for two by dogsled to Nome with all expenses paid.

Announcer: The chimes from Hart House tower.

2nd Announcer: A folder of straight pins.

Lady Alexander Receives Degree At McGill, Wed.

Montreal, Oct. 6—(CUP) — All lectures scheduled for three o'clock Wednesday, were cancelled to give the students opportunity to attend the Fall Convocation at McGill University. The Founder's Day activities were held to mark the 204th anniversary of the birth of James McGill, and to celebrate one hundred years of teaching in the faculty of law at the University.

Among those to receive honorary degrees, was Viscountess Alexander, upon whom was conferred the degree of Doctor of Law. The last time a woman received this honor was in 1940. Others who were similarly honored, were P.Q. Premier Maurice Duplessis, and Dr. Sidney Smith.

A dinner was held in the Mount Royal Hotel, under the auspices of the Graduates' Society. Earlier in the day, His Excellency Viscount Alexander inspected a guard of honor, provided by the Canadian Grenadier Guards.

Youth Speakers Over CBC Network

A series of three consecutive Friday evening discussion broadcasts, entitled "Youth Speaks Out", starts tonight at eight o'clock over the C.B.C. network. The subjects for discussion on each of the broadcasts will be: Youth and Employment, Youth and Leisure, and The Temper of Our Times: A Report from Europe.

The series of broadcasts are under the auspices of the "Co-ordinating Committee of Canadian Youth Groups". Some of the campus groups that co-operated in planning these programmes are: Student Christian Movement, C.C.F. Club, and Newman Club. "The C.C.C.Y.G. is truly a democratically formed organization representing all of Canadian Youth," said its chairman, T. Nichols. "Some members include: The Canadian Jewish Congress (Youth Division), National Federation of Labor Youth, Student Christian Movement, United Church Y. M. U's, YMCA and YWCA.

Attempts are being made to establish organized listening groups from coast to coast. After the broadcasts the chairman of the group would take over and the discussion would be continued in each group.

Reid Scott, graduate of Victoria College and now a student at Osgoode Hall, will be one of the speakers at the first of these discussions.

Hitchhikers

Returning to their Alma Mater the hard way, Jack Stanborough, left, and [illegible] Windsor, smiling at the thought of their expense-cutting vacation to Los Angeles. Judging from the signs, ingenuity [illegible] of their travels. They were only two of many U of T undergrads who used their holidays, or at least part of them, to experience some of that "broadening" travel. Let's hope their success as gentlemen of the road does not tempt them to careers as hobos!

Progressive Conservatives Describe Club's Functions

Yesterday afternoon the U of T Progressive Conservatives held their first meeting for organizational purposes. George Hogan, as president and chairman, stressed primarily that the club is not a part of the political party machine, but is an independent group of students who are in sympathy with, and in support of, the principles and policies of the party. The club is, however, affiliated with a nation-wide P.C. organization.

"As a youth organization it has two chief functions: to stimulate interest amongst the students in the policies of the P.C.'s and to voice their ideas and opinions in the formulation of the party policies," Hogan said.

Hogan outlined briefly the anticipated activities of the society, including a large rally which is to be held in the near future. It is to be addressed by the new federal leader, Mr. George Drew, Premier of Ontario. Hogan announced that this year, for the benefit of all interested students, particularly those in the south end of the campus, the monthly meeting will be held in the evening.

Hogan explained that another essential function of the club is to take an active part in the Mock Parliament, where the members of the different political factions can come together, and where invaluable experience can be gained in parliamentary debating.

OAC-McMASTER FEUDS

The fall feud which occurs before each OAC-McMaster football game began this year with McMaster invading the Agricultural College vading the Agricultural College men's residence with a prize bull. In retaliation OAC invaded McMaster University's Edwards Hall planning to whitewash the halls.

A running fight ensued and McMaster took several captives to whom they gave impromptu hair-cuts. A counter-attack by OAC failed to release them, but after breakfast the crest-fallen prisoners were returned.

Dr. H. Cassidy Disagrees With Welfare Statement By Department Official

Dr. H. M. Cassidy, head of the School of Social Work, expressed his disagreement yesterday with a statement made by Dr. Charlotte Whitten, O.B.E., head of the Child Welfare Department, Ottawa, as reported by The Globe and Mail, in which she said that social security has become a "political football".

Miss Whitten had further maintained that the government was incapable of handling social work but Dr. Cassidy pointed out that child welfare, to which she had specifically referred, has been managed successfully by government agencies of several Canadian provinces and in many states of the U. S. A. Although the government's policy may not be flawless, he said, neither is that of the various private agencies in this country.

To illustrate his point, Dr. Cassidy referred ot our system of education, stating that if we accept the idea of public education then we should not hesitate to entrust to the government, other social services such as child welfare. Public institutions such as education, must neither be ignored nor scorned he said. Toronto is a public university but does that make it a less efficient one than McMaster, a private institution, he asked in further illustrating his point.

"I leave the answer to Dr. Whitten's statement to the undergraduate jury," said Dr. Cassidy in closing the interview.

Mock Court at Vic Women Do Washing

Victoria College wound up initiation ceremonies last night with their annual mock court and candle light service. The court, held in Alumni Hall, tried freshies for disobedience. A dignified judge and jury, waving noise makers and blowing bubbles, passed sentence. Punishment was varied, three freshies were sent to do the weekly wash in the horse trough on Bloor St., others took part in a contest for "The Girl I Would Most Like to Play Rugby With."

When court adjourned, the audience, judge and jury assembled before Annesley Hall where Sophs lit their candles and led the Freshies back to the Vic Chapel for a brief message from Miss MacPherson, Dr. Brown and Dean Bennett.

Freshies received the Lamp of Learning from the Sophs; while singing the song "The Lamb of Learning" the procession filed through Vic corridors and back to Annesley. After the Sophs served refreshments to the Freshies in Wymilwood.

Victoria College To Produce Revue Appearing in Feb.

Victoria College is contemplating producing a full-scale musical review this year along the lines of the U. C. Follies and Meds Daffydil Nite.

A motion passed by the Assembly last Monday night made provision for the establishment of a committee to organize a large-scale show to be produced sometime in February.

The committee will investigate the costs involved and the talent available. At the same time, the committee will draw up a general schedule of the show. This was to be submitted in a report to the Assembly early in November.

The '48 Bob is well under way, and will have a cast of over fifty Vic men. Barring last minute growth, the Bob will be a two-act show this year. As usual the frosh will be bobbed in the first act. The typical freshman this year will be shown in "The Plight of Freddy Freshman". The second act is to be a "wild-eyed wonder" in the words of producer Doug. Maxwell. He would not reveal any of the details about this act—in fact he was a typical Vic Mummy.

The Vic Bob traditionally has always been a male domain, since this show was first produced long before the joys of co-education hit the campus. At Monday's session of the Vic Assembly, however, Director Maxwell sponsored a motion to change the old and bring in the new. A committee composed of Jim Nethercott, Norm Jewison, Clare Green, June Mallabar and Robi Allen will investigate the possibilities of changing the Bob to an equivalent of the U. C. Follies or Daffydil Nite.

Maxwell was quick to point out that this new show will not take the place of the Bob this year, but will be an extravaganza next February. Full details of this show will be forthcoming when committee reports are in, and consultations are held with the powers that be.

Jungle Trek Yields Student Travelogue

"We came back with money left over," said Doug Wilkins, I Soc. and Phil. "Yeah, 19 cents." grinned brother Warren who is going into second year Political Science at Trinity.

Six days ago, Warren and Doug were deep in a hot, steaming jungle, surrounded by bugs, snakes, great rope-like vines, and screeching monkeys, thinking they would never get home.

Dressed in khaki shirts and trousers tucked in sturdy boots—that saw a lot of rough use—the boys, giving their identity to all they met as "Canadian students, not American tourists" hitch-hiked from New Orleans to Panama. With little baggage, but a great deal of film, they took pictures wherever they went. This latter habit got them run out of a Mexican town.

The town was Chichcastenango, and the people are the quiet Mayan Indians, followers of the Apollonian type of culture. Doug and Warren ascended the steps of the local temple to get the scene on their film role. Foreigners on the temple steps are taboo and the ordinarily passive people sent the boys from the town where they had unknowingly committed sacrilege.

Nicaragua Not Wonderful

"Nicaragua is a wonderful place . . . " The Wilkins boys laugh. They would like to find the man who wrote that song and send him down there on a one-way ticket. It is the dirtiest city in Central America though sanitation does exist . . . after a fashion.

They met the president of the city and taught school for a day. Warren takes Spanish and Doug has a speaking acquaintance with the language. Their English lesson to the class was giving a resume of their trip in Spanish and "English as it ought to be spoken", to quote the delighted school teacher.

When they told the railroad company of Nicaragua that they were photographers making a travelogue, free transportation around the beauty spots was put at their disposal.

Honduras Tough Spot

Honduras. You are not a man in Honduras unless you pack a gun, even the officials carry rifles. It is a funny place, the boys agree. Everyone goes about in bare feet for the country is one of the poorest in South America. The people in all these little countries are much the same but each has a different variation of almost every custom. The boys wandered from here to San Jose on foot taking everything in by eye, and still and moving camera.

Cigarettes are bought for five cents a pack and other prices are pretty much in line with this commodity. You don't pay a fixed price for anything, say the boys; you barter for everything. The trip itself cost them $350 plus $300 for film. They ate native food, beans, rice and bananas, slept in a nylon tent and purified their own water. They were inoculated for every known disease and took pills for malaria.

Hitch-Hike To Panama

Once out of the roadless country south of Nicaragua, they hitch-hiked to Panama City where they counted their money and found their resources to be $13. That was about the day university opened and they had to get back on that amount.

In Panama, they took their colored film equipment and went out to the jungle in quest of animal life. They got it. Screeching monkeys sat stock still and stared down at them. A wild boar with a wicked-looking horn came tearing out after them and the boys took to their heels. They were almost petrified. When they viewed the angry boar they looked to the tall trees for cover and saw great impassable spiked vegetation.

Tarzan Setting

The boys described the lush vegetation of the jungle with flourishes and spoke of great vines like something out of Tarzan. To pull one was to invite a battery of poisonous ants that carried everything from leprosy to lockjaw. The malaria-carrying mosquitoes that buzzed about their heads were slapped with a shudder and a prayer and the boys vow they are quite as thick there as in northern Ontario at the height of summer.

That is where they were when most of us were registering, and they say that they despaired then of ever being back in time for college. However, they flew from Havana, Cuba, on a cargo plane to Miami, Florida, and hitch-hicked 1,700 miles in three days on three dollars to Toronto, arriving last Tuesday. They were hungry for they hadn't eaten much since they left Panama.

Having arrived they sigh with relief and regard the past three months as a book. When they show their travelogue in a couple of weeks, they'll live it all over again.

Plans for the next two summers include Europe and the East.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

A Layman's History Part I

The first half of "A Layman's History of Music" was broadcast on CBC "Wednesday Night". For a full appreciation of the tremendous undertaking it would be necessary to treat the programme in its entirety, but we are just as anxious that these lines serve as a reminder that the second half will be heard on October 13.

To say that the two and one half hours seemed like one, at most, is to imply two things. First, that there was not a trace of boredom in those 150 minutes and second, that even so generous an allowance of time seemed insufficient for the large field to be covered, namely European music from the tom-tom stage to Mozart. This observation is not made by way of criticism, rather as expressing the hope that the field may be covered more thoroughly in the future. As it should be, the performance had its hero: Leslie Bell who wrote the text of the history, the man who is a great teacher, because he is not afraid to be a showman, when necessary.

It was inevitable that the social background and the description of instrumental development, strongly stressed in the first half, had to be toned down when the great personalities, beginning with Bach, were reached. But the urbane and easily flowing commentary never allowed the listener to lose sight of the fact that that music is a powerful and indispensable something that is part of the life of every generation and not merely of a gallery of celebrated names. This theme was introduced at the very beginning and, to this listener, the proof of the success of the venture seemed to consist in the fact that this introduction was still in one's mind at the end.

So much for the whole. No less precious was the opportunity to hear as "illustrations" some pieces that are quite outside the standard repertoire. To mention but two: the dramatic choral extract from a Passion by Schuetz and the vocal trio, "The Witch of Endor", by Purcell.

The performers were a generous sample of the best that the musical scene of this country has to offer. Greta Krauss, Frances James, William Morton, Ed Hockridge, the Solway quartet and Geoffrey Waddington, the conductor, and so many others require neither introduction nor special comments beside the statement that they were at their usual best. Two younger participants, Dirk Keetbas, flute, and Margaret Ireland, piano, joined the veterans at their high level. Mr. E. Morgan's extremely pleasing speaking voice merits special mention.

It takes little imagination to gauge the event as an organizational feat. The broadcast came, not only from several studies within one building, but from widely separated points, a church, a hall, etc., in the city.

Pres. Gilson Appeals For College Spirit

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Oct. 6—(CUP)—In a brief pointed talk to the Students' Union Council, President Gilson of Manitoba University stressed the need for a university spirit at Manitoba. After remarking that there are signs of college and even faculty spirit to be found on the campus, he asked for an extension of this spirit to the whole university.

He decried the attitude of westerners who underrate their country and its institutions.

Law Society Bans U.B.C. Communist Prepares Appeal

Vancouver, British Columbia, Oct 7—(CUP)—Gordon Martin, Communist law graduate of the University of British Columbia, has been banned from legal practice by the "benchers", inner executive of the British Columbia Law Society. His application for admission to practice was refused.

Refusal, Martin charged, was made because of "political and philosophical beliefs" and because of his affiliations with the LPP and Communist parties. Martin ran on the LPP ticket during the last provincial elections. "There was never any other reason for refusal," Martin said. He is prepared to fight the decision handed down by the benchers, in court if necessary.

Investigation of his affiliations and the degree to which those affiliations affect his fitness for the profession would have to be undertaken, said a letter received from the British Columbia Law Society. "Martin knows why he was rejected and also what he can do about it," declared the treasurer of the Law Society.

John Stanton, solicitor and barrister, whose firm articled the barred student, stated that he would fight the decision with "all available means".

At The Movies—
Good Sam

In this, the age of the "Shmoo" and all the philosophy attached thereto, the film "Good Sam" is especially appropriate. For like that wonderfully libidinous comic-strip animal, Sam Clayton (Gary Cooper) loves people so doggone much and gives up so much of his substance that the movie-goer wonders if the story shouldn't have been entitled "Just Plain Sucker."

Clayton, a department store manager of moderate means and immoderate generosity, after many donations and few rewards, finally gets himself into his biggest jam when $5,000 he has collected from the store staff to stage a Christmas dinner for the needy has been stolen from him. To replace this sum he uses the savings meant for a new home for his wife (Ann Sheridan) and two children.

Meanwhile his happy family have occupied their new residence and Mrs. Clayton, wishing to follow "in his steps" kindly donates all the furnishings from the old home to the Salvation Army. And to make this whole mess really rotten, here it is just a few days before Christmas! Eviction seems inevitable and at the time nobody happens to be in the position to help Good Sam. Believing he is all washed up, Good Sam goes off on a grand drunk.

Here the film suggests that, of every hundred people who profess to be your friend, watch out because for sure ninety-nine of them are liars and the remaining one is an impoverished relative. Then, while Sam is slumped despondently over a bar, the store president sees the light and elevates Clayton to the vice-presidency. The bank manager whose hands formerly were tied now finds them untied and everyone wishes Sam would come home so the happy ending could be effected.

In the final scene Sam is marched back to his loving home by the Salvation Army band in a situation which might well have been conceived by a "New Yorker" cartoonist.

The humor throughout is more often cynical than warm and relies mainly on several very comical situations. The "we-the-people" flavor is somewhat similar to the movies directed by Capra and starring James Stewart. In a not unusual plot, there is surprisingly little triteness however, and, thank heaven, few schmaltzy Hollywood sermons.

Cooper works his cowboy jaw and gulps sufficiently to look like a big good-natured hulk, and Miss Sheridan's performance qualifies her for the Mrs. America award. Both stars however lose many scenes to some extremely talented bit players, most of whose faces were new to this reviewer.

Recommended not as an exceptional movie but as above-average entertainment.

Opposition Raised To Queen's Hazing

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 7 — (CUP)— Pre-war initiation of Arts freshmen is returning at Queen's. This year's crop of frosh will be required to have a brush cut, to wear odd socks pulled halfway up and their pant legs rolled up to halfway between the ankle and the knee. They will have to show up at roll call at 7.30 a.m. every day for a week, and to wear name cards six inches by nine until November 30.

Veteran's Life at U.B.C. Described By Editor Moir

Vancouver, British Columbia, Oct 7—(CUP) — Married student veterans at the University of British Columbia are anticipating a "pretty tough" winter due to the zooming cost of living.

Don Moir, last year's editor of The Varsity, now studying law at UBC, described a typical student vet and his family in the Ubyssey, the campus daily.

Moir said: "Bill Parker, second year Physical Education student, (living with his wife and small son in a trailer camp), finds that his $113 a month stipend from DVA and Family Allowance doesn't stretch very far these days with the cheapest meat at 50c a pound, milk 17c a quart, and eggs more than 60c a dozen.

"Five months old Stephen William Parker, wolfing down some more pablum, added his hearty assent."

Moir said the Parkers, far from being downcast at the prospects, both attest to the happy co-operative life of the camp. With 27 other veteran families, the Parkers live as part of a trailer camp community near the college. Tight budgets practically put any sort of entertainment out of the question for them, but they say that they find plenty of recreation in the camp with their many friends.

Varsity Blues And 1600 Fans Will See These Perform Tomorrow In London

Very few loyal Varsity fans have any affection for the MacFarlane brothers of the University of Western Ontario Mustangs. Any pair of men who would do what they did to us last year are not worthy of Blues' affection. Pictured above is Don, the lesser of the two evils and only because he cannot run as fast as brother Bob.

One refuge from today's fashion-mad world will be the Little Memorial gridiron where long skirts will definitely be out of place as cheerleaders and drum-majorettes of Varsity and Western parade onto the field. Shown above is the University of Western Ontario's band, one of the largest in the college circuit.

PHE-UC Team Victor In Junior Track Meet

A potent UC-PHE team, led by Varsity football and basketball star Jack Gray, garnered 65 points to walk off with top honors in the junior interfaculty track meet at Varsity Stadium yesterday.

Gray picked up two firsts—in the 100 and the 220, and a second in the javelin to pluck off top individual honors in the meet with 14 points.

Ajax was second in team standings with 43 1-2 points. Carr of PHE was second individually with two firsts, one in the high jump and one in the pole vault.

The meet was run off in record time of two hours in spite of the record entry of more than 130. The third year PHE class was given the problem of getting the 14 events run off on time and did their job so expertly that that last race of the day, carded for 3.10 started at 3.09.

"I was certainly pleasantly surprised at the way things were run off," Barry Lowes, track supervisor, said after the meet. "I didn't have to do a thing," he added, "the PHE boys did it all."

PHE-UC dominated the meet, taking first place in seven of the 14 events. Ajax took four firsts, while Dents, Meds and OCE each gathered in one.

SPORTSWOMAN

In the two women's baseball games on Trinity field yesterday afternoon, Vic I defeated UC I 9-7 in the second game of First League, and PHE III routed St. Hilda's II 22-3 in the second game of Third League.

In the First League game, the teams were well-matched, both teams hitting well and both outfields needing more practice. Bringing in two runs and playing a good game at shortstop, Allison Jeffries was the star Vic player. UC's top first baseman, Shirley Speck, hit a home run in the fourth inning, bringing in two players to double the UC score. Both teams should check the rule book re lead-offs.

In the game between PHE III and St. Hilda's II, PHE III were ahead by a wide margin all the way. It was a very one-sided game, with the Phys-Edders scoring eleven runs in each of the two innings. St. Hilda's put a good fight, picking up in the second inning but they were no match for their hard-hitting opponents. Jacey Steele on the PHE team was the outstanding player with her consistent hard-hitting and good work on first base.

Anderson Gets Two Titles

Beats Turner In Singles 3-1, 3rd Straight

By BOB REID

Despite a gallant bid from his friend and classmate, Art Anderson defeated Len Turner 6-0, 6-3, 3-6, 8-6, to win his third consecutive Interfaculty Tennis singles championship yesterday at the Toronto Tennis Club. An hour later Turner and Anderson forgot their friendly rivalry to team up and defeat Powell and Little of Ajax 6-3, 8-6, 6-1 in the doubles final.

Anderson had little trouble in taking the first two sets, his well placed base line drives forcing Turner consistently into errors. It took Turner until the third set to get untracked. Fighting back from the relentless pressure of Anderson's steadiness, Turner took the offensive to score with some excellent volleying and smashing to win the set 6-3. The final set had the gallery on edge, as the lead changed hands several times before Anderson's marvellous control decided the issue.

Feature of the match was the accurate base-line driving of Art Anderson which tended to keep Turner off balance at most times making net play extremely dangerous. Turner showed more speed than Anderson but his volleying let him down in the first two sets. In the last two sets Turner improved considerably but he found Stonewall Anderson a bit too tough.

In the doubles the combination of Anderson's base-line placements and Turner's smashing proved too much for Powell and Little. After losing the first set 6-3, Powell and Little fought back desperately with an all-round attack, but finally bowed 8-6. Reacting from the gruelling second set Powell and Little faded badly as Anderson and Turner put on the pressure to win the final set 6-1.

Winners and runners-up of both titles are automatically included on the Inter-collegiate Tennis Team. The remainder of the berths on the team will be chosen from the results of a round robin of players interested in making the team. Coaches Syd Hermant and Jack Noyes will be the selectors.

Intermediates Meet Western In Stadium

By EDWARD J. SOKOLOWSKI

The Intermediate Blues — 1948 model—makes its debut this Friday afternoon at 2:15 in the Varsity Stadium when they tangle with the Western Colts, the training stables of the Western Mustangs. Although the mentors, Al Brown and Don Bark, make no predictions they feel that the club is in better shape than at the same time last year.

No exhibition games were available for the Intermediates but in scrimmages with St. Mike's and the Senior Blues, the team showed up very well, especially in the defense department.

"We'll waltz through the league," the manager remarked as the team went through their paces last night. "The team has plenty of new spirit and they really look good."

The team is still composed of 34 players and the masterminds are having difficulty in deciding the 24 men who will dress for the tilt this afternoon. New material plus the best of last year's players combine to form a tricky combination that will be a powerful threat in the Intercollegiate circuit.

Garside and Brewer, both new to the Intermediates, will handle the passing and kicking department. Garside has proven himself a very effective player in all departments and he may turn out to be the find of the year.

Huble Sinclair, Barber, Bill Davis, Berkenshaw, and Kelly will be some of the backs that will see action against the Colts today. After very extensive drilling, their plays are working smoothly, especially in the aerial attack.

The Intermediate ends took a beating in practices and at the moment only three are in good playing condition, and are Dave Graham of last year's team, and Kennedy and Russell.

The line has shaped up to be one of the best in a long time. Scott and Fisher, from the Senior Blues, fill the centre position. John Kilpatrick, Bruiser Brown, "Tiger" Roberts, and Joe Errington, formerly of the powerful Queen's Intermediates, all add weight to the inside positions of the team. Longmore, Harry Hyde (of junior hockey fame), Forge, and Zimmerman capably take care of the middle spot whenever the need arises.

With all this material to work with, Al Brown and Don Bark have turned out a very smooth organization. How they will fare in their first game of the schedule can only be seen at the Varsity Stadium this afternoon, but the Varsity team are out for blood since an Intermediates rugby championship has not been won by Varsity for a long time.

This game will start at 2:15 today and no admission will be charged for the students of the University. So with a promise of a good rugby game, it is hoped that many will turn out to be the cheering section for the Second Blues.

UC and St. Mike's Have Baptism In Exhibition

The UC/PHE Combines of the intramural football league will have their baptism of fire this afternoon as they meet the Double Blue of St. Mike's on the Back Campus.

Coach Johnny Sheridan and Manager Frank Galloway have about eight men who have seen action in interfaculty contests before this year but the rest of the team, according to Galloway, is pretty green.

Quarterback Henshaw, with the Fizz-Edders last year, will call the signals for the UC/PHE squad. Leon Gelman and Dave Jones are two more veterans counted on to bolster the team.

Galloway was confident the Combines will be no pushovers for the rest of the teams. "I expect we will make a very good showing", he said, "and I think we will make the playoffs."

"We have over two complete teams this year," he said. "Today's game will help us decide who we will have to cut loose. In addition to those players we have now, there will probably be two or three come down from the Intermediates."

"Despite the fact that there are not many holdovers on the team, there are several high school grads who look capable of taking up the slack," Galloway said.

Game time is 4.00 o'clock.

Trinity Dumps Vic 3-1 In First Soccer Game

By MILES KENNEDY

The intramural soccer season opened yesterday when Trinity Firsts defeated Victoria Firsts 2-1 on the South Campus with Varsity Senior coach Brian Barton as referee.

From the outset, Trinity playing with the wind, showed themselves the superior team. There was little to choose between the two sets of forwards but the defence was a very different question. Victoria defence played as if they were all right-footers incapacitated with two left feet per man. They were too slow on the ball and their already weak kicking was still further hampered by the wind and once Trinity had got the ball into their half, there it stayed. After eight minutes of the first half the Trinity forwards were rewarded for their constant pressing by a goal from near in scored by Vince Dawson.

In the second half the play was more even with the wind helping Victoria and then it became evident that the Trinity forwards were also superior to Vic's. When the Trinity forwards got the ball they moved considerably faster than their opponents, aided by the fact that the Victoria defence was playing very far up-field. Their efforts were rewarded with two goals by Alan Forbes, one of which resulted from one of the finest and most true-to-pattern forward movements of the game.

Meanwhile, although losing, Vic had been putting in some quite hard work and hand Trinity defence very worried on two occasions. Their advanced play policy was rewarded with an off-side free kick and an attack based on this resulted in a penalty kick for them in the closing minutes of the game. How Plewman took the kick successfully and the game ended with a very representative score.

COLE SLAW

Some dreamer, in a recent interview, was quoted as saying that food prices are going down. But to those of us who are forced to eat regularly in restaurants, this report is difficult to believe. We had a rather shuddering experience the other day that confirmed in our own mind just how wrong this report is. Eating dinner in a restaurant where we'd found the prices to be comparatively lower, we were increasingly annoyed by the steady tapping of a typewriter coming from the direction of the kitchen. By the time the waitress brought our dinner check, our calm and digestion had been completely destroyed by the insistent tap-tap-tapping. In an unusually aggressive mood we snatched up the check and belligerently approached the proprietor at his usual station behind the cash register. "What's all that fuss in the kitchen!" we demanded, "what's the idea of a typewriter in there?" A condescending but conciliatory smile divided his face. "Very sorry, sahr," he said in his peculiar accent, "but rising prices demand it, sahr." Turning cold as we pocketed our change, we could only manage a whispered, "why?", "Well, sahr," he explained, "prices change so fast, and go up so steadily, sahr, that we needed a new employee in the kitchen. Our typist does nothing but keep our menu up to the minute with the constantly changing prices. I'm sorry it bothers you, sahr." We don't mind the changing prices, hah, hah, but it's that tap-tap-tapping. We can't stand it, we tell you, we can't stand it!

Congratulations SAC
The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

May I congratulate whole-heartedly the SAC, its newly formed Music Committee, and the University generally on the appointment of Harold Neal as conductor of the U. of T. Symphony Orchestra and the All Varsity Chorus. Mr. Neal is an accomplished conductor, violinist, and all-round musician, as is well-known, or will be in very short order. His appointment means a definite step ahead for both the Chorus and the Orchestra, who will enjoy, under his direction, their finest season yet. It is to be hoped that many new undergraduates will avail themselves of the opportunity of playing or singing under Conductor Harold Neal.

Yours Sincerely,
Hans Gruber,
Musical Director,
The Victoria Symphony Society, Inc.

For Freshmen
The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

This parental message is intended for the frolicking freshmen in Arts at this archaic academy.

If you are of the type (as I have no doubt you are) who faithfully burns the midnight bulb throughout the year, then the following will be of no interest. It is to the student (if there is one) who happens to leave his bulb down low until a month, or so, before examinations, that this is dedicated.

It seems that the faculty of Arts takes delight in providing an element of surprise for your enjoyment. It is really jolly of them to wait until a week (or is it less?) before examinations begin, to present you with their masterpiece, the Examination Timetable. Ah, these considerate people!

It is such a wonderful feeting to read this piece de resistance and to realize that your plan of attack has somehow gone wrong. Instead of concentrating on Spanish and Geography, you should have stressed Economics and History; for, after all, you have only one day before Economics and History, and you have a week or more before writing Spanish and Geography. How silly of you not to have realized that before! Oh well, you still have a few days to make amends, and the rest of your subjects are really unimportant anyway.

Later on, after your ordeal is over (for better or worse) you may wonder, as I have, why this masterpiece was not revealed sooner. You may wonder (certainly never angrily) why, after all these years, this fine faculty still enjoys pulling surprises on its stalwart students. Oh well, next year you will study harder; if you pass of course.

Yours Sincerely,
G. M. Weinberg,

VARSITY HUMBLED BY WESTERN

Part Of The Varsity Story

In a sweet low tackle, Don Scott of the Mustangs brings down Nick Purdue, Varsity backfielder, and just in case Scott misses that's Jerry Duck, Western middle wing, towering over. Although an added precaution doesn't seemed called for, Jack Mathews of the Mustangs looms in the background. Varsity fans who saw the game are emphatic about the Blues leading for the first quarter, but are noncommittal on the rest of the game.

Western Runs Wild In Second Quarter Final Score 24-6

By ED VOIGHT

The Western Mustangs resembled a speeding cross-country locomotive last Saturday afternoon in Little Memorial Stadium in the 1948 Intercollegiate opener. It took them all the first quarter to get up steam, and during the last quarter they just coasted to a natural stop, but in the middle part of the journey, they were rolling at full speed as they overpowered the Varsity Blues 24-6.

Spotting Toronto a touchdown early in the first quarter the Mustangs swept the Blues aside with a devastating attack in the second period that netted them three converted t.d.'s. They picked up right where they left off after the half and marked up their fourth converted touch within five minutes of play.

Capacity Crowd

The capacity crowd of 10,000 fans had just nicely settled down in their seats when Varsity opened the scoring.

After one pass was incomplete, Cummings hit Toogood with a long toss at the Western 12 and Teddy went the rest of the way to go over standing up. Cummings converted and it was 6-0 after only three minutes of play.

On the third play of the second quarter, the Mustang line hit Waldon hard and the Varsity player fumbled, Ford recovering for Western on the Blues 16 yard stripe. Big Bob McFarlane passed to Farley deep in the Toronto end zone, and then converted to tie the score.

Western came right back after the kick to take the lead. Doug Gray tossed a short pro pass to Curry at the Toronto 12-yard line, and Curry scooted the rest of the way.

A forward pass, Bob McFarlane to Scott, and three consecutive plunges by Taylor, and Western had their third five-pointer of the quarter. Bob McFarlane converted all three. Eighteen points and the period was only half completed.

Parry Stars

After the second-half kick-off, Jack Parry took over for Western and became practically a one-man team. In only six plays, beginning from the Western 30-yard line, Parry had rung up the Mustangs fourth t.d. Parry was in on each play. He completed three consecutive passes to the Western outsides, and plunged three times himself, finally going over from the varsity three.

Parry's convert wound up the scoring, and from then on, the Blues tried to pass their way to the Western goal line. With Cummings doing most of the tossing, the Blues managed to penetrate into the Western end only to lose the ball on downs or fumbles whenever the goal line was in sight. The Varsity line weakened during the second half, and Cummings was rushed on every pass he tried.

Varsity's blocking was very poor

Increased Grant To Universities Planned By CCF

Harvey Hay, president of the University of Toronto CCF Club, was elected to the Provincial Council of the Ontario CCF at its annual convention held Saturday at the King Edward Hotel. A fourth year Vic. student, he was one of twenty elected from a field of fifty.

At the convention a resolution demanding that "Provincial grants to Ontario Universities be increased so that students' fees can be reduced, and the number of scholarships and bursaries available be greatly increased" was supported by the U. of T. delegate and passed by the convention delegates.

A previous version of the resolution reading "so that students' fees can be reduced or, at least, maintained at their present levels" was amended when Mike Hicks, III Trinity, explained that the present level of fees excluded an estimated two-thirds of those who possess the ability to assimilate higher education.

"A careful survey," he said, "has shown that the average annual expense for an out-of-town student (including fees), amounts to about $1,100, and is slightly more than $900 for a student living in Toronto with his family."

"It is more important that the Provincial government is sabotaging democracy than that it is sabotaging an individual example of socialization," Harvey Hay told the convention, speaking for a resolution condemning the Provincial Government for permitting the development of Hydro shortage. "Surely someone must have estimated that the supply of power would not be sufficient. But they didn't tell us," he continued. "I submit that the most important fact is that the electorate was not informed, until the shortage was upon them."

The convention also recommended that building grants be made available immediately for expansion of medical teaching facilities in Ontario Universities.

The U. of T. delegates supported a resolution providing for the instruction of primary school pupils in conversational French (and English in French-speaking communities) to further understanding between the two chief language groups in the province.

In addition to Messrs. Hay and Hicks, Doreen Anderson, IV Vic., and Gordon Milling, III Vic., represented the University club at the convention. Milling also served as fraternal delegate to the Ontario Convention of the Co-operative Commonwealth Youth Movement held Sunday and Monday at the United Steelworkers Hall, 7 Brunswick Ave. This convention saw two other U. of T. students, Sid Rubinoff, Graduate studies, and Norm Chalmers, III U.C., elected to the Provincial Executive of the CCF Youth Section.

Popular Trinity Professor Dies Suddenly at Bayfield

Suffering a heart attack, Professor Lloyd Clifford Arnott Hodgins, professor of English, Trinity College, died yesterday morning at Bayfield where he was spending the holiday.

Professor Hodgins was associated with the Department of English at Trinity from 1920 until his retirement at the end of last year's term. During the 27 years he was at Trinity, he was one of the most popular members of the staff. He took a keen interest in sports and he was the traditional starter of the annual Trinity harrier race.

Entering the College in 1900 with the Burnside Scholarship in English and History, he enrolled in that department and graduated with first class honors. As an undergraduate he played on the rugby team, was active as Scribe of Episkopon, was an officer of the Literary Institute, and took over for a time the duties of organist and choirmaster.

As a member of the Arts faculty he was for 12 years Alumni editor of the Trinity University Review and became a member of the Corporation and Senate of the University. Beyond the circle of his college he was active in the Ontario Educational Association. He was chosen by the Minister of Education as one of two members to represent the universities of Ontario in drawing up the English course for the secondary schools. For years he had been a member of the committee on matriculation of the universities of Ontario.

Professor Hodgins served overseas in 1915 and 1916 and was with the Formation Harjes of the American Ambulance Service. He was awarded the Medaille Commemorative by the French government for his outstanding service during the war.

He was born in Seaforth, Ontario, where his father was rector of the Anglican Church.

Accident Policy Offered Members By Rifle Society

For the first time since its organization, the University Rifle Association intends to have an accident insurance policy for the protection of its members, according to Dr. Lukas, captain of the association.

Along with this innovation to its organization, the rifle club will also hire a Senior Range Officer who will be in charge of the range twelve hours a week. Both of these changes in the set-up of the association were voted on and carried at the meeting held in Hart House last week..

At this meeting the Rifle Association elected as its officers: Dr. Lukas of the Medical Faculty, Captain; John Brick, Dentistry, Secretary; and Jim Scott, Arts, Treasurer.

Members of the club will be assured of ample ammunition which will be sold at cost. The rifles will be B.S.A. Sport Rifle 22's. Experts will be allowed the use of Winchester 52's.

The proposed hours are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoons from 4 to 6, with Saturday shooting as well.

MAKE-UP

There will be an important make up lecture today at 1 p.m. in room eleven U. C. Everyone interested in doing make up for The Varsity is asked to attend. There will be two lectures weekly at the same time and place through most of the fall term. Mast head members are asked to attend.

Housing Bureau Fill Most Needs For Undergrads

Jan Miesel, of the housing and employment bureau of the Students' Administrative Council in an interview on Friday said that except for difficulty in finding accommodation for married couples with children this year's housing campaign had been a success.

Actual figures will not be available until the end of the month, but the number of students and staff who used the service will run into "several thousand," continued Mr. Miesel. There is still a critical need for accommodation for couples with children.

Mr. Miesel said as a result of a city wide campaign in June there had been a satisfactory response to the appeal. Students for the most part have been accommodated to their particular needs. Some room in single or double rooms, others receive room and board, while still others arrange to baby sit, or do light housework in return for accommodation.

Chinese Author At U.C. Today

Rev. Marcus Cheng who is speaking in Hamilton October 10th to 15 in connection with the annual meetings of the China Inland Mission is visiting University College today, speaking at 1.20 p. m. in room 64 U. C. Basement.

Mr. Cheng is a cultured, Chinese Christian leader and the principal of the Chungking Theological Seminary. He is an outstanding church leader in China and has been for many years past. He is the author of several books and the editor of perhaps the most helpful of all the Christian magazines in China.

More Support Needed

Every year there arises a chronic complaint that too many of our young scholars leave the country and depart for greener fields in the United States. Too often, the critics lament, out best university-trained people turn their backs on their native land to seek opportunity with our American neighbour. In scholarships, in post-graduate training, and in employment possibilities, the United States has much to offer, it is generally conceded.

If an increasing number of Canadian students and graduates take advantage of the richer facilities prevailing across the border, the fault lies not with them but with the conditions at home which make such migrations desirable.

Although the reputation of Canadian universities is a sound one, the fact is that Canadians are not sufficiently conscious of the value of education to support existing colleges let alone provide new ones. Canadian scholars encounter so little honour or opportunity at home that they are forced to go elsewhere to develop their talents.

Compared to American universities, Canadian universities are understaffed, they suffer from greater financial difficulties, and their facilities—books, labs technical equipment—are inadequate. Attracted by the wider scope in the United States and by the greater public recognition of university training, many of our most promising scholars wend their way southward, sapping our own intellectual life and reflecting Canadian inertia to scholarship.

Universities in the United States and in Great Britain enjoy greater recognition by the public than do similar institutions at home. Even the non-academic public in those countries is more sympathetic to the universities than is the case in Canada. The generous endowments and philanthropical grants to universities in the United States and Britain indicate the greater public interest shown in their halls of learning.

Chancellor G. P. Gilmour of McMaster University, earlier this year, wrote:

"It will not do to dismiss the matter by saying that colleges are too expensive, or that too many people are being educated, or that no one is being educated properly. Universities are expensive, judged on a per capita basis, but the cost is trifling beside the sums squandered on needless indulgences or demanded by war. It may be that too many undergraduates are in college at the moment because of an emergency situation, but that does not alter the fact that it is impossible for too many people to have some contact with the universities."

If Canadians are not sufficiently aware of the value of education, the blame lies not entirely with the public. The universities themselves must take a more vigorous part in acquainting citizens with their work. John Q. Citizen must be made to feel that by supporting the university he is enriching himself, the community, and the nation.

Radio Discussion Features Full Employment Plea

The first of a series of three consecutive Friday evening discussion broadcasts entitled "Youth Speaks Out" was held last Friday. The subject discusssed was "Youth and Employment."

Reid Scott, student at Osgoode Hall, who graduated from Victoria College last year, was one of the four speakers discussing this problem. Scott was elected to the Ontario Provincial Legislature last election.

Scott, in a plea for full employment, asked for government projects to serve the needs of youth. When asked his views on free enterprise he said, "We've relied on uncontrolled markets and have had five or six depressions. We must have increased control, intervention, and direction by the government. When faced with a crisis, the country unites under government effort. The last war is a good illustration of this."

The problem of unemployment was discussed further in relation to our educational system. Scott said that more training itself won't solve the problem. To the contrary, more education will bring more frustration if adequate placement agencies are not formed. Fear of insecurity must be abolished. As a partial solution Scott expressed the hope that aptitude tests given by some social agencies would be introduced into schools. But placement bureaus must work in close co-operation with guidance agencies. Mr. Donald McCullagh, Supervisor of the Youth Employment Centre of the National Employment Service, said that a Youth Employment Service was formed in Toronto for the purpose of placing youth in industry. In connection with this, the Advisory Council was formed, comprising representatives of industry and social agencies who co-operate in finding the needs of employers and prospective employees.

Gloria Groves, office worker, said that the girls had a particular problem. "We find it hard to find jobs to utilize our education." Mr. McCullaugh said that it is particularly difficult to place girls who have their B.A. in positions suitable to their education. To a question about sex education deploring the double standard and how it persists in all community life, he said that he believes the reason for the adhesiveness of the double standard is that the majority of women want it that way.

The last two discussion broadcasts in this series will take place on the next two Fridays.

Acta, Handbook Vic Publications

This year students at Victoria College will have both their traditional magazine, the Acta Victoriana, and a new venture, a college handbook, to keep them informed of activities around the college.

The Acta will be along the same lines as last year, publishing material contributed by the students. In addition, the staff in hoping to have members of various courses submit work on their special subjects and to train more of the junior classes in the technical details of the magazine. Because of increased costs of printing and a reduction in appropriations, there will be five issues instead of six this year, with the summer issue being omitted.

The editor for this year, Doug Fisher, IV Vic., heads a staff which, due to the graduation of former members, is almost entirely new. He is hoping to have the first issue out in about two weeks.

The Victoria Handbook, edited by Stan Kurisko, III Vic., will be designed to further the policy of the new executive, of increasing student participation and interest in college affairs and government.

Two Spent Summer On Ice Field In Alaska With Scientific Group

Two University of Toronto men, Ian Robertson and Don Salt, spent what many heat-suffering Canadians would consider an ideal summer. They lived on an Alaskan ice-field with 18 other scientists from the U.S. and Canada. Known as project "Snow Cornice," it was organized last spring by Col. Walter A. Wood, New York director of the Arctic Institute of North America, to study every aspect of Seward glacier, on the Alaskan border opposite the northwest tip of British Columbia.

Seward glacier is 30 miles long and 15 miles wide. Besides the University of Toronto, the group came from the Canadian National Research Council, American Geographical society, Harvard university and the California Institute of Technology. The scientists were engaged in meteorological studies, botany, glacier movements, snow and ice research, and photographing from the air.

Robertson, a third-year medical student, went as first-aid man and assistant to Don Salt, the seismic operator. "It was the first non-military airborne and air-supplied scientific expedition to study conditions in the North American Arctic," said Robertson. "Our only contact with the outside world, besides a temperamental radio, was a Norseman aircraft specially fitted with a combination ski and wheel landing gear. The entire party and equipment was flown from Yakutat, a tiny fishing village, 55 miles to our camp on Seward glacier."

Plenty of Crevasses

He said supplies and mail were flown in and picked up regularly. "It would have taken at least ten days to walk it," said Robertson. "There would be a great many crevasses to cross before we could get off the glacier. We didn't try it." He said the glacier was about 6,000 feet above sea level and surrounded by "some of the highest mountains on the continent, Mount Logan, the second highest at 19,850 feet, looks like a small mountain when seen across the ice field."

He said the only vegetation, "a wee bit of grass and litchens" was found on one of the two exposed rocky ridges. "But the strangest thing of all were the rock rabbits," he said. "They lived on these barren rocks sticking out of the snow and ice, which surrounds them for miles.

"The only other signs of life we found were tracks of what we took to be glacier bears. We never saw the animal itself, though. A type of sparrow lived for two or three days at the camp, and we fed it. However, the bird died. I believe it must have been blown off course and couldn't get back to its regular haunts."

He said the party lived in tents. "It wasn't cold at all," he said. "At least we didn't feel it. The air was dry and there was very little wind. Sometimes it didn't even freeze at night, but toward the end of August the temperature at night went down to six above zero.

"It usually warmed up in the daytime, often as high as 60. Most of the boys would strip to the waist. Sunburn was quite a problem, and most grew beards for protection."

Snowstorm in Summer

He said they had snowstorms during the summer, but "it wasn't bad at all. Once the wind go up to 50 miles an hour, but generally it was calm. We were pretty comfortable, even though there was no heating unit in the tent. For light we used gasoline lamps, and for cooking gasoline stoves.

"Water was the main problem. Most of it was obtained by melting snow on a tarpaulin during the day, but during the latter part of the summer there wasn't enough heat to melt the snow."

Call Police In London To Quiet Hotel Party

Special to The Varsity

London, Ont., Oct. 10—City police were called early today to break up a "rowdy celebration" at London's largest hotel. No arrests were reported.

Police said they were called in to control a post football game celebration which threatened to get out of hand.

Hotel manager Henry Struckett said that although there was "some damage and a lot of noise, it was no more than expected."

St. Mike's Elections For SAC Vacancies

Nominations for the three vacant positions on the St. Michael's College SAC closed on Thursday, October 7th. The election will take place on Thursday, October 14th.

George C. McMullen, III Pass, was elected Athletic Director by acclamation, announced Returning Officer Chuck Tompkins. For the other two positions, the nominees are: For First Year Representative, Tony Adams, Joseph A. Rossi, and J. William Dewey; for Western Representative, Dan Murphy and John Dewey.

The Western year is for students from the United States who take only four years of high school, and must take additional work before entering university here.

Applied Science Dean Is Dead After Stroke

Prof. Ernest A. Stone, 78, civil engineer and former Dean of Applied Science at the University of New Brunswick, died Saturday in hospital. He suffered a stroke two weeks ago.

Born at Charlottetown, he was a graduate of McGill University, and was professor of civil engineering at Dalhousie University, Halifax, before joining the staff of the University of New Brunswick where he was Dean of applied science for three years.

He entered private practice in Vancouver, where he built the bridge spanning the Fraser River at Lytton, B. C. He lectured at the University of British Columbia, and at the outbreak of the First World War he joined the staff of Queen's University. He later held the chair of engineering at King's College, Windsor, N. S.

During the Second World War, Prof. Stone designed structural steel plants.

He had lived in Toronto since 1943. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Morrison Stone, of Toronto, and a brother, George A. Stone, of Vancouver.

Doors Opened To Newcomers By Hart House

Hart House will be operating at full blast tonight when doors will be thrown wide open to hordes of male undergraduates. Setting a precedent in the operation of the House, all Hart House committees have combined to stage a "New Members Night", an open house party, designed to acquaint university men with the benefits to which they are entitled.

"There are many members who are scarcely aware that they have joined the House," explained Carman Guild, of the Warden's staff, yesterday. "Others are like the fourth-year student who wondered how it was that he had missed three years of extra-curricular activity because he was not aware of what Hart House has to offer. New Members Night is an attempt to change this state of affairs and to ensure that in the future all members of the House will at least know what it has to offer." Although everyone is invited, a special invitation is extended to new members of Hart House, Guild said. The committee believe that this event will give members of the faculty and graduate students an opportunity to take part in activities they might otherwise miss.

Debate Tonight

The Debates' Committee, launching the first debate of the year, has arranged discussion of the resolution: "That this university should grant athletic scholarships."

Music has long occupied an important part in the life of the House. Sunday evening concerts and Friday recitals are features which have always appealed to members. Tonight, the music committee has arranged a two-hour concert which includes many newly purchased recordings that have not yet been put into general usage.

The Glee Club which emphasizes singing for pleasure rather than trying to meet a competitive standard, puts on one Sunday evening concert each year and also does a CBC Christmas broadcast yearly. Tonight the Glee Club will hold a rehearsal in the Music Room.

Art Class

The Art Gallery will be open tonight and a sketch class, drawing from still life, will be held. The gallery is also used to display collections of Canadian painting.

In the library of Hart House are seven thousand volumes which have been selected especially for their appeal as leisure reading. Tonight several members of the library committee will be on hand and the collection of private press books will be open for inspection.

The chess club will provide several tables for inexpert players and will hold a match for experts. The bridge club, too, has arranged a duplicate game for tonight.

The Table Tennis club, a fledgeling among Hart House activities, will have three tables open, one for an exhibition game, the other two for casual games by newcomers.

Hart House archers, who last season established themselves as the best shots in the country when they won the team championship for target shooting, will put on a demonstration tonight and give elementary instruction.

Snaps on Display

The Camera Club, composed of more than two hundred photographers, operates in a small room which serves both as a salon and studio, and on the floor below, has a large number of dark rooms containing all the necessary equipment for developing, enlarging and printing. Tonight the committee will have the permanent collection of prints on display. The collection, made up of the best pictures selected from annual salons over the last fifteen years, is representative of the club's work.

To top off the evening, the swimming pool will be open until 10:30 p.m. and towel service will be provided.

Gay London Weekend Trip Is Fun For All Students

It happens every time! Good ol' London certainly is thrown for a loop when Varsity takes over on the annual Western, week-end. This year, between 1,500 and 2,000 ardent blue and whiters took to the road by bus and car for a spree that featured everything from a gymnastically-inclined spectator who performed his daily exercises on the cross-bar of one of the goal posts to a near-riot in the Hotel London later. And, sad to relate, a football game in which Metras' Marvels drove behind the Blues' goal-line just a little too often.

But as more than one genius has demanded, "Who goes on a football week-end to see the game?!"

While not proposing to debate the merits of bus versus train, I am pleased to reveal that the bus ride to London was not devoid of its more agreeable and interesting moments. There were the four or five members of the Blue and White band who somehow strayed from their special bus, and provided us with a serenade as we neared enemy territory. There was the beet-red co-ed who induced the driver to stop at a gas station, thus earning the gratitude of all. There were the cheers and yells when we passed or were passed by, stuffed cars sporting blue and white ribbons streaming in the wind.

Touring the various buildings on the Western campus around noon, we discovered that it is an exceedingly interesting place. It has a cafeteria where both men and women can eat! It also has co-ed lounges! I was duly impressed.

You meet more people on these week-ends! I was ecstatically greeted by a slightly sozzled male whom I don't quite recall ever having seen before. He informed me joyously that I work for The Varsity, of which fact I have been aware for some time. Later, rolling out of the cafeteria after the forty-cent special, I met the same gentleman. He, too, was rolling out, begging pardon of an occasional wall, and demanding hoarsely, "Whish waysha shtadium?"

The game, I will leave to my better qualified colleagues of the Sport Department, pausing only to laud the "old college try," and the enthusiastic support shown by everyone connected with the U. of T. The Varsity section burst forth with yells and songs even when unprompted by the cheerleaders. And what we did to those goal posts!

It isn't all roses department: Two members of the Hotel London's staff were commiserating with each other late in the afternoon when the lobby began to rock with "Ripparty Rapperties" and "Ca-ninnies". One slapped his hand to his forehead in a gesture denoting despair, while the other urged, "Let's go out and get drunk."

Came night and the customary things were done in the usual places. We met some engineers who had had to arrive Friday night in order to claim their room in the London, with the result that they had been celebrating for twenty-four hours!

The official Varsity dance at Western's Convocation Hall was a well-run affair. It proved so popular that not only the dance floor but also all the Arts Building corridors were overrun. Even a pigeon was attracted. Oh well, it all added to the fun.

Our Three Deans of Women Busiest People On Campus

Three of the busiest women during the school term are the deans of women of University, Trinity and Victoria colleges. They have all had varied careers but they all were once undergraduates at the University of Toronto.

Mrs. Kirkwood, who graduated from Trinity College, first taught classics at her own Alma Mater. She then became a member of the English Department. Later, she was invited to University College and for eight years was Dean of Women. At the time of the retirement of Miss Cartwright, Mrs. Kirkwood was asked to return to her own college, after 17 years absence.

Mrs. Kirkwood maintains that through the personal contact she gains in teaching her students she is able to assist them as their Dean of Women. She is extremely interested in the youth of today and has written books pertaining to this subject. Her book "College Women and Men" is the most pertinent of these.

One thing that all freshies at Trinity remember is the gracious way in which she welcomes them at the opening functions and makes them feel at home.

Miss Ferguson, the Dean of Women at University College, has a very difficult problem in not only contacting her own students, but those of the many affiliated groups. Miss Ferguson is a graduate of University College and spent a number of years in India with the Y.W.C.A. On returning to Canada she was invited to be Dean of Women of University College. One of the recent developments she has taken part in is the instituting of the French House last year. This project has won approval not only of the students but of the French Embassy, which has endeavoured to help by sending books for the girls to read. Miss Ferguson has the happy faculty of not only remembering her undergraduates but probably knowing more about her graduates than they do themselves.

Miss MacPherson, the dean of women of Victoria College, was once an undergraduate of University College, where she graduated in Philosophy, English and History. She attended the London School of Economics, returning as Dean of Women at Victoria College in 1934. She lectures in Ethics to a number of her own students, having gained her Ph.D. in Philosophy in 1944.

Miss MacPherson has a few pet passions, one being a love of Georgian Bay and the other that of bak-

Frat parties are interesting, but the "beat all" was a private display to some law students, Saturday last. A gorgeous blonde in a gracefully-billowing wine velvet job was the undisputed centre of attraction. Someone yelled "pantaloons"; we all dashed over and there they were—very frilly with blue bows . . . Western didn't have all the fun.

So you've read "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay", well here's the story of two girls who took the authors up on it. The Haultain twins, Pat and Marg, of Vic and U.C., had never been out of Ontario and decided to see a bit of the world.

All went well until a fast freight switched to their line delayed them for three hours. The freight crashed through a bridge they had been slated to cross. With rerouting and delay this eighteen-hour part of the trip turned into fifty-four hours. When our women of destiny finally arrived, a six-day cruise took them up the west coast to Alert Bay and Ketichan. Here a combination of salmon fisheries, lumber on the main street and a very attractive commercial district presented a unique picture of old-fashioned gold rush, and modern commercial life side by side.

Back in Toronto Pat and Marg were surprised to find five dollars still in the till . . . Cornelia Ottis Skinner please note.

Distaff Side

One intriguing angle of a foot- week-end is that no matter ether you show up on the enemy diron bundled up in plaid slacks a woolly jacket, or whether play to the stands in a swish with ankle strap pumps, you're to find someone else with the ne idea. No matter what you ar, you can't go wrong.

We saw every degree of dress in tle Memorial Stadium on Saturday. Most Varsity supporters d for comfort, the minority obviously togged out to n admiring glances. We gazed preciatively — with only slightly enish eyes — at the glamorous shorties and super de-luxe ts in evidence, and envied the eds dressed for the day in wool cks.

The weather was exceedingly untain. The sun alternately warmdur shoulders and disappeared ind threatening grey cloudnks. As one co-ed was heard to nark plaintively, "I no sooner get gloves off because it's hot than ave to put them right back on ain." More than one set of toes re chilled before the game end-

Most of the Varsity cheering tion kept warm by cheering dly throughout the game.

At the dances Saturday night, atre was just as varied as it was ller in the day—ranging from rts and sweaters to bare-uldered satin and lace. It really n't matter what you wore—not Western's Convocation Hall, at rate. The floor was so crowdyou couldn't see anything but es anyway.

We were especially intrigued by co-ed. She was wearing an atstive bare-shouldered blue dress, she was trying to locate Varribbons to wear. Now where, where was she planning to pin m?

Norse Students Want Contacts

By JANET HARBRON

Norwegian girls concerned with the problem of women on their own campus, wondered if there was a group of a similar nature to be found in Canada. They contacted the University of Toronto International Students Service. This has brought up the subject of women and the I.S.S.

Well how about it girls . . . just what can we whimsical women do? Is there a real place for us in such an all-embracing organization? I am happy to relate that June Hazard—a busy S.A.C. member—has given me the expose.

That I.S.S. is an international organization which purposes cultural exchange and international understanding, we know. From there on the little old "buttons and bows" gets easily lost. Of course men are strong organizers and very feminine we bow to their vast superiority. But women have a special place no one else can fill. Sympathetic understanding—the feminine touch filling an incompleteness the mere male is not aware of.

Our summer-time globe-trotters have brought home a new outlook on I.S.S. and there's something in the wind that suggests it's going to be the duty of femininity to get in the swing of these ideas and extend the women's viewpoint. At present we're taking our culture to Europe but the I.S.S. hopes—in the not too distant future—to have more European students come to Canada. "People of the people" to quote June, "are the ones best able to interpret our way of life on their return home."

There is no one who can help so much in welcoming foreign visitors as a vivacious damsel, perhaps improving her Spanish, French, or German on the side.

Soon, at an I.S.S. conference in the vicinity of the campus, the whole structure of the organization will be considered carefully, presenting a new perspective, a fresh start for European relief. This year the plan is to consider what the students think should be done with their relief money. And welcome to this desire to work from the bottom up—not the top down. This is surely the spot where the last word—typically feminine—will be the best word.

The conference will be preceded by I.S.S. open meetings and the best way to get into the swim and take part in these plans is to make it very clear to the gentlemen of I.S.S. that we're interested in guiding their erring hands to greater success.

Hec Phillips

Renowned Track Coach Passes On

The sportive element here at the University of Toronto was considerably saddened when the news that Hector "Hec" Philips, former outstanding Canadian track man and U. of T. track coach, died at his Bloor St. E. home last week.

Hec had been in ill health for almost a year, suffering from an incurable cancer disease. His doctors had given up all hope for recovery several months ago.

Hec had been at Varsity since 1933 as head track coach and instructor in Physical Education. During those years, he instructed more track and field athletes than any other U. of T. track coach before him.

Warren Stevens, director of athletics at the U. of T., told us last night that Hec had made a tremendous contribution to sports activities at Varsity.

"Not only was Hec the outstanding track coach in Canada," Steve continued, "but also a real person who contributed immeasurably to the education of all undergraduates with whom he came in contact. His cheerful enthusiasm and unlimited energy to teach made him one of the most highly requested members of our staff. We will miss him greatly."

One of the best indications of Hec's widespread popularity occurred just last summer. When the news came out that Hec had not received the coveted position as track coach of Canada's Olympic team, many of his former associates quickly came to his aid. Within a very short time, contributions totalling more than $1500 came in from all over the world, mostly from former track men. With this money, Hec was able to take in the '48 Olympics in London, England, at no expense to himself.

When reached late last night, Mr. C. E. Higginbottom, Bursar of the U. of T. and a close friend of Hec, said that he was very sorry to hear that Hec had passed away.

"In my opinion, Hec Philips was the greatest track coach we've ever had in Canada. He had a winning personality and inspired confidence in all the athletes whom it was his opportunity to coach. His ability to instruct was increased by his capacity to demonstrate any explanations he gave. Hec was highly esteemed by all those with whom he came in contact, both teammates and competitors alike."

That Hec was a great Canadian track coach, there is no doubt. He trained many Canadian track stars including such notables as Larry O'Connor, Jimmy Cartright, Bill Fritz, and the Brown twins.

With U. of T. track teams, Hec had considerable success. His squads copped Intercollegiate honors in 1937 and 1938, of the pre-war years. Since the resumption of Intercollegiate athletics after the war, Hec's teams returned victorious in 1945 and 1947.

It was in 1947 that Hec achieved his best record while at Varsity. For last year his Senior and Intermediate track teams, as well as his Senior and Intermediate harrier squads, made a clean sweep of Intercollegiate laurels. The harrier teams also won every exhibition meet in which they participated.

Before taking up coaching reins, Hec had a lengthy track career. Prior to coming to Canada in 1912, he participated in many cross-country races in the United Kingdom. Hec also carried the colors of the London Athletic Club in his two specialties, the quarter-mile and the half-mile. His success in the Old Country reached such heights that he was selected to represent Great Britain in the 1912 Olympics, but Hec left for Canada before the Games began.

In the two years prior to World War I, Hec achieved fame as the fourth member of the Toronto Relay team, along with Tait, Tressider and Brock. This team won several races in the States as well as in Canada.

While overseas in the Canadian Artillery, Hec won Army championships in the 440 and the 880. In 1916, he set a British record for 660 yards, which stood for eight years.

In 1920, Hec was a member of the Canadian Olympic team in the Games at Antwerp. A few months later, he represented the British Empire against the U.S.A. at London, Eng., winning the 440 and the 880 in record time at this meet.

Come '24, and once again Hec bore the Maple Leaf in the Paris Olympics. From 1925 to 1927, he won several Michigan State Championships.

From 1931 to 1948, Hec was also a track coach at the West End "Y" during the summer months. During the last few years, Hec took over coaching duties for the Toronto Police force, and in 1947 and 1948 was Director of Games for the Toronto Police Athletic Association.

Hec Philips lived for his track meets. Track was his very life and existence. And to me, it seems highly fitting that Harold Brown, the man selected as Hec's successor here at Varsity, is one of his former star pupils.

Redmen Beat Gaels 20-12 Despite Lenard

Kingston—A hapless Queen's team went on from where they left off last year, when they lost a 20-12 decision to a potent McGill squad in the senior intercollegiate opener at Richardson Stadium Saturday.

McGill unwrapped a deceptive ground and air attack to take the lead in the first few minutes and never looked back, in spite of the determined efforts of Queen's-man Al Lenard who personally accounted for seven points and threw a TD pass to Steeves for the other five.

Rocky Robillard hoofed a single early in the first quarter and plunged for a touchdown a few minutes later, after McGill had marched from their own 33-yard stripe. In the second term, Doug Heron added three points for the Redmen with a deadly 33-yard placement.

Queen's fought back in the third quarter with Al Lenard racking up a converted touchdown to make the score 9-6. Valois picked up another major for McGill and Lenard answered with his pass to Steeves that was good for a major. Lenard converted.

It was all McGill again in the final period with Chincich lugging a Robillard pass over for five points and Robillard's convert made it six.

KRYZANOWSKI SIGNS

Ed. Kryzanowski, star defenceman for the Varsity Blues for three years, signed a contract with Boston Bruins over the week-end. It has not been decided whether he will play for the Bruins or a farm club.

FORESTRY TIES SPS

In rain which made footwork very difficult, running well nigh impossible and the wearing of soccer apparel most unpleasant, Forestry tied S.P.S. Sr., 1-1, while Pre-Meds. lost by default to St. Mike's as only six players showed up.

Varsity Defeats Colts In Intermediate Opener

Afterthoughts

Western Still Winning But We Got Goalposts!

By BRIAN LAND

Even though the Blues came out on the short end of the score Saturday it didn't stop their supporters from celebrating, and this year the boys managed to pull down the north goal-posts. No mean feat considering they are made of steel and sunk in concrete foundations.

Well, it had to happen sometime. One Varsity fan had so much spirit(s) that he raced on the field, shinnied up the goalpost and performed a few high bar stunts before the police moved in. All he got was a fractured arm for his trouble.

If the first seven minutes of that second quarter had been cut out Varsity would have come back with a 6-6 tie.

Johnny Metras, Mustang coach, was in a jocular mood—even sported a purple tie to demonstrate his school spirit.

The Western band, which has been greatly outclassed by Margie and Bob Cringan's outfit for the last couple of seasons, showed no less than five drum majorettes. Their jive session between halves was also a leaf from the Varsity book.

Don't be too surprised if Bill Brewer, whose sensational running and kicking showed the Varsity Seconds the way to victory over the Colts on Friday, appears in the senior line-up against Queen's.

If they move the Varsity section any farther back in Little Memorial Stadium the Blues' rooters might as well take along their golf clubs and shoot nine while watching the footballers from the hill.

Fumbles played a major part in the Varsity defeat setting up two of the Mustang scores. The boys also had plenty of trouble in hanging onto the passes.

Toronto suffered from an overdose of "short secondaries" as six footoners Turbull and Wardell repeatedly picked Jack Parry's tosses from the sky. All of the Blue backfielders who played Saturday are under six feet.

Joe Potts' coon coat made its first appearance of the season. A Varsity T was inscribed in flour but on the field just before game time the smoke bombs didn't appear until near the end.

The customary post-game fist fights were still in progress for over an hour after the crowd had moved out. Some of those guys really swing. It's just as well their aim is usually hampered by half time refreshments.

You've heard it before but there are quite a few who maintain that Varsity will take Western's measure next time they meet. Western weren't three touchdowns better than the Toronto lads, and Masterson's men are backing this statement with the "long green".

It's a good thing there's no referees around the Hotel London or they would be blowing the whistle on a lot of holding.

Small wonder that Bruce Cummings' passes were a bit wobbly when you had a look at his thumb. It was swollen to twice the normal size after it was injured on a tackle early in the game. Cummings threw with his fingers for the rest of the afternoon. Alec Lawson, an outside, even tossed a few passes.

One time that Bob McFarlane was nailed early was when Bill Stockman broke through and threw him for a seven yard loss with a one arm tackle.

Western has changed the emphasis of their attack from running to passing with Jack Parry as "the arm". Any way, they play it, it's still championship football.

Brewer Stars As Blues Win By 14-6 Score

By EDWARD SOKOLOWSKI

And "Beat Western" we did. The Intermediate Blues, that is. Playing in the rain and on sloppy ground the Varsity Intermediates defeated the Western Colts by the score of 14-6 in the Varsity Stadium last Friday afternoon. With a solid front wall blocking and tackling like nobody's business, they gave the Colts a major and a single in the first half and paved the way for the Varsity backfield to pick up 14 points.

Bill Brewer, stalwart backfielder for the Blues, displayed fine form in the passing, plunging and kicking department and paced the Blues with a major and three singles. Hubie Sinclair started the ball rolling early in the game with a touchdown and Bob Garside ended the scoring with a kick to dead line.

Gerry Fitzgerald ran over for the Colt's only touchdown while Davidson received the single point on his kick.

A Colt fumble by Fitzgerald and recovered by Errington of Varsity on the Western 23 yard line set up the Blues' first major. Bob Garside was roughed by the Western team when he kicked, and the ball was placed on the nine yard line. Hubie Sinclair, on the next play, went around the right end for the five points. The convert missed. Later, Colt's Davidson hoisted a long boot to Sinclair and his attempt to lateral to Lawson was a bad one; but was recovered by Lawson who was smeared behind the line for a rouge.

Early in the second quarter, Bill Brewer kicked from the 14 yard line and Davidson conceded the point. Colts touchdown came in the middle of this quarter when they recovered a fumble by Russell after he caught a pass from Brewer and was tackled. Bartlett, Davidson, and Porter moved the ball to the 28 and Fitzgerald plunged over from there after the Blue team were sucked in on a fake play to the right. The Colt's blocking was terrific on that play.

Bill Brewer added two more points for Varsity on his kicks into deadline.

Brewer's touchdown in the third quarter was one of the neatest of the game. He plunged through the right side behind some precision blocking and travelled the 65 yards for a touchdown. The convert try again missed.

Bob Garside chalked up Varsity's last counter when he kicked into deadline in the final quarter.

In the passing attack, Varsity threw 12 and completed five. Western tried nine and completed three. Varsity earned 13 first downs to the Colt's nine. The Blue team lost 80 yards through penalties and Western only 35. Western outfumbled the Blues by nine to six.

The entire Intermediate team played an outstanding game and to mention a few of the players, Bill Scott, John Kilpatrick, Jack Roberts, Adam Zimmerman, Don Forge, Al Sivell, Dave Graham all did their job very well on the line.

FORE !

Let's skip a few lectures tomorrow and get in a round of golf. What's the matter? Too many lectures in the morning? Well then, tee off at 1:30 instead of 9:30,

It's a cinch to get to the St. Andrew's golf club; just follow the trolley tracks right up Yonge St. If you're an undergrad, just grad, I mean grab your clubs, and your ATL, and borrow fifty cents and carfare, if you can't scrape anymore out of the lining of your purse. That's all there is to it.

When you get there you will find that you are competing in the UC Invitation Golf Meet, but don't be nervous, there are prizes galore. There are a couple for the top golfers with the low score and (here's something you can try for) one for the lowly golfer with the top score. The college or faculty which has the lowest aggregate for any four players will also win a prize but there's no limit to the number of women any one college can enter.

If it pours tomorrow, don't cry your heart out because your game was called off. UC will strive to make arrangements so that you can skip those lectures and get your fresh air on Friday.

UC's Gwen Millar would like to have an idea of your handicap (that's what tells whether you play in the nineties or in the hundred and nineties) so she can arrange you in congenial foursomes. For the same reason she'd like to know who is playing, so if you haven't signed the list but want to get in on the fun, get in touch with Gwen immediately at Falconer House, Whitney Hall.

ADDED INTRIGUE

Rumour has it that there will be prizes for hidden holes. (Gee, if they're giving out prizes now for finding holes, I don't feel so badly now about always getting tangled up in the rough and never finding the greens.)

occer Blues Take Double Win rom Western In Pouring Rain

By BILL BABCOCK

Nothing like playing soccer in the n! You get wet, you get cold, l get muddy, and the darn ball n't go where you want it to. That what Western complained—they t. But in the Toronto camp re was only jubilation, they n't mind getting soaked, since y had won their opening soccer mes for the '48 season at Western day. The Intermediates took e opener handily 3-0, but the niors had to come from behind win 2-1.

The Intermediate fixture saw Var- y walk away with the game. In first half, Howie Plewman scored the first goal with a clever shot from his right wing position. In the second half, newly-elected Captain Al Beckwith came through with some fine examples of dribbling and with his first goal of the season. Glen Williams, playing inside left showed all players on both teams how to work that elusive pill back and forth. He set up a couple of plays and all of the time he was a spark to the offensive tactics of the Blues.

The picture play of the afternoon was executed by Sandy Montemurro, who took a long through pass from Williams and sprinted with the ball in front of him for 50 yards, faked the goal-keeper to one side and deftly flicked the ball into the upper right corner of the net.

In a soccer game it is goals which count, and an integral part of the Varsity team was their defensive sextet of Mercer, Horney, at fullback, Kean, Paterson, and Wallace at half and Tom Matthews in goal. All these boys played well with Norm Paterson the main cog in the machine.

The rain persisted, and Toronto supremacy on the pitch persisted also. That is it did except for a brief lapse when Western's Harry Cox scored on a cross from the right wing for the first goal in the senior game.

Not to be denied, Toronto came back with lots of fight and the forward line, working well together, made some of the finest plays this person has ever seen. Several times they were all around the Western goal mouth and although the Mustangs were unable to clear, Varsity was unable to push it through. After one of these plays the Blues fell back, re-grouped and Barton pushed the ball through to Neville Conyers, who plastered a driving shot at the Western goaler. The shot was so hard that the goal-keeper caught it and it rebounded out of his hands into the corner of the net. This evened the score and the Varsity team, parked to greater endeavours, drove time and again on the Mustangs goal.

Brian Barton, at inside right, playing as coach and captain of the Senior squad, celebrated by scoring the winning goal when he stole the ball from the Western goal-keeper, and shot it into the open goal.

On the defence for Varsity were John Small and Bill Peters on full-back. These two are the best pair of backs seen around Varsity for some time. Glass, Evans, Scott, Valere, Leach, all played well on the half-line. Ted Evans proved to be the best on the Varsity defence, and he was ably supported by the others. Andre Valere made a very commendable debut to the Senior circle when he took over at right half after the beginning of the second half.

We read somewhere that if you're really in a desperate predicament, with drawers full of tarnished silverware, and you expect your mother-in-law for dinner, there's a simple remedy that'll keep peace in the family. If you're fresh out of silver polish just drag out any old tube of tooth-paste and it'll do the trick like magic. We think this bit of information is fascinating, but fraught with dangerous possibilities. If your mother-in-law remarks that the main course tastes suspiciously like her favorite dentifrice, don't give yourself away by saying something smooth like, "Why not?" Just laugh gaily without frothing at the mouth, if you can, and say instead, "Why, mother, you must have left a little soap on your uppers!" If this sally doesn't put you in solid with her, at least it will indicate that you are a person of sparkling wit and perfect composure. Of course, if she notices small bubbles slipping out the side of your mouth during this exchange of pleasantries, the game's up and you'll have to let her in on your little secret. One thing is certain, she won't visit you soon again, so why worry.

People's Repertory

Over the week-end the People's Repertory Theatre, a recently formed group under the direction of Sterndale Bennett of the Royal Conservatory, introduced itself to Hart House audiences in two well-chosen situation comedies "The Far Off Hills" by Lennox Robinson and "Tons of Money" by Will Evans and Valentine. The company now leaves on a tour of the province.

Most captivating to the audience was the enthusiasm with which this youthful group handled the slight but entertaining material. Both plays depended largely on comic situation and caricature; generally, comedy was handled with a good deal of catchy exuberance and characterizations, while never subtle, were forcefully delineated.

The company displayed an all-round integration, that is a credit to the mentor-director, Mr. Bennet. Dawn Kerr who in the "Far Off Hills" gave a polished performance as the prudish domineering daughter of a blind Irishman transformed credibly into a Cockney maid in "Tons of Money". The rest of the cast displayed the same versatility. Ralph Jessel, Jack Marigold and Helen Segal contributed outstanding characterizations.

Dialogue was rapid throughout and clear delivery enabled the audience to follow complexities of plot. All scenery was constructed by the cast in the best of Little Theatre tradition and blended well with the atmosphere of the two plays. Altogether the group demonstrated an insight into dramatic technique which, we hope, will be allowed to develop in the presentation of more significant drama. Potentially, this company is capable of serious work and, while commending their present efforts, we may anticipate an individual and group advancement that will establish them as an important unit in local amateur theatre.

Hamlet

Margaret Webster and her Broadway company are this year bringing Shakespeare right to the doors of the schools, colleges and universities of Canada and the United States. In the course of their transcontinental tour they expect to cover about 40,000 miles, thus giving thousands of students an opportunity to view Shakespeare as performed by a professional troupe. Presented at Thursday's matinee was "Hamlet."

Although most people would agree that Hamlet, as gleaned from a text, is far from pale, Miss Webster's production abounds in the scary, supernatural atmosphere that one can also meet, occasionally, in drama a la Hollywood.

The difficult and highly controversial part of the Danish prince was taken by Alfred Ryder, whose interpretation was of the neurotic variety. Mr. Ryder spoke his lines to the accompaniment of erratic motions and sudden pirouettes that sometimes made it difficult for the audience to keep track of him. Although he rendered a most sincere Hamlet, his lines were spoken rather too quickly, so that one was kept wondering what had happened to the preceding lines. During Hamlet's tense soliloquy in which he explains his "mouse trap", Mr. Ryder felt the necessity to inform the audience that doors were open for those not interested in the play; he then resumed "Oh, what an ass am I".

Claudius, king and villain, was played with ease and assurance by Joseph Holland. Carol Goodner, as Queen Gertrude, was at her best in the boudoir scene. Polonius was played by Arthur O'Connell in a straightforward manner successful with the students. David Lewis' Horatio also rates favorable notice.

Miss Webster's task of transporting a Shakespearean company with all equipment is formidable, and will, we hope, not deter her from continuing with her important educational work. —Dorothea Nyberg

P.S. to Hamlet

The discussions of the Board of Education concerning the distressing audience reaction to Miss Webster's High School performance must not go entirely uncommented on, although the whole problem of teen-age vs. Shakespeare is far too complex to be dealt with justly in the available space. To blame students of private schools or of the university, or to venture on the slippery plane of racial or linguistic speculation by dividing the spectators into an Anglo-Saxon section and the rest is a rather tricky approach. This witness of the Thursday matinee has the following suggestions to make:

(a) The demonstrations were not malicious but arose from boredom. The boredom was generated, either by an inability to follow the proceedings on the stage due to sloppy, often incomprehensible enunciation. The producer's attempt to avoid boredom by speed, instead of by more extended cuts backfired.

(b) An audience of this type is likely to derive full enjoyment and benefit from a less than top calibre performance only if it has been "sold on" the play beforehand by the enthusiasm of teachers and parents coupled with at least a cursory introduction to the linguistic and social peculiarities of Elizabethan drama.

Apart from this, the absurd, and largely commercially inspired inflection of the "teen-ego", referred to editorially by the "Globe and Mail", is undoubtedly the other villain in the background.

on their end runs also during the last half.

Toogood Sparks Blues

Toogood played his heart out in a losing cause for the Blues. Cummings played well, but was seriously handicapped by a sore thumb on his throwing hand. He only got a couple of good passes away all afternoon. Huycke and Waldon also came up with fighting performances.

Up front, Clarke, Mustard, Copp and Jones were best.

For Western, Parry was dangerous every time he got the ball. Don McFarlane and Taylor went well. From his quarter-back spot, Arnott directed the Mustangs' attack in starry fashion. The Blues never knew what was coming next.

Wardle, Turnbull, Ford and Duck were the pick of the Mustangs' front wall.

Radio Workshop Announce Course For Undergrads

Buzz Thomas, IV U.C., director of Radio Workshop announced yesterday that future plans included courses in producing, writing and acting. These courses are to be given by outstanding leaders in their fields. Andrew Allan will give the course in producing, Lister Sinclair in writing, and Mavor Moore in acting. Thus, students can be assured of professional instruction, he said.

Courses consist of twelve lectures each and the first lecture in 'Acting' is scheduled for November 2nd. 'Producing' will have its first lecture on November 4th, and 'Writing' on November 5th. Weekly lectures are to be given in University College.

Beginners are promised a thorough grounding while last year's graduates are assured of enough new material to make attendance worthwhile. Mr. Moore will deal with fundamental techniques relating to script, direction, etc., and he is to give emphasis to particular scripts. Both Mr. Allan and Mr. Sinclair have promised to take into consideration students' problems of last year and to govern their lecture material accordingly.

This year it is hoped to take a large stride ahead toward the building up on the campus of a group of well-trained radio artists and technicians so that in the near future the goal of the University of Toronto radio program, with its own studio and personnel, will be reached, Thomas stated.

Ajax Elections Keenly Contested Polls Swamped

With the heaviest return of votes yet seen at Ajax Division, the members of the Hart House Ajax Arts, Cafeteria, and House committees were chosen yesterday. Interest in these elections was very high, and it was estimated over 50 per cent of the students in residence voted.

For the Arts committee, four first year men—D. W. Cameron, R. L. Ferguson, M. V. Spence, G. Wojna, and two second year men—C. H. Best, W. A. McCoy were elected.

For the Cafeteria committee, two first year men—M. A. Maubey and H. C. Pettigrew were elected.

For the House committee, four first year students—D. C. Brooks, C. A. McCurdy, R. E. Sparrow, I. Waxman and two second year students—P. S. Dawson and B. E. Judges were elected.

The elections this year were keenly contested; and it is the belief of everyone, that these committees will be among the best ever produced on the Ajax campus.

University Film Society To Offer Season Tickets

This year's version of the University of Toronto's Film Society will have two seasons of five meetings each, it was announced by Raymond Baker, the chairman of the Society last night. There will be a Fall and Winter season, as compared with only one last year.

Tickets go on sale today and may be obtained at S.A.C. office, Hart House and Women's S.A.C., U.C. To encourage the sale of memberships for both seasons, the Society is offering a complete season card for three dollars. Cards for each season, bought individually will be sold for two dollars. Baker pointed out that the three dollar membership saves money for the student and expected to have most of his members on the complete-season basis.

The ten programs for this year will include many outstanding films. Such features as "The Blue Angel" with Marlene Deitrich and Emil Jannings and "Mayerling" with Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux headline the Fall season. The Winter season will continue the list of internationally renowned motion pictures with Eisenstein's classic, "The Battleship Potemkin."

The shorts which complete each program are especially noteworthy this year. The poetic documentary "Songs of Ceylon" and a history of the animated cartoon show the variety of interest that the Society intends to provide in the meeting of both seasons.

The Society has secured the Museum Theatre for its meetings. The Sunday afternoon of Oct. 24 will begin the Fall season. Meetings will be held every two weeks, on Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

"The complete season of films offers much by way of stimulation to the student interested in the motion picture, both as an art-form and as serious entertainment." The aim of the Society is to enable such a student to view worthy films which might otherwise be unavailable to him.

Ottawa Planner To Talk Friday

Jacques Greber, eminent town planner of Paris, France, will discuss "Plans for the National Capital" at a lecture to be delivered in Convocation Hall at 8 p.m. Friday. Mr. Greber is special consultant to the federal government working on the beautification of the Ottawa area.

President Sidney Smith will act as chairman of the meeting which is being held under the auspices of the Community Planning Association of Canada. Formed two years ago in Ottawa, the organization is designed to stimulate interest among citizens in community planning.

Department Head To Open Season At Medical Club

The first meeting of the Medical Arts and Letters Club will be held at 8.00 p. m. tonight in the Women's Union. The speaker will be Professor William Line of the Psychology Department.

Prof. Line, a veteran of both the first and second World Wars, holds degrees from Mount Allison University and the University of Alberta; and also studied in London, England. During the past war, he was Director of Personnel Selection for the Department of National Defence. On his return to Toronto, he took charge of the Advisory Committee for Ex-Service Students and has also done considerable work with the veterans at Sunnybrook Hospital. A good turnout is anticipated for this first meeting where the organization and program will be explained.

Reid Scott to Speak To Vic C.C.F. Club

Reid Scott will be the guest speaker at the opening meeting today of the Victoria College CCF Club. His subject will be "The Coming Canadian Crisis." Scott became Ontario's youngest M.P.P. when he was elected to the legislature last June. He graduated from Victoria College last year. While at the University, Scott was an outstanding member of the U. of T. debating team and president of the U. of T. CCF Club.

The meeting will be held at 4 p.m. in Room 18 Victoria College.

Ontario Hydro Blackouts Bypass Campus Scientists

A survey conducted by The Varsity reveals that the recent Hydro cut has so by-passed the scientists that many of them are still quite unaware that the electricity was cut off for an hour when they were in the midst of their turmoil. While students were groping in the dark of the basement of St. Joseph's College, waiting for the kindly light of candles to be led in, the enterprising dentists were still a-drilling to their happy hearts' content. And the explanation?

The answer to this problem is to be found underground, the best of fifty feet beneath the ground just outside the parliament buildings. Yesterday afternoon The Varsity was conducted down into the bowels of the earth in a lift summoned by impressive ringing of bells and giving of signals by 'Mack', one of the men behind this riddle's answer. Down there, to the background music of as impressive an array of vast machines as the arts students could even imagine is the man who keeps the anatomists anatomising when the rest of Toronto is cast into the exterior gloom of Hydro cuts. He is Charles Moseley, chief engineer of the University power plant. He revealed that the plant is not only supplying the science buildings but is also supplying many of the other buildings on the campus and is at the same time helping out the hydro with two steam turbines. Mr. Moseley said that although the load is pretty heavy on week days, when the heat is not needed he uses the spare power for electricity production.

In his little office down among the roaring machinery, surrounded by graphs and a wealth of information, the chief has control of a vast system of 110 and 220 volt d.c. electricity and also of the heating lay-out. The plant, which has been in service since 1911 uses anything up to 500 tons of coal in a month and turns out 13,850 kilowatt hours on a typical busy winter weekday.

Music, Art, And Debate Welcomed Students To House Open Night

Warden Ignatieff of Hart House told visitors to the "New Members Night" last night two reasons for the initiation of such nights. He said the administrative staff wished to show Hart House activities to new members, and also remarked, "Last year they built the new book shop, and we were afraid it would hide Hart House."

The open house was attended by teen-agers fresh from high school, veterans from Ajax, staff members, and all other members interested in the evening's events. After an assembly in the East Common Room at which the Hart House staff were introduced and songs sung, the visitors scattered to witness, and take part in, various displays and activities throughout the building, such as art displays, chess matches and squash games. Mr. Ignatieff remarked that activities in which the guests could most easily take part attracted the greatest audience.

The Debates Committee held a formal debate on the need for athletic scholarships and an informal discussion of the future of the Progressive Conservative party in Canada.

During the latter, the reading of a paper critical toward the Conservatives caused Professor Bagnani, Classics Department, to say, "May I suggest that the Debates Committee arrange a prize for the best mixed metaphors used in debate."

The Chess Club display featured a "tandem tournament" in which experts played against several visitors at once.

Religionism Insufficient Claims Cheng

"You may consider yourself a devoutly religious person, and attend church regularly, but do you have Christ in your heart?" The Rev. Marcus Cheng of China put this question to students and members of the Varsity Christian Fellowship yesterday.

According to the Rev. Cheng, he was born twice. The first time, when he first saw the light of day, and the second time when he felt the spiritual light of God within him.

He explained how he received the word of God and was baptized at the age of sixteen. But knowledge of the word of God, he added, is by no means having the life of God within one.

Before he was twenty-one years old, Rev. Cheng was a school teacher receiving a fairly decent living wage, but when he reached his twenty-first birthday, he went to hear a Medical doctor from Shanghai, who had given up medicine to teach the Gospel. Rev. Cheng, although he was religiously devout, did not possess the spiritual calmness he wished for. Therefore asked his Doctor how he could receive Jesus into his heart. The doctor then asked the young man if he did not possess strong peace of mind. And the young Chinaman replied that his conscience was troubled and that he did not possess peace of mind. Good, said the doctor, that means Jesus is knocking at the portals of your heart and wants to get in.

Rev. Cheng went to his room, knelt down, opened his Bible and prayed 'Lord God I receive Thee into my heart." "Then," said the minister, "as I was kneeling, light came into my heart and I realized that I was a great sinner, but I was to be forgiven by God."

KNOX SOCIAL HOUR

All Presbyterian students on the campus are reminded of the opening meeting to be held in Knox College chapel this coming Sunday night, October 17th at 7:00 p.m. Rev. Prof. J. S. Glen, Ph. D., will preach the sermon. There will be a social hour following in the School of Missions at 97 St. George Street for members of the Presbyterian Fellowship.

Campus NFCUS Endorses Plans For Co-ed Union

A motion endorsing the plans of the S.A.C. for the erection of a Student Union and offering NFCUS support was passed at the organizational meeting of the NFCUS Committee of the S.A.C. held yesterday.

The motion, passed unanimously, read: "The NFCUS Committee heartily endorses the action of the SAC in proceeding with plans for the erection of a co-educational Student Union on the campus, and offer their services in whatever capacity possible to the SAC to assist in the forwarding of these plans."

George Wilkes, chairman of the committee, welcomed new members and outlined the functions of NFCUS on the campus. He pointed out that NFCUS tries to be "of general service to university students". He reminded members that all meetings were open to the students.

The question of music festivals held under NFCUS sponsorship was brought up. A committee under the chairmanship of Ward McAdam was formed to discuss "the holding of a music festival in the Central Region of the NFCUS."

In response to a question concerning the proposed affiliation of NFCUS with the International Union of Students, Miss Nancy McCormick said that no official report had been received from members of the Negotiating Committee sent to Paris this fall. She said that a member of that committee, Grant Livingstone, was expected to be in Toronto at the beginning of November, and that some official statement would probably be made then.

Canadian Artist To Direct Class For Undergrads

Over forty fledgling artists attended the organization meeting of the Hart House art class last night. Carl Schaefer, noted Canadian painter, is again to direct the classes.

"Our purpose is not to teach people to paint or draw," said Mr. Schaefer, "but rather to give them a chance to express themselves creatively." He hoped that the art classes would be more than purely recreational, and that they would act as a foil to the pressure of studying and other student worries.

Born at Hanover, Ont., Mr. Schaefer is a graduate of the Ontario College of Art. From 1936 to 1940 he taught in the evening classes at Hart House. During this time he inaugurated the Arts and Crafts club, a branch of the art class which offered members instruction and experience in bookbinding, linoleum block, etching, and other handicrafts. The Arts and Crafts club has been inactive since 1940, but Mr. Schaefer expressed hopes for its revival. During 1940 and 1941 he visited the United States on a Guggenheim fellowship. Shortly after he became a Canadian Official War Artist attached to the Historical section of the R.C.A.F., and logged more than 380 hours with bomber crews. At present he is on the staff of the Ontario College of Art.

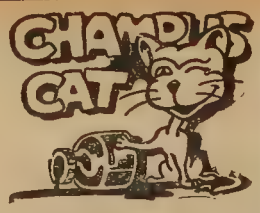
Look Around

Extra-curricular activity is a commonly heard phrase around the University. It is so common that we wonder how many people think about it at all.

There are many who believe that by attending class parties or the local cinema they are engaged in an extra-curricular pursuit. Nothing could be further from the truth. To use the phrase to refer to this sort of event is to lift it out of the university context in which it was born.

There is, or should be, a character to university life which marks it off as somewhat different from that which is to be found outside the academic wall. This is not to say that the university should be an ivy-covered refuge for learned snobbery, but it would appear to be obvious that if the institution does not symbolize and manifest a way of looking at life which its members believe could well be copied by the rest of society, it has no raison d'etre, for it would have nothing to teach.



To be a real force this distinctive character must appear in many sides of university life and must extend beyond the classroom to leisure pursuits, the extra-curriculum. Although outside the lecture hall, these activities should be related to the concept of higher education, and be part of the process.

One of the prime purposes of this institution is to provide leadership. To quote from an address given by the chancellor: "Training in leadership is a function of what we call liberal education." And training in leadership involves more than attendance at lectures. The principles read in the books must be practised, and therein lies the function of extra-curricular activity.

By taking part in group life whether it be a club, débate or a public meeting, a student can develop a sense of proportion and a respect for the right of another's opinion —two necessary attributes of leadership.

There is a balance to be struck between one's course of study and the other university pursuits. Too many outside functions can lead to disaster just as surely as too few. Many students spend their energy in attempting too many things, and come to be a kind of chronic "joiner". To pick one or two fields and learn to feel thoroughly at home in them, whether they be debating, or music, or astronomy, or any other avocation, is much more valuable than to have a talkable but indefinite experience of a much larger number. Moreover, study, still a prime part of university life, will receive more attention.

The mole is condemned to live underground because of its short sight. A university student should be able to develop a broader point of view.

The Tale Of The Pail

Icky was a schoolman,
The kind you hear at night,
Whose whistle calls and wolfish howls
Add to the freshies' fright.

He was a man of action,
As you will soon be told,
And hated every Vic man
Who wore the Scarlet Gold.

Bue he loved his own dear building,
And all it meant to him;
So to see the lawn mistreated
Meant revenge both swift and grim.

For one of different nature
It would have been just that,
But Isky was an Eng. Phyc. type.
And cautious like a cat.

He curled his few remaining hairs
With a finger tip shampoo,
And slowly formed a crafty plan
Of what he was to do.

Unshaken with the nerve of it,
Yet never stopping once,
He headed for Victoria
To carry out his stunts.

The pie plates were distracting,
The placards even worse,
But on he went unheeding—
Yet taking time to curse.

The pail grew heavy in his hand,
The milky fluid splashed;
Preparing for the deed to come,
His stained bicuspids gnashed.

Before him lay that grass so green,
Ten steps and he was there;
So far he had remained unseen—
Not that he seemed to care.

"The truth shall make you free,
And I did it and I'm glad,"
Were the comments of that schoolman,
Whom others thought was mad.

Some people work for money,
And others work for love;
But this act of admiration,
Both those was far above.

Unselfish and as tolerant
As anyone could be,
Icky went to all that trouble
For guys like you and me.

You see—Victoria was boarding
A character of fame;
Victoria was starving
An old familiar name.

That Icky was a hero,
There is no doubt of that,
For the pail of milk he carried
Was for our "Champus Cat."

Humanize Education And Civilize Men Says Dr. W. T. Brown

"Five score and seven years ago, a college was founded and 'dedicated to the proposition that all men are born free and equal' ", said Dean H. Bennett of Victoria College at the college convocation last night, the Charter Day of the college.

The chairman of the essembly, President W. T. Brown of Victoria University, said that the world needs "an education which humanises, which civilises, men." He said that, contrary to the usual opinion, the colleges today are buffetted by all the forces in the world. For the first time in history, he pointed out, education is important in post-war reconstruction.

The program held in the Vic Chapel, opened with the procession of the award winners into the hall. Following them came the Convocation procession, including the heads of staff of Victoria College, the donors of several of the awards, and the principals of many of the collegiates whose pupils were among those receiving scholarships and other prizes.

The list of winners, with more than seventy names, was read out by Professor M. St. A. Woodside, Registrar of the college with some information about each prize and its donor, and about each of the winners. The list of awards consisted of prizes given by the Senate of Vectoria College, and various special awards, to students enrolled in Victoria College and to matriculation students of this year.

Dean Bennet told the assembly that he considered the college to have three principle responsibilities—to the church, to the University of Toronto, and to the people of the province.

In speaking of loyalty to the university, Dean Bennett said that he would like to see the opening of negotiations with the university to expand the number of subjects taught in the college. The addition of new subjects to the calendar, he said, had brought inequality of operations between the two teaching authorities, the college and the university.

Responsibility to the people of the province, said Dean Bennett, applied especially to granting of scholarships. He praised the British system, where the "honours are distributed according to merit, and the money according to need."

Name Candidates For SPS Polls

Last week's nominations for six vacancies in the Toronto Engineering Society brought forth the following names to go before S.P.S. men on October 15: Second vice-president, Bill Clark; Jack Harvey; treasurer, Mike Shelley, G. H. Fatherick; secretary, J. M. Roddy, T. C. Arnold; president of the Athletic Association, Marty Olsen, Ray Webster; vice-president of the Athletic Association, W. Firstbrook (by acclamation).

Since no nominations were received for the position of chairman of the Mechanical Club, nominations for this office were held open until 5 o'clock Tuesday.

Jax Joint House Committee Meet

The first meeting of the Joint House Committee was held last night in York Hall with Dean Y.R.H. Barry in the chair. The Dean urged that common sense be used in running the various residence dances.

H. Blackmore, the Assistant to the Dean and Supervisor of Residences, acted as secretary.

J. K. McLachlan was elected chairman. The new vice-chairman, R. A. Blount, has additional responsibilities this year as the varsity representative. W. A. McCoy was elected Secretary-Treasurer. This year the Joint House committee has several hundred dollars in the bank. A. R. Chinery was elected Social Representative.

Scholarships For Athletes Say Debators

At the Hart House debate last night the motion "That this University should grant Athletic Scholarships" was carried by a majority of 11-7.

Drew Douglas (IV S.P.S.) opened the debate by pointing out the goodness accruing to individual, university and community from physical fitness. He maintained that athletic scholarships were for the good of athletics and therefore benefited the community. He saw no reason to deny the athlete the just reward for his labors while all other activities received full credit.

Ray Webster (IV S.P.S.) stressed the fact that athletics were games and should be treated as such. He pointed out that Athletic Scholarships were no more than professionalism and this led to specialism and a complete upset of the whole aim of sports.

John Woodrow (IV S.P.S.) was of opinion that College football was no fun to start with (at any rate for 160 pounders like himself) and that if you wanted to play you would be as well to stick to the excellent intramural programme offered. He stressed the hardships of a college footballer's life (nightly practises and a training camp) and thought it only fair to reward such sterling prowess.

In a lively speech for the negative V. L. Richards (IV S.P.S.) held professionalism (and he rated Scholarships as such) as one of the greatest evils in present-day sport. He stressed the evils which would naturally follow from scholarships: a complete abandonment of academic interests by up and coming high school could-be's; and a ridiculous price-pushing bartering by rival unicersities. He backed his arguments by a quotation of the findings of the Carnegie Institute.

The debate was then thrown open to the House and Thomas Fall (IV App. Science) gave one of the most pleasing and obviously sincere speeches of the night. To him a University meant a place for the advancement of wisdom and he felt that anything in the nature of an athletic scholarship was completely agin the whole idea. His concept of sport was a relief from mental strain, so necessary for a healthy mind, capable of giving of its best. He looked to sport, which even if of a lower standard, was enjoyable for the players and did not entail the vast amounts of training already mentioned.

The previously-stated opinion that professionalism involved specialization was hotly denied by Ernie Frederick (III App. Science) who also showed the poor athlete as worthy of assistance through college in view of his great contributions.

After Fred Goss' laments of the evils of American games scholarships which were contrary to the entire concept of a University, John Borden (III Wyc.) spoke strongly and eloquently for the affirmative. He saw in the athletic scholarship a vehicle for the destruction of commercialism rather than the fostering of it.

After conclusive reminiscences which condemned the motion from Don King (III App. Science) two of The Varsity sports staff stepped forth in turn and revealed that, in fact, despite any assertions to the contrary, scholarships of the worst nature were being given. Both Hal Westcott (III Vic.) and Garry Hearth thought it would be much better to bring them to the surface and be honest about it.

Liberal Guest

UT Liberals To Hear Talk

The Hon. Brooke Claxton, Minister of National Defence, will visit the University Thursday afternoon to address the opening meeting of the U. of T. Liberal Association in the West Hall of U.C. at 4.15. Mr. Claxton, a lawyer in private life and a DOM of World War I, sits in the Federal House for a Montreal riding. A man of tremendous energy and initiative, he assumed his present post in 1946, serving till then as Minister of National Health and Welfare.

In the inter-war period he was an ardent supporter of the League of Nations and his experience in representing Canada on international matters has classed him as a possible successor to the Hon. Louis St. Laurent in the External Affairs portfolio.

Queen's Game Appearance Is Student Pipers' Hope

The pipe band which was under the auspices of the C.O.T.C. last year, will branch out on their own under a committee of students. "We wish to be known as the University of Toronto Pipe Band, and to operate under the S.A.C." said Ben Foord, the band's publicity director, "but we must first prove to the council that we will be of service to the university."

The members of the band bought battle dress on their own, and borrowed the rest of their uniforms from the 48th Highlanders. They hope to have a sponsor to buy their uniforms this year, but would prefer to be a University effort exclusively, said Ben Foord.

The band hopes to obtain permission to put on lunch hour shows in front of Hart House. "We feel," said a member of the band executive, "that the Queen's pipe band should have some competition at the game on Oct. 16, so we will try to be allowed to perform then."

All experienced players, and anyone else who can pipe or drum is requested to contact Ben Foord at LA 2753. "We must acquaint the student body with the fact that there is a pipe band at the university," said Foord.

Arts Required In Engineering Skulemen Told

"Culture is necessary to give the engineer a broad picture of the life unfoiding in this comparatively new country," stated Mr. E. T. Sterne, a Queen's Graduate who was Wartime Controller of Chemicals, in an address to the Engineering Society yesterday in Convocation Hall.

"Prepare for your opportunities", he continued, explaining that, although the student must prepare himself primarily for the prosecution of his career in the technical sense, moulding of character must not be neglected as a part of University training. The engineer must be trained to think with courage, and have the conviction to put his imagination to work, but in all things honesty of thought is required of him as first requisite of the Engineering Profession.

U.C. Women Hold Meeting

The first open meeting of the Women's Undergraduate Association of University College is being held this afternoon at four o'clock in the Women's Union Theatre. Every woman of the college is a member of the W.U.A. and these meetings are to enable her to discuss and formulate policy of the W.U.A.

Probe Planned In Gym Accounts By UBC Council

Vancouver, British Columbia, Oct. 7—(CUP)—A special committee was set up yesterday at the University of British Columbia to investigate its War Memorial Gymnasium fund after charges were made at a student meeting that $16,739 was diverted from the fund account.

The students' council appointed the committee following charges made by Bob Dodd, law student, at a semi-annual campus-wide meeting, that part of $42,752 collected last year for the Memorial Gym fund had been used for general student activity expenditures.

Dodd called for an investigation of the fund and a change in the constitution of the student government "to prevent future misappropriations of this sort." His resolution was approved by a majority of the more than 2,000 U.B.C. students present at the meeting.

Hart House Season Opens Next Week With Modern Play

To open its third season of all-university productions under the direction of Robert Gill, Hart House Theatre is presenting Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth". The play will run from Saturday, October 23 through Saturday, October 30.

"Thornton Wilder is well known for his determined attempts to break down the 'fourth wall' which separates the stage from the audience," sand Mr. Gill. "In 'Skin of Our Teeth' this is achieved by having the actors step off the stage and into the audience. They come out of their roles and comment on the play and their own reactions to the plot."

"This is perhaps the most controversial play to be written in the last decade," continued the director, "and its theme is treated in a fittingly unusual manner. It has often, and quite appropriately, been called a 'comic strip history of mankind'."

Mankind, in the play is personified by Mr. and Mrs. Antrobus and their two children, Gladys and Henry. Mr. Antrobus is the inventor of the wheel and the multiplication table, while Mrs. Antrobus is supposed to be a combination of the eternal mother and a Helen Hokinson clubwoman. Sabina, their extraordinary maid, and their two pets, a dinosaur and a mammoth, complete the household.

In the course of the play mankind personified survives three great catastrophies by "the skin of its teeth". In Act One the household faces the threat of the Ice Age at their home in Excelsior, New Jersey, the family and the maid passing unhurt, but with the loss of the dinosaur and the mammoth. Act Two takes them to Atlantic City, where the Order of Mammals is holding a convention. The world is here destroyed by a Great Flood, and the method by which the family escapes destruction is very interesting. In Act Three the Antrobus family and Sabina survive a war which wipes out most of civilization; the play, however, ends on a note of hope as the family prepares to build a new home.

"The Skin of Our Teeth" was first presented in New York in 1942, when it won the year's Pulitzer Prize. The original cast had Tallulah Bankhead as Sabina and Frederic March as Mr. Antrobus. The London production, which ran for two seasons, starred Vivien Leigh in Sabina's role and was produced and directed by Sir Laurence Olivier.

The Hart House production has Anna Cameron in Sabina's role. Miss Cameron was in two other Hart House plays, "Jason", and "The Infernal Machine". Eric House, who was with the Straw Hat players this summer, is cast as Mr. Antrobus, and Audrie Lowrie, also in "Jason" portrays Mrs. Antrobus. The Antrobus children will be played by Eleanor Swann and Ted Follows, while Shiela Craig will play the Fortune Teller.

Lee Art Collection Finds Home Gift To Varsity From Viscount

Next door to one of the many common rooms in Hart House there is a most uncommon room. It houses a treasure worth, perhaps, the price of Hart House itself.

You can't be quite sure when you enter the treasure room whether you have stumbled into a private vault, a museum, or just another of the many Hart House rooms. It is in fact, a combination of all. And it was made that way purposely. What's more, it took two years to get it that way.

People come from all over Canada in order to see this priceless art treasure. Many a jewel collector would make a pilgrimage from Europe for a quick glimpse of the ancient articles. Students at Toronto University have only to take a few steps and look.

How did it get here?

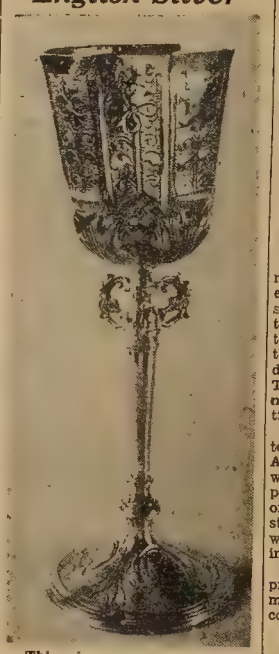
The mint of metal is a gift from Lord Lee of Fareham, who loved Canadians so much that he presented the collection, the result of his life-long hobby, to Canada and more especially to students at the University of Toronto. It was one day in England that Lord Lee mentioned to a friend, who is now Chancellor of the University, Mr. Vincent Massey, that he would like to give the gems to Canadians. Mr. Massey said he would set aside a room in Hart House. And he did.

If you have ever scrubbed a pot, you may have an idea of the amount of work involved in getting the collection ready. You may have to take off the dirt of one day; but try steel-wooling the corrosion off a 13th century chalice. That is what Miss Hackenbrock did.

Meet Miss Yvonne Hackenbrock. She is as interesting as the fabulous collection itself, and how she came to be in Hart House now is a story worth hearing. Lord and Lady Lee had dropped in at the British Museum and noticed that the Mediaeval Gallery had taken on a more attractive appearance. On inquiring, they found that the person responsible was a charming member of the museum staff. That was Dr. Hackenbrock—she is a doctor of philosophy. She was engaged and given the responsibility of bringing the collection to Canada. The result of her work can be seen in Hart House.

When she speaks of the collection you can almost imagine a mother speaking of her child. She tells of trying to keep the room alive, and not having it a part of the dead past. No one can argue with the finished results.

She has tried to keep the atmosphere of the collection such as it was in the home of Viscount and Viscountess Lee of Fareham and at the same time remind people that they are still in Hart House by using the same type of furniture in the room as is found in other parts of the house. She has combined both these features in an attempt to conform with her ideas of museum installation and "to give a neutral foil for the objects so that they can speak there own language undisturbedly."



Miss Hackenbrock tells of the constant encouragement she received from the past warden of Hart House, Mr. Bickersteth. He had taken both the collection and the young curator under his wing. The question of a woman in Hart House came up, and after the proper amount of discussion has been settled.

The contents of the carefully-carved collection are varied, from a snuff-box to a silver-gilt stag. Materials not only include gold and silver, but, oddly enough, cocoanut shells and ostrich eggs. Each object was chosen by Lord Lee for its beauty, character and excellence of workmanship. Each item has a history of its own. Many a history book or novel could be written about their past owners or wearers. (A fuller description of the collection from the art point of view will be published in a later edition of The Varsity.)

The whole room seems to give the spectator a feeling that he is looking on a bit of the past, kept alive and breathing by a mother's care. The glass show cases are made of Canadian maple, and are set against a backdrop of neutral green. Subdued lighting designed by the competent keeper of the collection falls softly on a broadloom rug of neutral beige. Miss Hackenbrock sitting behind her Hart House desk in the room seems almost to be a part of the fabulous items.

The collection is now a part of the University and is there for the students to enjoy and appreciate.

Over Eager Soph Leads Freshman Into Evil Ways

Friday afternoon at U. C. sophomore succeeded in leading an earnest freshman astray. Following instructions supposed to get them to the office of Miss A. E. Parkes in the U. C. basement, they entered the college, turned left and went down the stairs, as per directions. They went down to the basement all right—the Women's section!

After leisurely perusal of the room to their left, they exclaimed, "Aha! A cocktail bar!" Finding no one of whom to ask further directions they proceeded to the right, but found only a locked door. Retracing their steps, they met a female student, who seemed quite put-out at seeing them.

Informed of their mistake, they proceeded, abashed, back up to the main floor, and thence into the correct section.

VIC'S CORNER

With the din of the bands, the exuberant crowds and the cheerleaders still ringing in our ears we attempt to write this column. For those of you who are not inclined to keep track of the days or the date, may we inform you that this Corner is appearing on Wednesday, which is exactly one day after Tuesday. Like Masterson we have only one thing to say ... "It won't happen again."

Last week we promised you some news about the Handbook. Well, here it is. Through the long, hot summer days and nights a number of your Vic students were industriously writing scripts and hunting information that will soon appear in a smart-looking gold bound booklet of information about Victoria that includes everything about the College on the Strand ... everything from the V to the a.

In it you will find your favorite songs from Bobs of the past, information on all the clubs and societies, interesting anecdotes about life at Vic and anything else that may be raising questions in your mind. The articles are interesting, enlightening and in many cases humorous. When the book is given out (and we use the word given in its strictest sense) in about two weeks, we hope you'll be on hand for your copy—all 150 pages of it! Keep your eyes open for announcements.

Being a loyal member of the Class of 5TO it is only natural that we should mention the Class Hike that will take place this Friday evening at Fallingbrooke. All 5TO 'rs are asked to meet on the steps of Vic by 7:30 ... and then on to the food, fun and gals. Incidentally it's free. So don't miss it.

Football week-ends ! ! Absolutely nothing like 'em. They're loaded with thrills, spills, (liquid that is) and fun galore. Last week-end about 1,700 Varsity football fiends revelled in the colour of the first intercollegiate tussle. And now coming to Toronto are the "Tri-coloured Oyle thighs" from Kingston way. Just to help everyone get into the spirit of things your S.A.C. is sponsoring a Pep Rally in Varsity Stadium this Friday evening. The team will be there; the cheerleaders will be there; and so will the band. Now if Mr. Phan turns out in full force we'll really have a top notch preview of what the coming season holds in the line of colours and excitement.

The October meeting of the Assembly dealt with many items of business. There was the Bob Director, the proposed Vic Review (of which much more will be said in the future) the working committees and so on. What concerns us most for the present, however, is the proposed amendment to the Constitution. Tomorrow an Open Meeting will be held in the Chapel (and that means YOU should be there) to ratify a change that will see a graduate chair the Assembly in place of the President. Full details have been posted on the bulletin board.

Here's the "Odds-'n Ends" department. The "T" Dance Committee has been formed and should soon be operating. The bulletin boards in Vic are now being watched carefully to see that all abide by its rules ... which have been posted for one and all to see. There are still a few Student Bibles in the V.C.U. Office at twenty-five cents a throw. Thursday at four Vic plays U.C. in their first scheduled intramural football game. Be on the back campus to help cheer those Scarlet and Golds along.

"And de walls came tumblin' down". Even old Josh would have stopped to stare in wonder at the annual Soph-Frosh battle that was staged, this time, in Vic. Annual we say because as far back as we can remember the hoses have been brought into play, trousers have mysteriously disappeared and fines have been imposed. Fortunately Vic is a solid old structure and doesn't tumble easily but we'd like to see those sagging 5T1 and 5T2 budgets after all the damages have been assessed.

Next Tuesday you can be certain that the walls of Central Tech are in for a rocking. The first and second year classes will REALLY be given an opportunity to voice their feelings when with all their enthusiastic vigour they yell themselves hoarse. Initiations will officially have ended, and the 76th Annual Bob will have passed into history. To quote the archives—"The voices of the Frosh are merged with those of the Sophs to achieve what is greater than class spirit, that is the spirit of Bob Beare—the spirit of Vic."

See you next Tuesday ... for sure.

New Telephone Exchange Not Seen In Near Future

There is little likelihood the versity will get an automatic phone exchange in the near ure," G. D. Maxwell, Assistant ilding Superintendent said yes- ay. About 25 men have been working on the job since July and the Bell Co. expect to complete the work in about two weeks.

The estimated cost of the project, according to Mr. J. V. Hassells, of the Bell Co., is about $15,-000.00. Approximately 4,700 feet of cable of various sizes has been replaced.

Most of the telephone cable used by the University is carried in the tunnels which run between the buildings. The phone cable has been carried in these tunnels ever since 1911.

U.C., it's this way...

For all you UC'ers who came home from London broken in spirit and pocketbook, we recommend the football game on the back campus today at four. That's when U.C. plays its first game of the season with its perennial enemy, Vic. This time you'll be cheering the winning team. Not only that, but you'll have some pretty co-eds to lead you in your cheering. Yes, U.C. has at last found those three cute girls to wear the red and white. You'll want to turn cartwheels yourself when you see them.

It's going to be a busy week at U.C. — maybe nothing as exciting as the Soph-Frosh, but U.C. is settling down to more serious matters these days. Many this week will get their first opportunity to see the student government of their college in operation.

Every woman of the college is a member of the Women's Undergraduate Association and every man a member of the Literary and Athletic Society and a portion of their fees goes to these associations to be spent on activities for the students themselves. You, as a member of either the W.U.A. or the Lit., elect the executives whose policies are brought before open meetings of the student body.

The first W.U.A. open meeting of the year is being held this afternoon at four o'clock in the Women's Union Theatre. The budget for the coming year will be read and discussed. You'll hear reports from the members of the executive on various phases of W.U.A. activity and Miss Ferguson will speak on "India".

The Lit. is having its first open meeting of the year tomorrow at 7:30 in the Junior Common Room. It will be of special interest to the men because nominations are being held for the first year executive and for secretary of the Lit.

Thursday is also the day that the U.C. Parliament holds its opening debate and the topic — Resolved that western powers should get out of Berlin now — is of current interest to every student. Debating from opposite sides of the house and each speaking from first-hand experience, will be Warren Goldring and Pat Daniels, two U.C. students who travelled in Germany this past summer. The time . . . tomorrow at four. The place . . . the J.C.R.

Too bad the first T-Dance of the season and the official opening of the J.C.R. had to be postponed but with Friday the beginning of an away-week-end and the Thanksgiving week-end as well, it was thought better, by those in charge, to hold it at some future date when more UC'ers would be on hand. Be watching for it.

Follies! Follies! Follies! You hear it on every side these days. Rehearsals of the slow chorus and the fast chorus have begun and already they look mighty smooth. If the dancing is any indication of what the whole show will be like, then you can bet that the Follies will be the best campus show of the year.

A note to first year women. . . . Keep the night of Wednesday, October 20th, open. That's when formal initiations are being held, when freshies in a candle-lighting ceremony, add their names to U.C.'s register. It's an evening full of fun, too. All freshies participate in brief hilarious skits which they write and produce themselves.

And another note . . . this time to college clubs and organizations.. This is your column, too. We want to tell the students about ALL U.C. activities. If you have any information for the corner, contact publicity directors, Hal Rosenthal or Joyce Smale.

Before we sign off, we'd like to draw your attention to the sharp little sketches that head this corner and then from you and you and you and from us, too, we'd like to say "Thanks" to Stan Cohen, an ex-U.C. man, who did such a fine job.

See you here next week.

Informal Illuminated Innovation — 'It

Bell, Suddick, and Davey Formulate 'It' Programme

Bob Masterson requested IT, the Blue and White Society of the SAC is planning IT, all the campus luminaries are featured in IT and you, brother undergraduate are going to have the time of your life when you see and join in IT.

Picture, if you can, Bob Cringan conducting his infamous ensemble up the middle of Bloor Street by moonlight; picture the procession as it is joined by some thousand rampaging students; picture the Back Campus illuminated by a giant bonfire as upwards of ten thousand students gather to participate in it. The picture, ladies and gentlemen, will take on proportion Friday night, with your enthusiastic co-operation; its development will reveal IT as being a long-awaited and much-needed innovation on our fair campus. We're going to have a PEP RALLY!

Pep is going to be the theme at the rally, too; at the instigation of Coach Bob Masterson, a special committee, including Bill Bell, Pat Suddick and Keith Davey, of the Blue and White Society of the SAC, has been formulating a program which provides entertainment of a type and quantity never before witnessed here. The week-end proceedings are designed to add a bit of fuel to the abundant Varsity spirit displayed in London over the week-end and to let the team know that we still love 'em. The main benefit of the enterprise accrues to the student, though, and to show you what we mean here's an outline of what goes when the Pep Rally Shows.

Join Bob Cringan and his noteworthy musicians anywhere along Bloor or St. George streets between 7:30 and 8:00 p.m.; on to the back campus where the fire will be going full blast by the latter hour. Informal clothes and blankets will be the order of the day. To start things off, the cheerleaders and band plan to work the crowd into a spirited frenzy; thereupon, Bill Bell is going to present each and every member of the Blues to the crowd. A P.A. system will convey the huskies' appropriate remarks to the assembled crowds; coach Masterson will then be trundled up to the mike and give his impression of what is going to happen in the remainder of the Intercollegiate schedule. He will also outline details for Varsity's five remaining victory celebrations.

The cheerleaders and band will again occupy the limelight at that point when they introduce a new Varsity Victory song written by McMillan and Bryden of Trinity. This will be followed by a sensational bit of nonsense starring McMillan, Bryden, Jack Pearse and Norm Jewison.

It is hoped that some of the Queen's vanguard will be present and spice the proceedings with a dash of old Scotch. The list of celebrities above will be augmented by other outside notables of the world of sports and entertainment.

The fire burns low but the show goes on; the band will lead a snake dance to the Drill Hall and perhaps other points where terpsichorean interpretations will be left to the individual. If you quaver about...attending stag, by all means relax; Keith Davey and Doug Love have personally guaranteed that "for every man there's a woman and for every woman a man."

UC In First Win Outboot Meds 2-1

History was made last night on the front campus as the U. C. soccer team romped to a 2-1 win over senior Meds. Having little to offer in the way of skill, the Red and White made up for the lack by displaying enough fight to keep the Meds bottled up in their own end during most of the game, and even to take the odd shot at the astonished goaltender.

Hilliard opened the scoring for Meds, but Webb evened it up in a few minutes. From then on U.C. dominated the play, and Art Webb's second goal, a scorching drive from thirty yards out, came after a series of near misses. Loveys on the Meds defence, was the best man they had, while Maloney, at right half was the main gun behind the U. C. attack.

Since U. C. has not won a soccer game for some four years, the lads were rightly elated. They even let loose with a U.C ...

Vic vs UC PHE In Grid Tilt

Victoria College gridders meet UC/PHE today at 4:00 o'clock in the opening clash of the Intramural grid season. Although Mulock Cup winners last year, Vic is not considered as powerful this year as only four members of the championship squad remain.

The combined forces of U. C. and P.H.E., who formerly had their own team, offer a definite threat to the Scarlet and Gold hopes of retaining the title.

This afternoon's contest will be old stuff to Vicmen Harry Damp, Jake Morrow, Bob Dowcett and Alex Watson, but there the experience ends. However, there is no lack of willing reserves on Bill Paterson's crew and this fact may make up for the scarcity of holdovers.

The UC/PHE picture is slightly more rosy. Manager Frank Galloway is counting on eight men from last year's interfaculty teams and is hopeful of one or two intermediate castoffs before the season gets well under way. All of which would seem to give the Combines the nod over Vic in the season's play, but today's Back Campus meeting may be something else again.

Ted Toogood, the man who gave the impression that the Blues had the Mustangs' number when he caught a pass from Bruce Cummings for the first score of the game last Saturday in London.

WATER POLO TEAM AGAIN TO FORM THIS SEASON

This afternoon at 5:30 Varsity embarks on another journey for an Intercollegiate Championship. The event is the first water polo practice of the current season. Last year Varsity defeated their perennial rivals, the McGill Redmen, to win the Hershorn Trophy, symbolical of intercollegiate water polo supremacy.

Many of last year's stars will not be back this year which means that new players must be found to take their place. Coach Bob Dunston will be back determined to field an even better team than last year's squad. All former, as well as aspiring players, are urged to come down to Hart House tomorrow at 5:30. Practices will take place every afternoon from now on.

Speaking Of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

All previous reports to the contrary, it pains me to report that William Brewer will not be playing for the Blues this year. After his efforts in last Friday's intermediate game against the Colts, many a young Varsity football fan sagely commented that Bob Masterson was missing a sure-fire prospect.

Brewer was nothing short of sensational in Friday's game. His kicking in particular is worthy of comment. He booted a very soggy ball far and high all afternoon, and then put the cap on a great all-round display, by ghosting 65 yards down the middle for the second Varsity touchdown.

Unfortunately for the Blues, whose kicking so far has been for from adequate, young Mr. Brewer is in his first year of an honour course at Trinity. Masterson has been trying to impress him with the advantages of the PHE course, but Williams has been holding out for the higher brackets of academic endeavour.

There's an interesting story behind Bill's football prowess. Bill graduated from T.C.S. last year. While at this noble institution he became well known with the soccer team, but could never develop a working interest in football.

However, by the time he reached his final year, football coach Bernie Hodgetts talked him into a football uniform. Bill proceeded to burn up the league. So impressed was Mr. Hodgetts that he wrote The Athletic Office at Hart House that Brewer was coming to Varsity and that the "power that be" had better find a football uniform to fit him, but pronto.

Bill was way ahead of him. He already had turned out with the intermediates, and co-coaches Bark and Brown were acclaiming their "find".

You'll hear plenty from Brewer in the future. He and Bob Garside will lead the intermediates to the intercollegiate championship this year. (The kiss of death—oh well, I can't be wrong every time). The long and short—

Check the first class program that will be on display for Varsity's home games. Orchids to Harry Griffiths for a superb job.

Annis Stukus is still impressed with the Blues, even after the Western game.

SPORTSWOMAN

Two softball games were played yesterday from one to two in Trinity field.

The final score in the first league game, PHE I 21—UC 0, gives a clear picture of the play. At the end of the second inning the score was just 4-0 for PHE but in the third inning the Fizz Edders ran rampant and scored 17 runs before UC could get organized enough to put them out.

Ferne Watson, PHE's first baseman, hit two home runs in the third, one of which brought in two other runners. Two other Fizz Edders, Marg Doyle, pitcher, and Gwen Smith, catcher, not only handled their own positions capably, putting out 11 UC-ers before they reached first base, but each one five runs between them.

The third league game in the o posite corner was a more even co test, which was won by PHE III 8 over St. Hilda's. The Sain threatened to make up for the earlier defeat at the hands of PH III and were winning 8-4 whe PHE came up to bat in the botto of the third and final inning. That the Trinity team seemed to fa apart. The Fizz Edders went on hitting spree and added 10 runs their score to win the game.

Mary Harry scored three of th PHE runs and Jacey Steele, PHE alert first baseman, got on ba every time she was up. For St. Hi da's, Ann Sprowl starred on thi and Marg Martin in the field. Bo these players scored one run.

AJAX SPORTS NOTES

The first meeting of the inter-residence athletic committee was held today at Hart House with a full attendance of representatives. Tradition was smashed when the GIRLS entered teams in the basketball and volleyball competition. Presided over by Pat Sheehan, Assistant Supervisor of Athletics, the meeting was concerned with the discussion of basketball, soccer, bowling and volleyball. The inter-residence sports open on Monday, October 18th. Every Thursday, the residence athletic representative will be given a schedule of the games for the following week.

In an interview, Pat Sheehan emphasized the unparalleled enthusiasm of the Jaxmen for sports this year. In past years the inter-residence competition has been very keen, but even with 1,000 students less in Ajax this year, competition will be keener than ever. Pat expects this year to be the best yet, stating that since Ajax first opened this fall he has been literally swamped with inquiries from eager sportsmen regarding the athletic program. He attributes this to the fact that about 90 per cent of the first year students are fresh out of high school and on the whole are keener on sports than the more studious ex-servicemen of former first year classes.

P. S. Don't forget the tennis tournament this coming Thursday.

70 to Run In Meet

More than 70 men will be running in circles today, but there will be no confusion in the proceedings. The 70 are the record entry in the senior interfaculty track meet which goes on at Varsity Stadium starting at 1:15 today.

The top stars of Varsity's track world will be on display today, as they vie for positions on the senior intercollegiate team which entertains McGill, Queen's, and Western next week. Included in the entry is footballer Jack Gray who won the junior meet last week.

The meet is again in the hands of the third year PHE class who ran off the junior events in a record two hours last week. In this session, events will be run in heats and finals rather than in straight time.

STAIRS ARE DANGEROUS

Statistics show that 63 per cent of all falls in the home occur on stairs.

COLE SLAW

Another columnist, here in Toronto, Mr. J. B. McAree, writes a column about three times this length every day and makes it look easy. Of course, if we were to just sit around and lift chunks out of current books, or answer voluminous correspondence to fill the column, we guess it would be easy for us as well. But, being sticklers for the new and original, we insist that all our columns spring unaided from our furrowed brow. Reading through McAree's column the other day, which was devoted to the founding and development of The New Yorker magazine, we were extremely interested, inasmuch as we are constant readers of said publication. Everything went fine until we were brought up short by the type of glaring error which only proves the importance of keeping your references handy when trying to pass off a crib as extemporaneous erudition. Any New Yorker reader knows that their widely read and quoted special editorial writer is E. B. White, and not E. W. White as our morning contemporary identified him. Such errors, we are told, mark the well-read man. We feel, however, that they mark the careless one as well. Really, we are surprised, Mr. J. B. McAree!

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Vinci-Kraus

In the Royal Conservatory Concert Hall last night, Ernesto Vinci and Greta Kraus presented a recital of 15th to 18th Century song. It was especially delightful to hear these songs presented, as they were, with urbane informality of manner, and to the strumming resonance of the harpsichord, the only type of presentation that can create the proper "tone" for this music.

With a couple of exceptions (notably a recitative and aria by Carl Heinrich Graun, of declamatory-dramatic quality) the songs were of the intimate, almost drawing-room music character.

As far as details of performance go, Dr. Vinci's voice was a long time in warming up, and consequently at first his tone had a peculiar, muffled quality which tended to distract one a little from the artistic, high quality of his interpretation. Miss Kraus accompanied with her characteristically sensitive excellence.

The program fell into four groups, being respectively: Italian, German, English and French. There is a great similarity in the music of this period between one nation and another. The juxtaposition of these four groups, however, demonstrated the differences to be discerned in spite of the similarities—a variety depending, I think, as much on language difference as on the difference of national temperament.

There is an emotional luxuriance in the Italian songs. A free-flowing, ample melodic line is filled with an immediate, almost sentimental, comparatively unrestrained emotion. The French style tends rather toward a brittle balance, the tenderness tempered with wit and in the accompaniment a tinkle rather than a sweep. It is music suggesting surface rather than an undulant line.

The most characteristic of the German group were two Bach songs. The abstracted or intellectualized emotion of these (expressed usually in a swelling evenness of tone, not as wanton at the Latin manner) was largely missed. It was attempted in the second of the two, not quite achieved. The singer's great sympathy remained with the Italian and the French.

The Silver Whistle

Doubts and misgivings may assail even the most faithful believer in the legitimate stage—until Jose Ferrer comes along and sets everything right again. His appearance at the Royal Alexandra this week in Robert E. McEnroe's "The Silver Whistle" conveys the precious brand of thespian elation that actually causes you to wait impatiently for the signal denoting the end of the intermission.

The play is a comedy about a home for the aged flooded by equal doses of Coue, Omar Khayyam and the more erotic aspects of Bernarr MacFadden, administered by a resourceful tramp; it is a solid prop for a rare accumulation of splendid character acting, a vehicle, no more, one that would have come to grief at the hand of a lesser crew.

The production, directed by Paul Crabtree, is a reassuring demonstration of teamwork, partly due, no doubt, to the skill of the playwright, but surely no less to Ferrer's histronic tact; he is the central figure and he lends it all the strength and suppleness that he has bestowed on his Richard and his Cyrano, yet, not for a single moment does he monopolize the stage. Consequently, he builds no barriers against the enjoyment of a number of engaging portrayals of a half dozen or so oldsters in various stages of decrepitude. Kathleen Comegys, Doro Merande and William Lynn are the most prominent in this gallery. Among the younger characters Eleanor Wilson as Miss Tripp is by far the most refreshing and enjoyable heroine within local memory.

So far, Ferrer and Toronto have displayed definite mutual affection. "The Tin Whistle," as and example of good theatre, ought to contribute much to the perpetuation of this happy state of affairs.

SAC BUDGET TO BE REVISED

Sir C. Wren's Work Praised By Maclagen

Sir Christopher Wren, the man who created an entire plan within a week for the rebuilding of London after the Great Fire of 1666 was the subject of Sir Eric Maclagen's lecture in the Museum Theatre on Wednesday afternoon. Sir Eric is the Chairman of the Fine Arts Committee of the British Council.

Wren, reputedly the greatest architect of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, is most famous for St. Paul's Cathedral, one of the numerous beautiful churches which he built in London. Among its most notable churches are St. Michael's, St. Bride's, St. Mary-Le-Bow, St. Stephen's and St. James'. A tribute to the inventive genius of the man is the fact that no two spires on any of his churches are alike. He also started a precedent by changing the structure of the church steeples. His predecessors nestled the steeples on the church roof, he built his right from the ground. This fact saved some of the spires from bombing during the war, which completely destroyed the churches, but left the tower part.

Sir Eric stated that work has already begun in London to restore some of Wren's churches which were destroyed during the war. This work is being retarded, however, until more building materials and money are available.

During his lecture to the large gathering, Sir Eric showed slides of the various churches Wren built. These slides demonstrated the difference between the churches as they stood bfore the war and the devastation wrought on them by the German bombing.

Sir Christopher, who was born in 1632, received his education at Westminster school and Oxford College, where he distinguished himself in applied mathematics and geometry. Later, he travelled extensively in Europe, centring his studies in architecture in Paris and Italy. When he returned to England in 1666 to rebuild London, his radical plan for rebuilding the city were unacceptable and, consequently was not used. However, he did carry through his plans for St. Paul's.

French Meeting At Art Gallery

M. Jean Moulton, recently appointed Cultural Counsellor at the French embassy in Ottawa, will be the speaker at the opening meeting of the Alliance Francaise Monday, October 18, at 8.30 p. m. at the Art Gallery of Toronto, Dundas Street.

The lecture, which will be given with illustrations, will serve to familiarize the audience with the work of the 17th century painter, Georges de la Tour, whose paintings, represented by one or two canvases on this continent, have been the subject or much discussion in art circles since their "rediscovery" in recent years.

Refreshments will be served at the end of the lecture, and exhibits of the Art Gallery will be open without extra charge until 11 p. m. to those in attendance at the Alliance Francaise.

In the program for the year are forthcoming addresses by M. Etienne Gilson, de l'Academie Francaise, R. P. Maydieu, editor of "La Vie Intellectuelle", M. Marc Blanc Pain, novelist, M. Max Pol Fouchot, editor of "Fontaine", and M. Francisque Gay, French ambassador to Canada. French films and a French play will be spring attractions at Hart House Theatre.

Regular members and students may pay membership fees Monday night between 8 and 8.30 p. m. Student representative on the Alliance Francaise committee this year is Pierre Falquet, III St. Michael's.

Show Thriving Business Done By St. Mike's Co-op

St. Michael's College Co-operative did approximately $10,000 worth of business during its first year of existence, according to the official operating statement for the year ending May 31, 1948.

At a meeting last night in Brennan Hall, more than 100 members of the Co-operative reviewed the financial statement, amended the constitution and elected a new board of directors.

Howard Harris, an auditor of the United Farmers Co-operative Co. Ltd., who audited the books of the Co-operative, explained the operating statement to the members. He praised the initiative of the St. Michael's College men and said that the figures of their books were ample proof to all sceptics that co-operatives were paying businesses.

Two amendments to the constitution were proposed and passed by a majority vote. To provide for continuity and stability in Co-operative affairs, it was decided that four members of a previous year's board of directors must always be re-elected for a second term. In this way, while the board will acquire annually younger members with new ideas, the minority of men experienced in co-operative business will remain to advise and stabilize the new members in their work.

By another amendment, the time of the annual election meeting was changed. Hereafter new members will be elected in March rather than in October. They will not, however, take office until the following year.

The new board of directors was elected according to the new system of retaining four members of the previous board. Re-elected for a second year were: Art Monihan, IV-St. Michael's, Bud McGough I-St. Michael's, Maime Flynn, III-Loretto, and Mary Agnes Wilkinson, II-St. Joseph's. Elected for the first time were Jack Wilson, II-St. Michael's Tom Popp II-St. Michael's, Frank Burke-Gaffney, I-St. Michael's Ksavera Jarosz II-St. Joseph's, and Juita McCool, II-Loretto.

St. Michael's College Co-operative Tuck Shop is located in the basement of House No. 49, one of the residences. Members may buy coffee, soft drinks, sandwiches and doughnuts, obtained and sold by the Co-op. In addition, a book exchange was begun this year on a small scale.

Lower Enrolment Lessens Revenue For SAC Activities

Faced with an expected decrease in revenue from student fees, the Students' Administrative Council last night moved to meet rising costs by slashing expenses all the way down the line. The 1948-49 budget, drawn up last spring and based on an estimated revenue of $37,000, will be completely overhauled.

Publications Affected

Total enrolment figures, still not officially computed, indicate SAC fee revenue this year will hover around the $30,000 mark.

The Varsity and Torontonensis will be among the first to be affected by the new economy measures. Starting next week The Varsity will appear as a four-page issue every Wednesday although the regular eight-page edition will continue to be published during the other week days. The increased financial burden on the Council because of rising printing costs of Torontonensis led Council last night to impose a levy of $2.00 on each graduating student for his copy of the university yearbook.

All SAC committees were directed to abstain from making expenditures until the new budget is brought in by the Finance Committee.

The Varsity, facing an estimated printing cost of $25,000 (more than doubled since two years ago) leaves the Council with a deficit of $16,000. The cut to four pages once a week, saving $1,200, still leaves a deficit of $14,800 on the paper's operations, according to figures listed last night.

Torontonensis, with an increased printing cost $5,000 higher than was originally budgeted for, will be placed on sale to graduating students who will be required to signify their intention of buying the book before November 30.

The Students' Handbooks, of which 10,000 were purchased to sell at 25 cents each, have contributed toward a deficit since thousands have not yet been sold. Delivered ten days after the opening of term, they

I.S.S. To Help Supply European Cultural Needs

In his address to the opening meeting of the International Students Service, Dr. Long stated that I.S.S. is primarily an organization to promote education and culture among students of the world. Following the war the physical needs of European students were considered the most essential part of the I.S.S. program, but as the situation is now somewhat alleviated, I.S.S. is concentrating on supplying these students with intelectual and cultural contacts with the rest of the world. German students, in particular, are bereft of information of the rest of the world and urgently require all publications and periodicals which I.S.S. can possibly send them.

In his discussion of the eight week I.S.S. seminar held last summer in northern Germany, Dr. Long outlined the topics which were discussed in these open meetings. Many prominent professors from all over the world lectured on economics, music, political science, philosophy. All the students at the seminar derived a great deal of benefit from these lectures and urged that these summer sessions become annual events.

In his introductory address, Chairman Warren Goldring stressed the importance of international contacts, which would broaden education and knowledge and facilitate propaganda. This would also include an international exchange of culture, with the emphasis on intellectual freedom.

Among the I.S.S. projects for this year is the conference at Ajax, to be held at the end of October, for I.S.S. delegates from twenty Canadian universities. It is hoped that these annual conferences can be augmented by a Canadian I.S.S. summer seminar which would last six weeks. Plans are being formulated for such a seminar to be held at Montreal next summer. These seminars would help reduce provincialism among Canadian students.

Peter Dobell, a delegate to the seminar held in Germany discussed the possibility of bringing German students to Canada to study.

Theatre Wanted In Co-ed Union

A co-educational students' union is planned for the U. of T. and last weekend The Varsity conducted a poll to determine what the students wanted to find in the new building.

The sexes differed widely in what they wanted. Women students questioned asked that enlarged athletic facilities be provided for them. Swimming pool, badminton courts and a large gymnasium that could be used for dances headed the list. Others said that a lunch room and snack-bar were most needed. Sitting room with radios and record players were also requested.

Among the men, opinion was unanimous that Hart House athletic privileges were adequate for them. A high percentage of them said that a card room would be a large sized advantage. Last year's Hart House ban on cards was a "hard blow", said one.

Several students said they would like to see a small movie theatre with full equipment and library of films as part of the new building. "It could be designed so as to be easily converted into a lounge when not being used as a theatre", said one cinema enthusiast.

Other suggestions included an art gallery, library and date-bureau.

Almost unanimously students agreed on the need and desirability of a union where students could meet. But one astounding comment came from a senior woman student. "I don't like the idea", she said. "A women's Hart House, alright, but a co-ed union, no! The women would spoil it for the men!" ! !

Big Contribution To Community Life From This Year's Red Feather Fund

"Doesn't it seem funny to you that whenever some appeal is made to the public by a charitable organization, that appeal has to be dressed up with all kinds of parades, side-shows and all the other oomph? Yet this has to be done before the individual will put forth one nickel without getting a car or something in return."

This was the general context of an interview with R. Longstaffe, Community Chest's Chairman of Universities and Schools. This year's campaign is being prepared to try to reach an objective of $2,300,000 for the city of Toronto.

The Red Feather campaign consists of a combination of 66 appeals in one. The motive for combining is to spare the public 66 individual tag days, cut down on campaign costs, and assure the fair distribution of the funds.

"Our purpose in appealing to the students is not primarily to get donations, but rather acquaint them with the Community Chest and the role it plays in our society," said Longstaffe. "The Chest supports financially child and youth services, such as the children's aid society and the big brother movement. It contributes to health services through the Victorian Order of Nurses, as well as many other similar groups. Youth services include the YMCA, YWCA, and the University Settlement.

"One of the classic examples of agitation for social reform is found in the works of Dickens. In his day, a jail was at once a hospital, an old folks' home and an insane asylum as well as a penal institution. The pictures of filth and horror that Dickens so aptly painted had an amazing effect on his readers—they became stirred into action.

"Today, through the hard work of the socially conscious, we have many separate institutions to care for the sick, the old and the mentally ill. We are still fighting the problems of Dickens' day, but are better equipped to do so.

"The Community Chest needs your help—if not now, in the near future when you as graduates take your place as responsible citizens of society. If you want to know what is accomplished by it, look around at the things that voluntary public effort has accomplished since the time of that famous agitator, Charles Dickens."

Needed: A Little Hope

With all the misunderstanding and bitterness that is pouring forth from the United Nations' General Assembly in Paris, the average citizen is finding it difficult to understand the forces that seem bent on hurling the world pell-mell into World War III.

The flood of charges and counter-charges, the speculations, the rumours, that fill the headlines each day merely add to the general confusion and bewilderment. But they all point up at least one thing—that only three short years after a war-sickened world laid down its arms, the drums of war are again beating and people everywhere seem grimly resigned to the tragic inevitability of war—and soon.

Typical of the trend of thought which is "educating" the public to accept war as a natural condition is the report issued last week by Dr. Olaf Stapledon, in an address before the British Interplanetary Society. Considered an authority on sociology and philosophy, Dr. Stapledon predicted the United States and Russia would one day fight as allies—against invaders from other worlds.

He based his speculations on the premise that the development of atomically-propelled aircraft would enable men to reach Mars, Venus, and other planets. The present inability of eastern and western powers to agree on earth, he felt, was not a very hopeful sign that men could agree [illegible] ours out in space and thus there would be some with neighbo[illegible]ith the forces of this world pitted sort of universal war w[illegible] against the armies of other planets.

Dr. Stapledon tempered his grim prophecy with the hope that if earth won the interplanetary war it would be a magnanimous victor and not exploit the conquered races—assuming there were any to conquer.

If a "scientific philosopher" has nothing better to offer to a distraught and disillusioned society than the possibility of bigger and better wars, then the future looks bleak indeed.

But Dr. Stapledon's remarks are not an isolated instance. There are too many public utterances, which, in the way they are presented, give rise to unwarranted fears. The cool detachment, the glib phraseology, used by many of our public figures in discussing the possibilities and probabilities of war all help to keep the general public in a state of continual agitation.

It was this sort of attitude which led a female member of the British House of Commons to burst into tears last year at what she considered the callous and irresponsible way in which the House discussed the possibilities of war.

War is never inevitable. But the solemn pronouncements that appear in the news daily are doing little to advertise the fact.

Marked Drop In Students' Registration

An unofficial survey of figures, obtained yesterday from the separate colleges and faculties of the University of Toronto shows a decline of approximately four thousand students in the University enrolment this year.

Official figures for the 1947-48 session show a peak enrolment of 17,119. Although official figures for this year's registration will not be ready for release until Friday of this week, the total enrolment for the 1948-49 session, (as compiled from the unofficial survey), is between thirteen and fourteen thousand students.

The most apparent reason for the rapid decline in registration this year, is the fact that last year, a large percentage of the student veterans graduated from the university in the spring, officials stated. The first three post-war years saw a great influx of ex-service students entering the university. This inflow had reached its peak last year, they said. Future years would see a further decline in the enrolment as the remaining ex-servicemen and women graduated.

Although the present drop produces a registration about three-quarters the size of last year, ample lecture space is still not available and classes remain crowded.

The greatest drop in enrolment occurred in the School of Applied Science, where the registration dropped from 4,509 to 2,298. University College and Victoria College follow closely, with reported enrolments of 2316 and 2143 respectively, as compared with last year's 2,785 and 2,536.

City Musicians To Help Charity

The Undergraduate Association of the Faculty of Music announced today the presentation of a concert the entire proceeds of which will augment the U of T's contribution to the Red Feather Fund.

Those taking part in the program will include Sir Ernest MacMillan, conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and the Mendelssohn Choir, Dr. Healey Willan, organist and composer, Frances James, soprano, Edmund Hockridge, baritone, Hyman Goodman, violinist, Alberto Guerrero, pianist, the Solway String Quartet, and the Leslie Bell Singers under the leadership of Dr. R. Bell of the Faculty of Music.

The concert, which is being made possible by the donation of time and talent by these artists in support of the University's Red Feather campaign, will be held in Convocation Hall, Thursday, Oct. 28th, at 8.30 p.m. Tickets are available at the SAC offices, Hart House and Room 62, UC for one dollar each.

The Faculty of Music committee in charge of the event is composed of Ward MacAdam Eldon Ibey, Wallace Laughton, June Stratton, Margaret Seidman, and Gordon Jocelyn.

The Warden

Nicholas Ignatieff, Warden of Hart House, commenting on the $420 cut on this year's budget, says that it probably will not prove very important in that it will not handicap any committee activities. The cut in the budget was occasioned by steadily rising committee expenditures. The budget has been approved by the Hart House Board of Stewards.

WUA Opens With Report By Executive

The first open meeting of the Women's Undergraduate Association of University College was held Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock in the Women's Union Theatre. President Mary Innis called on Literary Director Dora Beacock who made a report on the Music Club and the UC Players' Guild, the Music Club consisting of the UC Singers, the Operetta and the Record Hour; the Players' Guild casting Wednesday, Thursday and Friday for one-act plays.

The Sports Director, Lillian Laakso announced that the golf tournament scheduled for Wednesday, October 13th, had been postponed until Friday because of rain. Wednesday, two softball games were played and both lost. Five University College basketball teams were chosen this week and bowling and badminton will get underway within the next three weeks.

Mary Ritchie, the Social Director, reported that the UC Follies were well underway. Wednesday evening, October 20th, formal initiation for freshmen will be held in the Women's Union Theatre. Wednesday, October 27th, is the date for the first Red and White Night of the year.

Treasurer Jane Ratz presented a comparative budget for the session 1948-49.

Hart House Budget Cut Not Heavy

A cut of $420 in this year's budget has been approved by the Hart House Board of Stewards, it was learned yesterday. Warden Nicholas Ignatieff said the cut would not seriously handicap committee activities.

The Warden said that committee expenditures had been going up steadily during the past few years, because the House activities were expanding. The total budget for the House last year was roughly four times what it was before the war.

Last year, registration reached a peak with a total of 17,800. This year, registration is down about 2,500. Of this total, at least 1,000 would have been potential Hart House members the warden said. Since every male student at the University is a member of the House paying a fee of $12, this drop in registration would cut the income by $1,200.

At the beginning of the year, each committee submited its budget to the Board of Stewards, Mr. Ignatieff said. The Board passed these estimates on to the Finance Committee which is composed of graduate students, who are now chartered accountants, and faculty members. Previous to this, the Finance Committee had drawn up an overall budget for the House.

The committee arrived at a figure of $7,500 for the House activities. When individual club budgets were tallied, however, the total amount was $8,920; an increase over last year's figure.

Mr. Ignatieff said that in drawing up their budget, the finance committee had not taken into consideration the needs of the individual committees. "The Board of Stewards felt that the figure of $7,500 was an insufficient basis to finance the activities of the House," said the warden.

The Board asked the Finance Committee to reconsider the budget, and in order to create as little hardship as possible recommended a figure of $8,500. The various committees were asked to make specific cuts approved by the board. But the cut does not mean any real hardship to any of these clubs or activities and the overall budget will be higher, added Mr. Ignatieff.

House activities are encouraged to expand, said Mr. Ignatieff, but the problem is to find the money to finance them. The answer, he said, is intelligent compromise of the committee with the board of stewards.

Al Lawrence

—Globe and Mail

Delegates at the National Progressive Conservative convention in Ottawa heard a great deal from Al Lawrence. Last year he was president of the campus P.C. club. This year he is president of the Young Progressive Conservatives. Lawrence is in third year pass at Victoria College. The younger party members carried a great deal of the debate at the convention, and Lawrence himself was a seconder for one of the delegates for the party leadership.

Contest For Radio Script, $75 Is Prize

The radio committee report made to last night's SAC meeting featured news of a script contest. A prize of $75 has been donated by the CBC to go to the student who submits the best radio script. Further details, it was said, would be announced by the committee later.

The committee said they would have an estimate of the cost of a wire-recorder for publication next week. Buzz Thomas, IV UC, has been in consultation with the engineers of the Electric Club over this matter and feels that the use of such a machine would be quite invaluable for rehearsing as it would enable artists to hear their own voices. No disc expenses are involved, he said, since the wire can be erased and used again and again.

The appointment of Hugh Locke, III Trin. as Publicity Director was announced, also the appointment of Landon Mackenzie, II St. Hilda's, as Secretary. The Director of Production is to be filled after interviews in which Ross MacLean of the CBC will assist.

Paul Fauteux, III St. Mike's, Radio Commissioner, smiled when he announced that the Varsity show is to go on the air at nine o'clock on Thursday, replacing Abbott and Costello.

Canada Govt. Faces Crisis Says R. Scott

"Parliamentary government is on trial before the bar of history" stated Reid Scott, M.P.P., yesterday, addressing the first meeting of the Victoria College C.C.F. Club. "The only way it will meet this challenge in Canada is by building a country strong economically and stable politically."

Speaking on the topic "The Coming Canadian Crisis", the speaker named Communism as the chief menace to democracy in the international sphere, while domestic stability was being threatened by apathy, cynicism and the danger of fascism.

The urgent problems facing a small country in Canada's position are those of political unification and economic expansion. Only by means of a realistic solution of these problems could Canada hope to provide the necessary leadership in world affairs, he stressed.

"These are not being achieved", said Mr. Scott. "They can be carried out only by a redistribution of Dominion-Provincial powers to enable the federal government to undertake the required steps in long-range planning to these ends."

Referring to the economic picture, the speaker foresaw a business recession following the end of the Marshall Plan in Europe, in about two years. Increased dependence on the United States, the nation-wide prosperity in Canada especially in the building industry, and the increase in real wages were seen as forces contributing to a recession, which, it is felt, will exert so much pressure on parliamentary government that parliamentary democracy may not be able to withstand that pressure."

Illustrating the necessity for Canadian development of Canadian resources, the audience was told that 99 per cent of Alberta's oil resources were being developed by American firms who pay only a 12 percent royalty to the government. The remaining one percent is being developed by a co-operative company (Canadian) which pays a 66 percent royalty.

"Canada can be thankful for the C.C.F." Mr. Scott concluded. "The C.C.F. is the only political party that is capable, willing and ready to shoulder responsibility for the economic strengthening and political stabilization which Canada needs."

U of T Students Study In Northland

Do you find it difficult to pass even with concentrated study in the library? Then what do you think your chances would be in an isolated cabin in the barren lands of the Arctic, where you have to spend half your time labouring for your existence? That is exactly what one U. of T. student is doing.

Yes, Farley Mowatt, in the third year pass course, is doing just that along with a graduate of the University, Andrew Laurie. This may all seem a little strange but these boys have a reason for going to such extremes to get their education. Laurie graduated from Toronto in Zoology and then proceeded to the School of Graduate Studies in the University of Wisconsin, to get his Ph.D. in this field. He began casting about for a suitable subject on which to write his thesis and found that the barren land caribou, an animal whose existence is essential to the Eskimos, had never been studied. Mowatt had spent the previous year in the North and knew the country well, so the boys decided to team together and venture into the North for this unprecedented research.

Laurie wanted to obtain direct information on the mode of existence of the caribou, their migration routes, breeding places, population, food and water supply, and fluctuation in their number. Farley was extremely interested in the anthropology of the northern Indians to which very little attention had been paid in the past. Before leaving he spent two weeks studying the writing and string figures of these Indians, for it is recognized that the latter bears a direct relationship between the tribes.

Financed by the Wild Life Branch of the Department of Mines and Resources, they embarked by plane for Windy Bay, Nueltin Lake, last May, and intend to remain there until May, 1950.

They trucked their supplies over the ice and snow from the plane to a cabin, the former residence of a trapper who had been bushed. This cabin consists chiefly of spruce logs, well chinked with mosses, and is covered on the exterior with a motley collection of strips and pieces of canvas, intermingled with caribou skins, and on the inside with brown wrapping paper. Like all in that region, it is situated in the immediate vicinity of a cess pool and is marked in the spring by the accumulation around the front door of stinking carcasses and the remains of animals. This refuse they threw back into the flooding river, but as the water level receded, the operation had to be continually repeated for the majority of the spring season.

If you are looking for the wide open spaces, these boys would advise you to "Go north, young man, Go north." Even in the low spots it is possible to see for a mile or two, and from the top of Windy Hills they estimate that they can view at least thirty thousand square miles of barren expanse.

When word was received from them late last June, they had not been able, up to that time, to study much about the caribou. At their arrival the peak of migration was past and there was a noticeable scarcity of animals, coincident with the tail end of the spring movement. Early in July, however, they planned to fly several hundred miles into the north, and remain there for the month, travelling and looking for caribou, noting any evidence, or otherwise, of mortality in the crop, and such additional information as could be gleaned for Laurie's thesis.

When their letter was received they had come in contact with one Eskimo tribe, Ihalmuit, from the upper Kazan River, about sixty miles from their cabin. From their observations they have found these Eskimos to be willing workers and to possess a well-developed sense of humour. The boys treat them on equal footing and find them to be an amiable and likeable tribe. It

Vegetable Ice Cream

Vancouver, British Columbia, Oct. 7—(CUP)—"Go ahead and lose your week-ends," advises the Daily Ubyssey. The long-dreaded hangover has been beaten by something as simple as an ice-cream cone. No ordinary ice-cream cone, but a carrot-flavored variety that went on sale in Vancouver recently.

The inventor of the vegetarian ice-cream is of the opinion that both carrot juice and cream are sure-fire cures for the musty-mouth feeling after over-eating or drinking. Therefore, carrot ice-cream. The new confection is coffee colored and tastes distinctly of carrots. Unlike every other flavor of ice-cream, it is not fattening.

THE FRUIT OF THE THANKFUL SPIRIT

"It is a good thing to give thanks."

Every day men and women are caught up in the spirit of Thanksgiving. It may be in the ordinary "thank you" for a favour received or the saying of grace around the family table or a state of mind unspoken, as one dwells upon the deliverance from a particular circumstance or security in a difficult situation or just the gift of life and opportunity itself. It may be directed to people in general or a person in particular. It may be directed to God Himself. Or, again, it may not point anywhere and yet everywhere, aware as we often are only of the gift and not the giver. But we all share the thankful spirit. Somehow, indefinable as it may be, we are the better for it and so are those with whom we live. The quality of Thanksgiving is an infectious quality of living.

Thanksgiving is good because it lifts us out of ourselves and points us onward. In Thanksgiving we become outgoing personalities, it saves us from the narrowness and littleness of self concern and self esteem into a community of world view, or perhaps to an eternal view. The thankful spirit should, therefore, be a major concern as we realize the urgency of a world view. To see the interwoven nature of the world society can be the product of Thanksgiving.

But Thanksgiving, like many other virtues, can be dwarfed and distorted or of such a vague nature that it nullifies any good effect it might have, or worse still, lulls the conscience into a pleasant undisturbed sleep. True Thanksgiving has direction. It joins with itself the quality of discernment and criticism. If Thanksgiving loses its sense of judgment it loses the quality that makes it worthwhile. So to be thankful is not to be just an amiable, friendly and generous minded person but one so concerned about the gifts of mankind that omissions and errors are pointed up at the same time.

But, again, such a discerning thankful spirit spurs only from an inner yardstick, a plan according to which we determine right and wrong. For Christians this means that Thanksgiving is possible only with God at the centre. It is because of Him in the final analysis that we are thankful. He is the Creator and Giver of life. It is in the knowledge of what He will that we make our thanks known to our fellowman. So, while we give thanks to Him for the abundance of material things and consciously gather with Him those who share His creative spirit we can at the same time, and indeed must, judge those who frustrate and impede the wise and fair distribution of His gifts.

Finally, a thankful spirit must be self critical. If it does not bring into bold relief our own short comings in the just use of God's gifts our Thanksgiving is lip service only. We can be thankful to God without reserve. Let us pray that we may be more and more thankful for society and above all for ourselves.

The flash- backs, not too skilfully integrated, tend to break rather than build tension—a difficult trick but one that can be done (e.g. "Mildred Pierce"). Franz Waxman's rest- less, occasionally sensational score is sufficient to the scene at hand but doesn't sustain an overall mood. Finally, too little is left to the imagination—worst blunder: an all too graphic account of the as- sassin's entry, detracting consider- ably from the climax.

Nevertheless, the picture is heav- ily compensated. As a thriller it is slick and finished. The juicy role of the invalid is a natural "Oscar" contender, more so as played by Barbara Stanwyck. The suspense arrives late but forcefully in the last few minutes when the film dispenses with explanations and settles down for the inevitable; the final scene, in which a hired killer disposes of a helpless, fear-crazed invalid, captures all the cold im- moral horror that made the origin- al a radio classic.

was with one of these Eskimos that the boys had a very interesting ex- perience.

A member of the tribe, Ohoto, was visiting with them one evening, and was gazing out the window with no apparent fear, when suddenly he leapt to his feet and fled screaming out of the cabin. After the aston- ished Laurie and Mowatt had calm- ed him, they found that Ohoto be- lieved he had seen a ghost, al- though what he actually saw was only a piece of canvas flapping in the fierce gale that was blowing outside. They learned from the superstitious Ohoto that there are numerous good, or at least unharm- ful spirits prevalent amongst them, including a sawed-off joker named Apprepa, Eno, whose dread effect can be avoided only by abstaining from eat and drink (smoking is al- lowed) until the noon of the next day after witnessing him, and Pay- ya, a one-legged woman of immense stature and long hair, whose very name spells death to this superstit- ious tribe.

Laurie and Mowatt are members of the Hart House Exploration So- ciety, and that group can feel hon- oured to have such worthy crusaders and adventurous individuals among them.

Vic Gridders Upset U.C. Win League Opener 8-5

By HAL HOLDEN

Not rated with last year's Mulock Cup champs, Vic gridders showed they should not be written off entirely as co-finalists in this season's Mulock final when they opened the Intramural rat race with an 8-5 win over UC/PHE on the Back Campus yesterday.

After spotting the Combines an unconverted touchdown in the first half while tallying two singles, Vic struck back early in the third quarter. Hurrying Harry Damp highlighted a brilliant performance by intercepting a UC pass at midfield and scooting all the way to the enemy 10-yard line before being downed. From there the Scarlet and Gold wasted no time hitting pay dirt. An aerial in the flat to halfback Smith who appeared reluctant to accept the honor judging from his hot-potato handling of the pigskin gave Vic its victory margin.

For the first game of the season the boys acted as if they know what it was all about, although for the first half you couldn't be sure as the ball changed hands half a dozen times in almost as many minutes. They settled down, however, and bobbles became unseasonably rare. Even the officials had a good word for the game. "It was a very easy game to handle," said Referee Alex Campbell, "and there was little rough play."

The winners showed a strong ground attack plus some good kicking. The scoring Mr. Smith slashed through the Red and White line for big gains almost every time he carried the ball. Although injured in the third quarter on a plunge, he came back later in the game to continue his starry play. Damp and Tom Dryden also were going for substantial gains through the line and around the end.

Vic opened the scoring in the first quarter on a wide placement attempt by Jim Little which went for a rouge. The same play by Keith Sumner resulted in Vic's second point a few minutes later. Both sides then scored their T.D.'s, one on either side of half-time. Harry Damp ended the point-getting with a hefty boot to the deadline late in the third quarter.

Smith, Damp, Dryden and Rob Dowsett were the pick of the Vic crew. Quarterback Henshall, Gibson, and Bruce Miles were best for UC/PHE.

Line-ups:

VIC—Leach, Sumner, Gore, Kilgour, Sherwood, Barford, Read, Fick, Boyd, Allen, Damp, Smith, Hill, Ledger, Anving, Watson, Colbert, Grose, Little, Ashforth, Lodge, Howard, Dryden, Dowsett.

UC/PHE — Henshall, Shapiro, Lyndall, Korkanin, Galloway, Watrous, Shydon, Copeland, Byrne, Grasser, Taylor, Barquart, Terry, Gelman, Smith, Davis, Scott, Miles, Kuzmochka, Gibson.

Tennis Foursome Invades OAC Tomorrow

The recently chosen intermediate intercollegiate tennis quartet leaves for Guelph tomorrow to battle with racqueteers from Western, McMaster, and OAC in a two-day meet.

The quartet, Ed Eberle, Peter Stewart, Jack Little, and Defosse go to Guelph with a tradition to uphold. For more years than the other universities care to remember, Varsity has walked off with the intermediate crown. In fact last year they asked Varsity not to enter a team, so that competition would not be too much of a foregone conclusion.

Blue and White Plan Big Show Tomorrow Night

What is IT? When is IT? Where is IT? Why is IT?

IT is the big PEP RALLY that the loyal true Blue and White Society is planning for Friday night to whip the valiant supporters of the dear old Varsity Team into hysterical support.

There will be music and song, cheers and jeers and all the things that go to show those Queensmen (and women) that we have SPIRIT!

Join the tens of thousands near the Windsor Arms at Bloor street at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, and dance down Bloor street to St. George to the music of Bob Cringan and his midget symphony. Go ahead, block the traffic,—our police force is kind and gentle!

Come along with the throngs to the Back Campus and bring a blanket. You will find entertainment to suit every taste. Music, song and lovely legs as the Cheerleaders take the spotlight. Olsen and Johnson have nothing on the boys that are going to put on a show that will land them a long term contract—We won't say where.

If the Queen's people are there, let us be kind—they will be saddened on the morrow. Perhaps they should even be allowed to join the fun as it moves in a snake-dance to the Drill Hall for the dancing that will finish off the evening.

Don't be afraid to come stag, —Keith Davy and Doug Love have lisped, "Gooness, gwacoius, we'd simply L*O*V*E to dance wif them!"

UC Ties Vic 38 To 38 In Sr. Track

UC/PHE combines and Victoria ran to a 38-38 tie in the senior interfaculty track meet yesterday at Varsity Stadium but it wasn't decided until the final race. Even then none was too sure.

Going into the last race of the day, the mile relay, UC was up four points. But Vic threw everything they had into the last ditch battle, and won the event for five points, while UC faded to fourth and a single point to tie the meet at 38 each.

Speaking Of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

Speaking of sport, let's talk about the pep rally tomorrow night. From all pre-rally reports this promises to be one of the events of the year. All we need now is a little co-operation from the weatherman and all should be merry and make gay.

Numerous friends of the University of Toronto have written, wired and phoned to advise the student body that their support can definitely be counted on.

There follows some excerpts from the well-wishers:

The Hudson's Bay Company—Best wishes for a successful evening. But don't forget—"to avoid that after-party itch, make sure your blankets are those smoo-ooth Hudson's Bay beauties. The Blankets that lift."

Manager of KCR—Always glad to co-operate with any University activity. Our waiters are trained to combat any type of hangover, before or after. For pre-party gastritous that has that true-social tone, don't forget the "students' paradise", your friend and mine—the KCR.

Jim Coleman, Globe and Mail—Am postponing holidays to check in with your pep-rally. Think I might find some interesting subjects for my thought recording machine. Understand a young man named Daley, Doovey, or some such, will have large hand in organization.. From past reports estimate him to be an ideal subject.

Liquor Control Board of Ontario—Always glad to hear that the University of Toronto students are planning a social evening. Assure you we will co-operate to the utmost to make the evening bright and cheerful. Will make arrangements with local gendarmes to assure you an undisturbed riot. Will black-ball any local hotelman who exhibits such timidity as was demonstrated last week in London. Yes, that's our motto—co-operation by the case-full.

REPORTERS

Sports reporters are needed by The Varsity to cover the football activity on the campus. Although special writing talent is not essential, the reporter with a special interest in the game would be the most desirable. Interested men please see Hank Westcott in The Varsity office, (UC Basement), at 1:30 today, or at earliest possible time.

WOMEN SWIMMERS

Practice in women's ornamental swimming and individual and group routines continues in the UTS pool tonight from 6.30 to 7.30. Those interested are asked to bring their own music and work out routines beforehand.

Girl Archers Meet Teams At Hamilton

For the first time, Toronto is sending a women's archery team to the Intercollegiate meet. This Friday the foursome will travel to Hamilton to contest the skill of McMaster, Western, McGill, and Queen's.

The four members of our team are Bernice Muir, Jeanette Martin, Josephine Arrowsmith and Phyllis Burke.

During the war the colleges held Telegraph Meets in which each college team mailed their results to one place and from there the results were compared and the winner determined. Last year, however, the meet was held at Western and McGill University came out on top.

Each person shoots 72 arrows, twenty-four each from 50 yards, 40 yards and 30 yards, with a maximum of 9 points per arrow. The bows are made of lemonwood and have 28 to 30 pounds pull on the string. The meet starts at 1 o'clock allowing each team half an hour to practice their shots.

However, Toronto are somewhat handicapped due to the fact that they have no archery club whereas the other universities have had clubs and intercollegiate teams for several years.

"Thus our chances are not so good," said Miss Slack of the Department of Physical Education. "But the girls representing us are qualified and we are hopeful. This is a sport that doesn't require athletic prowess but is one that you can become skilled at with practice. To increase our chances for another year the women of Varsity should form an archery club."

YACHTING

Elimination for the intercollegiate sailing club moves into the final day at RCYC today, with eight men still left in the chase.

The eight are George Kethbertson, Dave Hague, Earl Cummings, Bob Hague, Don Pytler, P. Pangman, Bruce Maher, and B. Aillas.

COLE SCAN

Making up we were Mrs. Average Housewife, we listened to the radio all day yesterday and decided not to make any more payments on it. We regret to announce that radio is sinking to a new low. The programs offered were either western round-ups of red-blooded melody, 'Y'got a hankerin' to be out thar on the gas range, son?' or else the mush-mouth tones of dear Keen Dandy blowing bubbles for lovely, l-o-v-e-l-y Ebony Shmoe. If these programs are designed for Mrs. Average Housewife, and are what she wants, then we can see no earthly reason for alarm over the rising divorce rate. We know a considerably average housewife who only tunes in to carefully selected programs; there are some worth listening to. She feels, as we do, that there is a wide discrepancy between Mrs. Average Housewife, as she is, and how radio in general supposes she is.

As the general listening audience has little to say about radio programming, it can only be assumed that the responsibility for this type of radio designated 'entertainment' lies with Mr. Sub-Average Radio Producer. The ether, unfortunately, is rapidly becoming a general anaesthetic

Jose Torres

With the appearance of Jose Torres at Eaton Auditorium the evening of October 12, the great tradition of Spanish dancing was once again introduced to Toronto. Unlike his predecessors, The Cansinos, La Argentinita and Carmen Amaya, Torres is not a dancer in the strictly classical Spanish manner. Instead he tries to recapture the spirit of Spanish dancing by means of a combination of steps from the classical ballet with movements from native gypsy dances.

There were moments during the program when this combination proved highly effective. Yet there were moments when Torres, who incidentally does his own choreography, by stressing the classical ballet sacrificed the color of the native Spanish dance. This was true of "Goyescas", "Bolero Clasique" and "Don Juan". While the music, costuming and lighting contributed the Spanish atmosphere, Torres' rather limited use of the standard ballet "entrechats", "cabrioles" and "pirouettes" — gracefully executed by an obviously experienced dancer—were not sufficient to suggest the artistry expected of "The Greatest Spanish Dancer of Today". It was not until his "Asturias" that Torres' full ability was revealed. It was here that the elements of the classical Spanish dance, the fast foot movement and the brilliant use of the castanets, were blended with the technique of classical ballet. An indication of Torres' remarkable versatility was his ability to change so completely from the tragedy of the tortured peasant to the ebullient comedy in Joaquin Nin's "Gitan", the gypsy with the wandering eyes or the repulsed yet over eager fiance from LaGuartera in Guerrero's "Toledo".

Only in two numbers, "Rapsodia Valenciana" and "Oriana", did Torres have an opportunity to display his ability in his native gypsy dances. His performance had the suppressed excitement, the lightning-like change of mood of the accomplished Spanish dancers. Torres' technical perfection was matched throughout the recital by the skill of his accompanist, F. Elios Quiros. His sensitive performance of Albeniz and particularly Monpou's "Faubourgs" provided a perfect foil for Torres' vitality.

A letter will be forwarded to Western University requesting better seating arrangements for future games.

20,000 TO SEE QUEEN'S GAME

Snake Dance, Victory Song For Pep Rally

"What is it, O'Reilly?"
"A Rally, O'Leary."
"Oh, really?"
"No, RALLY!"

To-night is the night of the biggest darn fire sale in campus history. All inhibitions must go! All students must go! Everything will be half-cut . . . er half price, that is. And the original price was the cost of a year's subscription to The Varsity; what we're trying to say is that your attendance at tonight's big PEP RALLY sets you back in the time aspect only.

And such a worthwhile setback you never experienced. Cynics may now beat a hasty retreat because a show that the Blue and White Society presents this evening will even outdo its ambitious advance notices.

We'll run over the proceedings just once more so that not one of you 16,000 spectators gets lost. One change in plans concerns the assemblage of the crowd; the band will set out from the Drill Hall and March to Varsity Stadium where it will be joined by all those planning to attend not one second later than 7:45 p.m. Then the procession will wend its way via snake dances or private groups to the back campus (beside Hart House) where any late-comers may join it.

While on the subject of late-comers we would like to invite and request the atendance of anyone planning to participate in such frolics as the Vic 5TO party and the CCF Pink "do". The rally program will give you revellers ample time to reach your personal festivities and will put you in fine party spirit. We are also counting on a good representation from Ajax since we understand that the lads out there are in need of some good, wholesome, outdoor entertainment.

Rally Theme

An introduction of the coach and team will be followed by Bev Johnston's appearance along with his cheerleaders to conduct a song and yell program. A feature of these proceedings will be the initial presentation of the new Blue and White song written by McMillan and Bryden. A 2 part twenty minute audience-participation show featuring McMillan, Bryden, Jewison and Pearse is the next thing on the agenda; theme of the show will be "Beat Queen's."

Throughout the show fireworks and a School Cannon (courtesy Jack Heivey) will be very much in evidence. Any added spark needed will be provided by the arrival of several of the Queen's supporters and it is hoped that Frank Tindall the Gaels' coach, will be interviewed.

Co-ed Union Discussed Today

Today at 1 p. m. in West Hall of University College, the Working Committee for the Students' Memorial Union will tell at an open meeting the student body of its plans for the construction of the proposed Students' Union.

This meeting has been called by Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, President of S.A.C., in order to clear up the misconceptions about the Union which now exist in the minds of the students. President Gwynne-Timothy yesterday expressed the belief that the students are under the impression that the proposed Union is to take the place of Hart House and the suggested Women's Athletic Building. "This is a misapprehension on the part of the students," said Gwynne-Timothy. "A well planned Students' Union would not conflict with these organizations but would tend rather to supplement their facilities."

A research committee has been appointed to fulfill a dual-purpose. The committee has been divided into two divisions: the first division will test student opinion; the second will tabulate the results of the organizational surveys.

Stadium Sellout Predicted As Tricolor Invades City; Blues Point For First Win

By BOB JONES

The Queen's University football team and its vanguard of supporters ride into town tonight on the crest of a one-game losing streak; at 2:15 tomorrow afternoon they will trot onto the green of Varsity Stadium before a capacity crowd of 20,000 to encounter the Varsity Blues, who sport a similar record in the initial scheduled test of the local Intercollegiate agenda. Almost all tickets for the tilt had been sold by last night.

In The Cellar

The losing habit is by no means a new sensation for the college of Kingston, which has held the post-war cellar position in football almost continuously, but the Gaels seem to think they deserve a better fate and are prepared to "give their best" to Toronto. Provided there is a winner in tomorrow's McGill-Western tilt, Varsity and Queen's will be fighting it out for second place.

Those who witnessed the same two teams clash last year will bear witness that the 15-5 score in our favour reflected in no way the close and thrilling 60 minutes of play that ensued on that late afternoon. Several of last year's standouts will return tomorrow to wear the Tricolor in a renewal of the classic.

Stronger Team

Despite the setback in their first game, Queen's is fielding their strongest team since they copped the Intercollegiate title in 1937. Frank Tindall has returned to the coaching helm after a nine year absence and this worthy who advanced from Syracuse '32 along with Warren Stevens and Lew Hayman to introduce the New Deal in Canadian football, will present a squad drilled in defensive tactics far above the Queen's average.

The Tricolour line, always their big worry, is steadied by the return of such veteran hefties as Jim Charters, Bill Burgess, "Beef" Fardell and Bob Stevens, who was chosen by the players on last year's team as the most valuable contributor to their '47 efforts. In addition, several prospects for the brawn trust have been found in their farm system; one addition who may be familiar to some local fans is an end named Walcott who played for Varsity Juniors in 1946.

The main backfield duties are entrusted to the capable arms and legs of returning backfield stars Lenard, McKelvey, MacIntyre and Hoose.

Billy Bell, formerly of Argos, will bolster the speed departmenet and it will warm the cockles of your heart to know that "our boy Rozumniak" is back. He's back but will prance about tomorrow with the unspectacular monicker of Dave Bryne.

Soccer Blues Will Meet Buffalo Sat.

The Varsity senior soccer squad will journey to Buffalo Saturday for an exhibition encounter with the State Teachers' College. Varsity's win over Western last week, together with their convincing 6-0 decision over the teachers last year, gives our boys little to worry about.

Coach Barton plans to take a couple of the more promising Intermediate players to give them a try-out with the Senior squad. Hugh Delfosse will be tried out on the forward line, and Al Beckwith at inside.

A larger squad than usual is being carried due to the fact that Buffalo fields a team of 24 players. The usual squad over here runs about 13 in number. In each case only eleven men are allowed on the field at once.

Air Cool, Crowds Tense As Queen's Takes Field

This is it. This is the opening game.

The white lines have been newly painted. The goal posts have been firmly rooted down. A crowd of spectators, angered by last week's defeat are hungry for a victory.

The air is cool. As the students section slowly begins to fill, the sound of many voices waiting for the opening kick grows into a roaring tumult.

It has everything that any respectable three-ring circus has, including the peanuts. The bandsmen enter and tune up, with loud discords. The cheerleaders, all of them out for the first time together, jump about to keep warm.

It is nearly game time now. The 'blueboys' are practising pushup on the sidelines. A player kicks and the ball is caught. Beautiful! But they are still practicing. The Queensmen try tackling each other. There are boos and cheers.

The bands begin their march about the field. Everybody cheers for Margie, the girl who is star for the day and who will after the game melt into the inconspicious mass of campus co-eds. The whine of the bagpipes is heard and you know that these are some of the Scots who did not bleed with Wallace. The skirts of the bandsmen flare in the wind as they strut proudly across the green of the bowl.

The bands slow down. The players make their entrance. A cheer is sounded for each of the players. This is their big day. The starting lineups are announced.

The cheerleaders give a final yell. The usual cry for cartwheels is heard. The noise quiets down. The spectators are hushed.

The whistle is blown. The ball is kicked and nothing remains but a victory.

Kick 'Em High

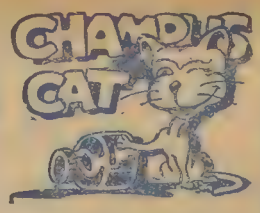
Tomorrow afternoon in Varsity Stadium thousands of students will watch the 1948-49 edition of the University of Toronto Senior Blues take the field in the first home game of the season.

Seventy-three years ago, on a cloudy November day, the first rugby team ever to wear the blue and white uniforms of this University trotted out on the gridiron to take on the Argonaut Rowing Club in a game that differed considerably from the type of football played today.

The posts were placed at opposite ends of a field two hundred yards long, a distance almost twice as long as present-day regulations permit. The number allowed to take part in the game was unlimited, a wise precaution because many an injury ridden team could not function otherwise. Little or no precaution was taken to safeguard the physical well-being of those who dared to put on a uniform. Padding or protection of any sort in the uniform was considered unnecessary and more of a hinrance than a help.

The streamlined forward pass was a thing of the future as players bounced, batted or dribbled the ball along the field because regulations did not permit the ball to be carried. And if an opposing player did manage to get moving, tripping or charging the runner from behind was an approved method of stopping him.

Four years later, in 1879, Varsity players received their first taste of football played in the more "modern" manner when they met the University of Michigan in the first international intercollegiate match between Canadian and American colleges.



The record of Varsity teams since those early days is an enviable one. In regular senior intercollegiate play University of Toronto teams copped the championship seventeen times since 1898 when the Yates Trophy was first awarded, symbolic of intercollegiate supremacy.

Both Queen's and Varsity, traditional football rivals for years, have won the championship four years in succession, Toronto turning the trick in 1908-11, and the Gaels perched on top from 1922-25.

Tomorrow, the colorful panorama of college football will again fill Varsity Stadium. Thousands of ardent rooters will cheer themselves hoarse in support of their team. And it is a healthy sign.

There is perhaps no other undergraduate function that calls forth such a spontaneous demonstration of loyalty to the University. College and faculty differences are forgotten as students unite in support of their own team and prove that university spirit is more than just an abstract proposition.

Our support will be riding high tomorrow. And Bob Masterson's big Blues deserve that support.

HAPCO AIROUT

(Recent hydro restrictions have started the cat thinking on a phantasy of how bad conditions might be).

It was announced last night, by nobody in particular to the cat that the Ontario (Keep it strong) Government is going to set up a new commission to be known as the Hydrew Air Power Commission, (HAPCO).

The business of the new commission will be to have air shut offs twice daily. Air will be rationed and anybody found breathing at "Airout" times will be fined: and given a term in Saskatchewan, which isn't being kept strong.

The new HAPCO Commissioner will, of course, be the present mayor Toronto-the-not-so-good-anymore-since-we-got-cocktail-lounges, Mr. Hireum McPhirem. His first duty will be to have his picture taken by Harsh of Ottawa. He will then spend all his time making declarations in the paper and on the radio, with picture, of course.

In an exclusive talk with the cat last night, Hirem said that it was not the money that made hum take his new job ($800,000), but the idea of keeping the Dominion of Ontario strong. The new mayor will be Controller Ballfour, of Kinsey Report fame.

The shortage of air was accredited to the lack of rain. The lack of rain was said to be due to the lack or religion. The lack of religion was said to be due to the fact that there was not enough of the stuff to keep Ontario strong.

Results of the "Airout" were not quite certain. "If people could stop using electricity, why not air. Who cares about air?" said Hirem. He said that the nasty rumor about the parliament buildings storing air in oxygen tents for HAPCO use was untrue, unfounded and, who found out?

Hydrew Electric Commissioner Robin Hood Cinders made a proclamation about Hirem's proclamation and said he would not be out proclamationed if he had to turn out every bulb in the province and use every cent of the taxpayers' money. He was reported to have said, "I wish I was back making proclamations about snow-removal".

When told that everybody would die if there was no air, Hirem gasped, "Well, how long can we keep Ontario strong?"

Harpo.

Claxton Says Top Training Defence Need

Canada's present plan of maintaining such forces as are adequate to meet a direct attack, would be continued, said Defence Minister Claxton in an interview yesterday.

The aim, he said, is not to have large forces but to recruit and train an administrative nucleus composed of a large number of officers, N.C.O.'s, tradesmen and specialists with personnel to maintain them, and to use this nucleus to build up a larger force if the need should arise.

The government does not feel that a program of military training of a year's duration would be effective and so the present program of recruiting on a voluntary basis is being carried out. At present no limit is set upon the number of men who will be recruited but the three forces are enlisting as many men as possible of the quality they want.

Speaks To Liberals

Mr. Claxton yesterday addressed an open meeting of the U of T Liberal Association on some of the factors which determine the result of an election. These factors he listed as the record, leadership, platform and organization of the party.

After his address Mr. Claxton answered questions on government policy.

Mr. Claxton elaborated on the policy of recruiting saying that there are 4,000 officer candidates in training at present but that there are a number of places in the three services reserved for veterans with good records attending university under DVA.

Comments On Berlin

Asked his opinion of Russia's suggestion that the minor military missions leave Berlin, Mr. Claxton commented that this development had taken place since he left Ottawa and any statement must come from the Department of External Affairs. Another questioner asked if Canada would take part in the air lift to Berlin. Any stand taken on this would be a government policy rather than one of the Department of National Defence, Mr. Claxton said and pointed out that it should be noted that neither France, the Netherlands nor Belgium were participating.

Asked if he considered war inevitable, Mr. Claxton said that in his opinion neither war nor peace was inevitable and that until peace was more secure, it was up to the countries concerned to look after their defences.

Blues' Players Make Their Bids For Copp Trophy

Tomorrow afternoon, on the gridiron of Varsity Stadium Bob Masterson's Blues face their second test in this year's Yates Cup race. Having bowed to the mighty Mustangs last week, they will emerge onto the field with firm intentions to leave same with a convincing victory to initiate what should be an impressive string this year.

But to the young men who are out there to exchange blocks, tackles and other miscellany with the Golden Gaels, a little more than wins and losses are at stake. Each one of the young men in Blue figures in the John Copp Memorial Trophy plans for 1948.

The Copp Trophy dates back to November of 1933. It was at this time that John Copp, a third year Medical student and a brilliant backfielder with the Blues, was shot and killed in pursuit of a burglar whom he discovered on the second floor of the Copp residence. The murderer has never been found.

As a continual memorial to this promising young student and footballer, a small group of Varsity graduates and undergraduates presented to the senior football team the John Copp Memorial.

Each year the playing members of the team award the memorial to the most valuable player — valuable in playing ability, sports-

Team Captain

Ian Clark, husky 195-lb. lineman of Bob Masterson's Blues, will see action tomorrow as the Blues tangle with the Tricolor from Queen's in the local curtain-raiser of the Intercollegiate grid scene. Although bothered by a bad shoulder during practices this week, the hard-tackling Hamiltonian reports that he is OK and eager to help the Blues crash the win column with a victory over the lads from Kingston.

Cheerleaders All Prepared For Big Home Performance

The whole show was there . . . the cheerleaders, in slacks and shorts, perfecting their routines, the "big Blues" doing push-ups, the band, headed by Margie and her baton, left wheeling and right wheeling all over the field whilebleating "Oh fhuch na Bramaighinn".

Tomorrow at game time, 16,000 eager fans will be watching the perfected performance of all these people, but yesterday afternoon in Varsity Stadium there were only a few assorted males as audience for the preparations lending to the color, the enthusiasm of the Varsity-Queen's game.

Two [illegible] sat happily on the benches immediately behind the [illegible] where the [illegible] were [illegible] their personal. They remained throughout the entire one and a half hour session, looking very pleased with themselves and claims in general for the whole time.

Is it true that at one time or another every girl with the [illegible] leader? I think more than a few would reconsider could they see the hard work that goes into the preparations for every home [illegible].

They seem to enjoy it, though. Hilka Filpula, Ellen Gardiner, Pat Cockburn, June Pemberton and Diana Troop, five of the sideline athletes, agreed that what it takes to become a Varsity cheerleader is energy and enthusiasm. "We have muscles like iron," joked Diana, baring a bicep. A smile also helps, added June. You mustn't be so intent on what you are doing with your arms and legs that you look as though you are suffering through it.

After the cheerleaders went home to dinner, I wandered over to where the band was [illegible] and the preparations were [illegible] the band was [illegible] backboard. The [illegible] was [illegible] in the west [illegible] [illegible] was [illegible] [illegible] plained, "See that fellow up there in the [illegible]? She's [illegible] there pitch [illegible] [illegible] when [illegible] [illegible] It was apparently [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] up themselves. I retreated, thinking [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] place one can be like a moron and get away with it.

After [illegible] out the [illegible] being wielded by Margie's assistant, I decided that it was too complicated for me. And to march at the same time! She is an accomplished girl.

To complete the general picture, I accosted three of the players who were tossing a football around with great abandon. Ed Huycke, Joe Kane, and Al Wallum declared that in their opinion, the cheerleaders are "terrific".

Asked if cheering spurs the team to greater efforts, Ed said that it is really a great help, and added that no cheering at all is better than half-hearted efforts.

The cheerleaders too, were emphatic in wanting the students to co-operate with all they've got, and really roar.

So, there it is. The curtain rises at 2:15 tomorrow. Be on hand, and be prepared . . . to shout yourself hoarse and BEAT QUEEN'S!

Satin Ribbon Bargain Offered By 15 Co-eds

Fifteen beautiful girls in Blue Blazers and Plaid Skirts will be working hard for Dear Old Varsity over the week-end.

The girls will be selling their colors both at the giant Pep Rally on Friday night and in and outside the Stadium at the game Saturday afternoon.

The proceeds go to further the activities of the Blue and White Society of the SAC. The ribbons feature a 15 for 15 bargain unheard of in previous seasons. That's fifteen inches of non-fray satin ribbon for only fifteen cents.

U of T Little Blues Tangle Tomorrow With O.A.C. Titlists

The intermediate intercollegiate football Blues tackle the toughest opposition in the loop when they travel to Guelph tomorrow to battle the last year's titlists, OAC. It's a battle for first place, since both teams won their first games last week. Aggies rolled over McMaster 25-6 and Varsity beat Western 14-6.

Featured in the Aggie lineup are Brennan, Kennedy and Raithby. All big boys, with plenty of punch. They are fronted by one of the biggest and toughest lines in the intermediate league.

Brewer Out

The Intermediate Blues will be without the services of Bill Brewer, the hard-running backfielder who sparked the club to its triumph over Western Colts in the opener last Friday. Brewer was taking part in the Trinity initiation ceremonies this week and in the excitement shoved his hand through a window. His hand was cut badly enough to keep him out of tomorrow's contest. Coach Don Bark is slightly unhappy over the loss of his star. Maybe he should speak to brother Chad, who is mentioning the Trinity gridders, in an effort to keep his footballers in one piece.

However, Bob Garside, who with Brewer, played a bang-up game against the highly touted Colts is a definite starter. This dynamite duo with the help of some crisp blocking by the unsung heroes on the front wall was the spearhead of the Little Blue roundup of the frisky Colts. Despite a muddy field, the twosom kicked, passed and plunged in great style.

Hubie Sinclair is another backfielder star who will be making the trip to Guelph and with his running ability should give the Aggie tacklers a busy afternoon. Let's hope they spend most of it flat on their rompers. Garside chalked up the other Varsity major against Western on a sweeping end run.

Attack To Be Potent

Despite the unfortunate loss of Al Brewer, coaches Don Bark and Al Brown figure the Varsity attack will still be rather potent. The victory over the junior Mustangs should give the boys some additional confidence and add a little more oomph to the club.

Neither Bark nor Brown make any

Varsity 16 Times Yates Cup Home; Perhaps 17 Soon

Those of you who journeyed to London last week probably noticed in one of the store windows a heavy looking silver trophy set in a wooden base and studded liberally with crests of five Canadian colleges. Closer examination would have shown it to be the Yates Cup. So what?—you may say.

The Cup

The Yates Cup is the symbol of Intercollegiate supremacy in the most spectacular of all collegiate sports—football.

It was presented on the formation of the C.I.R.F.U. in 1898 by Dr. Henry Brydges Yates, (born in Brantford, Ont.) B.A. (Cantab.), M.D. McGill '93, and captain of the McGill football team. On the staff at McGill from 1899-1914, he went overseas in 1914 and died on active service in 1916.

First Presented

First presented in 1898, the trophy has been won by five different college twelves. Besides the present four senior teams who have all been winners, Ottawa College took the honors in 1907.

Varsity has a very tidy record of wins, having taken the cup for the first two years and 14 times since. The last year that the cup found a spot in the Hart House trophy case was in 1936.

Queen's Golden Gaels have gathered in 12 championships and share the distinction of having won the honors for four consecutive years (1922-25) with Varsity (1903-11).

McGill, who lay claim to having played the first hockey and one of the first football games in Canada, have enjoyed the title of "champs" seven times.

The [illegible] Western Mustangs will be shooting for their [illegible] straight championship as they have won the Yates Trophy in 1945, '46 and '47.

This is the year when "Toronto", again and record of the [illegible] the coveted Yates Cup. Oh, yes, we have [illegible] and Queen's.

Students To Protect Goal Posts Tomorrow

The Bloor Street Bowl's goal posts will be [illegible] construction solely by U. of T. students [illegible] Queen's U. of T. weekend. Although capture of the posts by the enemy [illegible] It is hoped that a combination of the student guard and self control on the part of the spectators will prevent a repetition of the "goal post riot" incident that followed last year's visit by Queen's.

At that time mounted police became involved in a melee with students massed around the posts, and were reported to have hit at least one student with their riding crops.

FOOTBALL DANCE

There's a new system appearing on the campus this fall for getting the guys and gals together. A date bureau is being set for the Varsity Football Dance being held in Simpson's Arcadian Court on Saturday night after we beat Queen's (?).

The guys and the gal get their own tickets. If you're interested and would like to find out more about this phone KI 1491 or drop the lad around to the U.C. Rotunda, [illegible] we might be all right."

Trinity To Enter Two Full Teams For Mulock Cup

[illegible] Mulock [illegible] to [illegible] on the campus behind the Hoskin Avenue Institution, hoping to get another crack at capturing the Mulock mug.

Chad Bark has returned for his second year as coach of the Red and Black and is aided this year [illegible] Chess. In the words of Bob Masterson, is a "shortside guard" on the Blues, when he isn't whipping the Trinity wingline into shape.

The Trinity twosome are faced with much the same problem as many other interfaculty coaches this year, namely a lack of experienced performers. According to Bark only a few of last year's team are back. Rod Whitehead is a converted end who will romp in the backfield while Bill Spartick, Ron MacDonald and Glen Brezee are others to return.

"We will have two full teams," Bark said, and added, "barring injuries. Our line is heavier than last year, averaging around 190 pounds, and most of our attack will be along the ground. I wasn't quite satisfied with the plays we had last year, I like to experiment until I find the ones I like."

Trinity have had about ten days' practice but Bark said he was not satisfied with the progress made. "They haven't shown much yet," he said, "but with a little practice we might be all right."

fantastic predictions, "but", commented Bark, "if we don't win, it won't be because we aren't trying." What more can he say?

The Aggies were famous before the war for their weird plays. One of their pets they nicknamed "Bomber". Immediately after the ball was snapped the entire team pointed up at the sky and shouted "look" at the top of their lungs hoping to take their opponents off guard. Now they depend on more orthodox plays and rely on a beefy line and fast backs. Last year they were good enough to take the championship.

Masterson's Replacements

The Blues lost more than their pride in last week's submission to the Mustangs; injuries were a little more widespread than a spectator would have judged. Fortunately Coach Masterson has retained sufficient reserve strength to plug most of the gaps; snap and centres secondary positions pose the most serious problems with Archie Jones definitely sidelined and Ernie Jeans slightly on the limp. John Shore will be moved in from the backfield and Varsity's defensive strength rests in great measure on John's broad shoulders. Bruce Cummings' thumb's recovery is still in the question-mark stage, as are the chances of Joe Kane's reappearance in the line-up.

Ian Clark may be missing from the roster, and Petrie will not play since Ken McIntyre is reported ready to take up his position on the secondary. Wally London and Ted Gawinski will get their first taste of Inter-collegiate play, if Masterson's calculations are carried through.

manship and character. John Copp is remembered to have possessed these qualities second to no other man.

Copp, himself was fittingly awarded the trophy in 1933. The next year a speedy little quarterback who was to gain glory for Varsity and later for Argonauts, received the Copp Memorial. His name is Coulter and he has had more than a little to do with many Blue teams.

Coulter, Greco, Williams, Gray, Sirdevan, Turner, Henry, Grass—all great names in Canadian football and all proud to be winners of the memorial to John Copp. Last year's winner is Bruce Cummings, star triple threat back with the '47 Blues and a man who will stand a lot of watching on Saturday by the Queen's aggregation.

So when the big Blues open hostilities on the Varsity gridiron tomorrow afternoon, more than a big victory over the Gaels will be involved. For, to one member of the Blues, teammates are going to add an estimation of sportsmanship and character to a record of bangup football.

Someone of Masterson's squad will add his name to the distinguished list of predecessors and have it marked down alongside of John Copp's as the most valuable player to his team in 1948.

Meds Victors Over School By 7-6 Score

Meds took a close 7-6 victory from SPS yesterday afternoon, in the last quarter of the football game on the back campus.

In the last few minutes of play, Meds made two first downs, thanks to Al Varga's passing and Tony Cecutti's receiving, which set them up for the last and deciding play. It was on the kick by Al Varga over the SPS goal, that downed the Blue and Gold, by a single point.

Meds looked like a powerhouse in the first few minutes of play, moving right down the field twice before being stopped short of a major score, by a fighting SPS line.

Blocking was the strong point in the Meds game and deserves some credit for making their successful runs and passes possible. SPS strength was seen in passing and kicking, however it did not get the strong support from its line that the Med backfielders received.

The first scoring of the game came in the second quarter, with a Meds touchdown. Phil Rosen, who recovered an SPS fumble ran over for the touch. The convert hit the goalpost. After several successful passes by Dave Clough the SPS chance came in the third quarter with a long pass to Jack Trist, who plunged over to equal the score at five all. SPS's second chance, due to a penalty was a successful convert, giving SPS a one point lead. In the last quarter Al Varga kicked a single.

Stars on the Meds team were Jim Smith, Phil Rosen and Tony Cecutti. For SPS, Dave Clough, Jack Trist and Ron Hall were in the groove.

Speaking Of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

"Oil thigh na Banrighann a' Banrighinn gu brath.
Cha-gheil, cha-gheil, and a bottle of rum.
Fifteen men on a dead Gael's chest."

Ah! yes, the wee Scottish lassies and laddies are in town with all their trimmings and tradition. And since my great-great grandfather was one of the most feared cattle-thieves of the bonny highlands, I think it only right that a welcoming committee be formed to assure my countrymen a most enjoyable football week-end.

For example we could assure them entrance to a certain Bloor Street establishment, by lending them some of our much-used membership card. Or better still we could accompany them there before the game, and make certain they enjoyed themselves so much that they'd be more than willing to forego the game.

Scotch being as strong as it is, certain rabid Gaelmen caused quite a furor awhile back. Armed with a number of brushes and several cans of paint, the highlanders set about to literally paint the town red (particularly the Varsity area).

Now certain U of T luminaries felt that this was carrying racial prejudice just a bit too far, and there was much weeping and gnashing of teeth as the case was aired before the Queen's governing body.

Soberly the Queen's powers-that-be apologised and said that the dirty deed was the product of one of their less civilized southern Scotland types with a couple of Rozumniaks thrown in for good measure.

So, minus paint, brushes, brass knuckles and clubs, the Gaels are gathering for the fray. So in the spirit of good comradeship, let's go out and beat the very bejabbers out of them.

Football?—Oh! yes. The Blues will beat The Gaels by at least 11 points.

"Pipers' Lament" will be sounded at half-time.

Speed and Deception Gain St. Mike's Win

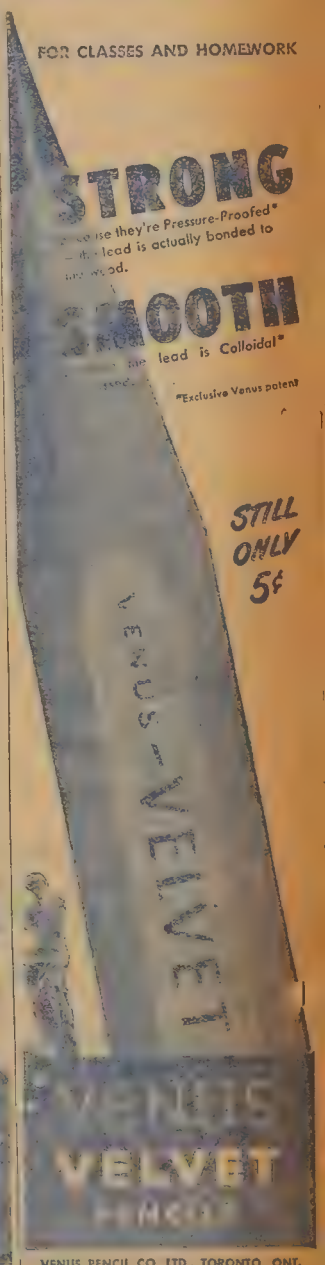
St. Mike's showed themselves to be a team when they trimmed Trinity 6-2 yesterday. They have a very fast, snappy team, and use plays with all the deception of Masterton's Blues and have a running offence with excellent line blocking.

In the first half Trinity opened up with an aerial attack and Gaunt completed two for long gains. St. Mike's used end runs and plunges to run four consecutive first downs, that ended with a plunge for a TD. The convert failed.

Trinity had plenty of spirit and would not accept defeat. Their star kicker, Don Campbell, proved himself when he punted a long spiral from well inside his own territory for a point. It was one of those kicks that the Blues don't seem to have this year.

St. Michael's rolled deep into Trinity territory many times, aided by their driving line, only to be bogged down by the spirited Trinity team. D. McIntyre's plunging and Neill's running were outstanding for St. Mike's. Trinity has a good passing attack but lovely passes were frequently dropped.

Mention must be made of the lovely cheer squad for Trinity. It was very flashy—cartwheels too.



Lineups

Pep Rally

activities a snake dance behind the band will proceed to the Drill Hall for dancing. John Pacquet, curator of the dance, has arranged for prizes and surprises to round out the evening in gala style.

Although the break-up of the dance will mark the close of celebration for most students until game time, it has been decided that a guard of resident undergraduates from St. Mike's, Vic, Trinity, and UC will be posted from 12.00 p.m. till 8.00 a.m.. This precaution is doubtless being taken in view of the fact that a tribe of Gaelic vandals cut loose some two years ago with a can of green paint and plastered a green Q on everything but Chesty Martin's bald spot.

Inspiration Needed

We mentioned earlier that this was Varsity's greatest sale evening. The things on sale are two big E's: Entertainment and Enthusiasm. One is yours to enjoy and the other is yours to inspire; in any case, you've got to be there to make the thing a success.

By CONN SPARROW

Another swimming practice—and yet another!

For several weeks, now, girls have been concentrating on their speed, style, ornamental, and diving—under the guidance of Miss Baxter. Smoking is taboo and eight hours sleep a night is essential to make these enthusiasts ready for action every Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights, in the pool at U.T.S.

Of course, there were lots at the beginning, but the ranks have been thinned down by people dropping out, on their accord. It is to these that Miss Baxter speaks when she urges all those, who are still interested to come along, because even if you don't make the team, there is always need for substitutes.

By the end of next week a team will be picked and a meet has been planned with Humberside Collegiate in the first week of November. The big meet at McGill will be either the 27th of November or the 4th of December.

As usual the same old 1-3 P.H.E. still holds, and intramural restrictions keep you down to four events and just 3 of these can be speed. There are all kinds of events to choose from—though,—free style relay, medley relay, synchronized swimming, diving, style, ornamental, free style, back stroke, breast stroke and medley.

In looking over the prospects of an Intercollegiate Team, the times for speed are much better than they were last October and there are plenty of good divers. All of last year's free style relay team are back, but among the missing are style, breast stroke and back stroke swimmers.

Mis Baxter feels, however, that even with this material, everybody is competing for places on the team—soooo, you never know, girls, given the chance you might just turn out to be a Marg Harrington, and Miss Baxter is doing just that.

There have been some changes made in the times for practices, which begin next Monday. Speed is still on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays, at U.T.S. from 5:30-6:30, while diving is from 6:30-7:30—same days and same place. Ornamental and style practices will take place at the Household Science Building and special times should be arranged with Miss Baxter.

So come on out, swimmers, 'cause even if you don't make the team, there's always the practice you're getting—for the intramural meet!

COLE SLAW

According to statistics as advertised by the organized men's hat manufacturers, eight-four out of every one hundred women prefer men who wear hats. Oh the hell of these figures, it is suggested to the unpopular and therefore desperate male, this is the inference intended that he will do better if he wears one. We don't believe it, and furthermore, we don't believe that trading on a man's misery is a good way to sell hats. Just picture the effect upon some fiercely brooding young man who, following the advertised suggestion, buys a hat as a cure-all for his social problem. What happens? Do women immediately swoon when he enters a room with a confident grin and sporting a hat reclining jauntily on his head? Of course not, they will still regard him in the way that fish regard an unbaited hook. In buying a hat he has only shown that he is a sucker for an easy promotion, and he has also demonstrated that he is a boor who doesn't know when to take off his hat. Now, further embittered, he will naturally tear his hat to shreds and while stuffing it in his mouth swear never to buy another. Had the advertising promised less glamorous rewards now, doubtless he would have bought one later to cover his thinning hair. Obviously then, this advertisement is a complete waste of money on two counts:

(a) either a man has it, or he hasn't.

(b) it won't sell hats.

GAELS VANQUISH VARSITY 8-6

Saturday Slip-Up

—Varsity Staff Photo By Bob Shelley

Here is one of the many slip-ups which befell the Blues Saturday as they went down to defeat before a determined Queen's twelve by an 8-6 count. Bruce Cummings is the Varsity ball carrier surrounded by Gaels. The loss left Varsity in last place in the four team Intercollegiate loop, while Queen's boosted itself into a second place tie with the McGill Redmen. While Toronto outplayed Queen's statistically all afternoon, accounting for twenty-two first downs to six for Queen's. In the second quarter alone Varsity rolled up eight first downs as against none for the Kingstoners, yet Queen's made the only score by intercepting Cummings' pass on the Toronto eighteen and running for their only touchdown. The game was a typical college affair complete with mascots, four bands and an overflow crowd of 19,000.

Pass Interception In Second Quarter Spells Downfall

By BOB JONES

Another football classic in the Queen's-Varsity tradition was recorded in the IRFU annals on Saturday afternoon when the underdog Gaels scored an 8-6 win before some 19,000 fans. The loss dropped the Toronto team into undisputed possession of last place with a record of no wins and two losses while their opponents climbed into a second place tie with McGill.

The second half was played in an intermittent rainfall which failed to dampen the crowd's excitement as they sensed that Queen's was not to be denied in their fifth attempt to a post-war victory over the Blues. Tommy Waldon's brash pep-rally prediction that "we're gonna' beat the h—l out o' them" was hurled back in his teammates' faces midway in the second quarter and held there for the remainder of the game, during which period the Tricolor was never behind.

The tragedy of it all from a Varsity standpoint can be emphasized by a summary glance at the statistics. The Blues racked up twenty first downs to Queen's six and in so doing outrushed them by a good 100 yards. Masterson's team also completed 8 out of a possible 21 passes for 150 yards while Frank Tindall's squad succeeded in nary a forward.

BUT, and this tells the story, Queen's committed one bobble to Toronto's three, they intercepted three passes to our one, their kicking average at 44 yards per punt was two better than U of T's, and, finally, they garnered eight points which beats six in any league.

Queen's Real Opportunists

They won by taking advantage of the breaks (their own coach claimed this) but to a great extent they made their own breaks. Opportunists like their sensational rookie end Logan and fleetback Billy Bell took advantage of every opening to more than nullify the efforts of Toogood, Cummings, Gray and Shore who never looked better than in defeat.

Varsity received the opening kick-off on their own 37 yard line and did not relinquish the ball until Bruce Cummings punted 55 yards to the deadline to give his team a single point lead. A pair of first downs on a run by Toogood and a Cummings to Gray aerial had set up the rouge opportunity.

Queen's utilized possession of the ball to drive deep into Blue territory, aided considerably by Lenard's recovery of his own very poor kick. From their own one yard line Toronto demonstrated its offensive potential by advancing to the Queen's 35 on a series of plunges and passes featuring Cummings and Toogood with Peppiatt and Shore making the holes. The first of an ill-fated sequence of U of T placement attempts halted the drive at this point.

Fumbles Set Up

An exchange of kicks found the Blues deep in their own end zone to start the second quarter; once again some heady play-calling and a varied attack rushed them out of danger. However, Toogood's fumble of Lenard's 65 yard punt allowed the Gaels to press close to the goal line. The home fans' hopes ebbed and rose on an exchange of fumbles at the five yard mark; a daring attempt to pass up the field was intercepted by Mister "on the spot" Logan who ran 15 yards for the major and the lead Queen's put to such good advantage. Lenard missed the convert.

The Kingstonians managed to keep the boys in blue far from pay-dirt for the remainder of the half, thanks mainly to Bell's kicking and Richardson's runbacks. During the second quarter Varsity had gained 8 first downs to Queen's none and yet the latter had scored the only T D.

Early in the third quarter a pass interception by Bell put the Tricolor in position for a place

Quebec Senator Debate's Visitor At Hart House

One of Quebec's senior senators—Leon Mercier Gouin—will be the honorary visitor at Wednesday's Hart House debate, it has been announced.

The debate—the first full-dress meeting of the year—will be on the topic "That this house deplores and condemns the program adopted in the recent convention at Winnipeg by the C.C.F."

The motion will be upheld by G. T. Guest, Victoria, and seconded by D. C. Stanley, Trinity. Both of them have been active politically on the campus.

The opposition to the motion will have a semi-official stamp; the first speaker in the defence of the C.C.F. will be Harvey Hay, Victoria, who was elected last week-end to the Victoria provincial council of the C.C.F. The second speaker for the negative will be Wally Fram, U.C.

The customary ten minutes will be allowed for speakers on the paper, and five minutes for the speakers from the floor ater the debate is thrown open to the house.

The speaker will be Al Noble of University College.

Senator Gouin was born in 1891 and is a graduate of Oxford and Queen's. He has a B.A. from Laval University and an L.L.D. from the University of Montreal. The elderly K.C. was overseas with the Educational Service of the Canadian Armed Forces. He has written a number of books, among which are 'Les Syndicats Ouvriers' and Droit Commercial'. He won the Thorlet Prize of the Institut de France in 1937. His appointment to the Senate was on Nov. 7, 1940. His father, Sir Lomer Gouin, was prime minister and then Lieutenant-governor of Quebec.

Back Campus Pep Burst Out Friday Like Jack In Box

By STAN FILLMORE

Do you still think that PEP is a prepared breakfast food to help you keep regular? Better you should have spent Friday evening on the back campus instead of studying. There you would have learned that PEP is something to be rallied and has very little to do with regularity.

PEP, (the Blue and White Society Brand) is Bob "Play-it-well, boys" Cringan and his Varsity band, snake dances behind Ben Johnston and his cheerleading crew, fireworks that rival the C.N.E. show and Bob Masterson's statement that his Blues can beat Western.

PEP is burning a crucified Queensman in effigy; it's the Varsity pipe band, and "two drunks from Queen's" leading cheers. PEP is a snake dance down Bloor and Yonge Streets, traffic tie-ups and impromptu power cut-offs in streetcars. PEP is—this could go on forever.

Before a crowd estimated at 2,500 Keith Davey emceed the proceedings. A brief welcome from Joe Potts, chairman of the Blue and White started things off. Songs and cheers from the band and cheerleaders followed. Davey, to the tune of resounding cheers from the few Skule men present, introduced Bill Bell, manager of the Blues, who in turn presented each member of the team. Bob Masterson then took the front and centre to tell the crowd Varsity was a sure bet over Queen's, and that the Blues were just as good and in many cases better than the Mustangs. Next time should be different, he said.

Ben Johnston ran over the new Varsity song and led the crowd in the singing. The pipe band skirled two numbers and three bonnie lassies from Kingston told the students that Queen's was a sure bet over Varsity.

A 20 minute show by MacMillan, Bryden, Pearse and Jewison followed and proceedings were wound up with a final rendition of the Varsity song. A display of fireworks heralded the start of the snake dance back to the Drill Hall where the more civilized form of dancing was carried on.

But, a good part of the crowd still refused to play at being regular. Numerous impromptu snake dances were started along Bloor Street and down Yonge. Several policemen were heard singing "When there are constabulary duties to be done, a policeman's lot is not a happy one".

Saturday morning, university police said no arrests had been made and no complaints received. Understanding bunch!

Keith Davey said that future rallies would be bigger and better and the "do" on the Western week-end should be a smashing success. How much better can they be????

UC Lit Rejects Six-Man Report Accepts Budget

Dissolution of a committee because it brought in two conflicting reports climaxed two hours of debate at the first University College Open Lit meeting of the year in the Junior Common Room Thursday night.

The committee was set up last spring to study ways and means of improving the representative nature of the Lit.

Committee chairman Fred Giles said the Ways and Means Committee had been unable to reach any conclusions because of difficulty in securing a quorum.

Final decision of the Society was to refuse the six-man report and set up a new committee which would consider this report and any others which students of the college might wish to bring forward. Noble would be permitted to submit the minority report in his position as a member of the Society.

The 1948-49 budget, totalling $11,200, was adopted after an hour's debate. Expenditures for the year will exceed fees taken in by almost $300 but the deficit would be made up by part of the $2,772.75 surplus from last year, Treasurer George Rutledge said.

Two University Students Find Lumber Camp Life Interesting And Exciting

Timber! To Jerry Waite in Geography and Bill Hutcheson II Pol. Sc. this is more than just a word. For three months this summer these two Varsity students worked in a lumber camp on the north-east coast of Vancouver Island.

"It's a good life—dangerous, exciting, and interesting, except when it rains," said Bill in describing the typical lumberman's day. This usually began at 3 a.m. in the morning, with a ten-mile ride into the bush. After a hard eight-hour stretch the work stopped at 1 o'clock. By this time everyone was ready to go back to camp for a swim, supper, and to bed at 7 in the evening. Any Saturday night diversion was obtained by going 20 miles to the nearest town.

"We put the cables around the logs and then got out of the way in a hurry, while they hauled them in," said Jerry, in explaining his particular job. The tremendous trees, mostly hemlock, fir, and cedar, range from 4 feet to 11 feet in diameter and are used to make furniture, while the plentiful pulp is used for paper. The trees are cut down and into sections. Then, hard-working "chokers" haul the logs to the track siding where they are loaded onto trains and taken 24 miles to the coast. Here they are dumped in the ocean, sorted, put on rafts and hauled by tug to Vancouver. Approximately 1,000 logs go down every day to the market, where they are sold and shipped to all parts of Canada.

Getting up at 3 in the morning did not seem like a good idea until it was explained that this was a precaution against the fire-hazard. This ever-present menace is guarded against at all times. Men are on the watch day and night, work is done only in the morning when the humidity is highest and no logging is done in a heat-wave. Another precaution is that of burning everything after the logs have been removed. "All that can be seen in these waste areas are fields and fields of blackened stumps."

"Are you ready for Freddie?" that was the philosophy of life of the Blodel, Stuart, and Welsh lumbermen. The danger and the risk involved produced a fatalistic attitude but the good pay made up for it.

Jerry and Bill stuck it out until the middle of August and then commenced their journey home. After a perilous journey over a one-way road, a bus ride to Lethbridge, Alberta, the two boys ambled across Montana until they reached Lake Superior, with five dollars left between them. The last 1,000 miles were covered in wild rides until they finally reached Toronto, after ten days on the road.

Both Jerry and Bill liked the job—"a wonderful experience, although too dangerous." University students, of which there were forty at this camp, are keen and hard-working. Therefore, they advance quickly to better jobs. "The pay is good; the work is not hard, and watching out for your life makes things exciting."

Fight TB

A vigorous step in the battle against tuberculosis started this morning when the University of Toronto Health Service launched its drive to x-ray every member of the University. The drive, which will continue until November 4th, is designed to ferret out every trace of the dreaded disease, which last year appeared in 2.5 per cent of the student population here.

Tuberculosis is not a new disease. Medical men suggest it was probably introduced to this country by Columbus and his contemporaries and it has been with us ever since. Over the years, however, people of the Americas have built up a relatively high degree of immunity and the struggle against T.B. has come a long way since the fifteenth century when contraction of the disease meant death within ten days.

Still, tuberculosis was the leading cause of death in Canada at the turn of the last century although great strides have been made in combatting the disease during the last forty years. The sharp plunge of the death line to the bottom of the Canadian Tuberculosis Graph during the period 1900-1948 is the result, mainly, of public health measures. The recent discovery of a new vaccine gives rise to the hope of eventual eradication of the disease.

Tuberculosis of the lungs strikes most frequently in the university age group. In line with the active measures being taken against tuberculosis, on this continent the survey of the University Health Service is designed to be as comprehensive as possible. It includes not only those students for whom the x-ray is compulsory, that is, those in first and last years, those in every year of Medicine, Dentistry, Nursing, and new residents of Canada, but also all students not included in those categories, and in addition, all members of the academic and administrative staffs.

The cost is fifteen minutes of your time; the value is your protection against tuberculosis—and also the protection of all with whom you come in contact.

If you are in an early stage of the disease it can be quickly caught and checked.

If evidence is found of infection in a more advanced stage, treatment can be begun at once and the safety of your health assured.

You always win with the x-ray. If free from infection, you gain peace of mind for the price of fifteen minutes.

Student In Jug

Wishes He Had a Jug- "I'm Not Sorry" Says Harpo

I love women, but . . . .

I was minding my own business—as usual—and trying very hard to watch the Varsity game when a cute little babe began to dig her ribs into my very delicate sides. Now, let it be understood that I have nothing against little babes digging their ribs into my ribs at certain times if she so desires, but . . .

I said very politely to this fair young maid sitting beside me: "Please try to control yourself. You watch your game and I'll watch mine."

Once again I tried to fasten my attention on the game. All was quiet for a short time when I heard a loud crunching sound beside me. I turned slowly and found the aforementioned young lady devouring a large package of crispy, crunchy popped corn. I said "would you please try and chew your pop-corn a little more quietly, please." The chewing stopped.

"Could you tell me why they don't bring the ball down to this end of the field," a shy voice said. I tried to control myself. "Why are those big men in the red sweaters jumping on that poor man with the blue sweater" she continued with a blush. I counted to ten.

Now don't get me wrong; I'm not saying that women don't know anything about sports—with all due respects to the women's sport department, but . . .

Again the voice came, "Why did the man say that they just made a rouge? I don't see any rouge." I gritted my teeth.

"And who is Ruzumkiac anyways."

"Please, lady," I said with tears in my eyes, "Shut up!"

"Gee" she said, "I think it's so silly that a bunch of grown men should be fighting with each other over a little ball." I started to pull out my hair.

"Just think of all the starving people in Europe," she said sadly. I started to chew my fingernails.

"Why did that man say the ball is in touch. I didn't see anybody touch the ball." I bit my hand.

"Why did the man say the ball is dead. I didn't know it was alive." I bit her hand. I did it and I'm glad I did it! Do you hear—I'm glad!

At this point, a large policeman took me by the collar and said, angrily: "Did you strike this little girl?"

"Yes officer, but . . .

"Come along, son."

"But Mr. Policeman . . ."

So I spent the day in jail.

Like I said before "I love women but . . ."

By the way, who won the game?

Rally Snake Dance Gives No Trouble Say Bloor Police

Police Inspector W. H. Cool of No. 2 Precinct yesterday partially discredited an account of Friday night's Queen's-Varsity parade given front page prominence in a Toronto daily, Saturday afternoon. The article said in part the police had had trouble with parading university students on the eve of football games during other years. Inspector Cool said they had never had any trouble with students on the eve of games before and that student activities after the game were hardly considered as "trouble."

The manager of the Odeon Theatre disagreed with the opinion of the police as an estimated 150 students, who had broken away from the main body of the 3,000 students taking part in the pre-Queen's-Varsity game snake dance, descended on the rotunda of the theatre.

"We tried to prevent them from going up the stairs," Mr. Tyers stated, "but were brushed aside like matchwood. They proceeded up to the art promenade shouting and singing and were only diverted from entering the auditorium proper by the balcony doors, then descended to the main foyer and went voluntary out to the street," he continued. "The police were called during the fracas, which lasted about ten minutes, but they arrived shortly after the group had departed."

Mr. Tyers branded the incident as "disgraceful" and said that he would make a formal complaint to the University authorities. He added that no actual damage had been done. "But," he added, "I hate to think what might have happened if they had entered the theatre proper."

Commenting on the disturbance at the Odeon-Toronto theatre, Inspector Cool was critical of those who had "foisted their activities on the public at large."

"I can't understand what feeling had prompted the students to invade the theatre," he stated, "and such a disturbance could easily result in panic, serious injury and possible death."

He recalled that after a Queen's game last year a similar fracas had taken place at the Imperial Treatre and some damage had been done.

Police at No. 5 Precinct, Davenport Rd., the station responsible for the Bloor district, dismissed any suggestion of violence in that area as "not important enough to record."

Debates To Be Held With Other Colleges States Debates Head

This year, plans of the University of Toronto Debating Union include inter-university debates with several American and Canadian universities.

Chairman of the committee, Pat Cole, IV Victoria, said that invitations have already been sent out to Harvard, Columbia, Chicago, Queen's and McGill debating clubs. The U.T.D.U., Miss Cole added, hopes to broadcast one of these debates over the Kilocycle College Show if a full hour can be obtained by the SAC radio committee. Should such be impossible, two or three half hour forums will be substituted as the committee's contribution to the university radio program.

In previous years, the SAC, in addition to arranging these inter-university meetings, has presented a number of Mock Parliaments and inter-faculty debates. This year, however, the latter are to be handled by the individual colleges. The college committees hope to boost interest and college spirit in these debates by making up the inter-faculty teams with both members drawn from the same college. Formerly the four speakers were chosen at random.

Reveal Herbie's Identity Case of Mental Blackout

The House Committee of Hart House, is pleased to announce that campus wide investigation of its Junior G-Man Division has succeeded in unearthing the true identity of "Herbie", campus mystery man since last Thursday. The question of his identity, a mystery which baffled the keenest sleuths in the J.G.M., was solved late last night when a befuddled "Herbie" professing mental blackout approached the Hall Porter seeking information about the All-Varsity dance.

"Herbie", like all freshmen of this university, was interested in what plans the committee has made for this all college function. The House would like to take this opportunity to tell him.

Mathematics and Physics Society

The Mathematics and Physics Society will detonate a Mark MT atom bomb on Thursday evening, October 21, in the McLennan Laboratory.

The Fall All-Varsity will be held in Hart House on Friday, October 9th. The evening will feature dancing from 9-1, Benny Louis supplying the music in the main gym and being ably assisted by Bas Cheeseman, Bob Cringan and Johnny Perkins in other sections of the House.

The entertainment will consist of two half-hour shows, under the auspices of P. & H.E. to be held in the Great Hall. A monte carlo night will take place in the main athletic wing, and for gambling men of Herbie's calibre this is great news . . . not even Herbie can lose using paper money.

Passports for the evening go on sale Tuesday, October 19th in Hart House, and may be procured from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., and later from 5.30 p.m. until sold out.

The committee also announces that they are planning to have a Spring All-Varsity this year for the first time. The date will be March 4th, 1949. The House Committee is sure that this news will be of great interest to Herbie and to the campus at large.

Enrolment Decline Less Than Thought; Smaller Vet Entry

Statistics, released by the Office of the Registrar on Friday, show that the decrease in the number of undergraduates in the University this year is not as drastic as was reported last week by the unofficial survey of The Varsity of the separate colleges and faculties.

The figures, which were released immediately after the meeting of the Board of Governors Friday afternoon, show the decrease in this year's registration over that of last year to be 1005.

Total Will Rise

The grand total, at present, stands at 15,684 but judging from other years, this total will swell to about 16,000, when the final count is made next month. Last year the total jumped from 16,689 to 17,091 between the first and final report.

One of the main reasons for the drop this year was caused by the decrease in registration of ex-service students, a university official stated.

Fewer Vets

Last year's total of 8158 ex-service students has dropped this year to 6597, a total decrease of 1561 and a number greater than the overall drop in the total registration. This decline in the enrollment of ex-service students was due to the fact that nearly all veterans, who wished to take university training, would have had to be qualified before now, the Department of Veterans' Affairs said. Most of the veterans entering this year were special cases, they said.

The highest enrollment is in the faculty of Arts with a total of 6859. Last year's registration in arts was 7611.

University College leads all other colleges in the university with a total enrollment of 2316 students, of which total 726 are ex-service. Last year the college enrolled 2683. 1120 were exservice.

The School of Architecture, a new faculty in the university this year, has an enrollment of 279. 177 are veteran students. Last year the total registration for this school was included in the faculty of Applied Science and Engineering.

Some Colleges Larger

Several colleges have an increase this year over last year's registration. Leading these schools is the School of Graduate Studies with an aggregate enrollment of 1062, an increase of 112 over last year. The Ontario College of Education follows the School of Graduate Studies with a gain of 104 over last year's total of 393. Other schools having an additional increase in their registration were medicine, forestry and dentistry.

The reduction in the number of students attending the university this year has already produced some repercussions, chief of which was the decision made by the SAC at its meeting last week to revise the 1948-49 budget. The lower enrollment has lessened the revenues for the SAC activities.

Officials at the registrar's office stated the high rate of graduation and the lower intake of veteran students would probably continue the downward grade in registration. They expected after all veteran students had graduated, that the overall total would still be higher than the pre-war level of between six and seven thousand.

No Single Script For All-Varsity States Jewison

Norm Jewison, III Vic, whose production "Banff Varieties" attracted the attention of Harold Godsoe of 20th Century Fox Films last summer, will produce the All-Variety Review this year.

This year's producer received his early training in acting and directing under Dr. Yokom at Malvern Collegiate. Later he toured Canada in a Royal Canadian Navy show and then turned professional. He appeared in "Vanities of '46", an ex-service production and in "Vanities in Black". For the past two years he has directed and half scripted the Vic Bob. He has also appeared in floor shows for the Vic formal and informal as well as the C.O.T.C. ball. His production "Banf Vanities" in which he directed a cast of forty resulted in an interview with Harold Godsoe of 20th Century Fox Productions and the establishment of professional contacts in Los Angeles and New York.

Norm Jewison's professional interests lie in the fields of vaudeville and light comedy. So far he has not considered serious drama.

In an interview Saturday Jewison said that the plans for the All-Varsity Review are moving rapidly, and that he expects rehearsals to begin soon. He considers the budget of approximately three thousand dollars adequate and expressed satisfaction with the development of the script so far. He emphasized his intention of building the show around individual and group acts rather than a single script, and recalled that two of Canada's top comics, Wayne and Shuster, graduated from University shows.

Ignatief Escapes Hart House Routine Battles Mosquitoes In Far North West

During the school term, Warden Nicholas Ignatief may be an indoor man, but comes summertime, the keeper of the House dons his moccasins and heads almost as far north and west as the Dominion of Canada will allow any man to go.

Last summer Mr. Ignatief made a trip through the northern part of British Columbia with his wife and eight year old son. They went by car to Vancouver, then over the Caribou Trail to Prince George. In a forty foot boat with a twenty-four horsepower outboard they travelled by river from Summit Lake down the Parsnip River to the Peace, then through the Rockies for eighty miles on the Peace River.

"I am very interested in the settlement of this district, and we went up there to see how the area was opening up," said Mr. Ignatief, "but as yet it is very sparsely settled. It is approximately fifteen or twenty miles between trappers' cabins. We bought a two hundred acre homestead on the Wicked River from a Kentucky man who was getting too old to run it. A young veteran is now trapping the land."

"There are very few Canadians coming into the region for settlement, but there are quite a few immigrants settling there. The land there is suitable for farming, and all sorts of vegetables, grains and grasses will grow on it. One man last year got $10,000 for an alfalfa seed crop on one hundred acres."

"We took many photographs and color movies of the beautiful and breathtaking scenery The plateaux are especially scenic, surrounded by snow-capped mountains and tree covered ranges. Happily, no accidents occurred, and my wife and boy enjoyed themselves immensely," continued Mr. Ignatief. "The mosquitoes were absolutely the biggest and most ferocious in the world, much worse than the puny Ontario variety. Next to the mosquito, the unbearably bad roads caused us most trouble. The bears and moose did not bother us, although we came across a few of them."

"On the way to Vancouver through the States we found tenting very easy and convenient in any of the many American state parks, but it was very hard to do in Canada because the bush comes right up to the sides of the Canadian roads, making it impossible even to pull off the road. Tenting was easy while travelling by boat, because of the many level rocky shores on the river. We stayed in trappers' cabins many nights, and spent a few days with the radio operator at Finlay Forks. There is great fishing on Babine Lake, but I am not a fisherman, so passed up the golden opportunity."

"We made the same trip before the war, and hope to repeat it next summer. The whole trip took about seven weeks, and cost considerably more than before the war."

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

You Never Can Tell

The New Play Society's production of "You Never Can Tell" is notable not only for inspired casting but also for close attention to pace and enunciation. Although unable to measure up to the other Pleasant Plays, this turn-of-the-century comedy is a sprightly piece and has none of the political tract quality that makes some of Shaw's serious plays such dreary affairs to modern audiences.

The general high standard of performance makes any singling out of individual efforts for concentrated appraisal in such a brief review seem unjust but Lloyd Bochner deserves special mention for carrying the lead with a consistent intensity of effort based on a thorough appreciation of the demands of his role. The same could be said for Pegi Brown and Peter Sturgess. The latter has never failed to turn in a first-rate performance since his first appearance with the N.P.S. last season.

Don Harton and Toby Robins displayed excellent team-work and a pleasing natural exuberance. The former should have underplayed a bit, however, in view of the limitations of the Museum theatre stage. This was a minor irritant, however, in an otherwise highly diverting evening.

L. J. Bell

Miklos Gafni

The intensity of applause that acknowledged Miklos Gafni's offerings at Eaton Auditorium last week confirms the old observation that the world is always getting ready to prostrate itself at the feet of a tenor-hero. The real home of such a figure is, of course, the opera house; a recital is, by necessity, no more than a peek into the sample case, and the addition of items meant for the concert platform proper, such as lieder, need not be taken too seriously.

In many ways, Mr. Gafni's program conformed to this pattern; his lieder group was certainly the most negligible part of the evening. The orientation was definitely towards the Italian sphere where opera is the dominating medium. Thus, Leoncavallo's "Mattinata" and Rossini's "Danza" were surer criteria of his worth than "Forelle" or Strauss' "Zueignung." On such occasions, careful and intelligent training resulted in precision singing that was all the more impressive and delightful as it is rare in this division.

It is difficult to decide, whether Mr. Gafni avoided excursions into the top register because of a slight indisposition or of a knowledge of his limitations of range. In any case the aria from Halevy's 'La Juive" proved that dangers did lurk for him up there, and that all concerned could be happiest when he moved in almost baritonish regions of strength and ease. If this should apply to all of Mr. Gafni's singing it would leave us with a singer of considerable appeal and skill, but might disqualify him for the hero-tenor throne.

Emotionally, he was at his most persuasive in the two Hungarian songs, but greater things to come with growing maturity and ease were pleasantly foreshadowed in Stradell's touching "Pieta Signore."

OUR READERS WRITE

The Editor,
The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

In the October 4 issue of The Varsity, the editorial, entitled, for the experts, gave a report of the findings of the world congress of scientists, with regard to increasing population and food supply. The findings of this congress, as stated in The Varsity, was to the effect, "that population was increasing so rapidly, that there would not be enough food to go around, in another fifty years or so, unless of course, we are mercifully spared through the intervention of an atomic war, which would rid us of our surplus population."

The theory that population is increasing out of proportion to our ability to raise food is an old one, expounded by a British economist, Thomas Robert Malthus, 150 years ago. In answer to such a theory, I quote from the report of the first United Nations conference on food and agriculture, "the Conference examined the facts in relation to the fact that man, through science, now has at his disposal, for the first time in history, the means for conquering want. For the first time, we know enough about the requirements of the human body for different kinds of food in sufficient quantities, and we know enough to place them within the reach of all those who need them. In brief, taking the science of nutrition as our standard for plenty, there is enough food in the world, and further, freedom from want, can be achieved." These statements are the result of the combined knowledge, backed by figures on resources of 44 countries.

The second paragraph of the editorial, "For the Experts", related that the United States Secretary for Agriculture said, "the United States might not even be able to feed its own people by 1975, if present population trends and wastage of soil and forests continue." The editorial failed to see the contradictory relation between the second and third paragraphs. The editorial should have pointed out that wastage of soil and forests is a problem for the world congress of scientists to solve, and should have condemned the preaching of the mercifulness of an atomic war.

Yours truly,
Leonard Dolgory,
III Pass U.C.

The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir—

"Books", your editorial of October 8th, is full of confused and largely unfounded ideas. You haven't the faintest notion what modern publishers have to contend with, nor have you had to pay a European price for a book, apparently, in the last ten years, if ever.

Yes, "books have gone up". Having admitted that, must you suggest wildly that "academic publishers . . . charge all that the traffic will bear"? As for European textbooks having "long been available for a fraction the cost of ours", that is pure bunk. Textbooks in Canada and the U.S.A. are much cheaper than in Europe. I am reminded of one example—an English text ("the ostentatious British trend"?)—paper cover, weak binding, printed on little better than common newsprint, which would last about one week of reading, lending, annotating, dropping, rain, snow . . . "the vicissitudes are innumerable" . . . and as for selling it to someone else the next year!—yet that particular book sells for nearly two dollars.

Your claim that "the province of Quebec . . . is full of cheap books" is not according to facts. Perhaps you would care to explain where you got that story. When you go down to see the McGill game, drop in on one of Montreal's many educational bookrooms and ask to be correctly informed in the matter.

To set the type for a medium-sized, plain text costs two or three thousand dollars. A mathematics text, with its awkward lines and spacings, runs up to nine or ten thousand. That does not include the cost of royalties, paper, cloth, m..'ing plates, printing or binding! A Canadian publisher is lucky to sell more than three hundred copies per year of an advanced mathematics text, and is further fortunate if his book is still on the curriculum after 15 years. That means he may sell only four to five thousand copies of that book, (ask the Press how many copies of Prof. Beatty's "Calculus" have been sold) and must therefore add two dollars to the price of each copy after reckoning the cost of the actual printing and binding. If it cost a dollar to issue a "sensible French" style book, or four dollars for a linen-covered, case-bound, long-wearing coated-paper volume, would you rather pay three dollars for a mass of pulp you couldn't resell for fifty cents, or six dollars for a sturdy text you could readily resell for five (providing you treat a book as a friend rather than as a servant)?

Incidentally, anyone who has ever done any bookbinding knows that end papers are necessary to hold the cover on, and unless the number of pages in the book is an even multiple of thirty-two, you can't escape having a couple of blanks in the back, unless you cut them out, and that just increases the cost.

Yours sincerely,
Ralph Lindsey, (1V U. C.)

Intermeds Plowed Under By Aggies 17-12

Seconds Lose to Champs In Driving Rain at OAC

By BRUCE MacDONALD

Driving back the defences of the Intermediate Blues with a powerful ground attack the O.A.C. Aggies overrran Donny Bark's charges by a 17-12 count Saturday at Guelph.

The Blues could not seem to capitalize on the scoring chances which occurred throughout the game. Played in a heavy rain for the major part of the time, the game saw very little passing or fancy ball handling. Varsity's few scattered attempts at an aerial display proved, on the whole, unsuccessful.

Stevenson kicked off for the Blues to start the game and the Aggies took possession on their own 35 yard line. O.A.C. threatened early in the game when they kicked to the Blues' four yard line. Graham, however, recovered an Aggie fumble shortly after to help the Blues out of danger.

The Aggies contined to press during the remainder of the quarter but the Blues managed to keep them out of scoring territory. Each team attempted only one forward pass in the first quarter and both were unsuccessful.

As the game swung into the second quarter, the Aggies continued their attack. This time, when they got close to Varsity territory, Calverly kicked a rouge for the first point of the game. The Blues then took the offensive for a moment, with Garside completing the first forward pass of the game.

Once again O.A.C. marched down the field, scoring 2 points on a fumble behind the Varsity line. Only two minutes later, Anderson went over the Varsity line standing up for the first major score of the game. The touchdown was unconverted. Before the whistle went for half time, O.A.C. collected one more point on a rouge.

The Blues were a different team after half time. Garside picked up a quick first down with two plunges, and then another with a successful forward pass. The Aggie line checked this rush and three minutes later, O.A.C. scored another rouge. McFadden quickly reversed the situation with a spectacular run to the Aggie 20 yard line. An Aggie fumble on their own 5 yard line proved disastrous, for Lawson plunged over on the next play to score for Varsity. The convert was not counted because of holding on the line.

O.A.C. opened the final quarter with a drive from centre field to score a second touchdown. Graham plunged the ball across the Varsity line. The convert failed. The Blues failed to capitalize on an Aggie fumble near their own line, but when the Agges were penalized for no yards on a kick, a long pass from Garside to Davis paid off with a touchdown. The convert was successful. O.A.C. scored two more points on rouges in the dying minutes of the game to win by a score of 17 to 12.

Graham and Anderson starred for the Aggies, and Calverly out-kicked the Varsity team all through the game. Bob Garside was a tower of strength for the Blues in every department, and while such men as Graham, McFadden, Kilpatrick, and Sinclair stood out, every member of the Varsity squad played a commendable game.

Line-ups:—Varsity:—Scott, Roberts, Brown, Hyde, Forge, Kennedy, Russell, Sinclair, Davis, Garside, McFadden, Kelly, Davidson, Kilpatrick, Errington, Fisher, Longmore, Sivell, Graham, Birkenshaw, Howson, Stevenson, Eccleston, Lawson.

Aggies:—Shields, Nell, Savage, Gray, O. Calverly, Deeks, Dies, Park, Doseger, Moore, Cote, Duming, Graham, McConvey, Anderson, Leggett, Raithby, Brennan, A. Calverly, Trelevan, Kennedy, Brooks, Ghetti, O'Donnel.

Pat Cockburn Wins Singles Tennis Crown

The Toronto Lawn Tennis Club has been the scene of the girls' Inter-Faculty Tennis Tournament during the past week.

Fighting a losing battle with the weatherman, the semi-finals and the finals didn't get underway until Friday, when Pat Cockburn came out on top. Her six points upped the St. Hilda's back the tally to give them the intramural crown again this year.

The first set of the finals between Pat Cockburn and Pat Montgomery, PHE, showed great tennis form on the part of both girls with Pat Cockburn winning on a 9-7 count. However, the second set showed that stability and steady play win out in the long run and Pat Cockburn captured the trophy with a decisive 6-2 win.

In the semi-finals, Pat Montgomery defeated Jane Matthews, St. Hilda's, in two straight sets, 6-4 and 6-1 and Pat Cockburn came out with a 7-5, 6-1 win over Eve Atkin of Victoria.

The big upset of the tournament was Bev Downey, placed 6th in the Vic lineup, who reached the third round and defeated Allison Jeffries, who was considered by the experts to be Vic's best hope for capturing the honors.

The finalists Pat Cockburn and Pat Montgomery, and the semi-finalists Jane Matthews and Eve Atkin will carry Varsity colors to the Inter-Collegiate Tournament to be held at Queen's University, Kingston, on Friday and Saturday of this week. The finalists will make up the single's team and the semi-finalists will represent Toronto in the double's competition.

The Universities represented in the Inter-Collegiate Tournament will be Toronto, Western, McGill, Queen's and MacMaster. Last year McGill captured the trophy. Varsity was represented by Pat Cockburn and Jane Matthews in the singles and Mary Schram and Judy Price in the doubles.

Queen's Varsity On Sidelines Color Shots

"I like to win but I hate to take a game from a team that had as many bad breaks as yours!" So said Frank Tindall, head coach of Queen's Golden Gaels, when he received post-game congratulations from Bob Masterson, Varsity mentor. Most of the Blues' supporters will back him in his remarks 100%.

The dressing-rooms were a study in contrast after it was all over on Saturday. Queen's really cut loose and whooped it up. Supporters and alumni thronged to congratulate the Gaels on their victory. Small wonder when you realize that it's Queen's first official win over Varsity since 1939. They did steal the 1945 opener in Kingston but that wasn't a full scheduled season and doesn't appear in the record books.

It's been a long time since Queen's have put on a show for their followers like the one on Saturday. With the Queen's alumni out in full force the clansmen had themselves a time. Besides winning the ball game, the Gaels presented a brass band, a pipe band, and four lassies who performed the Highland Fling.

Half-time intermission was stretched out to over twenty-five minutes to allow the four bands to strut their stuff. Marjorie MacGregor, the Queen's drum majorette, was dolled up in a bearskin cap, scarlet tunic and about a foot of tartan. Nobody seems to mind the Gaels being a little Scotch when it comes to the cheer-leaders' costumes though.

Bob Elliott, Queen's line coach, explained the Gaels' defeat to McGill of a week ago as resulting from lack of spirit. Bob thought his line, which was greatly under-rated in press reports, outplayed the Varsity line and attributes it to the desire to beat the Blues. The Gaels have a much more effective and heavier front wall than the team of a year ago. Bob Stevens, 6' 5" -210 lbs. middle, was the "holler guy" for the Kingstoners.

Gaels Vanquish

kick and although McKelvey missed the uprights, Huntley was in there to nail ball-receiver Toogood for a point.

Five minutes later the big Blue and White were on the march again and Messrs. Cummings, Toogood, and Gray earned themselves all-star ratings on this drive alone; the three combined on a series of bucks, passes and fake-kicks which culminated in a Cummings to Gray pass in the coffin-corner to knot the score at 6-6. The try was unsuccessful.

4th Quarter Drive Fizzles

The last quarter commenced after the kick-off and a roughing penalty against Varsity had put Queen's in possession on their own 40. A third-down run by Lenard was good for 15 yards and before they could be stopped again the Gaels had taken the lead on a rouge off the same lad's kick.

Toronto's attempts to erase the one point deficit were foiled when, after several exchanges of the ball, Salari recovered Cummings' fumble and ran to the Varsity five. At this point the Varsity line held for two downs and were forced to concede a single on Lenard's wide placement attempt.

With two minutes in which to garner at least as many points Toronto marched from their own 35 down to the opposition quarter-way mark. The major part of the distance was covered by a 40 yard Cummings to Danylchuk forward One down put the Blues in position for a placement but their second down was forfeited when they took too long in the huddle. When the play was finally attempted, a poor pass-out gave Gawinski no chance to get the ball past the charging hulk of Jim Charters. That third consecutive placement failure meant the game for Toronto since time for only one Queen's play remained.

Watch out Western!!

St. Mikes' B Downed 6-5 By Jr. Meds

Friday afternoon's lone intramural football game was a hard-fought duel between St. Mike's and Jr. Meds who squared off in the Group III opener. The calibre of play was characteristically early season with fumbles plentiful and vital. Jr. Meds' ability to capitalize on the breaks and their potent aerial attack enabled them to end the game on the good end of a 6-5 score.

The Double Blue were masters of the ground play throughout and they took advantage of good blocking early in the second half to earn a succession of first downs culminating in a major by Nadeau. This gave them a good half-time margin over the Medics whose lone tally had been a single off Sims' boot in the first quarter.

The second half saw a resumption of the Saint's powerful ground attack halted by a fumble; after several exchanges of advantages, the Red and Black intercepted a pass at the mid-field mark and several plays later succeeded in a third down wide run which put them in a scoring position. Martin carried over for the unconverted major which provided the margin of victory.

Prominent in the winner's sterling aerial attack and secondary defensive play were Martin and Vernon. Spearheading a tissue-like front wall Freeland was a standout in both directions.

McGill Victors Varsity Fourth At McMaster

At the woman's intercollegiate archery meet held at McMaster on Friday, the Toronto team added up 629 points to take fourth place.

Bernice Muir, one of the Varsity foursome, chalked up 340 points placing her just ten points behind McGill's Betty Watt for the best individual score. Led by Betty Watt, McGill topped the meet with 947 points. Western racked up 825 points to place second, Queen's was third with 728 and McMaster tailed the meet with 495.

This is the first year that Toronto has entered a team in the annual meet, which is held outdoors. Unlike the other universities competing, Varsity does not have an archery club and outdoor targets at longer distances are something new to the team.

Miss Slack, of the department of Physical Education, said that Toronto made a good showing for her first try and stated that if a women's archery club were formed and the members practiced outdoors, we could hope to do better at coming meets.

ccer Blues Stop Teachers 3-2
ntoni And Glass Are Scorers

n Barton's Soccer Blues re victorious in an exhibi- on meeting with Buffalo te Teachers in the city on Saturday, beating their hosts by a 3-2 margin. Bob Antoni was the big goalgetter for the Toronto squad netting two while Adam Glass notched the winner.

The game got slightly out of hand after the first Varsity tally and the clean play of the first quarter was replaced by a rugged brand of soccer.

For the teachers Poltrun and Hammer were the payoff men, the former scoring in the second quarter and the latter in the third.

Antoni's first counter came after only three minutes of play and his second came on a lovely pass from Neville Conyers which he flicked neatly into the net. The winning goal also came on a cross from Conyers and this time it was Adam Glass, jumping into the air and bouncing it off his head into the mesh.

Lineups:

TORONTO—Goal, Reed; Fullbacks, Small, Peters; Halfbacks, Glass, Critchley, and Thompson; Forwards, Barber, Leach, Antoni, Barton, Conyers; Subs.—Valere, Scott, and Delfosse.

Things aren't all so sunny in sunny California after all. If we can believe this report in a magazine sometimes given to distortion, in the view of some people we know, it appears that one city there, at least, is subject to the same prosaic complaints that beset the rest of the world. Rising rents, sad to say, have been plaguing the local citizenry of Santa Maria. Accustomed to lodging their complaints at one address over the past few years, they suddenly found themselves searching for the new location of the rental control office. The confused citizens demanded an explanation for the move. Shamefaced officials reluctantly provided one. Their former landlord had boosted the rent.

How Penicillin makes jobs for Canadians

Penicillin, life-saving product of medical research, begins with cultures of green mold. As the mold grows it secretes small amounts of penicillin.

The production of penicillin and other drugs and vaccines demands absolutely sterile conditions. So the tanks, trays, tables, filters and other equipment used are made of Nickel alloys for ease of cleaning and resistance to corrosion.

Practically all drugs, medicines, serums and vaccines in use today are products of scientific research. In designing laboratory equipment for their production, International Nickel has cooperated by supplying technical information regarding the most suitable metals.

The large quantity of equipment required for pharmaceutical laboratories creates a new market for Canadian Nickel, and so increases employment for Canadians. Thus does research develop better products, increase the use of Canadian Nickel and create more employment.

Varsity Spirits Dampened

Neither rain nor adverse score could dampen Varsity's Spirit, in last Saturday's big game. Following the band display at half-time, Margory Dun, Varsity's Drum Majorette, took time out to look at the pet duck which had taken part in the proceedings. (Left) On the right Helen Chammen, Hilka Filpula, and June Pemberton, three of Varsity's cheerleaders, shelter under an umbrella at half-time, smiling despite the rain.

Debaters Decry Union With States, Say We Lose Face

By a vote of 35 to 16 last night, the Victoria College Debating Parliament defeated the motion: "Resolved that Canada should join in political union with the United States."

Speaking in support of the motion, the first speaker, Miss Reta Horner, IV ELL, maintained that Canadians had imitated that of the United States so thoroughly and energetically that no important differences remained. "If we do not join the United States," she warned, "we shall be in dire need; we shall be crushed."

Common Customs

She pointed out that Canadians and Americans, besides using "the same bad English," have many other common customs in their heritages.

"It is time," she said, "for Canadians to stop looking at events through a knot hole; it is time for us to step up and buy our own ticket. Are we really more refined and less materialistic," she asked, "or are we only unwilling to admit that we are living in an American culture?"

The first speaker for the opposition, Richard Gage, I Pass. objected to the motion on the grounds that any such union would of necessity be on American terms. In negotiating it, Canada would lose many of her best laws since these would not be compatible with the American constitution. "Education in the political system of a new type of government would be necessary," he said, "and a Canadian would be of little value." In addition, he stressed the point that the ancient French Canadian language rights would be lost, and Canadian unity and national character would disappear.

Develop Resources

Government speaker Anne Carnwath, I Phil. and Eng., based her adherence to the motion on the belief that such a union would be advantageous in an era of world government. The development of Canada's own natural and industrial resources was one of the reasons suggested by Opposition speaker Len MacLean, II Pass., for Canada's continued independence of the United States. "The close co-operation enjoyed by the two countries in war years indicates that there is little need for political union," he said.

Luminous Bodies Will Be Featured At U.C. Follies

"The stress is more on talent this year than beauty and there is more of both now than ever before," said Hank Caplan director of the U. C. Follies' Chorus. The routines will be entirely different. Instead of the tall, short and middle choruses of recent years, there will be a slow chorus of 25 girls and a fast chorus of 20 girls, chosen out of more than 150 applicants.

As a bevy of beautiful girls were run through a set of fast calisthenics and told, rather to their amazement, that they were arms, legs or bodies, Mary Ritchie, social director of the W.U.A., explained the process. The fast chorus is to be a phosphorescent number with abstract arms, legs and bodies flashing about in various dance routines. The slow chorus is to be in interpretive style, acting out the story sung by the soloist.

The show will be a review with each number complete and separate, according to Hank Caplan. Caplan is a graduate of U. C. and has been connected with the Follies for the past three years.

"We are trying something entirely new in the way of college productions," Harry Rasky, producer-director of the Follies said. "The only thing the same about the Follies is the name. We are stressing experimental work. Each of the production numbers is a picture in motion. The total effect is a mural for music," he said.

The dancing choruses are well under way. Auditions for singers will continue this Thursday in the Women's Union at 1.30.

"This is the 25th anniversary of the Follies and we feel it's time for a change. The result of our experiment can be seen on Nov., 12 and 13," Rasky stated.

Callaghan's 'Varsity Story' Will Be Presented On Air

The script for the first instalment of Morley Callaghan's novel, "The Varsity Story," is now prepared for presentation on the air on Thursday, Nov. 11, at 9.00 p.m. by Paul Fauteux. The story is divided into three instalments and the second and third parts will be presented later in the season.

Paul Fauteux, III year St. Mike's, who is Radio Commissioner for the S.A.C. is also preparing one-hour debates for broadcasts over the C.B.C. Mr. MacDonald of the S.A.C. is now negotiating with Harvard University for their participation in the first of these debates.

The All-Varsity Mixed Chorus and similar university organizations are to supply the music for the show.

Fauteux stated "the programs will feature panel discussions and other topics of general interest."

He also explained that the C.B.C. reserves the right to cancel programs they present on the air as they have to meet certain standards of broadcasting. It is not enough to have the program on a level of interest only to a university student but must have at least city-wide appeal. He stated that he thought all programs presented by the C.B.C. were under similar restrictions.

Lectures will be given on script writing and general information in regard to radio produced by Mavore Moore, Lister Sinclair and Andrew Allen. These lectures are to follow last year's success in this effort and will be on such a plane as to provide valuable instruction for more advanced students and also allow the beginner to get a good start.

Social Work Head To Give Address

Dr. Cassidy, head of the School of Social Work, will speak to the undergraduate Social Work Club at its opening meeting to be held in Wymilwood at 8.00 p.m., Tuesday, October 19th.

Dr. Cassidy was born in British Columbia. He received his B.A. at the University of British Columbia and completed his graduate studies at the University of California and Robert Brookings Graduate School of Economics and Government, in Washington, D.C.

The Social Work Club was organized to acquaint students interested in social work with the various aspects of this field.

Amendment Gives V.C.U. President Debating Rights

To allow for the participation of its president in V.C.U. debates, the Vic student body passed an amendment in Vic Chapel last week, to the Union's constitution, providing for the election of a chairman to the executive.

The motion for amendment read as follows: "The chairman of the V.C.U. Assembly shall be a graduate student of not more than two years, with experience in the Assembly. Said chairman shall receive an honorarium and shall be appointed annually by the incoming V.C.U. Assembly in April."

The president of the V.C.U., Keith Davey, III Vic., announced that the executive will suggest nominees to the next meeting of the assembly, in November, and that assembly members will be welcome to add any nominations at that meeting.

$20,000 Deficit In UBC Society Feeling is High

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 18.—(CUP)—Feeling is running high at the University of British Columbia over a deficit of $20,000 in the funds of the Alma Mater Society, student council of the university. Last year $20,000 more was drawn from the War Memorial fund than was contributed through fees.

A "finance investigation committee" was set up to investigate the "diverted" student funds, following a general meeting of students which demanded an explanation for the missing funds.

Bob Harwood, last year's treasurer of the Alma Mater Society, who was severely criticized at the general meeting replied to charges of misappropriation by stating that: "At no time was there a misappropriation or breach of faith with respect to the gymnasium funds. Just as the present council is using monies received in advance to meet its current obligations, the past council saw fit to pay more immediate obligations and to invest in merchandise and other assets, deferring temporarily the transfer of monies to the gym fund."

Students are upset, too, over the fact that meetings of the investigation committee are closed, meaning that only what the committee chooses to reveal will be made public.

The Alma Mater Society is faced with the possibility that the administration may take over its operation if the student budget is not put on a sounder footing in the future.

Student Union

Design For College Recreation And Thought

This is the first in a series of articles to better acquaint students at the University with the proposed plan for a student union memorial building.

Imagine, if you can, a building right on the campus that would contain such things as a radio station, a ballroom and theatre, an art workshop, a bowling and billiard room and a soda fountain. Imagine a building in which students, both male and female, could have formal and informal discussions, forums and dances. Such a building is not a dream. It is ours if we work for it.

Like the manufacturers of a well known car, we can say, there is a student union in our future.

Sceptics will say that a union would only interfere with Hart House or the proposed women's building. It is the purpose of these articles to point out that the two ideas are completely separate. And what is more important, a student union is necessary.

Unions are not the figment of any wide-eyed student's imagination. They are real things. In fact, there are sixty such buildings throughout the United States. The one complaint from such institutions is that their present facilities are not great enough.

Says Porter Butts, Director of the union at the University of Wisconsin, "It is a laboratory of student management and self-expression; caterer to the campus at large, housing the bulk of its meetings; adviser to the student committees; troubleshooters in certain problems of student personnel; teacher of the arts of leisure and recreation. It concerns itself with the whole area of student life."

The union is indeed just another name for the people of the college in their free time.

We are fortunate. In building our union, we do not have to use a trial-and-error method. We have but to examine the many other existing buildings and benefit by their mistakes, and at the same time using their functioning ideas.

At the University of Oregon, as many as twelve different plans were submitted before the final draft was made. The finished plan included all the essentials needed and was based on a minimum of administration. Administration is important and the head of a proposed union should be selected at the outset to know each individual detail.

The union is a design for college living.

Planners of other unions have suggested that the functions of such a building fall into six divisions: social, intellectual, game, food, activity, and service.

A student at our university cannot move without finding the necessity for a union. Here are some of our own cases as arguments for a union:

Case 1: Where do we hold dances?—In converted gymns in Hart House.

Case 2: Where on the campus can a male student have coffee with a woman student?—He can't.

Case 3: Where are The Varsity offices?—In the basement of University College.

Case 4: Where is our radio station?—It isn't.

Case 5: Where do we hold our student government meetings (SAC)?—In lecture rooms.

Case 6: Where are our executive offices?—Spread out between Hart House and University College basement.

Case 6: Where do the co-eds eat their lunches?—Any co-ed can answer that one.

The dust in the monument room, the unread names on the memorial wall, the infrequently used Hart House tower chimes are evidences of the last memorial. The student union, active and alive will be the monument for the future.

Fifty Years to Go

Recent events—many of which have penetrated the traditional ivory tower of the university student—are making clearer and clearer the pattern of the post-war period in which we live.

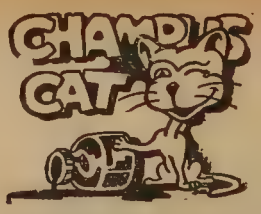
Even the most obtuse and ostrich-like student is aware of the clash of police-state philosophy with our relatively free society. What is less apparent is that the police-state philosophy is winning.

Two events within the last week have demonstrated this. First, the B.C. Bar Association refused to admit a graduate of the U.B.C. law school, as "unsuitable". The student in question is an active member of the Labor-Progressive Party.

Second, at the annual convention of the Canadian Congress of labor, the chairman used the simple tactic—according to press reports—of ignoring communist speakers who asked the floor. It is no doubt true that they were in a minority, and that they were taking up a disproportionate amount of the convention's time with repetitions of the battered shibboleths manufactured in the Kremlin.

But in both cases, over-zealous protectors of democracy have adopted the attitude that they are going to save our democratic principles from the Reds by destroying them before the Reds can get to them. In the case of the law student, who has said, and with justice, that a man's right to practice law should not be determined by his political beliefs, one might ask with equal justice how many anti-communists are allowed to practice law in Czechoslovakia these days?

A similar question might be put to the president of the United Electrical Workers union with regard to the amount of freedom of speech that exists in Eastern Europe. And the anti-communists have what is at first glance a convincing argument when they say that you meet force with force.



The point they miss—and one which seems doomed to be missed—is that by adopting the methods of the police state they have lost rather than won. They have beaten the communists, but they have not saved democracy. It is the tragedy of this generation to be caught up in an apparently irreversible historic process that can only end in loss. What happened in Hitler Germany can easily happen here. At first, the Nazi propaganda machine devoted much of its energy to proving that communist leaders were a danger to the state. After a while, it no longer became necessary to prove anything. All that had to be done was point an accusing finger, and say "Communist!"

The accusation alone constituted charge, trial, verdict, and sentence. It was a handy method of turning almost anyone into a second-class citizen, stripped of all political and legal rights. That process is already well advanced in the United States.

It does not seem likely democracy will continue to be even as democratic as it is now as long as the Cominform keeps on its present course. And there seems to be little hope that the international communist group will alter that course. We can expect the situation to get worse, and look forward to the time when every public or private utterance will be carefully scrutinized for Marxist content, when more and more doors will be closed to innocent men on the merest hint of "subversive activity."

Perhaps the whole situation was completely summed up last week by the Argentine Foreign Minister, Juan Bramuglia.

Mr. Bramuglia told members of the Security Council: "Remember, gentlemen, we have another fifty years before this horrible century will be over."

Houndog Hormone P.D.

(Installment 1)

Houndog Hormone, P.D. (Private Dick), sniffed the cool evening breezes. "Trouble's brewing", he said to himself.

He was right. At that very moment two men were jimmying the window at the rear of Good Old Charlie's Malting Plant, two blocks distant on the windward side. Hormone breathed in the night air again. "Looks like a bit of trouble at the rear of Good Old Charlie's," he said taking a quick glance at the Milky Way and the big Dipper. Drawing a copy of "Know Your Horoscope" from his pocket, he spent the next five minutes in feverish study. At last a light gleamed in his eye. Then a light gleamed in both eyes and Houndog Hormone, P.D., nose in the wind, was off like a shot in the dark.

It did not take Houndog more than five minutes to reach the scene of the crime at the rear of Good Old Charlie's. Absorbed in their delicate task, the two window-jimmiers failed to notice the stealthy advance of the master detective. Fearlessly Hormone crept ever onward through the cases piled in the malting plant's premises. Soon he could hear the culprits' conversation.

"I say, old chap, don't break the glass, you know", said one.

"Don't be so frightfully silly,' said the other.

Hormone crept forward on all fours, his nostrils dilating as he closed in for the kill. His unsuspecting victims continued their work.

"Really, old man, let me try", said the taller of the two. "You've hacked away half the sill and haven't budged the window a blasted inch".

"Crumpets and tea to you", said his stumpy companion. "It's my chisel, you know".

"That's not very decent of you", said the other and a tear dropped from his eye onto the window sill.

"Hello," said the chisel-wielder. "Did you feel a drop of rain? Shall we pack up the whole thing, George?"

Houndog started. Quickly he drew a small, black notebook from up his sleeve and, taking the attached pencil in his hand, wrote "George".

"Here, here," George was saying. "It's perfectly ghastly for you to suggest we quit after having come so far".

"I suppose you are right", said the chiseller and returned to his work.

Hormone breathed heavily. The next step was always distasteful to him. Making arrests often led to violence and open rebellion on the part of the culprit. Reluctantly he drew his Tom Mix Straight Six-shooter from its shoulder-holster Calmly he slid the imitation-safety catch forward and cocked the trigger. The silver barrel glinted in the cool moonlight as Houndog Hormone, Private Dick, stood up among the beer cases for the kill.

"Put 'em up," he snarled, and leapt over four cases landing three feet in front of his captives. At the sound of his voice the brewery-breakers froze in their boots. "By Jove," said one. "How perfectly ghastly", said the other. Hormone advanced.

"You're coming with me, and not to the Casbah," he sneered slightly. "Turn around". In an instant he had frisked them both. "You're not carrying weapons. It'll save you five years in the pen," he said with a tight-lipped smile.

Like lightning Houndog's free left hand slipped to his coat pocket and emerged with two sets of Sherlock Holmes Club Handcuffs. Two clicks were heard in rapid succession. Hormone's upper lip curled in a derisive sneer at the awkward, slow-footedness of his two victims.

(In his haste to make the capture, however, Hormone failed to notice that he was handcuffing both his own hands, one to each of his so-called captives.)

"I say, old boy," said the taller of the two men. "Allow me to hold your gun while you extricate yourself".

Hormone grimaced. He had trapped himself. "Dammit", he muttered under his breath. Then he

Bible's Facts Dull Asserts Professor Legends Add Color

"Much in the bible is not intended to be facts, but parallels. Many facts in the bible were dull, and have gathered color in the form of myths".
This was stated by Professor H. N. Frye, at the first in a series of three open forums sponsored by Vic. S.C.M. held yesterday. The subject of the panel discussion was "What about the Bible?"

Discussing the question with Professor Frye were two students, June Clarke and Murray Masecar.

June's contention was that the Christian faith is rooted in history, and that God entered history in human flesh in Jesus, something about which we dare not elaborate. When asked how she would explain historically the story of how Jonah was swallowed by the whale, Professor Frye interjected that the reader has to swallow both.

Masecar said that he accepts the bible as profound truth and doesn't discard anything, no matter how difficult it is to believe.

In further explanation of what he thought about this topic, Professor Frye said, "The Bible is what God has said to man, and I examine what the church says in the light of this. The church must listen to the word of God. If any religion teaches anything contrary to or besides what is contained in the bible, that religion is doomed".

When asked from the floor why he believed in the bible, Professor Frye said that it makes sense, and besides, any knowledge requires some kind of faith.

"There is a great difficulty in interpretation of the bible because it is hard to exactly reconstruct the facts", said June Clark. This is one of the few times she agreed with Professor Frye. She said that she believes Professor Frye's philosophy for the most part to be "unchristian". "We are inclined to see the universal, not the concrete. The ultimate lies in concreteness."

"The reformation started something it couldn't finish. Man cannot comprehend God's interpretation," said Professor Frye.

Radio Committee Names Mel Breen Production Head

Aim of Christian Mission Discussed at Vic Service

Instead of a university, we now have a "pluriversity," said Professor C. W. Leslie of Victoria College in a Sunday Morning Service in Victoria College Chapel. The purpose of the service was to bring before students the basis and purpose of the University Christian Mission. Professor Leslie said that modern specialization and the narrowing of interests have resulted in a condition best described in a phrase of Stanley Jones—"the paralysis of analysis."

Another result is that academic technique has become an end in itself. Aristotle would have described a university education as beginning in wonder and ending in wisdom, but it would be more true today, to say that a university education begins in curiosity and ends in sophistication. The speaker said that the purpose of the University Christian Mission was to restore unity to university life, and to bring to the fore the basic problems of the meaning and purpose of life.

Miss June Clark, IV Victoria, and Mr. Roy Neehall, III Victoria, conducted the service which was attended by students and staff members.

Picture Contest Will Award Flat To Married Vet

A deserving student veteran and his wife will soon come into a good piece of fortune; 20th Century Fox Corporation being the donors.

In connection with the movie "Apartment for Peggy" filmed on the campus of the University of Illinois the University of Toronto's Housing Service of the Student's Administrative Council, in co-operation with the 20th Century Fox Corporation have arranged a contest open to every married ex-service man in attendance at the University.

A large front room apartment has been selected in Rosedale which will be completely furnished and decorated by different firms around Toronto. The furniture will belong to the winner of the contest and also two months rent for this apartment will be free. Since talk of the contest has started, many people have stepped out of the "cut-throat world" of Jack and Peggy to offer such things as $40 worth of groceries and other little things needed around the apartment.

It is the intention of the donors to present this apartment and furniture to the most deserving couple in the University. At the time of printing the Board of Judges had not as yet been announced but will be printed in later issues of The Varsity.

The rules for this contest, open to all married veterans are very simple:

Submit the following to the Students' Administrative Council Office before Friday, the 29th of October, in writing and addressed to "Apartment for Peggy Contest":

(1) Full details of your military service.

(2) Your reasons for attending the University on demobilization.

(3) The course at the University that you have selected and your reasons for undertaking the course.

(4) Your present living accommodation.

(5) Your plans on graduation.

(6) What sacrifices have been necessary to pursue your University course.

More details on the contest will be printed as they come in during the week, as well as a full description of the apartment as it is now and as it will be when completely furnished.

63 Are Promoted In Meds Clinic

There have been 63 promotions in the Clinical Departments of the Faculty of Medicine.

Dr. J. A. MacFarlane, Dean of the Medical Faculty, said that a number of the younger men in the department have been promoted to faculty rank. This was made possible by raising a number of associate professors to the rank of assistant professors, leaving openings for instructors or clinical teachers to take their place.

Engineers Welcome Walberg Building, Opened Yesterday

The Walberg Memorial Building opened its doors to the students of the University of Toronto yesterday morning. The first group to pass through these doors were one-quarter of the class of fourth year Chemical Engineering. The new red brick building on College Street, begun in 1946, was supposed to be ready for use on the opening day of the 1948-49 session. Because of difficulties in obtaining labour and materials in the early stages of construction this hope could not be realized. "We hope to have the building fully completed by the start of the 1949-50 session," said Mr. J. R. Thom, Assistant Superintendent in charge of Construction. This hope was echoed by Prof. McLaughlin, Head of the department of Chemical Engineering.

Some Lab. Space

Laboratory space, badly needed in the Engineering faculty, will be increased in the next few weeks. Two labs will be completed in the engineering side of the building by the first of November. It is hoped that these two will be supplemented by four more labs during the next half term. The chemical side of the building should have a total of four labs with the required store rooms and janitors' closets by the end of the year. The engineering section will be increased to six labs and several class rooms in the same period of time.

The number of lecture rooms that will be available is not known. There is the hope, however, that there will be a large lecture theatre in the building in a short while. There will also be a theatre large enough to accommodate a few hundred people for public lectures.

Prof. MacLaughlin emphasized the extreme need for a chemical engineering laboratory. This need is urgent because of the inadequacy of the present engineering lab. The present lab is the old boiler room of the present chemical building which was utilized by the engineering department when the university changed over to central heating.

Cost Has Gone Up

The cost of the Walberg Memorial, originally estimated at three million dollars, will rise approximately twenty-five or thirty per cent. This rise is due to increased cost of labor and materials. The new unofficial estimate is thought to be over three and a half million dollars.

The only room in the building which is being used at the present is a design room on the third floor. This room, primarily for the use of third and fourth year chemical engineering students, is being utilized as a room in which calculations can be computed. The room is furnished with tables constructed for Ajax, straight-backed chairs, and blackboards at each end of the room. At present it is heated by an oil burner due to incompleted heating facilities.

NFCUS Extends Services To Include Unions Abroad

"NFCUS", said its former president, Maurice Sauve, in a speech at Winnipeg last year, "is the national trade union of the university students. We insist on the term trade union because it implies service to the students; that is, service to the students' councils by the incentive it gives them to improve student living conditions on the campus, and service to students in general by the numerous advantages which may be obtained for them only by the work and prestige of a national union."

This year, the National Federation of Canadian University Students (NFCUS) is increasing its scope and activities in Canada and extending its work of co-ordination into the international field, he said.

"At Paris, this summer, NFCUS was represented by a negotiating team at the council meeting of the International Union of Students. The aim of the Winnipeg conference of NFCUS last Christmas in its decision to send these delegates to Paris was one of joining with other students in an attempt to solve common problems."

"Today, the Federation links the student bodies of 18 universities across Canada from UBC to Dalhousie in Nova Scotia. It is also the voice of Canadian students on the national and international levels. Its achievements in the past have included the reduction of railway fares to students travelling to and from college, the one-third reduction in the cost of athletic equipment to all colleges, the formation of the Canadian University Press, and the arrangement of student exchanges in Canada", he concluded.

Utility and Beauty Wanted In Future Student Union

Speaking of the inconsistent male—having hidden their heads in the Hart House for many's the year, they are about to emerge in the general direction of a co-ed institution. Surveys in the States show that women prefer a co-ed building—how about the men?

Well, I was talking to Gord. Gwynne—Timothy Trinity IV on this very subject and strangely he gave me strictly the women's viewpoint. He feels that in some sense this co-ed memorial building will be a greater thing for the women than the men who have been looked after by Hart House. Facilities will not compete with Hart House but will provide lounges, club rooms, radio studios, a private dining-room, coffee shop and soda bar . . . all co-ed.

Some co-ed unions in the States even boast beauty-parlors and Gord suggested a poll of our petit-sweets to check on their desires along this line — a co-end beauty parlor—hmmmm.

And what about athletic facilities you ask—strictly for female muscle-buildnig. Well, thorough investigation will be carried out to ensure no over-lapping in plans for our co-ed corral and the proposed women's athletic facilities. If anything, the two will be complementary. Female representation on the working committee is quite substantial. Each S.A.C. delegate sends three members to the working committee, which when one considers the female percentage representation from faculties such as Meds. and colleges such as St. Hilda's and St. Joe's, is a very fine thing indeed.

There is however a large amount of work to be done and even the hundred-odd people on the committee will not be enough. Every student will have to take part and indicate that there is a real demand for the building and its facilities.

The suggestion that we have the faculty, both men and women, eating their meals with the students, thereby promoting greater understanding has already caused consternation in some circles, decided approval in others. What do you think?

This you'll be happy to know is not just a mad student scheme—women being more thoughtful than men will consider the matter more carefully. Mature guidance from such people as Miss Parkes and Dr. Jessie Gray will be invaluable.

Gord is having informal discussions with the women of all the colleges and schools and giving them first hand information while finding out their opinions on the subject.

The first of these groups was held at St. Hilda's last night at coffee and next week he will be visiting the O.T. undergrads. They're coming your way next—so be prepared with brilliant female ideas on the subject and let the committee know what you want in your long-awaited co-ed institution.

Women Solons Not Sapphos In Europe

By JANET HARBRON

One Canadian woman student represented the Students' Christian Movement in Europe this summer —Norah McClure of the University of Toronto.. This situation clearly worthy of a conversation has produced some disturbing facts.

There is fundamentally a spiritual need in Europe. A non-denominational indefinable something is missing from the lives of the women Norah talked to. Partly as a result of this they are looking forward to rebuilding a fellowship, hoping for a concrete feeling based on personal contacts.

Their rule in student federations is much the same as ours, but their personal outlook is very different. Women in Europe are more sensible in their attitude to sex and marriage. More practical, they have realized that there is neither time nor money for lighter social activities that many of us have easily accepted as our fight. The accepted standards of contact and strictly observed taboos have resulted in very real friendships with men and less misunderstanding.

These women are particularly interested in government and keenly aware of their responsibility as co-workers with men in this field. Unlike many of us in Canada they have realized that the opportunity to be concerned about government is a personal and prized possession.

Our S.C.M. is sending them food and clothing because here the clothing situation is particularly bad.

Are we worthy of their interest?

Thumbnail Sketch

Dr. Jessie Gray Alumni Rep To Co-ed Union Committee

With all the talk about the new co-educational union it is not surprising that one of Varsity's most renowned graduates, Dr. Jessie Gray, has been named as the women's alumni representative to the committee for the new war memorial building.

Dr. Gray who has already chalked up firsts in academic work when she became the first woman to receive the Gold Medal for highest average marks during her medical years, in her professional work when she became the first woman resident surgeon at the Toronto General Hospital, and now in recognition of her work. She was the first woman to take part in the American College of Surgeons in Los Angeles as a panel speaker.

This brief resume of Dr. Gray's achievements in "firsts" suggests that behind these facts there must follow others. In delving further into the records we found that Jessie Gray was allround. For those in the field of sports: she was on the Intercollegiate Tennis Team in her third and fourth Arts years, and was an active hockey player for U. C. As a member of the SAC in her last two years at the college she worked hard for the interests of the University.

Returning to her academic career, we note that awards and scholarships predominate the field both in her Arts and her medical years. Active in her Fraternity Alpha Delta Pi as well as College activities, Jessie Gray later became a member of Alpha Omega Alpha Honorary Meds Fraternity, in which she was the Secretary-treasurer.

In 1939 a Master of Science degree was added to her name with F.R.C.S. (Canada) (Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons) honours following in 1941.

Dr. Gray first went to the Toronto General Hospital and then joined the staff of the Women's College Hospital where she is now the Surgeon in Chief.

Always a willing worker, Dr. Gray proved at one time to be the cause of hilarity for the Gray family. Reminiscing about a summer job at the University Settlement during her undergraduate years her sister tells the story of her attempts to be domesticated.

It seems Dr. Gray offered to make a cup of tea for one of the people. Now Dr. Gray is very partial to coffee; so she quickly turned and questioned as to whether the water should be boiled as long as that for coffee.

Dr. Gray has been outstanding in her field not only scholastically but because she combines with her ability, a personal charm which some of her patients claim is a sure cure. The lift which you feel on meeting her comes from the intense interest she shows in you. This intangible gift is often described as unattainable but it can be the inward courtesy that only a few attain.

Man's view of glamour: "One of the strangest sights of the whole 20th century are those peculiar apparitions with the great billowing skirts that you see running around the campus these days. You can recognize them (glamour girls) by their peculiar bored, jaded, mien, by the haughty manner in which they manoeuvre their cigarettes, and by the big red lipstick smear they leave on glasses, cups, towels, and anybody unfortunate enough to come into contact with them."

This male (J. Cairns of Western U.) gives advice to the girls on social etiquette:

"First, about conversation. Don't worry about it. When you come to one of those dreadful lulls at a dance, don't be baffled. Turn to your dreamboat and say, in that gay, vivacious manner of yours, 'Don't you just love this band?' Smile brightly as you say this."

This is so original and scintillating that your dreamboat will remember it to his dying day.

Now, as to saying Good-night. When dreamboat lunges at you for that good-night kiss, dodge him expertly. This takes a little tricky footwork, but you can do it with practice. Then, before the poor mutt can recover, smile at him with those dark, exotic eyes of yours and say dreamily, "I had such a wonderful evening."

As he stands baffled, look at him in your daring, sophisticated manner. Switch on your most fascinating smile and say softly, "Another time. It's so terribly late now." And as you say this, slam the door in dreamboat's face with a charming gesture.

Your technique is now perfect. You have succeeded in both brushing dreamboat off, and hinting at another date, all in seven words.

The seven words we could select would be definitely sizzling.

Another daring male (this time Bob Stephens writing in the Ubyssey) holds forth on women's fashions. "Suits, ah yes, suits. Some of them look as if the manufacturer had got his assembly lines mixed. Frontside, they seem to fit. South side going north they resemble an old potato sack.

"On side-saddle drapes and bustles, the dresses look like dresses, but from any other angle mere words cannot convey an impression of their appearance."

Mr. Stephens finishes up with a sparkling comment on evening dresses. "The evening dresses are original. I'll say that for them. The only thing in favor of taffeta dresses is that they make a noise. Shot taffeta looks suspiciously like the lining in my coat but I could be wrong."

Mr. Stephens could be wrong.

Career Forums Begin With Journalism Talk

For women students who have just a vague idea of what they plan to do when ejected from university with only a sheepskin between them and the cold world, the Panhellenic Association is sponsoring this year a new series of Career Forums, entitled "Careers on Parade."

On three consecutive Monday afternoons, October 25, November 1, and November 8, Varsity girls will get inside information on public relations, movies, travel and publicity, publishing, librarianship, teaching and radio.

The participating guest speakers will enlarge on the interesting and unusual sides of the field under discussion, and in addition will do their best to help clear up the difficult points of necessary training, how to get your foot in the door, and what opportunities there are for girls with a future in mind.

The first forum, to be held next Monday at 4 p.m. in the Women's Union Theatre, will cover the careers available in public relations, travel and publicity, and movies.

This forum will be chaired by Joyce Tedman, an ex-U.C.-er, who will head the discussion on public relations. Participating guests will be Kay Mathers of the Clarke Irwin Publishing Co., Ruth Wells, from the Department of Travel and Publicity of the Ontario Government, Pauline McGibbon of Victoria who is associated with the National Film Board, and Mildred Spicer, Fashion Editor of Chatelaine magazine.

People depressed about life at Varsity should have a talk with four girls on the Smith-Varsity exchange. They are the most enthusiastic girls I have ever met. Their names are Hester Goodenough and Galen Sanborn of U. C., Kate Robertson, Vic., and Nan Jones, St. Hilda's.

They've found a comparison between the small women's colleges of eastern United States and the bigger universities in Canada. Size and co-education are two important differences that all four girls noticed. Smith has about 2,000 students compared with our 15,000. As for men in classes—they aren't as distracting as was expected. Despite this fact they find that U. of T. girls dress very glamorously—if you remember Smith is the blue jeans and gum boots college.

Coffee dates and dances in the middle of the week are something new. At Smith studying is done during the week and week ends include rugby games at neighbouring men's colleges. And guess what these girls find—there are more moustaches here. However, they are divided on the subject of whether they like them or not.

None of them expected Indians and snow drifts; Nan Jones especially feels that Americans should know more about Canada. They agree that we are generally more subdued than Americans and our collective personality is a cross between that of Europeans and our neighbours to the south.

These girls have the enthusiasm and spirit we like to see around the U. of T. They deserve our best welcome.

NOTICE

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

VIC'S CORNER

"'Tis known by the name of perserverance in a good cause ... and of obstinacy in a bad one."

Truer words were never spoken. That All-Varsity sentiment that the Blue and White Society have so long been striving for displayed itself to a commendable degree Friday night at the Pep Rally and on Saturday afternoon at the football game. The Blue and White have perserved and are finally being rewarded. BUT we can think of NOTHING more obstreperous, persistent or obstinate than the unthinking individuals who burst out at regular intervals with their Toike Oike, Skule of Science and Lady Godiva. Few will deny that Skule is a spirited faculty but at the same time a good number of its members display an uncanny lack if judgment and common sense at every Varsity do.

"A bigot delights in public ridicule, for he begins to think he is a martyr." That phrase probably explains the Engineer's dilemma but as Pott's coon skin coat would probably say .s. "This situation has gone FUR enough!" Oh well, perhaps someday the Engineers will come around.

The Greasy Hips (colloquial for Oyle Thigh) have left behind them an even bluer bunch of Blues. However, here at Vic there is a brighter side to the picture. In previous columns we have called them "feets-ball fiends", "twinkle toes" and "Knuckleheads" but today we call them TOPS. Yes sir. At least the Scarlet and Gold are rolling along. Last Thursday they beat uc/PHE 8-5. Saturday morning, they threw a scare into the Cobourg "Galloping Ghosts", Intermediate O.R.F.U. champs for the past three years, by holding them to a 12-10 decision. Let's all be out on the Back Campus this Thursday afternoon at four to watch the boys (and CHEERLEADERS too!) in action against the highly tooted Meds squad.

It's a crime that such a small college as uc must solicit the assistance of the more athletic types in PHE, but (and may we quote from the first u.c. column) "the intelligent, sophisticated and mature ladies and gentlemen of university college" just don't go in for the rough stuff.

A perfect example of this, in addition to football, can be drawn from the Senior Track meet held last Wednesday when uc/PHE just managed to eke out a tie with Vic. Johnny Rhame was the high point getter for Vic with ten, including two firsts in the hurdles. George Speers, Jack Milne, Harry Taylor and Bill Farlinger also turned in fine performances as did Bob MacIntosh, Bill McMakan and John Devereux. Congrats, fellows, and best of luck in the Senior Intercollegiate Meet here tomorrow.

Bob Beare sneaked from out of the past on Saturday afternoon only to be pelted by the self same apples he so benevolently attempted to give away. (Engineers, no doubt!) Tonight 'ole Bob will be in more familiar surroundings when he appears at the 76th annual event. Friend Beare with his mystic powers will have no difficulty getting there, and neither should you if you follow these simple directions. First, get your ticket in the Halls of Vic. (All years may now purchase duckets.) Secondly, head for Central Tech, one block east of Bathurst on Harbord. The main entrance to the school is on Lippincott. Finally, sit back and listen.

Doug, "What we need is more wimmin" Love, it appears will be the object of considerable attention throughout the show ... as of course will numerous other members of the staff and executive.

It's always fun to make fun of others and in this respect the 76th Bob is no exception. See you all there tonight.

The Clubs, Societies and Committees around Vic have begun to carry out their respective programmes in earnest. Last night the Debating Parliament aired the question of political union with the United States. The Music Club have long been at work practising for this year's operetta, "Iolanthe". Ye Olde Dramatic Society are busy polishing the cutlery for "The Man Who Came To Dinner", which will be put on in Hart House midway through November. This coming Thursday in Wymilwood, the Club Francaise hold their first meeting, open to any and all who care to attend. Headed by Norm Bell, the "T" Dance Committee promises a "Rub" in the very near future.

And believe it or not, work has already begun for the Vic Informal. Doug Maxwell asks us to mention in an emphatic sort of a way that he would like to meet ANYONE interested in decorating work. Those of you who attended last year's "Dance of Distinction" will never forget the grand display put out by the Committee. If you want to help, let Doug know by personally contacting him or else by leaving your name at the V.C.U. Office.

That seems to be about all we can squeeze out of the old typewriter for one evening but I'm sure that if we let the keys idle for a few days they should open up by next Tuesday with all the news at Vic while it's still news. Meet you in the Corner next week.

Senior Track Meet Scheduled For Varsity

Archerettes

Archery is a popular course at the University of Toronto and from the above picture at least one reason is evident. Four of the Varsity archerettes bent their bows in the Intercollegiate competition, held last week at McMaster and came away with fourth place honors. McGill won the meet and Queen's carried second place. Bernice Muir, one of the Varsity foursome, scored 340 points, placing her just ten points behind McGill's Betty Watt for the top individual score. This is the first year that Toronto has entered a team in the annual meet.

SPORTSWOMAN

SOFTBALL

St. Hilda's I edged St. Mike's 5-4 in a close and exciting game yesterday in Trinity field. Both teams were fielding the ball well, letting few on base who did not get solid hits.

The score was 5-4 at the end of the third. The Trinity girls were at bat first in the fourth but failed to add to their score. Then St. Mike's came up. With one runner already on first, the second batter grounded out to shortstop Donna Haley who took advantage of the forced play to nail the runner at second. This play was repeated two more times and St. Mike's was retired without another run.

Corine Green, St. Hilda's lively catcher, hit the only homer of the game. For the double blues, it was Vicky Baechler who got two runs and snagged the ball at third.

St. Hilda's second team lost their game yesterday to Meds, 17-2. Meds owe their win to the sloppy fielding of the Trinity team and the play of two of their team members—Irene Hain, pitcher, and Sally Saries, first base. These two, who each scored three runs, put all but four of Saint's players out before they could reach first base.

BASKETBALL

Vic Seniors held UC Seniors to a nine all tie in the first game of the season, played yesterday at OCE. Mickey Thomas, tall UC guard, was the main reason why Vic did not overwhelm UC. Standing out for Vic were high-scoring forward Marg Claridge and Kit Jamieson, guard.

St. Mike's Freshies defeated UC Freshies B, 21-10. Passing was poor and spills frequent. Sheila Grogan was St. Mike's starring forward, with 13 points. High scorers for UC were Nancy Webster and Ross Creeland.

Physio B edged Vic Freshies B 9-8. The guarding of both teams was good, especially that of Vic's quick Jean Grant. Marilyn Tennent and Betty Hart scored all of the Physio points. Jane Reddick shot six of the UC points.

Vic Freshies A were downed 9-3 by UC Freshies A. The strong UC forward line was sparked by Maureen Irvine with five points, and Pat Macdonald with three. Dot Aitken of Vic got 2 points.

Emmanuel, Knox Go Scoreless

The Knox College and Emmanuelite soccer squads battled to a scoreless conclusion yesterday on the south campus. The friendly "war of the theologians" turned out to be a see-saw clash with both aggregations exhibiting stylish play and an unfortunate disability in the scoring department.

Bill Ainsley was particularly active for Knox. Marsh Jess played a hard-driving game and goaler John Phillips made some excellent saves in stemming the onslaught of the enemy.

on the sideline

By JOAN EDDIS

They say it's a Joe-job.

It's often hard to get someone to do the job satisfactorily.

But the success of any team is doomed if the manager is lackadaisical about her duties.

It's her job to see that everything runs smoothly. She's the one who phones the team to make sure that they know about games and practices.

This may sound like pure routine but a case came up last year which showed how vital a conscientious manager is.

Two evenly matched basketball teams were fighting for a cup. Their first game ended in a tie and a second match had to be played. It was the manager's job to contact all the players on the team but she was lax about it. She thought everyone knew.

The star forward on her team did not know. The team was trounced 54-24.

Each player must have a health examination before she participates in any competitive sport. The manager is responsible for checking the health categories for those on her team to make sure that they have had a medical and are physically fit. If someone plays who has not had a physical examination at the Health Service, her whole team will be disqualified.

It's no cinch to be a manager. She must attend every game and be on time so that the lineups for her team are ready for the scorer. She is in charge of the equipment. Sometimes she is the team's only supporter present at the game but her enthusiastic cheering and encouragement can bolster the whole team's morale.

SENIOR INTERCOLLEGIATE TRACK

All men to report to the Track between 4 and 6, Tuesday, for final arrangements, issuing of uniforms, etc. Pim, Shore, Gayman, Farlinger, Spears, Taylor, Rhame, Davies, Neil, Mohun, Carr, Bagg, Doull, Green, McCurry, Kofmel, Pearson Schell, Duff.

Intercollegiate Meet To Be Held Tomorrow Mackenzie Cup at Stake

By JACK MILNE

Tomorrow afternoon what promises to be one of the most thrilling senior intercollegiate track meets since pre-war days will take place at Varsity Stadium, McGill, Western, Queen's and Toronto have all entered teams in an endeavour to capture "The Tait Mackenzie Cup" symbolic of senior intercollegiate track supremacy. An upset occurred last year when an unheralded University of Toronto track team garnered top honours.

Previously to that McGill and Toronto had always had things their own way, but with the recent rise of Western into the track limelight, by placing of four of their track aces on Canada's Olympic Team anything could happen.

This year as usual McGill has the heaviest entry, and is the favorite being chased closely by Toronto and Western. Queen's is definitely the dark horse team, but they could surprise . . . . eh boys?

The track meet will have its full roster of events and each one should be hotly contested. The very first track event of the afternoon, the 110 yard high hurdles, should provide a thrilling fight with John Rhame, crack U of T timber topper, opposed by Bill LaRochelle, Olympic 400 metre hurdler. Rhame won this event narrowly last year at McGill, but LaRochelle's summer experience should make it a race to the tape.

The sprints are the question mark of the meet. Western will be without the services of Jack Parry, their ace sprint man. Our guess is that Metras is preventing him from entering in order to make sure that he does not aggravate the leg injury that he received while training in England last summer. McGill has entered Munroe and Spence, two sprinters who are always dangerous. Toronto's best bet is Jen Mohun who on a muddy track in last Wednesday's senior interfaculty track meet won in the good time of 10.1.

In the quarter and half mile events there are two favorites, Don McFarlane and Gordon Haight respectively. Don McFarlane, one half of the famous brother act, is entered in the 440 and should walk away with it. From Queen's comes freshman runner Haight who should make the track critics sit up and take another look.

Last winter with a group of Canadian boys he entered the United States Junior Indoor Track Championships at Madison Square Gardens, and there to the consternation of the crowd won the 1000 yard race beating the best junior runners in the United States. He is entered in the 880 and should win it in very good time. The 3 mile race is always unpredictable as anything can happen in those 12 laps of Varsity's track, but little George Doull, Varsity's ace 3 miler should take it.

Turning to the weight events, Fainstat of McGill, record holder in the shot put, seems to be the top man, but can expect trouble from Western's all round athlete big Bob Phibbs. McGill, Toronto, and Western all lay claim to the winner in the running broad jump. McGill's Spence and Bagg from Varsity fought it out last year but can expect a lot of trouble from a Western freshman Bob Peirce.

The Pole vault looks to be an all Varsity affair with Murray Gayman and Bill Farlinger, last year's winner and runner-up as favorites to win again this year. The last event of the program is the always exciting mile relay. This has been Western's specialty in the past, but this year McGill or Toronto could upset their apple cart.

All in all this meet should provide a very exciting and interesting afternoon. It is one of the few good track meets held in Toronto all year, and is certainly the only one in the autumn. Let's have all Varsity out to cheer our runners on to another repeat of last year's victory.

Among the intermediates are listed Milne, McFaden, Hryshko, Bassingwaithe, Wilso, Gawinski, Parkin, Smith, Rawlinson, MacIntosh, Jackson, LaChance, Glurta, Gray, Devereux, Barr, McMullan, Kettle, Beckett, Armstrong and Vincent.

Sidelights Queen's-Varsity

By Bill Stockman

The 18,236 fans who packed Varsity Stadium on Saturday afternoon to witness the Varsity-Queen's encounter did not constitute a record for games between these two colleges. Back in 1930, 20,683 spectators filled every corner of the Bloor St. bowl to set an all-time record for football attendance in Toronto. There is no truth in the rumor that they sold space on the flagpole for that game.

To say that Queen's were lucky to win sounds like sour grapes but most of the experts (ahem!) will agree with this. They appeared to have a lot of potential on their team but didn't seem to be going anywhere with their plays. However, when Varsity wanted to give anything away, the Queen's boys were right on the spot with open arms.

In spite of the constant drizzle that fell during the last half, the spectators that left their seats could be counted on two hands, a foot, and an elbow. As the final whistle blew, the enthused Queen's supporters overflowed onto the field to hail their gladiators, in contrast to the stunned Blue's fans who edged furtively away from the scene of the disaster.

While standing outside the stadium just before game-time with Ernie Becker, the Balmy Beach backfielder, (plug), we were approached by a somewhat mild appearing young chap, weighing as much, perhaps, as a dime's worth of platinum, and with his countenance obscured by thick bifocals who inquired, "Is this where the Ajax goalpost defenders meet?" That the goalposts would fall to the Queen's invaders was only a logical conclusion to our conversation with the dynamic defender who appeared as though he would have trouble saving his favourite flannel suit from a large moth.

Queen's trotted out a shapely duck (or was it a drake?) as a mascot at half-time. One of the more tender scenes involved was the sight of a Queen's-man placing his SHOWERPROOF coat around the duck as it started to rain.

Ted Reeve was the only radio quarterback to pick the Tricolor on last Tuesday night's broadcast. When seen leaving the stadium on Saturday afternoon, the "Moaner" was smirking delightedly as he stepped daintily around large puddles of tears deposited on the pavement by sorrowing Blue and Whiters.

With the aid of a slide rule and a treatise on "Differential Calculations" we have arrived at the conclusion that Varsity will be tied for second place in the league standings this week-end after they beat McGill and Queen's lose to Western. Come on, boys, let's make it a Blue Saturday for the Redmen. (yak! yak!).

GOLF MEET

Ann Sharpe, first year PHE, won the UC invitation golf meet with an 83. The next lowest score carded last Friday at the St. Andrew's Golf Club was a 98 turned in by Nan Goetz, St. Mike's.

Other low scores were handed in by Joyce Graham, OT; Pat McNintry, UC; Dorothy Hiscocks, UC, and Mary and Betty Flynn, St. Mike's.

Re-Edited Bible Took Ten Years For Preparation

New York—A new edition of the King James version of the Bible with 7,300 footnotes was published today by the Oxford University Press here.

The 1,760-page Bible took 10 years in preparation by 36 consulting and contributing editors selected from churches, colleges, parents and children's groups.

"We cannot fully appreciate or get the best out of Shakespeare, Beethoven or Rembrandt unless we are prepared to sit down and do some hard studying," Geoffrey Cumberlege, manager of the Oxford University Press, said. "Many feel that just to open and read the Bible is to understand it. This is not so."

Originally planned as a children's Bible, the new edition was enlarged into a project for clarifying both the Bible and history. In addition to diagrams of King Solomon's Temple, lined rawings of the Ark of the Covenant and other illustrations, it defines odd words, simplifies difficult passages and explains old-fashioned phrases.

The edition will be known as the Pilgrim Bible and is published exclusively in New York. Copies will be available in Canada later, the Oxford Press in Toronto stated.

Our Readers Write

The Editor, The Varsity:

Dear Sir:

I am prompted to reply to your pessimistic editorial of Oct. 12, in which you put Canadian universities in a bad light and failed to grasp what I feel is the rising temper of our times. Nonetheless it is a stimulating editorial.

Last year I had a good opportunity to observe the American educational scene from the vantage-point of one of their 'name' universities—Cornell. I return to Toronto with the following impressions which are summoned by your remarks.

Let us grant that American graduate schools are better endowed than ours, but let us not forget that a surprising proportion of the best minds there—faculty and students alike—are imports and not the products of American education. In the sciences, indeed, there is an alarming proportion of imports. From an academic point of view, then, American undergraduate training leaves much to be desired. Secondly, I found that almost without exception, Canadian graduate students abroad stated their preference to return to Canada to help mould the Canada of the future. (This I take to be symptomatic of the growing Canadian spirit.) All this is not sentimental twaddle but the result of first-hand comparison of the economic, political, and educational structure and contrasting of the backgrounds of race and tradition to be found on both sides of the border.

In reply to some of your statements: Genuine scholars as I find them do not seek honor per se, nor do they lack the initiative for creating opportunities. Again, American universities are not understaffed, if you call a huge amphitheatre filled with a few hundred students, even in their senior years, a satisfactory method. (I sympathise with our fourth-year Skulemen.) And the exploiting of graduate students for purposes of undergraduate instruction is an even less commendable practice.

You forget also that the day when American robber barons endowed educational factories is past. Interest on these investments is currently at a low ebb, with the resultant fantastic fees in American institutions of higher learning. State colleges which provide cheap education for state residents are unable, in most cases, to afford 'name' professors. In some cases these are but glorified state agricultural schools.

It seems to me that the Canadian government's exempting of all male university students from military service, providing that they meet the conditions, is an unparalleled example of public approval and respect for higher education in Canada, which you claim is wanting.

Let me urge a more positive editorial policy, more pro-Canadian in tone.

Yours for greater state-aid to universities and to students, I am

Yours sincerely,

W.H.R. Montgomery, M.A.

To the Editor, The Varsity:

I should like to take this opportunity to correct a somewhat erroneous impression which may have been gained from an article appearing in last Friday's issue of The Varsity, concerning the Vic 'Bob' and the proposed Vic Revue of next February. The article in question stated that I had sponsored a motion in the last Vic Assembly to the effect that the proposed February Revue should replace the 'Bob' in future years. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The 'Bob' is a traditional 'must' at Victoria, but it is not, nor is it meant to be, a 'production' spectacle such as "Daffydil Nite' or the UC 'Follies", etc. Because of this, it has been felt that there is a great need for a Vic show wherein all college talent may take part.

The motion that was put before the Assembly was to the effect that the committee (named at the time) should investigate the possibilities of holding such an event in February.

It should be emphasized that this show would act only as a supplement to the 'Bob' rather than as a substitute. The 'Bob', I trust will continue in its own inimitable fashion, while the proposed February extravaganza will become Vic's answer to 'Skule Nite' and "Dentatics', etc.

Yours truly,

Doug Maxwell.
IV Victoria.

turned to his erstwhile captives, and said in a slow, cool drawl, "Cigarette?"

"No thank you, old man," they said together. "Neither of us do".

Houndog's brow furrowed in thought. His P. D. course at college included a seminar on trick escapes. He was deep in thought for five seconds, then a cool glint came into his eyes and he turned to his companions with the merest trace of a self-satisfied smile on his face.

"It will go easier for you if you turn yourselves over to me without a struggle", he said. "You see, I sent for the police on my Dick Tracy midget radio".

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

Casavant Musicale

Sir Ernest MacMillan gave the first in a series of Casavant Organ Musicales Saturday evening at Eaton Auditorium assisted by the Jarvis Collegiate Mixed Choir under the direction of Mr. Jack Overholt. Organ works were the Prelude and Fugue in D major of Bach, a Short Suite in G by Henry Purcell, the Pastorale and Finale of Cesar Franck, the majestic Sixth Symphony of Widor and encores by Handel and Bach. The Choral program consisted of works by Bach, MacDowell, Roger Quilter, Gilbert and Sullivan, a Negro Spiritual, the famed Battle Hymn of the Republic arranged by Roy Ringwald and encore. Mr. John Lynn provided organ accompaniment for one number and encore.

Sir Ernest revealed himself to be a very accomplished organist indeed, and possessing a near flawless technique. However, years of orchestral and choral work have placed their mark on this too-rarely heard organist which caused the Bach to suffer somewhat, but which proved a boon in the Franck and Widor numbers, height of expression and depth of feeling.

The choir is one of excellent calibre, and gave a performance which emphasized it. The teenage voices blended perfectly under the capable direction of Mr. Overholt. Their clear diction and profound tone mark this choir as a highly trained organization which could do justice to any program, as they did Saturday night.

Blue and White BAND

Rehearsals will be held on Thursday at 5 p.m. in the Drill Hall, and Saturday at 1.15 p.m. in the McGill Gym. Band will leave for McGill from the Union Station at 11 p.m., Friday.

Pop Quartet

At Hart House Theatre last Saturday the Solway String Quartet offered a programme in the nature of an experiment for a chamber group: a "Pop" concert. The informal remarks by Mr. Marcus Adeney, cellist, were appropriate and warmly welcomed by the receptive and pleasingly large audience.

The Quartet opened its performance with Schubert's Marche Militaire followed by the pleasantly contrasting Andante cantabile by Tschaikowsky. To this listener Boccherini's Minuet was the climax of the entire programme. The muted strings conveyed the 18th century atmosphere to perfection in a faultless interpretation with complete mastery over instruments and score. The remainder of the first half was devoted to Dvorak's American Quartet. This selection, the only complete example of the orthodox quartet form was played with great feeling and intensity. Especially notable was the Lento where the group's singing strings gave voice to the plaintive melody with awe-inspiring beauty.

The concluding half consisted mainly of contemporary works, with well-known names, such as Kern, Anderson and Kreisler, as well as composer-arrangers Agostini and Cable represented. Pochon's arrangement of "Drink to Me Only" was like an antique jewel in this modern setting. "Phantasy on Themes" arranged by Cable was an admirable anthology of Gershwin tunes. The viola score truly manifested the composer's depth of feeling. The highlight of this portion was "Jazz Pizzicato" which met with thunderous applause. This flight into Jazz idiom makes one wonder why this medium has been so long neglected by serious musical groups. Obviously musicians as well as audience enjoyed themselves and the group has definitely enlarged the circle of its friends.

Eros At Breakfast

The University Extension Players entertained Saturday night at the Library Theatre with "Eros at Breakfast", prize-winning play by Robertson Davies, an extremely interesting talk by Professor Underhill on Shaw the critic, and Shaw the politician, as well as violin solos by Harold Neal which, to quote from the play, engendered in us a heightened sensibility.

The play was termed a psychosomatic interlude. Spirited and delightful, it required comprehending direction and fast pace, but alas! lacked both; in fact, it reminded me of that memorable convent production of Romeo in which all love had been cut out for propriety's sake. Yet, let it be stressed that with a large percentage of ad-libbing and audible prompting the "show must go on" spirit prevailed.

The scene is the interior of Mr. P.S. (psyche and soma, soul and body) as the gathering place of the personalization of each of the organs involved in daily life. We are shown how Parmeno, envoy of the heart, gains the support of his fellow-members in the conquest of Aristophontes, the intellect.

Eddie started his job today!

THE MANAGER of the furniture factory in Eddie's town landed a big order. It meant he had to buy a lot of extra lumber, increase his payroll.

He lost no time in putting the whole thing up to the manager of his local bank. Together they worked out how much money he would need to take care of wages and other costs until he delivered the goods. Then, with the backing of his bank, he got to work on the order.

And that's where Eddie came in. He was put on the payroll—given his first chance to learn a trade. Right now he's on his way home to tell Mom and Dad how much he likes his new job.

Must Educate, Not Instruct, Says Morgan

"Our main job is education, not instruction," said Professor John S. Morgan, speaking of the Wednesday Lecture Series arranged by the Social Work Student Association and the faculty of the School of Social Work.

This series is to be opened today by Provost Seeley of Trinity College who will speak on "The University's Responsibility for the Social Philosophy of its Members".

Professor Morgan, advisor for the Students' Committee of the Student Association, explained the purpose of this series. "By the time students have made up their minds to train for the profession of Social Work, they also have become actually conscious that the university owes them something more than courses of instruction. In our profession, perhaps more than in some others, we must have a deep and abiding sense of values if we are to do a job of work.

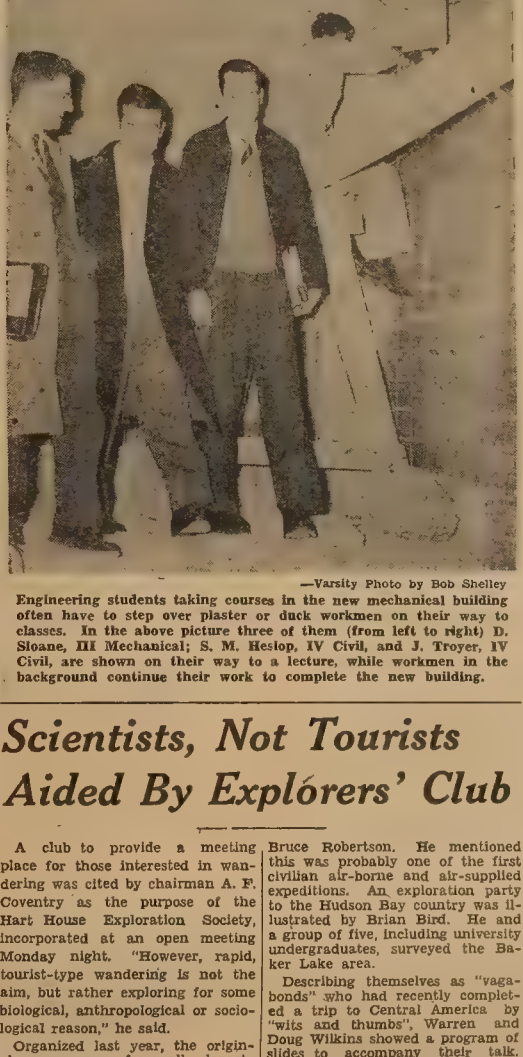
"Knowledge, the tricks of the trade—more solemnly described as 'professional techniques"—clinical experience under skilled supervision —yes, we need all of those but they serve us very poorly if we have no sense of our responsibility as human being, as citizens; some real sense of purpose. The university owes it to all of us, its members, students and faculty alike, to give us a chance to hear and to question some of the best minds and the best experience of our time. That's what we are going to try this year in our Wednesday lecture series at the school."

Professor Morgan said that to start this series, we could not do better than to look on our own campus to Provost Seeley. "He has already posed the question for us in his recent book, "The Function of the University". Let me quote from it: 'If Francis Bacon was right in saying that knowledge is power, then the acquisition of knowledge without the profession of values and ideals as a guide to its use is a gift diabolical in its possibilities.' "

National Flavor Will Be Feature Of Varsity Ball

Plans for the Varsity International Ball, to be held on November 5, were approved by the Hart House Board of Stewards recently with the provision that the Students Administrative Council sponsor the dance. At their meeting last Wednesday night the S.A.C. agreed to this on the condition that the clubs presenting the Ball accept financial responsibility.

Initiated by the International Students Organization, who held a similar dance last year, plans for this year were expanded to make this a University function co-operatively organized by the various national, social and cultural clubs on the campus. Walter Dalkow of the Ukrainian Club and Pamela Franklin of the Spanish Club were appointed as program directors, and plans for a gala floor show are under way. It was decided that authentic national dress be the order of the day with semi-formal as optional dress.



A budget was drawn up at the first committee meeting last month with Paul Takahashi of the I.S.O. and George Denbigh of the Russian Club in charge of finances. It was agreed that proceeds should go to the I.S.S. student relief campaign.

Ticket sales, captained by Mary Shumacher of the U. C.-Trinity Classics Club, will commence on October 21 in most of the Colleges and Faculties including Ajax. Executives of the I.S.S., I.R.C. and the World Federation Clubs will also have tickets available.

ANGLICAN STUDENTS

Anglican students, remember that the monthly Corporate Communion and Breakfast of the Canterbury Club is at 8 a.m. on Sunday, October 24th at St. Stephen's Church (College & Bellevue streets). The speaker at the Breakfast will be the Rev. William Bothwell of St. James Cathedral.

Engineering students taking courses in the new mechanical building often have to step over plaster or duck workmen on their way to classes. In the above picture three of them (from left to right) D. Sloane, III Mechanical; S. M. Heslop, IV Civil, and J. Troyer, IV Civil, are shown on their way to a lecture, while workmen in the background continue their work to complete the new building.

Scientists, Not Tourists Aided By Explorers' Club

A club to provide a meeting place for those interested in wandering was cited by chairman A. F. Coventry as the purpose of the Hart House Exploration Society, incorporated at an open meeting Monday night. "However, rapid, tourist-type wandering is not the aim, but rather exploring for some biological, anthropological or sociological reason," he said.

Organized last year, the original group came from all departments of the University. One of the first meetings was held jointly with the Arctic Institute of North America. This association was instrumental in helping members of the Exploration Society who journeyed North last summer.

The most important function of the Society is giving information to members who plan exploring. Fulfilling this, the club helped those in the field last summer by establishing contacts and helping them plan the trips.

During the meeting four members spoke of their summer trips. Professor K. B. Jackson "travelogued" his trip to Switzerland, showing color slides of London and Holland taken during the jaunt. An expedition to the Seward Glacier in Alaska was described by Alan Bruce Robertson. He mentioned this was probably one of the first civilian air-borne and air-supplied expeditions. An exploration party to the Hudson Bay country was illustrated by Brian Bird. He and a group of five, including university undergraduates, surveyed the Baker Lake area.

Describing themselves as "vagabonds" who had recently completed a trip to Central America by "wits and thumbs", Warren and Doug Wilkins showed a program of slides to accompany their talk. They even had one picture of Doug shaking hands with the President of Nicaragua.

The meeting was adjourned until next Monday when a new slate of officers will be elected.

Harvey Hay Elected To Provincial Group

Harvey Hay, IV. Pol. Sci., was elected to the 19-man provincial executive of the Ontario section of the CCF at a meeting of the Provincial Council last Sunday.

Hay, who is president of the U. of T. CCF Club and an active participant in Hart House debates, was elected to the Provincial Council of the CCF at last week's convention, held at the King Edward Hotel.

Duties of an executive member include regular attendance at its meetings, and execution of party policies as determined at the provincial convention. The executive manages the provincial section of the party between conventions.

Trinity Students To Chase Piglet At Annual Meet

Trinity students will hold their annual field meet on Thursday at 2.30 p. m. With the exception of the annual soph-frosh cake fight this is probably the most colorful Trinity event of the term.

The events range from straight athletic events to novelty features. Highlight of the afternoon will be the greasy-pig contest. At "P" hour a greased piglet will be set loose among the onlookers and the first to capture it will be awarded the grand prize of the day.

A chariot race between the various years will be another feature attraction. Men from each of the years will haul a chariot driven by a St. Hilda's girl.

The whole meet is conducted on the basis of inter-year competition and will include three legged races, tug-of-war contests, sack races, and a half-mile relay. In all cases the teams will be made up of both sexes.

There will be a tea dance in the Trinity buttery after the meet.

Training Program Tackles Problem Of Mental Health

President Sidney Smith announced today that the University has embarked on a $178,000 program to train mental health personnel. The project is being financed by the Federal Government and is being carried on in co-operation with the Ontario Government. "The University of Toronto training program constitutes a practical and resolute contribution toward combatting mental disorder and promoting mental health," Dr. Smith said.

The Federal Government has approved expenditure of $30,000,000 on health programs during the present fiscal year. Of the total, $4,000,000 is to be devoted immediately to mental health with subsequent yearly amounts incrementing to $7,000,000 a year. The Federal grants will become available through the Provincial Governments and $178,000 has been allocated to the University of Toronto for a one-year training and research program which will begin immediately. The University plans are based on the understanding that further sizeable grants will be available to keep the program in operation for several years at least.

Immediate Need

The Federal Department of Health set up by Order-in-Council an Advisory Committee on Mental Health made up of Provincial mental health authorities, and representatives of the University Departments of Psychiatry. The Advisory Committee in considering overall requirements in the mental health field recognized the immediate need for the training of personnel and the promotion of research. Without trained personnel and new approaches, the development of the new grants would be a vain long-term policy.

U.K. Scholarships Open To Veterans Beaver Club Gift

Beaver Club Scholarships of an annual value of not more than £500 and tenable at any University or College in Great Britain will be awarded for the first time in 1949, by the Trustees of the Beaver Club Trust. These scholarships are open to all veterans of the Second World War who served for at least one year in the Canadian Armed Forces or their sons.

The Beaver Club was established in London in the early days of the war to meet the needs of Canadian Servicemen in Great Britain. As a result of its operations which were generously supported at the outset and carried on largely by voluntary work, a substantial fund was created. It was to administer this fund that the Beaver Club Trust was created. The Trustees are the Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, P.C., C.H., and General H. D. G Crerar, CH., C.B, D.S.O.

In the choice of Beaver Club Scholars, emphasis will be on the humanities and social sciences. It is the aim of the Trustees to award Scholarships "only to those men who through their academic standing and general personal qualifications have shown real merit and who give promise of achieving genuine distinction in their chosen field of work." The purpose of the Scholarships is educational and not for research and it is expected that they will continue to be awarded for the next few years. The Trustees have announced that not more than ten Scholarships will be awarded in 1949 for the whole of Canada.

Candidates are required to submit an application to the Secretary of the Beaver Club Trust not later than December 1st, 1948. There will be no written examination, all selections being made on a basis of material submitted and personal interview by a Selection Committee chosen by and including the Trustees. The additional members are Dr. Sidney E. Smith, President of the University of Toronto, Dr. F. Cyril James, Principal of McGill University and Hon. D. R. Michener, General Secretary of the Rhodes Scholarships in Canada.

Application forms may be obtained in the registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

Orchestra Asks Strings, Horns For New Season

Violas, bassoons, basses, trombones, and a tuba or bass horn are needed before the University Symphony Orchestra, under its new conductor, Harold Neal, can get its program for the year under way.

Rehearsals for the concerts which the orchestra gives each year are held Wednesdays at 7.30 p.m. in Convocation Hall, and applications for positions in the orchestra may be made in person to the conductor at the beginning of each rehearsal. So far, much of the year's program has not been decided upon but Conductor Neal said last week he was anxious to perform Dvorak's 5th Symphony, "From the New World".

While many of the staff positions, such as those in the library, personnel and management sections, have been filled, applications for places in the orchestra are welcomed by the conductor.

Married Students' Contest Begins To Attract Entries

The SAC office is beginning to receive entries to the Apartment for Peggy contest. The contest is sponsored by 20th Century-Fox Films. It is open to all married student veterans enrolled at the University of Toronto.

All entry forms must be submitted to the Students Administrative Council Office before Friday, October 29. The entry must be addressed to the Apartment for Peggy contest and should contain the following information: Full details of military service, reasons for attending university, course, present living accomodation, plans on graduation and details of sacrifices entailed in pursuing the university course of choice.

The prize is a completely furnished apartment rent-free for two months. The furniture will be the permanent property of the winner. The value of the prize keeps growing, the latest addition being groceries valued at forty dollars.

Missing UBC Student Causes Wide Search

Vancouver, British Columbia, Oct. 19—(C. U. P.)—A province-wide search is being conducted in British Columbia for missing University of British Columbia student Michael McInerny.

When last heard from three weeks ago, he was planning to return to Vancouver from Kelowna by bus.

The only comment that the student made on leaving was that he was going back to Vancouver by bus so he could enjoy the scenery.

The Role of NFCUS

It is a natural and vital desire of students that there be a mutual understanding among the various undergraduates in universities across the country. From coast to coast the undergraduates of every province experience the same difficulties, triumphs, crises, and accomplishments. The needs of students on one campus are closely interwoven with the requirements of students at other colleges. Obviously there must be some type of organization which would tie the many activities of campus life across Canada into some uniform effort. Such an organization is the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

Founded in 1926 by a group of young undergraduates, the aims of the NFCUS were to lessen sectionalism in Canada—racially, geographically, and economically—and to emphasize the international responsibility of Canadian university students.

Although the organization's record has not kept pace with the original optimistic plans, it has made concrete achievements in the establishment of the Canadian University Press, arrangements for exchange scholarships, and decreased railway fares for students.

The international aspect of the organization's work was neglected for many years but since the war NFCUS has ventured to consider affiliation with other national student organizations.

There has been much dispute in NFCUS circles during the past two years over the possibility—and advisability—of affiliation with the International Union of Students, an allegedly communist-dominated student organization. The IUS, representing nearly two million students from sixty countries, held a council meeting in Paris last summer at which official observers of NFCUS discussed possible affiliation with IUS officials.

Grant Livingstone, president of the University of British Columbia Alma Mater Society, one of the Canadian observers, has just returned from Europe and is scheduled to be in Toronto shortly when he will address an open meeting of the undergraduate body and give his impressions of IUS.

It is important that students pay close attention to Livingstone's observations. Much misunderstanding and ambiguity has surrounded IUS-NFCUS discussion in the past and a little more light on the matter should be forthcoming in Livingstone's remarks.

ART — MUSIC and DRAMA

Lauren Harris Exhibition

"Paintings, 1910-1948" is the theme of an exhibition of Lauren Harris on view at the Art Gallery from October 16th to November 14th—an exhibit representing four decades of production by one of Canada's most outstanding artists and a member of the Group of Seven.

The attitude of mind which rebuilds materials taken from nature into the order of design is that adopted by Harris. This attitude invents; gives incentive to originality and individualism. Consciousness of design relationships is a normal part of all human life and many will find the satisfaction of that craving in the cravases of the Rockies.

But to gain enduring validity, a picture must have both design and meaningful reference to subject. Mr. Harris imparts the emotional quality or tone of that reference in his colors.

For instance, you can feel the iciness of the Arctic in the blues and greens he uses to depict that region.

Other subjects range from Toronto scenes to ones in Algoma, Lake Superior, besides which, are a number of abstractions. In the mountain paintings, this energetic artist has produced visual symphonies.

It is wonderful to think that the last canvas in a sequence of a retrospective show does not mark the end and that there will be still such paintings to be realized.

Forestry Blanks Meds 9-0

In a game that was completely free of penalties and which was described by Referee Alec Campbell as "the cleanest one I have ever handled," a powerful Forestry team rolled to a 9-0 victory against Jr. Meds in a Group III game yesterday afternoon on the back campus.

The game, which saw only two offsides, was featured by the signal calling, running and placement booting of little Syd Sheldon, Forestry quarterback. Sheldon kicked a last quarter placement from the twenty-five yard line which put the game away for the Woodsmen.

Phil Austin, hefty Forestry back scored the only touchdown in the second quarter when he carried the ball over from the four. Sheldon converted but both sides were offside. Sheldon again obliged and Forestry took a 6-0 half-time lead.

Using the precept that "the other team can't score when you have the ball," Forestry maintained its ground attack in the second half and registered their sixth and seventh first downs. Meds revived briefly and completed a long pass for their only first down of the afternoon.

Taking over on the Meds twenty, the Foresters tried two plunges which were held. Then Sheldon dropped back and hoisted a placement between the posts. Meds were unable to move the sticks in the last few minutes and the game ended 9-0, as Forestry chalked up win number one in their first appearance.

Roberts, Freeland and Dawson showed what little drive the junior medicos could muster but the tackling of the Red and Black left much to be desired. The Forestry line is big and powerful and it should be a factor in the Group championship.

Yesterday afternoon St. Mike's defeated Victoria Seconds team 3-0 in interfaculty soccer.

St. Mike's were the superior team and pressed hard most of the game with Andre Valere the master of the situation and the outstanding figure of the game. Skipper Vic Parnell had few worries and kept those balls swinging in from the right wing. Andre Valere scored once in the first half and again in the closing minutes of the game. Bill Dewey drove in a goal in the middle of the second half after a muddle by the defence. The Vic team had no outstanding players and never looked really dangerous with the safe hands of Tommy Kane, the St. Mike's goalie, between them and success.

Forestry Ties 1 to 1 With UC In Soccer

Yesterday afternoon Forestry and UC played a tied soccer match, 1-1.

Forestry, led by Al Beckwith, Intermediate captain, and Beverly, were unlucky when, in the middle of the second half Perry Rintoul scored to equalize out the goal scored by Heene for the Foresters in the opening minutes of play.

Mackenzie Trophy On Block In Sr. Track Meet Today

This afternoon Varsity Stadium, the scene of one of the most thrilling senior intercollegiate track meets since pre-war days, promises to be one of the most interesting places on the campus. McGill, Western, Queen's and Toronto will vie for the Tait Mackenzie Cup.

The meet opens with the 110 yard high hurdles contested by Bill LaRochelle, Olympic 400 metre hurdler and John Rhame. Sprints will be the unpredictables of the day with Toronto's best bet as Ken Mohun. Don MacFarlane is favoured against Gordon Haight from Queen's in the quarter and half mile events. Races, pole vaulting and broad jumping complete the afternoon events.

U.C., it's this way...

The big news for U.C. these days is "Follies" news. This show, which has such a wealth of tradition behind it, is making its comeback this year after having slipped down the ladder of prestige during the last few seasons.

The "Follies" that you will see in approximately three weeks has undergone a long-needed remodelling job at the capable hands of the methodical Harry Rasky and that little pepperpot and ex-Follies girl, Mary Ritchie. There has been a definite attempt by the producers and writers of the Follies to raise the standards of the production above those of a small-time type of burlesque.

To use a much-over-used word, this year's show has "class" — something that previously had been sadly lacking.

The chorus numbers, under the tireless direction of Hank Kaplan, are truly artistic productions with all the colour, imagery and aesthetic appeal worthy of University College.

Lest such a description frighten away you gentlemen who are interested in the more prosaic things of life, let me hasten to assure you that the young ladies of the chorus are as lovely to look at you barbarians could possibly wish.

Just to mention a few names . . . . Joy Winch — looking as fresh as lilacs on a spring morning; Pat Kerr — blonde and beautiful, the very alluring Diane Nesbitt, last year's Queen of Arts. These girls, and several dozen others, are doubly gifted for they do know something about the art of dancing and will be able to do more than just look pretty on the stage.

The natural talent and beauty of U.C. girls; the Ritchie-Rasky ideas, formulated while studying the best of Broadway musicals; the superb direction and choreography of Hank Kaplan and Joyce Pratt; the original and refreshing music of Susie Davidson and others; plus Herbie Vise's remarkable sets (which were remembered long after the rest of last year's "show" was forgotten) — all add up to some of the most spectacular, scintillating and superbly entertaining musical production numbers that ever have been enjoyed on this or any other campus.

We won't apologize for our adjectives. We are, to say the least, very, very impressed. You will be too, when you see the show.

Notes-of-interest and things-to-come departments . . . We hear that Fred Giles, well-known figure at U.C. Open Lit meetings, resigned his position on the U.C. parliamentary committee. It seems that Mr. Giles was rather agitated about the treatment accorded him at the drawn-out and hectic Open Lit meeting of last Thursday. Giles was slated to be Prime Minister of the U.C. Parliament. . . . Tonight sees all U.C. freshies undergo the initiation which formally accepts them as members of U.C. (Me, I accepted them weeks ago). . . . We are looking forward to the debut of our new cheerleaders, Misses Mary McNeice, Lillian Scott and a veteran of last year's corps, Jean Slack. They'll be out a-yellin' and a-cheerin' at the next game. . . . Dont forget to come to the first Red and White Night of the year to be held in the Women's Union, a week from tonight. No dates and no money required. Just come out for an evening of dancing, entertainment, refreshments — and anything else you can manage to get. . . . From Tom Sloan and Peg McKelvey, fourth year presidents, comes a reminder to graduating students that Torontonensis biography cards are available in Room 54, U.C. basement, and that these should be filled out and handed in at designated places as soon as possible.

Take care of yourself in Montreal this week-end and we'll see you here next week.

SPORTSWOMAN

St. Hilda's Freshies defeated the P.H.E. Freshies last night in the O.C.E. gym 12-8, in a fast rough game of basketball. Jane Rogers was the outstanding player of the game, scoring nine of the Saint's twelve points.

In the second game of the evening, Physico A beat the U.C. Juniors 22-19 in a hard-fought battle. All Physio's points were scored by Jean Cassar and Phyl Wilks. Jean's long shots were spectacular. As usual, Rosanna Kelly played an excellent game for the losers, and set up several plays which enabled Carol Dunn to chalk up eleven points for U.C.

Nurses defeated Meds by a score of 28-17. Both teams showed the need for more practice, but there were several outstanding players. Margo Masters took the top honors for the winning team with a total of 15 points, while Beth McCrae of Meds chalked up nine points.

St. Mike's A was downed by PHE II 9-8 in a fast but rough game. Both teams had ample tries at the basket, but neither could find it. Marg Doyle and Kay Catto were top scorers for PHE, making a total of five points between them. For St. Mike's Betty Fitzgerald shot the most points, while Nan Goetz was outstanding for her fast-moving game, setting up many of the plays.

Ajax Defeats Vic I In Ajax Soccer Opener

Highlighted by a close finish, the game between Ajax Jrs. and Vic. I held yesterday in Ajax, ended in a victory for the Jaxmen to the tune of 3 to 2.

Two goals by Friele Oer in the first half put the Jrs. well ahead. In the second half, Vic opened up with goals by Bill Mercer and Ian Linton. Dos Santos got the goal that finally copped the game for Ajax, but the hard fighting by Vic kept the game in doubt until the final whistle blew.

COLE SLAW

We want to add our voice of protest to the nation-wide outcry that is resisting the federal government's attempt to welcome four French traitors as citizens of Canada. The inference that these men were the victims of 'hasty' trials leaves us cold, as does the attempt to minimize their crime as one of 'minor-scale' collaboration. Up to this point, we were always of the opinion that any degree of collaboration constituted good and sufficient reason for permanent exclusion from this country. It is not difficult to recall a similar case in this city, without the odious taint of collaboration, which ended in quick deportation for an infringement of the same technicalities for which these present four have been officially forgiven. No pressure group, or humanitarian concern, was available then to prevent their return to the D.P. camps of Europe. Unlike one, Jean Bonnel, who heads the Montreal firm of Les Societies Jean Bonnel, we cannot regard these four traitors as the "heroes of France". It is a unique situation that allows him, a private citizen of Montreal, to openly brag that he harbours twenty of the same traitorous ilk without risking a clash with our scrupulous authorities. M. Bonnel has an explanation for his actions. "They are being hunted because they are good Christians and anti-Communists." We wonder if, in the view of M. Bonnel, they would be still the good Christians if they were anti-Fascist?

DEBATERS UPHOLD C.C.F. PLAN

SAC Budget Much Smaller, Slash Outlay

With the latest official release of registration figures quoted as 15,684, the revenue from SAC fees will be approximately $2,000.00 less than was estimated last March, when the budget was presented to the SAC.

The March budget figure estimated at $37,000 is now down to $35,000. This amount, coupled with the increase in printing cost of $8,000.00, brings the total to $10,000.00, stated J. C. Holton, SAC Finance Commission, yesterday.

To date, measures have been taken to effect a saving of an estimated $7,500.00. This was accomplished by reducing the size of The Varsity one day per week and by placing a charge of $2.00 on Torontonensis. In order to determine the best way of eliminating the remaining $2,500.00 deficit, proposed expenditures on the U of T. Symphony Orchestra, U of T Band; NFCUS, Debates, NCSV, and Radio, etc., are undergoing close scrutiny by the Finance Committee in conjunction with the Chairman of the various committees involved.

A revised budget will be presented to the next SAC meeting by Finance Commissioner J. C. Holton.

Campus Students Plan Excavation

The Black Creek prehistoric Indian village site near Weston will be the scene of intensive archaeological investigation this week-end, when two hundred students unearth relics hidden there for five centuries.

This is the third student investigation sponsored by the U. of T.; similar ones were carried out last year near Woodridge and Aurora.

On this trip students from Hamilton College, New York, will participate as observers, while two students from Smith College will obtain "down to earth" experience with the grapefruit knife and trowel.

Professor T. F. McIlwraith, head of the department of Anthropology and Mr. J. N. Emerson, lecturer in Anthropology, will direct the excavation, assisted by some thirty trained archeological supervisors.

Problems of transportation, food, equipment, sanitation, and photography are being handled by student volunteers, while the Royal Ontario Museum, a large Toronto department store, the Weston Business Men's Association and the City of Toronto, have been very generous in making funds and equipment available. However, the main cost of the expedition is met by student subscription.

Sabina, The Beauty Queen

Vic Bob Tradition Remains As Frosh and Sophs Clash

Old Bob Beare, former janitor at Victoria College, has been dead and buried for a long time. But the ceremony he used to initiate freshmen back in the days on the old Ontario Strand, has survived seventy-six years and shows no signs of falling into decline.

True to Bob tradition Tuesday's show got under way with the Frosh trying their best to outdo the Sophs in the loudness of their cheering sections. This part of the program disposed of, the celebration got down to the serious part of the night's work.

Poverty In Quebec Before Socialism Declares Senator

At the Hart House Debate held last night the C. C. F. program was upheld by a vote of 112 to 57. Liberal and Conservative members joined in a coalition against the C. C. F. upholding the resolution "Resolved that this House deplores and condemns the program adopted in the recent convention at Winnipeg by the C.C.F."

"The Province of Quebec supports free enterprise and will refuse to be absorbed against its will into a socialistic union", said Senator Gouin, the honorary visitor from Quebec.

Refuse Socialism

"It is unfair to impose upon Quebec a program of Socialism which would liquidate our provincial legislature," the Senator continued, pointing out that the Union National party in power in Quebec now was strongly supported, and would "refuse to accept collectivism in any form or shape; Quebec has fought and bled for its present form of freedom and would prefer poverty to a socialist experiment.

Unholy Alliance

M. M. Goldberg, Graduate Studies, speaking for the opposition on the Liberal-Conservative coalition, said: "I see before me what I consider to be an unholy alliance . . . the followers of Mr. King . . . and the followers of Mr. Drew. This alliance would condemn any platform since it combines the do-nothings with the do-anybodies."

CCF Destroys

The resolution was moved by D. C. Stanley, Victoria College, who claimed that the CCF program "destroys bricks while attempting to build them into a house." The CCF program "attempts to set one half of society against a second half . . . to set labor against capital". He said that the program "emphasizes standardization" and that if it were implemented everything would become "government model."

Fight Depression

W. M. Fram, U.C., speaking for the opposition said that "our capitalistic society is constantly plagued by economic depression". He argued that depression leads to dictatorship, and that the CCF program would combat depression and thus

Modern Thinking Mere 'Foolosophy' Says T. Hammond

The modern trend of thinking might well be called "Foolosophy", said Canon T. C. Hammond, as he coined this rather unique word in a lecture Tuesday afternoon. The talk was sponsored by the Varsity Christion Fellowship organization. Canon Hammond comes from Sydney, Australia, where he teaches philosophy.

Canon Hammond's speech comprised an assortment of perinent observations from Universities in America and Canada and several morsels of the wisdom of the great philosophers.

Modern Universities are difficult to understand said the Canon. "I met a girl in the States who received her B.S. for a course in Radio Technology. It is too bad, but with so much specialization students are getting out of touch with the classics and are turning away from the simple Gospel. He went on to say that he realizes college students know everything for when he was a student he knew everything too. Nevertheless the fact remains that simple religion and the culture and wisdom people received from studying the classical works of literature are taken for granted in college life today, while

Student Union

Co-ed "Hart House" Now Reality In Alberta

By HARRY RASKY

This is the second in a series of articles to better acquaint students with the proposed student union memorial at the University of Toronto.

No, a student union is not strictly Americanism. The University of Alberta has been working since 1920 on the idea and the result of its work is soon to become a reality. This summer construction was begun.

Are we next?

The Albertans have a very sound plan for building their citizenship centre. They are not attempting to chew off too much at the proverbial same time. They have divided the building scheme into three stages. They are starting on stage one and allowing plenty of room for expansion.

Sightseers please observe.

By the magic that is contained in words let's take a tour of the Alberta Union.

At the north we have a four door main entrance which leads into a lobby containing trophies, a newsstand and ticket-selling counter.

On your left is the mixed lounge. This is to be used for informal gatherings, musical evenings, small dances and receptions. Come across the lobby where you will find the modernly decorated offices of the student and alumni administration. This leads into (by moveable glass walls) the Building Director's and the President of the Students' Union's offices.

These prairie province planners gave thought to everything.

Down the hall is a lounge labelled "for men only". This is slightly less in area than the mixed lounge. A "quiet" section can be formed by means of a sliding panel wall.

Follow us as you now follow these words with your eyes. We are now back in the main lobby where we find stairs. We start from the bottom and work our way up. In the basement we discover a lobby bordered by a games room, for such sports as table tennis and billiards, and barber shop.

On the other side of the lower-floor lobby we find a combination snack bar and banquet room.

Co-eds Stop and Look

Up the stairs we go and land on floor two. Here we find the women's lounge which contains a fireplace and other articles that would make a long-loungeless group of co-eds happy indeed.

Radio Committee note well.

Next to the women's coat room is a radio broadcasting control room which adjoins a series of three conference rooms which can be enlarged by means of sliding walls to form one room.

Across the hall are the publications' workrooms and offices. This includes a set of rooms for the yearbook staff as well as for the campus journal. This is connected to a photographic workroom and darkroom.

The faculty rooms are a separate unit on the second floor and are accessible from the west side of the building. This includes dining space.

This ends the tour of stage one.

The second stage is to include a gymnasium and swimming pool. Stage three will follow with an auditorium.

What was once a dream of the students at the University of Alberta is now quickly becoming a reality. The student body, aided by the Advisory Board, university authorities, the alumni and other groups, will have reached its immediate goal. Stages two and three are still part of the nebulous future.

Remember The Fees Brief?

Practically every year issues arise on the campus which, for a while, are focal points for spirited controversy and hot debate. A great deal of enthusiasm is whipped up temporarily for some cause or other and then is gradually allowed to die — to be forgotten for a year or even longer.

The process is often a natural and even desirable one because some of the questions raised are found later to be unworthy of the furor they originally caused. Some die a natural death because later explanation proves them to be the result of misinformation. The undesirable feature of the process—and the one which concerns us here—is the fact that many of the legitimate grievances are often lost in the welter of less justified onès. The latest one that has come to an inglorious end — and seems doomed to remain there unless action is taken — is the Students' Administrative Council's Fees Brief.

The brief was drawn up by a special SAC committee during the fall of 1947 after the protest rally held on the steps of the Ontario Legislature. The SAC, quite properly exercising its function as the responsible student governing body, approached the University authorities to discuss the question of increased tuition fees. It was advised to approach the matter through the proper channels, namely, by drawing up a brief for submission to the Board of Governors.

This was done and on January 26th of last year, the brief, based on the Edwin C. Guillet brief to the Royal Commission on Education, and on statistics derived from the Harvard Commission on Education, was submitted to the president of the University. The brief called for increased government grants and reduction of current fee levels below the 1946 level. The SAC was promptly advised that the item would be placed on the agenda of an early meeting of the Board of Governors.

Nine months have passed and still there has been no further word on the brief — neither from the Board of Governors nor from the SAC.

No effort has been made during that time to follow up the matter. No one knows what disposition has been made of the brief.

Common courtesy alone would suggest a reply from the Board of Governors. Regardless of the merits of the case—even if the brief is rejected — the SAC should be informed. It is not unreasonable to expect a reply within nine months of the brief's submission. As it stands, it would seem that the official student governing body is being completely ignored.

Nor can the SAC sit back complacently. Last year's Council submitted the brief and then promptly forgot about it. It made no attempt, before it adjourned last March, to pursue the question.

This year's Council should not leave itself open to the same criticism. At its next meeting the SAC would be well advised to raise the point again.

Nine months is a long time.

Says British Make Success Of Socialism

Mr. L. J. Clark, speaking to the Graduate Business Club yesterday on "Industry and Government Control", declared that Americans and Canadians made a mistake in thinking the English a conservative people. He held on the contrary, they were "the most revolutionary people in the world". This characteristic played a prominent part in their capacity to adapt themselves to conditions created by the war.

The speaker, himself a graduate of the University of Birmingham, told his listeners that England's business men had done an excellent job in spite of austerity. He traced the development of business and industry in recent years through the eyes of the trade association and spoke of the democratic processes which had been worked out by the association under the pressure of war with its resultant restrictions and rationing.

Private enterprise before the war was "really private" and any measure of state control was "unthinkable". Intercourse between business enterprises was very rare and the role of the trade association was chiefly the combating of trade union pressure. With the onset of war, however, the picture changed abruptly. After grabbing the economy "by the scruff of the neck" the government turned to the trade association for help in carrying out its program. In the compulsory amalgamation of many enterprises which followed, intercourse between business enterprises increased and the role of the trade association became vital. The speaker said that the arrangement worked "surprisingly" well.

With the end of the war, business men hoped that controls would be removed, or at least eased, but such had not been the case, with the result that business men have now become "used to them". The trade association has come into a new sense of its social responsibility and is now concerned with the promotion of a healthy foreign trade and seeing that the consumer gets a "square deal".

Clark said the English people are travelling down the "middle of the road" and hope to strike a balance between a too-rigid state control and an irresponsible private enterprise.

Varied Works Planned By New UC Music Club

The Music Club is a new organization at University College. It is composed of three sections: The Singers, the Record Hour, and the Operetta. The first group has already made plans for the presentation of a Christmas Musicale. This year, the Club is planning to stage a brand new operetta. Actors, as well as singers, are needed for this work, which has never before been presented in Canada.

All those who are interested in the Music Club, and its activities are asked to attend a meeting in Room 13, Friday, at 1 o'clock.

Students Improve French With New Voice-Recorder

By GORD. MACDONALD

The other day a roving Varsity reporter opened a door in the basement of University College and found himself suddenly transplanted from a comparatively uninteresting hallway into a radio studio —or so it appeared. The walls were covered with the familiar perforated soundproofing material. Along one side of the room expensive looking electrical equipment was lined up on a table. Above, a small red light flickered. In a corner of the room a student was earnestly uttering intelligible syllables into a microphone. As he spoke, an electrical needle slowly etched his words upon a revolving plastic disc.

You will find such a scene as the above if you visit the "phonetics lab" of the U.C. French department. Using a technique developed during the war for instructing members of the armed services, the phonetics lab represents a modern miracle in the teaching of languages. Since last December a lab assistant has been individually recording the pronunciation of all students taking French. These recordings are kept on file, and will be used as a check on the student's progress, not only for a given academic term, but throughout his entire undergraduate career.

Each recording is carefully analysed for faulty pronounciation, intonation, and diction, in private sessions with the instructor. The student is made aware of his mistakes by actually hearing them played back to him. The work of correction is immensely speeded up by this method, since one playback may do more to help the student realize his mispronunciation than any number of corrections given by the instructor without the use of a machine.

"Lab Work", of course, presupposes, beyond mere correction of pronunciation, much practice in intonation and eventually work in diction, with the help of diction recordings made by the best French actors and phoneticians.

The laboratory has three different machines with which to implement its work. A Presto recorder, similar to that used in broadcasting stations, makes recordings for special purposes on standard size acetate discs. The department has used this machine to record the voices of distinguished visitors from France such as Prof. Jasinshi and the Abbe Maheux. The Presto machine also doubles as a high fidelity phonograph for playing selections from the French department's valuable record collection.

The second machine is the Sound Scriber, a compact apparatus used for making permanent records of the student's pronunciation. A half-hour recording can be put on the seven-inch paper thin vinylite discs and over 100 discs can be stored in one inch of file space.

The Magnetone, a modern wire recorder, records for one minute on a perpetual wire tape, playing back automatically at the end of the minute and repeating until a new recording is made. This device has proved invaluable for the immediate correction of errors.

The machines are equipped with converters for 25 cycle, but normally are operated on 60 cycle alternating current supplied by a special generator across the hall from the lab. Hydro cuts, therefore, do not interfere with the operation of the equipment.

While it is too early to determine, from a statistical viewpoint, the degree of assistance these machines offer the student, Prof. Joliat, who is in charge of the lab, reports that the honour of our students who have consistently used the facilities provided have made remarkable progress in their French pronunciation and intonation.

Ceremony Held Last Night To Initiate U.C. Freshies

In a solemn candlelight ceremony at the Women's Union last night the U.C. seniors initiated the class of 5T2 to the college.

Mary Innes, president of the Women's Undergraduate Association, challenged the Freshies to uphold the traditions of their college, and maintain the freedom and progress entrusted to them to lead University College forward.

Proudly the seniors "passed the torch" which had been handed down by their predecessors and the first year students received their college colors. As "The Alma Mater" was sung in the background the freshies added their names to the honor roll and became part of University College.

Earlier in the evening in the Union Theatre the Freshies entertained their seniors with many skits. A red and white chorus line sang their desire for taxi service between classes, breakfast in bed, a dance every night, and at last, a diamond ring with their diploma.

The long line-ups on the first day when the mercenary souls at the end of them, demanded all our money, were lamented, Cleopatra made an unexpected and dramatic entrance into the sleepwalking scene of "Macbeth", Cinderella met her prince at the Fairy Ball, and Bess, the landlord's daughter, became Boris the cauliflower son.

Present Artists Need Experience Decide Debaters

At the St. Hilda's Debating Society yesterday the resolution "modern artists live in an Ivory Tower" was defeated by a 21 to 10 vote from the house. The judges, however, gave the decision to the government.

Elizabeth Loft and Elspeth Lowden attacked the intense individuality of modern art. "Do blue balloons and a tadpole signify Spiritual Ecstasy' to you?" asked Miss Lowden. They felt art should be universal. But the layman is incapable of understanding the abstractions of modern art, hence art has no impact on civilization.

Diana Fishleigh and Landon McKenzie spoke for the opposition. They said artists must experience the world before they can portray it in art. Whiteman's jazz and Sandburg's "Chicago" show such experience. Miss McKenzie ended on a lighter note by pointing out the artist cannot afford to live in an ivory tower.

Search For Truth Focus Of Address By Dr. R. K. Seeley

"A university education is a combination of two kinds of knowledge — knowledge how and knowledge why, and it is dangerous to limit it to knowledge how," said Dr. R. S. K. Seeley, provost of Trinity College in an address to the School of Social Work yesterday afternoon. He stated that knowledge why, or a knowledge of ends, is essential if we are to understand the relation of our acts to a good society.

Speaking on the subject, "The University's Responsibility for the Social Philosophy of its Members", Provost Seeley emphasized the need for the development of a moral consciousness in its students, in addition to the acquiring of knowledge and skills. Dr. Seeley came to Canada from England in 1938, and became provost of Trinity in 1945. He has written a book entitled "The Function of a University", and has a wide background of university work for his study of the subject.

Evaluation of Facts

Provost Seeley discouraged the mere acquisition of facts without an effort to set a value on them. "Knowledge for utilitarian ends alone is divorced from responsibility", he said. As an example of a study which must be accompanied by an understanding of social and moral issues, he pointed to modern scientific research. Another such study is that of the use of words and ideas.

Because of the comparative security from outside pressures to be found there, a university is the ideal place for the search for truth, Provost Seeley stated. A university, he said, is a "microcosm within the macrocosm of society", and it is especially well suited to fit students to live in the larger world. Among its qualifications for this role are: impartiality and the ability to discriminate between truth and falsehood; integrity in a world where everyone has an axe to grind; moral courage, and a sense of perspective. Dr. Seeley stressed the need for co-operation between all members of the university, both students and teachers.

Broad Education Urged

Dr. H. Cassidy, Director of the School of Social Work, speaking on Tuesday night, urged members of the Social Work Club to obtain "a training in which vocational education goes hand in hand with a liberal education" as a preparation for graduate study in the school.

The importance of professional studies, such as law and medicine, in medieval universities was used by Dr. Cassidy as an argument in support of the inclusion in modern university arts courses of options that might prepare an undergraduate to earn a living.

Dr. Cassidy spoke of employment openings for professional social workers in several departments of federal, provincial, and municipal governments, and in various private social agencies. He described his recent visit to Ottawa, where he found a need for trained personnel capable of promotion to direct the local offices of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. He said that the federal government had made a policy of hiring only trained social workers since 1940 or 1941.

Student Opinion Sought By ISS In Current Roll

"What is your opinion on the subject of student relief?" That will be the subject of a poll to be conducted by the Toronto ISS Committee next Tuesday from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m.. At a meeting Wednesday afternoon, the ISS Executive decided on this method of interesting Toronto students in this year's program and at the same time find out the student's opinion on the subject. The poll will consist of three or four simple questions on the type of relief and where to send it.

The poll will also stir up interest in the coming open meeting of the ISS to be held next Wednesday. It is intended at this meeting to discuss issues which are on the agenda of the forthcoming Iss National Conference.

Increased Costs Effect Year Book, To Set Precedent

For the first time in the history of the Torontonensis Year Book, graduating students will have to pay for their copies this year.

In former years the fees paid by a student to the SAC during his term at the University were sufficient to cover the cost of all the SAC services to which every student is entitled. Last year, 3,000 copies of Torontonensis were given out to graduating students. The cost was easily met because of the peak enrolment and the consequent peak SAC revenue from students' fees. But this year with a large graduating class and a smaller enrolment plus an increase of 30% in production costs all along the line, the SAC is wrestling with a deficit of $10 000 00. Consequently the Torontonensis budget will be cut.

"Torontonensis will increase its revenues by soliciting more advertising; cutting down incidental expenses; pushing the sale of subscriptions to undergraduates, at $6.00 a copy, and selling the book to graduating students at $2 00 a copy," John Sullivan, Editor of the year book said.

Every Institution Represented

In an attempt to achieve a standard worthy of the book's new status as an article of merchandise Editor Sullivan intends to make this year's edition a "Yearbook in the fullest sense of the word, in short almost every institution on the campus will be represented in Torontonensis."

"Faculty representatives to Torontonensis are now accepting money and orders for subscriptions to the new issue coming out in early spring," said Sullivan yesterday. "Clubs and organizations wanting to order a copy for their libraries can do so at the Hart House SAC office. Individual students should order through their faculty's Torontonensis representatives. The deadline for subscription is Nov. 30th. Graduating students are under no obligation to buy their copy.

"Clubs and organizations that wish to be represented in the 1949 Torontonensis," added Sullivan, "must sign for their space at the Hart House SAC office before Nov. 15th. The price remains at $15 a page."

Research Fellowships Offered to Canadians

Research Fellowships of $1,500 00 each will be awarded in 1949 by the Royal Society to Canadians who have done advanced work in any branch of science or literature.

To be eligible for one of these awards, the candidate—except in very special cases, should have obtained the degree of Doctor of Philosophy or its equivalent.

Copies of regulations and forms of application may be obtained from F. J. Alcock, Secretary, Fellowships Board, Royal Society of Canada, National Research Building, Ottawa. Applications and all supporting papers must be in the hands of the Secretary not later than February 1st, 1949.

ISS Seminar

Intellectual Vacuum In Germany . . . .

By PATRICK DANIEL

(This is the second in a series of articles by Varsity students who attended the International Summer Seminar in Germany during the past summer. Pat Daniel is a fourth year student in Sociology at University College.)

Our home for six weeks was a 17th Century castle in Northern Germany. Here the sons of the Kaiser had lived and studied, here Hitler had trained the young leaders of the Nazi Youth movement. Now 130 European and Canadian students met in an attempt to understand each other better. Mr. Marcus Long, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Toronto, opened the seminar with these words, "Beyond the differences of religion, nationality and politics, we are united here in the commonwealth of the mind which knows no barriers."

The German students who came to the seminar arrived with confused ideas as to its purpose and meaning. Suspicious at first, they spoke with caution and answered questions with care. Several days were needed to break down their barrier of reserve and formality, but the open friendliness of the Canadians soon convinced them of our sincere desire to understand. Free and frank discussion, so long unknown in Germany, helped them gain confidence in us and in themselves. It is hard to realize what the German students must have felt; their situation is so different from ours. For more than ten years their knowledge of the rest of the world had been distorted. Ideas and ideals had been molded through that time to fit a political pattern. With the end of the war came disillusionment; but despite the entrance of the occupation forces Germany has remained largely cut off from the rest of the world. The "intellectual vacuum" still exists, and German thinking has tended to stagnation in a pool of recriminations and self-pity. Only by some understanding of this unhealthy mental background in Germany can the significance of visitors from outside be appreciated. The Canadians, with their optimism, were like a breath of fresh air to young men and women who see very little hope for the future.

Had the Canadians and Germans been alone at the seminar, the Canadian students might well have become lost in a wave of sympathy for the German students. But through the seminar other European students acted as a balance for the perspective of both Germans and Canadians. Countries like Holland and Norway still harbour hatred for the onetime German occupation armies. Why did students come to Germany from these lands? Because the more enlightened people from these countries realized that Germany must recover—economically and spiritually—if Europe is to become healthy again. They realize too that they cannot live beside Germany in hate, but that they must build for the future on a new basis. The seminar helped to re-open intellectual contacts between Germany and other Western European countries.

Students from these countries helped to widen the focus of seminar discussions. Because we were living in Germany the natural tendency was to talk of Germany and its problems alone. It was valuable for everyone to try to see Germany as part of the European whole.

Lectures and discussions were not confined to economic and political problems, but covered a wide range of subjects. A German professor from the London School of Economics talked on German Literature at the beginning of the 20th Century. Dr. Whitmore from the University of Manitoba gave us in simple terms the scientific background for the development of atomic energy. An outstanding series of lectures was given by Dr. McRae, of the Department of Philosophy in the University of Toronto. Lecturing on John Stuart Mill's "Essay on Liberty" he presented in clear terms the British democratic viewpoint. The seminar played a part in the gigantic task of German "re-education."

After the first nervousness at speaking English was overcome, European students joined in the afternoon discussions with vigour. Discussions ran the gamut from the Marshall Plan to Tolstoy's theory of art. And after the formal program for the day was finished talk continued as we walked together the picturesque streets of the village, or through the woods to the swimming beach. For six short weeks the German students were taken from their daily struggle, and given food and pleasant surroundings. Free from worry for a short time they could read in peace in the library filled with books from Canada; or join in the singing led by a young German refugee.

The greatest value of the seminar lay in the friendships formed. When someone talks of the French we will not think of something indefinite, but of our friend Xavier, whose jokes seemed to transcend all national barriers. When someone talks of Germany we will no longer think of an abstraction, but caught a glimpse of the wealth of of friends we know well. We have the German cultural heritage, as well as the poverty of their land.

The Varsity Story

Morley Callaghan's new novel, The Varsity Story (Macmillan's: $2.50) is an attempt to examine the real character of the University of Toronto. To carry out this attempt, Mr. Callaghan invents a Hart House warden, Arthur Tyndall, and investigates this fictitious character's relationships with some staff members of the various colleges and with a few students. The central figures of the book are imaginary, but the background against which they move is the University district. This backdrop, bounded by Bloor and College, St. George and Bay streets, is extremely well portrayed. The changing characteristics of the campus in the seasons of autumn, winter, and spring are convincingly realized. It is with a touch of pleasure and also of nostalgia that we read the descriptions of familiar landscapes and familiar buildings. Mr. Callaghan has certainly caught the external atmosphere of the University grounds.

But this picture of our University is an idealized, romantic conception. There is a blanket of slow-moving casualness, almost of languor, cast over the whole scene. The characters move in a splendid world, the responsibilities of which are dismissed in a few curt words. To an outsider, and also to one looking backwards to his youth, the gracefulness and the charm of University life are the things which stand out. To those of us who are still struggling towards our degrees, the long grind of study and the pressure of time are the hard facts which are uppermost in our minds. It may be that the great influx of veterans into the University has changed the casual atmosphere of Mr. Callaghan's day into one of urgency and seriousness. More probably it may be that Time has removed for Mr. Callaghan the mental blocks that operate in our minds, the senses of frustration which prevent us from having such an idealized conception of University life as is found in The Varsity Story.

Arthur Tyndall's quest, his search for a "way of life" in the University which distinguishes its members from other human beings, drives the reader through the story to the end of the book. At times it is almost like reading a detective novel: the result of the search takes on the character of a solution to a puzzle. Because of this quality, it would be unfair to reveal Tyndall's and incidentally Mr. Callaghan's conclusions. The distinctive features of the various colleges, and their relationships together in a federated University, are well brought out in this novel. It would be difficult to argue with Mr. Callaghan's conclusions as to how the federated aspect of the University affects its essential character. We could wish, however, that the author had dealt more with the specific and less with the general, a treatment which would have replaced the rather nebulous atmosphere of the story with a more concrete one.

Typographically, The Varsity Story is a well laid out book, and the make-up is excellent. Only rarely does an illustrator catch the tone of a book and carry it over into his illustrations. Eric Aldwinckle has managed to do just this, so that the harmony between text and illustration is nearly perfect.

U OF T WINS MACKENZIE TROPHY

Rhame, Doull, Farlinger Star As Varsity Collects 73 Points

By JACK MILNE

A strong University of Toronto track team captured top honours and the Mackenzie Trophy in the forty-first annual Senior Intercollegiate track meet at Varsity Stadium yesterday. Toronto's total of 73 points was good enough to defeat the runner-up, McGill, by 20 points; Western was third with 23 and Queen's trailed the field with a meagre 16.

The cold weather, however adverse to good track conditions, did not prevent such stars as Johnny Rhame, George Doull and Bill Farlinger from leading a fighting Varsity outfit to its second victory in as many years. Every race was closely contested and fought to the tape.

Upsets In Sprints

The two middle distance races—the 440 and 880—were perhaps the closest of all. In the 440, Kofmel, the U. of T. quarter-mile star, just failed to nip Taylor of McGill at the wire. Gord Haight of Queen's ran a masterful half mile but in the last 200 yards it took all he had to withstand a tremendous last-second drive by George Speers, Toronto's crack half-miler.

In the sprints, two minor upsets occurred when Bob Peirce, Western's ace freshman runner, won the 100-yard dash running away, with the good time of 10.1.

Rhame, Larochelle Split

A withering stretch drive by Sam Neill of Toronto gained him a close verdict over the favorite, Munroe of McGill, in the 220-yard dash. As was expected, Rhame, U. of T. hurdler, and Larochelle, Western's ace timber-topper, split the hurdles with Rhame winning the 120-yard high hurdles and Larochelle, the 220-yard high hurdles.

Little George Doull, the favourite of the crowd, won very impressively both the one-mile and three-mile events for Varsity.

Blair of McGill broke the only record of the day when he soared over the bar in the high jump at the height of 6 feet and ⅝ inches beating the old record by ⅜ths of an inch.

Hec Phillips Honoured

A more serious note was added to the afternoon's proceedings when a minute's silence was held in deep respect to the late Hec Phillips who just recently passed away after having coached Varsity track and harrier teams to many victories in the past years.

His absence was deeply felt by every member of Toronto's team but they all agreed that the new coach, Hal Brown, an ex-Varsity track star himself and one-time pupil of Hec Phillips, filled his shoes very ably in coaching them to this year's championship. With the senior championship tucked away, the intermediates travel to Hamilton next Wednesday for the finals in their division.

Schoolmen Defeated By UC-PHE

UC-PHE defeated senior SPS in a somewhat one-sided game yesterday by the score of 7-1. The boys from UC-PHE racked up a total of 13 first downs to only one for SPS. Skule tried seven passes, all unsuccessful. UC-PHE made four passes, all good for large gains, out of the nine they tried. UC made 180 while SPS made only 37.

Joe Shapiro played a good game for the red and white boys, plunging for large gains three or four times. Bill Korz, a newcomer to the UC team, picked up some solid yardage with his hefty plunging. The Skulemen tried hard, but the holes were not there. Only the exceptionally good kicking of Trist and the tackling of Vann held the score down to a low figure. Trist kicked 55 yards for SPS's only point. Hank Henshall threw a 15-yard pass to Mastronardi for UC's first and only major score. The convert was blocked by some good rushing by the SPS line.

In the second half UC held off the Skulemen who were helped by long penalties for roughing. Bill Korz and Hank Henshall did some good plunging to bring the ball within scoring distance for UC, but penalties brought them back. After a 22-yard run on an intercepted pass, UC's Joe Shapiro kicked a single to end the scoring — his second of the game.

From then on Skule fought hard, but the UC line was too much for them, and when their passes failed to click, they didn't get far.

The game was played hard, and was not marred by many fumbles, each team bobbling once. Only about eight penalties were meted out, mostly to UC. But the red and white boys deserved their win over the highly touted Skule team, and showed they will be in there when playoff time rolls around.

Blues and McGill Clash in Rugger

Tomorrow at 1 p.m. sharp the Varsity and McGill Senior English Rugby squads clash. This is THE fight of the year. The Varsity team has been shaping up under the able hand of Jack Gibbs who is well known out B.C. way as a top-notch player and coach, and is eager to defend the Inter-collegiate crown won last year. Many of last year's men are again playing along with Don Glen and his ex-Ajax boys plus many additions from all parts of the globe.

English Rugby or Rugger is played in many American Universities as well as on the east and west coasts of Canada. American Football originated from this lively game.

A fast moving game, rugger features no substitution, time out, protective equipment or forward pass. However lateral passing and kicking are allowed. A Try or touchdown scores three and converts to five.

Knox Volleyball A's Defeat Wycliffe

Tuesday evening Knox Volleyball "A"s defeated a Wycliffe aggregation two games out of three. In the opening minutes of the game competition was keen as the theologians warmed up but towards the end of the three games the Wycliffe squad weakened under the sustained attack of the Knox team. In the second game Wycliffe were briefly successful and won by quite a margin.

Coles was a particular standout in the games, taking advantage of the fast plays around the net. Bill Muchan's serving garnered a goodly number of points for Knox while George Hopton excelled in one handed set ups over the net.

the student takes up specialist training immediately. All this is "Foolosophy'" said the Canon.

Canon Hammond then spoke on some thoughts of philosophy, bringing in such great men as Plato, Aristotle, Descartes, Hume, Berkeley, John Locke and Bertrand Russell.

Canon Hammond concluded his talk by pointing out the laxity of moral purpose throughout the highly civilized countries of today.

Wycliffe Win 1-0 In Soccer Contest

The front campus was the scene of further intramural soccer yesterday afternoon when Wycliffe beat Trinity II by a score of 3-1.

The game started with a fairly even give-and-take, Wycliffe showing themselves to be the better team although the score at half-time was 1-0 after Trinity's right-wing goal in the closing minutes of the half. The Wycliffe team was in no way dispirited however, and John Leach soon evened the score. In the second half Wycliffe's second goal was nodded in by Charles Cheesman early in the second half. Wycliffe refused to leave matters as they stood and succeeded in scoring a third goal.

Now On Now Off Boxla Games Postponed

The Interfaculty lacrosse league, with a tentative opening date for Monday next, has been postponed once again. At present, Mac McCutcheon, Interfaculty sports boss, hopes that the schedule will get started later in the week.

The whole trouble arises out of the lack of helmets necessary for the popular indoor game. As a piece of protective equipment, helmets must be worn by each player. The difficulty now is that practically all of last year's headgear is completely worn out, and, because of the existing austerity regulations between Canada and the United States, new helmets cannot be imported from south of the border.

This leaves it up to McCutcheon to improvise a new set of helmets from what is available from last year's skull-guards. If Mac comes up with a suitable sample, then new rugby helmets will be purchased and the face-masks still on the '47 helmets will be attached to hem.

But, at any rate, the league should go on as scheduled within about a week's time. Any further setbacks concerning the helmet situation will push it back just that much further.

"And if it's necessary we'll even have the play-offs after Christmas," quoth Mac.

Jottings and Bravos

Enthusiasm—that's what we need more of.

We can learn a lot from the Meds women.

Every year they turn out basketball, softball, hockey, volleyball tennis and badminton teams. Imagine what that means when you have lectures and labs from nine to five almost every day and from nine to one on Saturday. In order to play softball at lunch hour the Meds gals have to dash up to Trinity field from College St. and then get back for a two o'clock lab. If they're late for this lab they are locked out.

Last year their softball team was forced to practice in Queen's Park but despite this practice they trailed their league. This year, however, they have won two straight games—14-1 and 17-2. Here's to you Meds. Keep it up.

St. Hilda's also deserve a pat on the back for the way they have turned out to softball. Although their college is very small, they have three teams entered in the league. Compare this to UC, the largest college on the campus, who have only one team.

What if the Saints don't win every game? They have fun and fresh air, and the biggest male rooting section of all the colleges and faculties on the campus.

The basketball games started on Monday night and what a start! In the first game, a senior game at that, the score was 4-2 at half-time. There's nothing wrong about that but all of these points were scored by free-throws, and if you remember free-throws are given for fouls. However, most teams have only had two or three practices so we'll hope that with more practice the players will learn to shoot field goals and to keep the play clean.

Talking of basketball, there'll be a coaching session for the refs at 11.15 Saturday at MES.

Here's something of interest to shuttlecock fiends.

Again this year, women undergrads will be able to play badminton at St. Paul's Anglican Church on Bloor Street, on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. If you play badminton, take advantage of this opportunity and be sure to sign the book when you play. The SAC are renting the courts at an increased rate and if no-one signs the book to show that they are playing or if few people play, chances are we won't have the courts in coming years.

Intermeds. To Meet McMaster

Brown, Bark's Blues are determined to atone for their recent defeat at the hands of the Aggies when they meet the McMaster Maroons tonight in Hamilton. The Intermediates have decided that they have suffered their one and only defeat for the season, and every member of the team will be fighting to back up that decision.

Although Brewer is still sidelined with a badly cut hand, the rest of the team is free from any serious injuries. The only possible change in lineup from last Saturday's game will be Sivell who might be suffering from a cracked rib. The Blues' coach reports that Brewer will be back in action next week.

It might prove an interesting sidelight to note that Bernie Taylor, now assistant coach at McMaster, was formerly the coach of the Victoria College football team. No hard feelings intended of course, but we hope his success at Vic is not duplicated in his new position.

The game will be played under lights in the stadium at Hamilton. A high kick up against the lights always poses a ticklish problem for the receiver. However, the experience which most of the Blues have had in night games and practices should stand them in good stead tonight.

Last week-end proved rather disastrous to Varsity as far as sports were concerned, but the Intermediate Blues are willing to do their share to make this coming week-end a more favourable one.

Varsity will dress the following players for the game: Scott, Roberts, Brown, Hyde, Forge, Kennedy, Davidson, Davis, Russell, Garside, McFadden, Kelly, Sinclair, Kilpatrick, Errington, Fisher, Sivell, Graham, Birkenshaw, Longmore, Howson, Stevenson, Ecclestone, Lawson.

SPORTSWOMAN

Softball

UC have revived somewhat since their previous defeat by PHE. I, 21-0, but went down before the Fizz Edders, 9-1 yesterday. They held PHE I to two runs in the first two innings but by the third inning, PHE were warmed up and romped around the bases. Joan Summerville and then Gwen Smith, PHE's competent catcher, hit consecutive homers.

Joan MacGregor, UC pitcher, deserves the credit for holding PHE to just three hits in the first two innings. Although she allowed Gerry Hutchison, the first batter up, a home run, she struck out the next three Fizz Edders. Her teammate, Shirley Specq, was steady and sure at first, and hit a homer to score UC's loan run.

The PHE team played well as a unit, with tight fielding and accurate throwing.

St. Hilda's I really took a beating yesterday when PHE II trounced them 16-4. Alice Jameson, PHE hit the only homer of the game in the first inning, bringing in two other runs. Joan Stirling, the Saint's top pitcher, got the only run in the first for St. Hilda's.

Fizz Ed really showed batting strength in the second with the whole team crossing home plate once. Donna Haley's great fielding put an end to it when she picked up three grounders in a row and got them over to first in a hurry. Donna was outstanding for her line drives and good stops.

The Meds-PHE III game was not completed and will have to be replayed.

CORRECTION

The article on the Varsity International Ball should read, dress options for this dance should be read to include semi-formal and informal wear.

People who insist that music must provide a deep intellectual struggle in order to be classed as good music, are, we suppose, amongst the most prominent of our pseudo-intellectual snobs. These are the people without heart or musical soul who, in their search for the coldly intellectual, will never respond to the passionate emotional message that almost invariably lies at the very core of great music. They are too busy, in their supercilious way, searching for the story, or calculating the mathematical precision, to ever catch the true meaning of what they hear. To these people in general, and to two brothers we know, in particular, we dedicate this little verse:

The mystic critic
Who claims he can see

First learned it by rote

The first of two acts showed the plight of new arrival "Fearless Freddie Freshman", as played by Walt Buleychuck. Freddie made his initial appearance at a freshman tea, where he absorbed words of wisdom from the president and other dignitaries. As the consequences of this caught up with him he made off for the place "right next to the Book Bureau." These directions led him to the Victoria College Union Office, where he ran afoul of various disreputable members of the VCU, including the autocratic Czar of the Union, President Keith Davey.

At intermission, Professor Frye of Victoria presented the Bob cane to Doug Maxwell, Director of this year's Bob Committee. The Bob quartette then appeared. The four singers, Paul Dilks, Don Levett, Ed Campbell and Sid Fox, provided a short musical interlude.

The second act followed the life of Dr. Walter Brown from babyhood to his winning of a 50-year scholarship to Victoria College at a quiz program.

G. T. Guest, Victoria College, the second speaker for the resolution, termed the CCF program "one of the most unfortunate in Canadian history". It implies, he continued, control of the individual, the substitution of compulsion for incentive, and a philisophical doctrine which conceives of happiness "as a material concept and not a personal experience . . . The program fails to realize the needs of a true, strong and expanding economy."

D. H. Hay, second speaker for the opposition, spoke on the international aspects of the CCF program. He said that in our modern world international trade must be controlled, and that this should be done by the government, and not by private individuals.

AERIAL ATTACK SET FOR McGILL

All Aboard For Old McGill!

Staff Photo By Walt MacKenzie

These staunch Blues' supporters took no chances on ticket disappointment. Gathered around their radio, Harry Hill, Bob Johnston, Rod Whitehead, Dave Wishart and Gray Perkins, all of Trinity, took up their position outside of the Athletic Office at 6:30 a.m. on Tuesday morning. On the right, Nigel Baillie, Trin. I (partly hidden) buys the first combined railway-game tickets at the SAC Office. The next in line, Alex MacPherson, Vic. I, and Pete Oliphant, UC II, await their turn as Dorothy Dodington and Marion Fraser do the honours.

Hundreds of Tickets Sold For McGill-Varsity Game

Over two hundred game tickets and over three hundred train tickets have been sold for the McGill game next week-end, the SAC office announced yesterday.

The usual line for tickets began forming about six a.m., Tuesday morning. Ticket sales began at 9.15 and within half an hour 178 combination game and train tickets had been sold.

More tickets were procured by the SAC and were sold Wednesday and yesterday. There are still 46 game tickets and 75 train tickets to be sold.

No upper or lower berths have been sold, all of the three hundred train tickets being for coach seats. Sales of both game and train tickets will continue today.

Varsity Has Full Roster For Vital McGill Game Kane and Huycke Return

Coach Bob Masterson will have two top notch Blues back in action when the Varsity footballers parade onto Molson stadium in Montreal tomorrow, seeking their first win of the intercollegiate season.

Back after a three-week layoff with a broken nose, Joe Kane, former Oakwood and Balmy Beach passing and running star, will take over some duties of workhorse Bruce Cummings. Kane has a guard on his remodelled nose for his first scheduled intercollegiate contest. Ed. Huycke's charley-horse has responded to treatment and he'll be back against the Montrealers tomorrow.

Even with these two regulars back, Masterson has problems. Captain Ian Clark, ace inside of the squad, dislocated his shoulder last Saturday and will be replaced by Jack Daly for the McGill encounter. Daly, 157 pound dynamo with the intermediates last term, is described by teammates as "pound for pound the fightingest man on the team."

Wally London had his nose cracked against Queen's, and won't show up in the McGill clash, but Bruce Cummings' finger is getting back to normal size and should help his passing efficiency.

Air Attack Stressed

Coach Masterson describes the game succinctly as "their ground attack against our air ability," and adds a word for their tough, heavy wingline. "I thought they had the best line in the league last year," he says, "and I imagine it will be just as tough this year."

Except for the Varsity-Western tie last year, McGill came as close to beating the Mustangs as any team has since the war, in their clash last week. Western finally won, but only after McGill handed them three touchdowns on fumbles.

Three times the Redmen bobled in pay dirt, with Western recovering once on the five, later on the six, and again on the 11 yard strip. Metras was obviously impressed with the McGill showing. He called a stiff practice for Monday, when teams usually take it easy. He also refused to let his Olympic backfielders enter the sentor track meet here Wednesday.

McGill To Use Yanks

McGill coach Vic Obeck has imported several Americans to augment his Redmen this year and some of them showed impressively last week against Western. Dave Hackett from Boston, Lorne Dagget from Oregon State University and Harry Blewald from Mohawk College, Utica, started in the backfield. Up front, Obeck has the 220 pound Marvin Meirowitz and Bill Nichols from Syracuse University.

McGill has additional strength from major Canadian leagues, with Vic Lattimer and Bill Orban from Winnipeg Blue Bombers, and Rocky Robillard and Ron Sharp from Ottawa Trojans.

Bob Masterson has been giving his Blues plenty of practice for

"La Belle Equippe" Opening Program, Of Film Society

"Mayerling" with Boyer and Darrieux, "Blue Angel" with Dietrich, and "Potemkin" by Eisenstein are some of the well-known major attractions of the programs of the University of Toronto Film Society, it was announced last night by Miss Clare Lampel, Program Director. She said that most of the membership cards have already been bought, and urged prospective members to buy their cards while they are still obtainable.

Many of the other films to be shown, said Miss Lampel, have fine reputations though their names are possibly not as familiar as those mentioned above.

"Carnival in Flanders", for instance, is a French film starring Louis Jouvet. Recapturing the mood of an old Flemish chronicle, "Carnival" has color, vitality and movement.

"In 'La Belle Equippe', which opens the season, we get great dramatic contrast of comedy and tragedy. Jean Gabin and Vivienne Romance contribute two of the many carefully-drawn characterizations."

"Film and Reality", which will probably be shown in January, is a full - length documentary which treats of realism as applied to the motion picture.

In the shorter films which round out each program, the Film Society will try to satisfy every taste. The range is from the scientific short, "Experiments in the Revival of Organisms" to "Song of Ceylon" by Grierson and Wright.

Since it is difficult for the Society to secure confirmation of bookings far in advance from the National Film Society at Ottawa, the programs as advertised are subject to change.

Miss Lampel pointed out that the Society has been very fortunate in being able to get these outstanding films, since there are not many such obtainable in Canada.

It is expected that membership, limited by the seating capacity of the Museum Theatre, will be complete by the time of the first meeting, this Sunday afternoon, Oct. 24. Membership cards will be available as long as they last at the S.A.C. offices at U.C. and Hart House and in the U.C. Rotunda, 12 to 2 p.m.

Expect Too Much Of Recovery Job Editor Predicts

The United States is expecting too much from the European Recovery Plan and the distress which Europe is bound to feel is likely to give rise to isolationism in the United States, said R. A. MacEarchern, Financial Post editor, in an address to the Commerce Club in Cartwright Hall, Wednesday night.

Isolationism in the U. S. would necessitate an austerity program, here, which Canadians were unlikely to accept. We should then be faced with some sort of union with the United States, he said.

The speaker predicted that free exchange of currency is unlikely within the next ten years or even within our lifetime, because the British economy is "dreadfully, dreadfully sick."

He pointed out that before World War II the United Kingdom imported 20 per cent more than after World War I, but exported 40 per cent less.

Because we are one of the least self-sufficient nations, lack of a free exchange would present two alternatives for Canada, he said, a closer tie with Britain or the United States. The first would be impossible because it would mean doubling our British imports and Canadians generally prefer United States goods.

Some type of customs union with the United States would mean the sacrifice of our national identity which, the speaker contended, would be too high a price to pay.

Our unbalanced trade with the United States can only be remedied by a willingness of the United States to buy more Canadian goods, Mr. MacEarchern concluded.

"Joe" Smallwood To Talk Monday

The man who is credited more than any other for bringing Newfoundland into confederation with Canada, Joseph Smallwood, will address an open meeting of the University of Toronto Liberal Association in St. Hilda's College at 4.15 p. m. Monday.

Called "one of the most energetic figures to enter the Canadian political scene," Mr. Smallwood became the foremost advocate of confederation at the convention called some three years ago to discuss the future government of Canada.

The story of how the campaign for confederation reaped success will be the story Mr. Smallwood will tell Monday afternoon.

Bloomer Bustle

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 21 — (CUP) — The controversial item of bloomers for the Queen's cheerleaders (they have to be three different colors for the various sets-of-three cheerleaders) was finally resolved at a recent meeting of Queen's student council. It was decided to vote $25.00 to the cheerleaders' funds as petty cash for the purchase of the various-colored panties and various other essential articles.

Bureaucratic Apathy Retarded Brazilians Asserts Ex-Diplomat

Brazil is an economically and politically backward country despite its immense area, large population and seemingly unlimited resources Mr. Benjamin Rogers told the Political Science Club at its first meeting last night. Mr. Rogers was First Secretary at the Canadian Embassy at Rio de Jantiro for four years.

Brazil has been a republic only since 1891 and in the half century since then progress has been retarded by mistaken government policies, inefficient administration, corruption and the inescapable factors of climate and the national character of the people.

Canadian political relations with Brazil are harmonious said Mr. Rogers and its economic relations are becoming increasingly important. Exports to Brazil last year were valued at 31 million dollars as compared with a few millions 10 years ago.

International Federation A Way To Peace — Thomas

Mr. J. D. Thomas, editor of the National Home Monthly and former member of the philosophy department of this University, opened his address before the World Government Association at Wymilwood last night with a warning that war, if and when it comes, may come without warning. "We might not even know for the first month or so that we are at war," he said.

The technological advances of the past few years have made both bacteriological and atomic warfare more deadly than we could ever have imagined, the speaker continued. "So far," he declared, "We are doing nothing to prevent it."

Mr. Thomas proposed to outline two alternative plans which he said he hoped and, indeed, believed could, if given a chance, prevent war.

The first plan, he said, was that of federal union; the second was the Myers plan for the emenda-

Haven For Traitors?

The federal government has come under heavy fire recently because of the attitude it chooses to take over the case of four alleged French traitors.

The vicissitudes of French politics are common knowledge, but the fact remains that the French government has found these men guilty of collaboration with the Nazis. Why, then, has Canada seen fit to grant them haven? By virtue of being enemies of the French government because of acts committed during the war, they are in a sense, enemies of Canada—a wartime ally of France. They are enemies of Canadians who lie dead in cemeteries across the world.

Undoubtedly there is more to this case than meets the eye. In defense of the government it may be said that France may at any time resort to normal extradition measures and request return of the four men. This has not been done.

Instead, the French ambassador has held a press conference in which he disclosed that the men in question are wanted by his government. Why, then, does he not demand the return of these men with the means at his disposal?

The convicted men were tried in absentia by the French courts. By French law they will be granted a new trial when—and if—they are returned to France.

Their entry into Canada was made illegally in direct violation of Canadian immigration regulations. The government by adopting its unreasonable attitude has, in effect, been guilty of breaking its own laws. Its action would appear to be an arbitrary and uncalled for intervention in the internal affairs of a friendly nation.

The government—after considerable hedging—has called the case closed. Acting Prime Minister C. D. Howe said that no action would be taken by the cabinet. The French insist that the case is not closed.

Mr. Howe has left his government open not only to domestic criticism but to international criticism as well.

There seems to be a tendency recently to forget the horrors of the last war. Remembering the righteous indignation and revulsion towards the enemy, it seems difficult to understand why compassion and mercy should be extended now.

Recently the same type of mentality was reflected in the release from prison at Nuremburg of Ilsa Koch—only three short years after she had been convicted of atrocities at Buchenwald.

The federal government has placed itself in an awkward position. By refusing to open the case, it has left itself open to all sorts of charges.

If the men are guilty they should be sent back to face sentence. If they are not guilty the Canadian public should be informed of the facts and so remove the cause of censure.

CORK TIP and PLAIN

REMEMBER—PLAYER'S "MILD" PLAIN WITH "WETPROOF" PAPER DO NOT STICK TO YOUR LIPS.

Long interested in controversial matters of great importance to the country, The Varsity has again this year instituted its poll of the political parties on the campus. Recently these groups were asked the following questions — "DO YOU THINK COWS SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO GIVE MARGARINE?"

Liberal Club president Smitten Pretty—"This is not a question that can be kicked around in any low form of debate. It is a question that could stand a clean investigation from top to bottom by a Royal Commission. As you know, the Dominion Government is in favor of the unlimited use of margarine within limits, but whether they would be prepared to sanction such a move as is suggested here is another matter. What would the cow think about it? Has anyone asked her? I doubt it, and yet she has a vote, the same as anyone else. And soon the calf will come of age and have a vote also. These things must be handled with great care.

"We of the Liberal Club believe that in the long run it would be for the best to pass this bill allowing cows to give margarine, but for the present, it seems best to sit tight with what we have. We must not be deceived by the view that far away fields look green. If we pass this bill, they will look far from green, they will look yellow."

Gilbert Shirwaist, president of U of T Prog. Cons. Club—"We of the Progressive Conservative Club, as Canada's future leaders, have been drinking milk all our lives. Even so this sentimental detachment to cows does not prevent me from saying that free enterprise must prevail. If a cow prefers to give margarine, by all means let her give that. As I see it, the cow must decide. It is her milk, or margarine, as the case may be. That is all I have to say on the matter."

Harvey Keentype, corresponding secretary, U of T CCF Club—"This is a question which poses deeper problems than would appear at a summary glance. Will big busi-

Solway Quartet Will Be Featured At Benefit Show

Among the many artists appearing in the Benefit Night at Hart House on Nov. 18th, will be the Solway String Quartet. Their program last Saturday was broadcast over the radio and many students are becoming inquisitive about this venture, which, although only founded last year, has made considerable progress.

The life of such bodies is apt to be short and checkered unless there is real talent but Gordon Jocelyn, the Chairman of the Music Committee of Hart House, is convinced that these boys really have it. True, the plans they had tentatively laid for a series of recitals at Convocation Hall seem to be slipping into the cloudy realms of "might-have-beens", but all is not lost.

The trouble with musical ventures has always been the provision of audience and auditorium. The hall from a convenience point of view seems to be Convocation Hall but even this has two very big drawbacks, cost and shyness of audiences who seem to have a healthy distrust of any locale off the beaten track of their daily wanderings. The Quartet had planned to do a series of five concerts of chamber music but this would necessitate a charge of 50c per time, and there is little hope of there being any reasonable-sized audience, since last year the free organ recitals drew only a very limited and disappointing audience.

The future holds no rosy ease for the Quartet but it is evident that the team of Maurice Solway (1st Violin), Marcus Adeney, Jack Grube, and Robert Warburton do not easily take defeat and Gordon Jocelyn feels that, like all true artists, they should thrive on hard times.

Research Fellowship In Natural Science

The Royal Society is offering a fellowship in natural science to be known as the "Smithson Research Fellowship", tenable in the University of Cambridge.

The object is stated as "research in natural science, with a view to the discovery of new laws and principles rather than the exploitation of what is known."

A value of £90 a year for four years is attached to the fellowship. All applications are to be received not later than October 30, 1948, by the Assistant Secretary of the Royal Society, Burlington House, London W 1, England, who will on request provide copies of the regulations and forms of application.

Hold Career Forum On Women's Fields With Noted Guests

The Panhellenic Association is presenting the first in a series of careers forums, entitled "Careers On Parade", to be held in the Women's Union Theatre at 4.15 p.m., Monday. The forums are designed to show Varsity co-eds the ins and outs of such careers as public relations, publicity, movies, publishing, teaching, librarianship, and radio.

The Monday forum will be conducted by Joyce Tedman, who will speak on public relations. The other participating guests will be Ruth Wells, of the Department of Travel and Publicity of the Ontario Government; Pauline McGibbon, who is associated with the National Film Board; Kay Mathers from the Clarke Irwin Publishing Co.; and Mildred Spicer, Fashion Editor of Chatelaine.

Hints as well as highlighting the careers at hand, the guests will enlarge on the questions of necessary training, making a start, and opportunities available. The hour-long forum will be conducted as an informal interview. Questions from the audience of women undergraduates will be discussed in an open session at the end of the regular forum.

Red Feather Concert

Sir Ernest MacMillan, Dean of the Faculty of Music, who is in charge of the program arrangements for the concert to be presented next Thursday in Convocation Hall as a part of Varsity's Red Feather effort. Heard on the program will be most of the well-known concert artists of Toronto, all of whom have donated their services for the occasion. All tickets are being sold on the campus as this is primarily a student's concert.

Vets Slow To Appreciate Apartment For Peggy Deal

Contributions to furnish the Apartment for Peggy are coming in faster than the number of applications in the Contest so far.

Officials in the SAC office and 20th Century-Fox are beginning to think that married student veterans on the campus are unwilling to believe that they can get something for nothing.

The room to be awarded the most deserving veteran is a large self-contained bed-sidding room and kitchen, is situated at the very top of an old residence on Elm Street in Rosedale. In the days gone by, it used to be known as "Elm House School" and still carries evidence of its antiquity in the stained-glass windows and the solid woodwork of the bannisters. The house is now owned by Miss Irene Humble, an ex-newspaper woman.

The list of contributions so far is an impressive one. From A. J. Sigger come a drop leaf table, 4 Windsor chairs, a buffet, a coffee table, 2 end tables, 5 sectional book cases, one desk, one corner cabinet, a chest of drawers, a hall tree, one wall mirror, 2 scatter rugs, 2 lamps, drapes for the bay-window, one studio-couch and one electric rangette.

All this furniture will be unpainted but paint will also be given and probably an instructor so that the couple may paint everything the color of their choice.

From the Power Stores comes $40 worth of groceries in coupons.

This contest, which is gradually being heard of in all parts of the country, brought a gift from a person in Val D'Or, Quebec. Mike Mitto, a well-known prospector from that region and President of Solamita & Harcourt Nickel mines, doesn't mind admitting that he is a "nouveau-riche" and while reminiscing of his lean days he heard of the contest. He has given the amount of $96.00 for the two first month of rent.

Everything which will be contained in the room once completely furnished will remain the sole property of the winners of the contest to do as they wish with it. It is theirs to keep even if they decide to live somewhere else at the end of this year.

Trinity College Ambushes Porker On Back Campus

With the price of meat at an all-time high, Trinity College Athletic Association loosed a 175-pound bundle of pork chops on the hoof yesterday afternoon at their Field Day. Chased by a troop of hungry looking Trinity students, this second-last survivor of the species hominus alabamus dodged, weaved and generally managed to evade his pursuers for quite some time.

Greased, and almost ready for the pan, this luscious looking piece of hogflesh had mouths watering and appetites sharpened. Unable to provide a sufficiency of towels for drooling, the T.C.A.A. had on hand several shaggy dogs that passed from time to time among the 300 students assembled.

In addition to the usual events of a field day, mixed three-legged races, tugs-of-war and sack races were featured. Two chariot races, with brawny students between the traces, brought wild cheers from the crowd. Dressed in flowing Roman togas and sporting large umbrellas, the winning team romped over the finish line in easy style.

The year 5T1 placed first in the final tally with a score of 108. Trailing by a score of 25 points, 5T2 ended in second place by virtue of 50 points garnered in the pig event. The winning team consisted of Don Wilson, Andy Watson, Pete Alley, Doug. Snowden, Bill Wright, John Dashwood and Rob Agnew. Third place went to 5T0.

Gowns were discarded for the afternoon as shorts and slacks were the order of the day, the crowd adjourned to the Buttery where a T dance was held. Crumpets and T were served, don't you know?

Offer Script Prize And CBC Auditions To Radio Students

"Radio at Varsity, in one short year, has learned many valuable lessons," said Peter Dobell, IV Trinity, at yesterday's meeting of the Radio Committee.

"From a humble beginning in 1946," he stated, "the framework of Entertainment IA, as it was called, has expanded amazingly into a prominent progressive committee of the S.A.C. Last year's program had many good points," he added, "but it also had many bad ones."

Dobell pointed out that administrative problems last year dictated changes in organization this season. A larger staff was needed. While expressing satisfaction with the present set-up, he declared student support as well as the talent and material in the Radio Workshop and Playhouse would be the measure of the Radio Committee's success.

Every Student Shares

Buz Thomas, IV UC, concurred. It was his opinion no campus organization could exist without the support of the majority of the student body. "Every student," he said, "pays for the share he has in the campus radio venture."

As the Radio Workshop and Playhouse gets underway for this year, committee members expressed the unanimous view that campus radio must go on, to progress to the point where U of T will own its own radio station and studios.

This year's Workshop lecturers, reported Radio Commissioner Paul

LISTER SINCLAIR

Fauteux, III St. Michael's, will be Lister Sinclair, Andrew Allan, and Mavor Moore. Fauteux pointed out that few organizations offer such distinguished men in their fields as lecturers for radio students.

The Radio Workshop and the Playhouse are two wings of the Radio Committee. The Workshop provides lectures and training in script writing, producing and acting. Instructors are all CBC members. This year, a $75 prize will be awarded to the best script entered by Workshop students or by other interested students who may not be enrolled in Workshop courses.

In addition, the Workshop will have the use of a new tape recorder for voice playbacks and other parts of the curriculum. Later in the season, the CBC will audition the six top actors of the Workshop and Playhouse.

Under the general direction of Peter Dobell, the Playhouse will have three main departments; discussion, script writing, and producing. Ross McLean of the CBC staff is in charge of overall production.

Open casting for the playhouse will be held next week, it has been announced, and all actors who apply will be placed under one of the assistant producers for the duration of the broadcasting season.

Red Feather Fair Asks Idea Men From Faculties

The Red Feather Campaign got under way last night with the first meeting of the Campaign Committee in the Women's Union Building. Representatives were present from nearly all the faculties, including Vic, St. Mike's, UC, Forestry, Architecture, and Institutional Management.

Plans were discussed concerning the gathering of ideas for the Red Feather Fair which is to be held on November 5, and an "idea committee" was set up to handle the suggestions which they intend to get from the students themselves. Each college will then choose a show from the ideas submitted and will be responsible for its production.

Wayne Smith, I Knox and Elaine Popkin, IV UC, were nominated to the publicity committee, and will be responsible for the posters and loud-speaker campaigns around the campus.

Jane Hazard, IV UC, urged the group to arouse interest in the Fair by working with the Publicity Directors of each college. "Enthusiastic help will be needed to make the new Feather Fair a success," she said.

A New Procedure By Civil Service To Select Grads

A Press release from the Civil Service Commission gives details of new procedure in the selection of graduate students who contemplate careers in the Federal Public Service.

The new plan provides that a graduating student may file a single application, specifying his field of interest, and thus assure himself of consideration in future competitions. This procedure is expected to speed up the selection of professional personnel, and provides for a series of "continuing" competitions. The competitions will be advertised in three pamphlets which will be distributed when the Commission Examiners make their visit to the University, probably in November.

The "continuing" competitions will be open for a year and it is to the students' advantage to file applications early. They are advised to wait until the pamphlets have been studied. Applications of candidates who do not receive immediate or early appointment will be retained for consideration in subsequent competitions.

A Board of Review has been set up to determine—at the end of a one year period—the suitability of newly appointed personnel for continued employment. Thus the commission hopes to retain the better employees and that opportunities will always be available for promising young graduates.

Scandal

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 21—(CUP)—The Vancouver Sun published a picture this week of two University of British Columbia professors that the editors of the university's Daily Ubyssey said they had been forced to suppress.

Tuesday's issue of the campus paper appeared with a two-column blank space at the top of the front page, containing the following note:

"We're sorry. In this space we had planned to print a picture showing two applied science professors clowning innocently with an entertainer at the engineer's banquet. We regret, however, that pressure exerted by the Dean of Applied Science and the acting president forced us to withdraw it —The Editors."

The Padre's Pastoral

REV. D. C. CANDY, Chaplain, Hart House

For this current term this column will not only be making reference to The University Christian Mission, but also will be used as a direct channel of information concerning its purpose and plans and finally its program.

To hold a Christian Mission anytime anywhere is good in order that all in the community may look again at the Christian Faith, face its challenge and re-discover its relevance to the situations in which we find ourselves both personally and socially, but it has a much more specific purpose within a university.

It is not difficult to recognize that in the average large University such as our own, there is a continual danger of turning students in many directions rather than one direction, which is, indeed, a rebellion against the very word "university". Rather than searching for truth, we search for knowledge in a particular sphere, and leave untouched the integration of such knowledge to any common goal. It is a natural counterpart of our individualist society where each seeks his own security and makes sure of his own interests and concerns first. Certainly we need an integrating factor within society that gives common purpose to all our homes and all our jobs and all our clubs as a most obvious foundation for any conception of "one world". But within a university wherein we should find knowledge, that is the spring board of integrated social living in all its ramifications, the need is even more fundamental.

Thus, a University Christian Mission is not just a flash in the pan or a lovely emotional outburst, but, rather a concentrated effort to deal realistically and adequately with the diversification of knowledge and the subsequent life of society. All religious groups on our campus serve in their own way this general purpose and what is happening now on our campus, as we prepare for the University Christian Mission, is the consolidation of all local effort in this major enterprise.

The Champus Cat

ness make more money from margarine or from milk? Will the cow gain the social security she so well deserves if she switches to margarine? What about the common man? Where does he fit into the picture? It is impossible for me to discuss all these problems in the space at my disposal. Let me merely run over the plan for the nationalization of cows drawn up at last convention of the CCF.

"This plans for the government ownership of all cows, male or female. These cows will be separated into harmonious groups and these happier surroundings, it is hoped, will be conducive to greater production. By harmonious groups, I mean ones in which the cows are compatible and at ease with their neighbors. Entertainment will be provided in the form of the theatre, moving pictures and the odd formal bull session.

"In these happy surroundings, it is hoped that the cows will produce milk for it must be admitted that this would be best for the country. Those what will not produce milk or insist on producing margarine, will be deprived of their social security cards and put to work pulling breadwagons".

Sam "Good Old Res Nosedirt", president of U of T LPP Club — "The price of butter is too high. The wages of farmers are too low. There is a discrepancy somewhere and the LPP is determined to find the source of the trouble. An investigation of the margarine question is incidential to this larger question of high prices and low wages, we say! It is the only solution which will save Canada.

"If the cows of Canada are allowed to give margarine at this stage of the game, all hell will break loose. We warn you not to give big business another opportunity.

"If Canada's cows would follow the example of the cows of the Soviet and get the communal spirit, they would realize that milk is the best bet for the good of the country, especially at 18 cents a quart.

"Our hearts also go out for the poor calves if their mothers should decide to give margarine. Forgotten by the moguls of capitalism, they slowly starve to death. Do not laugh! This is a serious matter."

Red Feather Concert

This department delightedly waves a large Red Feather in the direction of Convocation Hall where on Thursday night, October 28, an unprecedented aggregation of leading Toronto musicians will put their talents at the disposal of Community Chest. So, when (no if about it) you purchase your ticket at Hart House (campus and Ajax), U.C. or the Conservatory remember that the artists are the donors and you will be at the receiving end.

Hokusai

The exhibition at the Museum of the art of Hokusai, who died just a few years before the opening of Japan to the West presents singular difficulties to the Occidental observer. His paintings have few of the Oriental virtues. As one critic has described them: "Unhampered by an urge to explore the status of light (which is a branch of optical science) the Oriental is free to explore far more thoroughly than the European the possibilities of colour, (a branch of aesthetics). And so one can contemplate in Eastern art the pure greens, reds and whites that Europe lost after the decline of the medieval manuscript illuminators."

But Hokusai has in many ways anticipated the Western influence. There are fewer snow scenes and mountains, fewer famous beauties and their lines and colours are less clearly defined. There is a vast series of innovations and experiments, sketches that could be taken from Punch to "Scenes in a public bath-house" and even a mirror with one eye. But, which are traditional symbols and which are not, must be left to the expert.

My two favorite pictures are: 'A Blind Man Bitten by a Dog' and 'The God of Good Luck, Diakoku'. The first is the only successful composition that employs the grotesque contortions which run as a continual theme throughout his work, particularly the black and white sketches. This genre is quite familiar to us through the gnomes and gargoyles of the Middle Ages, the green Chinese dragons. Daikoku, a good-natured tramp, reminds one, structurally, of the traditional pagoda, partly put together with matchsticks. Another interesting picture is the 'Meditation on a Waterfall'. How different from the Waterfall on the third floor which a few touches of the brush suggest, while a house, hardly more than a character, completes the composition. Hokusai almost forgets that blank spaces are part of the composition, just as pauses are in music, and swerves dangerously near the European 'hofror vacui' The brush strokes, traditionally as sharp and clear as a Samurai sword, lack the very sureness of touch, just as the colour its classical purity.

In looking back, one is struck by the spirit of curiosity and adventure, qualities which, we are told lessen his stature in the eyes of the Japanese public.

CBC La Boheme

The performance of La Boheme on CBC Wednesday night, debut of the CBC Opera Company was definitely a musical success. Sensible cuts, a good pace conducive to appreciate tension, a great deal ficiency, all contributed to what of fine singing and orchestral effmay be referred to with an easy conscience as a distinguished performance. Mary Morrison (Mimi) has the stuff of greatness in her throat, Ed. Hockridge who, I understand tackled Italian opera for the first time, gave a strong, yet sensitive Marcel, James Shields as Rodolfo could not but impress, any predilections concerning tenoric timbre notwithstanding. The brevity of these references, including very grateful ones to conductor Goldschmidt and producer Gibbs, must not be taken for lack of admiration, nor the omissions for repudiation, but I am anxious to venture for a moment into the chilly and unmapped outdoors called 'Opera and Radio', with the stress on th elatter, quite prepared to stumble. Briefly, when you broadcast opera you sacrifice the visual dimension and may achieve an intensification of the impact by giving the evocative power of music free play, provided the music has such-power. La Boheme does, I dare say, but not enough (no opera does nor need have to permit the listener so long a leash as was used in our case. There is no quarrel with the decision to perform in Italian (the tale concerning choice of language is too long and knotty anyway). But, once you decide, you accept the responsibility of guiding the listener who is more than likely to be unfamiliar with both language and plot. Guide him, lest he fall into that state of gnawing and distracting doubt as to what on earth the excitement is all about. If you leave him there he is likely to acquire that sense of the slammed door that breeds hostility, then indifference. I am sure that the complications at the Cafe Momus in act two or the sub-

Intermediates Whip McMaster 9-0

Garside Tops As Blues Win Under Lights

By BRUCE MACDONALD

Hamilton, Oct. 21 (Staff)— Varsity intermediates swept to their second win of the intercollegiate season here last night as they blanked McMaster 9-0 under the lights in the HAAA grounds.

The win places Varsity in a tie with OAC for first place. Each has four points. McMaster are now firmly embedded in the cellar with three straight losses.

For the first quarter it looked like a complete rout for the well-drilled Varsity squad as they completely carried the play. McMaster didn't once move in to the Varsity zone. Late in the quarter Bob Garside threw a 25 yard pass to Graham who ran another 25 yards for Varsity's only major. The convert was no good

In the second period, the alert Varsity squad moved the sticks for enough for Davis to add a single. In the third Stevenson hoofed a tremendous 40 yard placement to complete the Varsity scoring.

McMaster came to life only briefly in the third quarter as their fast-breaking plays momentarily nonplussed the Blues, but they never seriously threatened the superior Blues.. Varsity was on the march again as the game ended, and the last play was from the McMaster two yard line.

Playing in semi-gloom, with half of the stadium's lights because of the power shortage, both teams had trouble with their passing plays. Ace passer for the Blues, Bob Garside threw 17 passes, completing only four. McMaster failed in all 12 of their attempts. Varsity made 17 first downs for 250 yards and the Maroons moved the sticks but four times for 70 yards.

Big Bob Garside, playing in his home town, was a standout for Varsity as he passed, kicked, and plunged well all night. Graham, Davidson, and Russell abetted the Blue cause enthusiastically.

Carnie's kicking and passing held the Maroons together at crucial times while Wright and Stewart were tops up front. Goodrow and Collins turned in a good effort in the backfield.

Junior Harrier Goes Tomorrow

Tomorrow morning, on the back campus, junior aspirants to track fame will participate in the junior harrier.

Last year, there were 146 entries, with St. Mike's the largest entry with 72. Last year only 75 per cent of those who finished, qualified for points, and this year only those who cover the course in 21 minutes will collect points for the Reid Trophy.

Last year the St. Mike's entry collected 60 points and won the meet.

SPORTSWOMAN

Vic II defeated St. Hilda's III 18-9 in the only game played yesterday noon at Varsity Stadium. This League IV game started very slowly in the first two innings, but in the final inning Vic speeded up and scored seventeen runs. The players grew very excited during this inning, with each team wildly cheering on their own teammates.

The only home run was hit by Doreen Webster of the Vic team. Both teams need more practice in the outfield to improve their game.

BASKETBALL

In a very fast game last night the UC Sophomore Girls' basketball team fought the Vic Sophs to a 24-24 tie. The Vic girls were led by Jean MacDonald and Denise Crome. UC was trailing in the last minutes of the game when Wilma Booty tied the score and saved the game for UC.

Vic Senior B girls' basketball team edged the OT girls 18-16 in a fast, rough game last night. Di Rogers led the Vic team with six points and Joey McKay played a good game as guard. Mary Craig was top scorer for OT with 10 points and Kay McGill collected four.

The PHE III girl's basketball team came from behind to take the St. Hilda Jr.-Sr. team by a 21-6 score last night. The game was played at OCE gym.

At half-time St. Hilda's were leading by a slight margin of 3-1. In the second half the game opened up considerably and the PHE team took the offensive to pile up 20 points and sweep the game. Outstanding scorers for PHE were Anne Bradshaw and Gwen Smith with six points each.

McGill vs Varsity Rugger Teams Clash Again

Rugger, the ferocious and fast moving game from which American football came, returns to Varsity Stadium this afternoon as in Ralph Connor's VARSITY Versus McGILL. No substitution, time out, protective equipment or ofrward passing allowed! Varsity is out to defend the Intercollegiate crown- won last year. Jack Gibbs, as coach and player is a Varsity stalwart. Senior soccer will be a co-feature in today's meet.

Game time is 1 p.m. this afternoon.

St. Mike's Blank Ajax Rugby Team

The game between St. Mike's and Jr, S.P.S. saw the Jaxmen defeated by a score of 11.0. In the first scoreless three quarters Ajax showed its superiority in all departments, but during a five minute lapse in their line in the first few minutes of the fourth quarter, it was literally torn apart by the visiting team. In that time St. Mike's made four first downs to spell a touchdown with Niel carrying the mail. At that point Ajax decided to open up the game by launching an attack through the air which resulted in an interception by Brown to give St. Mike's their second touchdown converted by Brennan. The game ended with Ajax pressing the attack deep in their own territory.

The Ajax volleyball team opened the season in defence of the Victoria Staff Trophy by a convincing 2 to 0 win over P.H.E. The score in each game was 15-5 and 15-13.

AJAX SPORTS NOTES

Considered the most successful ever held, the U. of T. Ajax Division Inter-residence Track Meet was held Tues., Oct. 19th at 4 p.m. The weather was cool and cloudy, but that didn't stop a record of exactly 100 athletes from taking part. The success was also due to the strong support rendered the athletes by the large turnout of spectators. Showing plenty of forethought and organization, the officials were able to run off the ten events in rapid succession in one hour and fifteen minutes, which kept interest at a high pitch during the whole show.

Sadly missed by athletes and officials alike, was Hec Phillips, former Olympic track star and outoutstanding track and field coach of Canada, who recently passed away. Hec had been the official starter for the past several years, and his job was very capably handled by Jim Folwell, Supervisor of Athletics here.

After the ten events had been run off, Residence 724 emerged as winner, winning 2 firsts and 5 seconds with thirteen men competing for 87 points. Residence 729 stood second with 2 firsts, 1 second and 2 thirds with sixteen men competing for a total of 77 points. Residence 730 came third with 73 points.

Pat Galasso of Residence 726 was the outstanding track man winning both the 100 and 220 yard dashes while Rod MacLennon of Reridence 728 stood out in the field events winning the discus throw and placing in the shot put and high jump.

Vic Comes From Behind To Upset Senior Meds 9-6

By HAL HOLDEN

In a well-played, hard-fought contest on the Back Campus yesterday, Victoria College came out on top with a 9-6 triumph over Senior Meds. A large crowd watched the struggle and were compensated for chilled fingers and toes by a top-drawer brand of football.

Losing 6-3 at half time, Vic's Harry Damp hurled a long forward that Bob Rumble took over his shoulder and struggled to the Medic's five yard line before being tackled.

Vic was given a shot in the arm by this play and wasted little time in cashing in for a major score. Damp took advantage of some crisp blocking by his linemates and plunged over on the first play. Little converted.

Meds tried hard to get an offensive launched in the third quarter, but the Vic line, which had not shone in the first half perked up and outcharged their opponents. Bill Sherwood and Alex Watson frequently broke up Meds' plays before they got rolling. Sherwood spent most of his time in the Doctors' backfield, nailed the driving Jimmy Smith and tricky Tony Cecutti several times as soon as they got the ball.

The powerful Meds still came close to getting a major in the third quarter. Two potential touchdown aerials intended for Jimmie Smith were queered by alert Lorne Lodge who was roaming far and wide at this tertiary spot. Lodge combined with a mate to bat down one pass on the Vic goal line and then somehow got over to the other side of the field on the next play to make the interception that let Vic breathe a little easier.

Tony Cecutti scored Meds' touchdown on the quarterback sneak after a Vic fumble put them in position with an end run and two plunges. The convert missed.

A 30 yard placement by Jim Little which spun directly through the centre of the uprights put the scarlet and Gold back in the ball game a few minutes later.

Al Varga rounded out Meds' point total with a singleton in the first half.

As the score indicated, Meds outplayed the champs in the first half. Their line of ripping wide holes for Smith and Cecutti. Both these boys scurried for substantial gains in Vic territory and only a well-drilled Vic pass defence kept the Red and Black from making further entries in the score sheet.

For the losers, Bobby Jeffs, Alex Marotta and Jim Murray were tackling and charging hard on the wingline while Jimmie Smith and Tony Cecutti sparked the attack.

ject of conversation early in act one were blanks to many of those listeners who lacked a libretto or a reliable outline. Here, of course, is a solution: wide distribution of dime libretti or outlines. As long as this is impossible, continuity will have to do the job. A broadcast, not originating from a stage performance can afford to be thorough, even at the risk of seeming pedantry. An extra half hour devoted to that purpose with an attractive script, perhaps thematic samples, between acts, even built right into an act (now I have really put my foot in it) would have paid formidable dividends. Wednesday Night can supply the time, either one of the Brahms trio or the Edinburgh piece (from 7:30 to 8:30) are expendable if it is a matter of placing so fine an effort into full relief.

tion of the charter of the United Nations, a plan to put teeth in the charter. The federal union plan is chiefly analogous to federations which now exist and function adequately within modern states and commonwealths. Unlike the League of Nations after Word War I and UN after World War II, this plan calls for directly elected, rather than appointed, representatives from each country. Representation would be on the basis of one delegate for each 1,000,000 people. This federal union would deal with common affairs such as arms, foreign policies, trade, currency, and the control of cartels.

The goal of both systems outlined by Mr. Thomas is, he said, the prevention of war by means of a program of enforcible security.

If you can read without talking aloud, there is no real reason why you should be attending University. Obviously, all of the world's experience and learning is between the covers of books, and if you have the wit enough, no one has to take you by the hand and tell you what to read. A much simpler method, and far more economical, would be to select your required reading from the lists of titles in the annual University Calendars. However, if you must write essays and test yourself at examination time to verify the fact that you are learning, then, by all means, you belong at University. But, if you have an iota of intelligence and do not regard a university degree as the ultimate proof that you have a mind, then you certainly can do better on your own. In essence, these are the opinions of an acquaintance of ours, and we mention them here to get the student reaction. Address your comments to this column, c/o Cole's, 726 Yonge St., or drop them off at the S.A.C. office, Hart House, or U.C. basement. Outstanding

Bruce Cummings whose passing set up most of the blues touchdowns in their arrival attack while his booting also proved very effective. With but three games left, play-off chances for the Blues will depend a lot on Cummings' continued passing success.

Danylchuk Gets Four TD's As Blues' Aerial Attack Pays-off In 41-0 Victory

By HANK WESTCOTT, Sports Editor

Montreal, Oct. 23— (Staff) —Varsity Blues unleashed prodigious scoring power in Molson Stadium Saturday to pile up a 41-0 win over the highly touted McGill Redman in the most one-sided rout since the post-war resumption of intercollegiate football. Spearheaded by the dead-eye passing of Bruce Cummings, the Blues played errorless football throughout, in contrast to their previous fumble-happy outings. But there was irony in the win too, when the Blues rolled 22 first downs, exactly the number they got against Queen's last week.

Cummings threw the kind of passes that brought Varsity fans to their feet last year, tossing four of them for touchdowns, and the Varsity line gave him time to pick and choose his receivers.

The McGill front wall, regarded by many as the best in the league didn't belong on the same field as the linemen in Blue who constantly outcharged, outfought, and outtackled them. Throughout the game it was the line that tore the gaping holes that Waldon, Toogood, and Cummings sifted through, that nailed McGill plays before they were out of their own backfield, and gave Cummings time to write a letter home before he fired the ball.

Danylchuk Gets Four TD's

Bill Danylchuk went on a wild scoring spree, accounting for four touchdowns lifting himself into top position in the intercollegiate scoring race. Twice he lugged Cummings' passes over for majors, once he intercepted a McGill pass and scooted 35 yards down the sidelineh, and once he plunged 12 yards through the shaky Montreal line.

Paced by Tommy Waldon the Varsity ground attack surprised the 16,000 fans with its power and deception. It completely befuddled the jittery McGhoulls who never knew whether to set their defence for passes or plunges. Waldon personally lugged the ball most of the way on one march from the Varsity 30 to the McGill five, where the advance petered out when the Red line had a momentary change of heart and tightened up. Throughout the game he made important gains.

Volpe, Huycke Stop McGill

Coach Bob Masterson used Nick Volpe and Ed Huycke almost exclusively on defence where they had a field day discouraging McGill's passing attack, and many times moved up to catch a Red runner. Huycke, during one of his fleeting offensive visits hoofed a gigantic 60 yard kick for a single.

The fans were scarcely in their seats before Varsity took the ball on their own 52 yard stripe and started the air attack that culminated in a Cummings to Chorseticki touchdown pass. Mc Gill fans, firm in the belief that their club was a shoo-in, were startled, but the worst was yet to come. Only a few minutes later Cummings uncorked another touchdown pass, this time to Danylckuk. With the first quarter score at 11-0, and the McGill team showing little but a unique huddle formation, consternation set in in McGill fandom. And even the hardiest Red rooter looked gloomy at half time after Danylchuk intercepted a Robillard pass for his second major which made the count 17-0.

Blues Continue Attack

After the half, the McGill team made a brief flurry that carried them for four consecutive first downs and 65 yards before it was stopped. Near the end of the period, McIntyre went over for a major that Cummings converted and from there on it was strictly no contest. Varsity completely swamped McGill in the fourth session, with Danylchuk, Stockman, and Danylchuk again scoring majors, two converted by Cummings. By that time McGill fans had lost interest.

Indian Relics Uncovered By Students' Excavations

Early Friday morning 150 U. of T. students began excavating for Indian relics near Weston. Known as the "Black Creek Site", the field was the refuse heap of an Iroquois settlement which flourished around 1500. Little more was known of the village or the people who inhabited it, and therefore members of the staff of the Royal Ontario Museum decided to "dig" there. In addition, the site was close to Toronto and student excavators could commute daily rather than set up permanent camp.

Under the direction of supervisors, groups of ten were led to staked divisions in the field and instructed in the use of trowel and shovel. Although pieces of pottery were lying on the surface, not until the plots reached a depth below cultivation level were real finds made. These included part of an "Effigy" pipe, the bowl which was carved in the likeness of a face, several bone awls, needles, and large fragments of decorated Indian pottery.

The ground was frozen Friday morning, muddy Saturday, and cold all three days, but the students dug energetically. As they reached lower levels the fine art of raising fragments with a grapefruit knife was used since the artifacts were fragile and had to be uncovered carefully.

One of the more important finds was that the village was palisaded. Several posts were unearthed and these formed a line which seemed to indicate a double walled palisade. In addition, from the type of pottery found, it was concluded that this village was of the Senecan culture. For the archaeologist this latter fact is of particular importance.

Full facilities for cooking were set up and after a hard morning's work the lunch was welcomed. There was one casualty; a girl who fell in the Black Creek but she was dried off and thawed out. The field itself looked pock-marked after excavation but before leaving all the plots were filled in.

UC's First Year Elects Executive

The annual U.C.'s men's elections were held yesterday for the positions of Secretary-Treasurer of the Lit. club and the first year executive. Andy Reid, I Soc. & Phil., was elected assistant Secretary-Treasurer. The executive for the first year is: President, Jon Christensen, 1 Soc. & Phil.; Secretary-Treasurer, R. Stone, and Athletic Representative, W. Davis, I Soc. & Phil.

Besides these, acclamations were recorded for Leon Gelman as Secretary of the Lit. club; Pat Daniel as the third member of the J.C.R. Standing Committee.

Student Union

Co-ed Affairs Centred In Minnesota Union

By HARRY RASKY

This is the third in a series of articles to better acquaint students with the proposed student union at the University of Toronto.

A student union may be a thing of the future for students at the University of Toronto, but at the University of Minnesota it is a part of the present. They have had a co-ed union since 1940. We will have one in 19——.

Before we again launch out on a tour of words in the Minnesota union, it would be well to point out that in constructing a similar building at the University of Toronto, the planners would allow for present facilities, such as Hart House. There would be no duplication.

Hop onto The Varsity's magic carpet and we'll set the rug dials for Minnesota, U.S.A. The building in question is large and the architecture was designed to blend in with the existing university buildings. Four-floored in height it has a total floor space of 234,500 feet.

Here are the facts, simplified with figures

Loungers Look

Lounges are many and varied in the Minnesota monument. The main lounge located on the main floor has enough sitting room for 250 loungers. For those who would rather be alone or, who don't believe in co-education, there is a Men's Lounge and Women's Lounge on the third floor. The alumni can find resting space in their own room on the same floor.

Dancers Note

The main ballroom has room for 1800 dancing or 1300 dining. It can be used for lectures or motion pictures. Smaller in size for a closer atmosphere is the Junior Ballroom, which can also be converted into a lecture or recital hall. A Fine Arts room has been set aside for recitals, plays or art exhibits.

Meeters Make a Note

Knowing well that students on any campus need space to meet for discussions, the builders allowed many rooms for student organizational offices. They include rooms for the union board, student council, Y.W.C.A., interfraternity council, all-University council, Minnesota foundation, and three special activities offices for 14 organizations.

Designed For Dining

The proverb that a well-fed student is a happy student was blended into this union. There is a main cafeteria that holds 600 stomachs comfortably; a commuters' lunch room, which is used for just what its name implies; a fountain grill; and a "Gopherette" with a corner-drugstore-like atmosphere. Besides these there are twelve private dining rooms, designed for intimacy and conference.

Recreation Rewarded

The idea of a city within a city can be seen in the many recreational rooms. It has often been said that a student can spend all his college years without leaving the campus. The games rooms are intended to keep him happy in his campus career. They include a billiard room, game room, bowling alley, reading room, and an art craft workshop.

Miscellany Met

A student can do everything but die in this student Shangri-la. The alumni has a special suite for their discussions and discourses. A bookstore is contained in the basement. A post office for the convenience of the college is also found in the basement. A barber shop for men and a beauty salon for women add to the completeness of the union. There are clubrooms for the campus clubs and the faculty women. Twelve rooms for conference complete this building designed for college living.

State Control?

The boom in college education on this continent since the last war has placed a heavy burden—and a great financial strain—on existing universities.

Like everything else, the cost of a college education has gone up. Increased enrolments necessitate more buildings, bigger and better libraries, laboratories, and residences. And to provide them, more money is needed.

The three main sources of income are endowments or private grants, government grants, and student fees. Of the three, student fees seem the least likely source for increased revenue.

Student fees have risen considerably over the past few years and many authorities consider them high enough and, in some cases, too high. Increases in fees represent hardship on students of moderate means and impose too great a strain on students forced to work their way through university. Although few would advocate further increases in fees, there are many who would like to see all fees abolished.

Private endowments to universities have dropped considerably. Higher personal income and inheritance taxes have cut down private support of many colleges which were originally founded through the generosity of wealthy individuals.

The income, therefore, must come from one of two sources. Either more money must be forthcoming from a larger number of individuals or corporations—or from government contributions.

There are those who feel that state aid may result in state control. Academic freedom would be in danger, they fear, if universities became more dependent on state funds. So far government aid has not meant government control and there is little reason to believe that it would do so in future.

It is difficult to see how universities, supported to a great degree by business interests, would ensure a freer academic atmosphere.

If—as some ardent exponents of free enterprise suggest—state supported universities would be rigidly controlled by political interests, it is equally true to say that universities whose policies would be shaped by business men would be, at least equally controlled.

With more money forthcoming from corporations, the views of business men would carry greater weight. They would have a tendency to demand a more "business-like" training and frown on the traditional role of the university as a centre of liberal arts and pure science.

A university, supported by the government, should ensure more equitable privileges for all. A control that is too rigid or political abuse, if any, would be more easily spotted in a state-subsidized institution. And an intelligent public would be in a better position to apply a remedy.

"Samson's Simplified Lovemaking", a sequel to the Kinsey report hits campus book stores today. It is well worth a glance, or even a stare.

The high point of the book is the ingenious adaptation of a rugby referee's signals to love-making. Anyone who has been to a rugby game will be acquainted with the arm-wavings and hand-pushings of the white-shirted referees. The rules are divided into men's and women's and are designed to eliminate silly arguments and impasses. If these signals are properly used, the author promises a fast-moving evening free of difficulties.

The signals are as follows—(copied almost verbatim from Ontario Rugby Football Union rules):

A. Men—Hands on hip—offside, i.e. before crossing line of scrimmage strikes player or kicker's side. If the kick in the side is painful, penalty is loss of a down.

2. Pushing hands from shoulders with hands vertical—illegal interference. A free kick is awarded to the offended player. If this is repeated twice within five minutes, make it two

3. Both arms straight out from the body—pass illegally caught by ineligible receiver—If the pass has been completed there is not much you can do about this.

4. Both arms extended above head—a touchdown. (Bringing hands together indicates a "safety-touch). Score five points for this.

B Part—Women's signals—

1. Either arm straight out from the body—rough play. The arm may be swung until it comes into contact with the opposing player's face if this offence is repeated more than once.

2. Grasping of one-wrist—offside. The offside markings should be laid out in advance by the defending team.

3. Pushing hands to front with arms dangling vertical—player on wingline illegally in motion. Call the cops.

4. Horizontal arc of either hand—offside pass. There is a subtle difference between an offside and an offside pass. An offside pass may not be completed.

5. Shifting hands in horizontal plane—pass not completed by player or passer's side when thrown over opponent's goal line. If thrown far over the opponent's goal line, call the doctor.

It should be recognized that these signals are not effective unless both parties understand them and abide by the rules.

Radio Address Urges World Peace Attempt

In an address broadcast over the trans-Canada net-work of the C.B.C. last night, Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto, issued a plea to all Canadians to match the endeavour of their war record with as great a determination and effort for peace. Dr. Smith was speaking on behalf of the United Nations Society in Canada of which he is president.

Question of Peace or War

"The stark question that faces mankind today is Peace or War. It is bigger than any national issue," he said. "If the efforts to settle the peace terms for the Second World War and to establish machinery for the peaceful adjustments of international disputes are not successful, we, our children and our children's children will not recover from the destruction and tragedy of a third world war," President Smith declared.

"Nations can settle their disputes without resort to arms. The United Nations is designed to do that," Dr. Smith said. He pointed out that it was first and foremost an organization to maintain peace and, if it failed in that task, to stop war. It could do this through the application of the principle of collective security in the event of any power or group of powers withdrawing in hostility from the United Nations. The adoption of the principle of collective security would ensure common resistance against any international marauder he said.

Needs Individual Support

But the United Nations could not accomplish this task without the support of the individual people in each nation, he continued. For us in Canada, it was our duty to learn about and to understand the obligations of Canada as a member of the United Nations and then to realize that the obligations could only be fulfilled by the help of every Canadian. "In war the national effort is made by individuals, likewise in peace," Dr. Smith stated.

"The anxiety of the hour shows a greater need for the United Nations than ever before. You and I —fellow citizens—must understand, think and act for the very survival of our civilization," he said.

Call Meeting To Get All-Varsity Revue Under Way

Norm Jewison, producer of the All-Varsity Revue, announced Saturday that an organization meeting will be held Tuesday afternoon at 5 p.m. in Room 1, Trinity College.

"There is absolutely every opportunity for those interested in the actual running of the stage show . . . and if you have had any experience at all, you are urged to come out", Jewison said. The purpose of this meeting is to bring out all those interested in business management, production, secretarial work and script writing. Casting is to be started as soon as possible, and it is important that the organization is cleaned up first, producer Jewison said.

At this meeting the director, Bob Crignan, and the producer, Norm Jewison, will explain and outline the type of show that is wanted. Staging, lighting, and technical positions have to be filled, and since most of the campus shows have been organized or will be completed shortly, Jewison hopes for a good response to his request to work with the All-Varsity.

Students' Drinking Spree Surprises Wandering Prof

On Tuesday night a Faculty member stumbled into a darkened basement where more than a dozen undergraduates were drinking.

The faculty member (whom we will call Mr. X as he wishes to remain anonymous) was on his way to get an evening cup of coffee before retiring, when his attention was caught by the murmur of subterranean voices. His groping was rewarded when a door yielded to admit him to a flight of stairs. Down these he stumbled in the darkness, catching the odor of tobacco smoke as he went. On nearing the bottom of the stairs he recognized one of the voices as that of an undergraduate whom he knew, but confusion seemed rife, and just as he was about to call out, the steady noises of several people drinking were broken by a thud as a bottle rolled off a bottle-strewn table. Amazed at the situation, Mr. X was still debating what to do when there was a flash, and the cellar became once more fully lighted.

At first he just stood there blinking, unaccustomed to the light, but then he went on in and seated himself beside the undergrad he knew . . . Instinct had led him right: this was, indeed, the St. Mike's Co-op doing its evening trade in Cokes and even though the fuse had been blown, Mr. X had been able to find his way there as usual.

Gives Up Presidency To Be Divinity Dean

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Oct. 21 —(CUP)—Dr. J. S. Thomson, President of the University of Saskatchewan, has accepted the appointment of Dean of the Faculty of Divinity and Professor of the Philosophy of Religion at McGill University, it was announced recently.

He will leave the University of Saskatchewan at the end of the present session, assuming his new duties June 1, 1949.

In making the announcement, Dr. Cyril James, Principal of McGill University, expressed his delight that Dr. Thomson had accepted the post. He indicated that Dr. Thomson's sole reason had been his strong desire to devote himself to theological study and teaching. The administrative duties of a large university had made it impossible for him to do this work.

McGILL SECONDS WIN

Montreal, Oct. 24.—(Staff)—The going was a little tough for McGill over the week-end. Coupled with the senior loss, the McGill intermediates dropped a tight 11-6 decision to Carleton College. Carleton stopped two Gene Robillard kicks and fell on them over the touch line for their majors.

'Get Own Girls' SMC Men Told — Lose In Debate

St. Michael's Senators were conclusively defeated in a challenge debate with St. Joseph's College Congresswomen on the motion that "the institution of a date bureau on the tri-college campus would be a definite asset in the life of a student," in Brennan Hall on Tnursday night. The judges unanimously awarded the debate to the opposition, Theresa Hoolihan, II Pass, and Marjory Vice, II ELL.

Chuck Tompkins, IV C & F, first speaker for the government insisted that the institution of a date bureau would not "just be for dances. The age of chivalry is not completely dead," he said. Such a facility would provide a means of effective labour conscription as well as taking "the sting out of last-minute dates." Moreover a date bureau would lead "those with a spirit of adventure into —the Lord knows what?"

Bureau Would Destroy Initiative

Speaking for the negative, Theresa Hoolihan exclaimed that a date bureau would have a "grave and depreciating effect upon the entire body of St. Michael men, and would ultimately destroy their initiative." It would give the men a false sense of security, leaving "no impetus to sparkle socially with vim, vigour and interest. College mentality means the poise and savoir faire to get a girl," Miss Hoolihan explained. "You simply can't bureaucratise society. To accept such a system is beyond the comprehension of a lily or a lady. Have no fear, men of St. Michael's", Miss Hoolihan concluded, "opportunity awaits you on every curve."

Girls Would Get Toe Caps

The second speaker for the government, Miles Kennedy, I ELL, said he was sad at heart. He told the story of a seemingly sane young man who had begun saving his money, gone on a blind date, only to be found the next morning crawling about the floor frothing at the mouth. Kennedy blamed the present bureauless system for this event. For girls dating non-dancers, he suggested the free loan of steel toe caps by the bureau. "You phone up the date bureau and there you have all the facts, and all the figures," Kennedy said. Besides such an institution would be on a personal basis, enabling the daters "to know all they wanted to know, and quite a bit to spare."

Appeals to Male Price

In opposition to the motion, Marjory Vice stated that there is "ample opportunity for the suave debonnaire men of St. Michael's College to meet the lovely and attractive yound ladies of St. Joseph's College, and Loretto Abbey." Miss Vice suggested that the idea of a date bureau was probably prompted by the panel-polishers at Newman. She insisted that free dating was part of a man's education. In a final exhortation, she appealed to masculine pride: "Men, act like men. Choose your own women."

Joseph Smallwood Speaks Today To Liberal Club

Joseph R. Smallwood, Newfoundland's dynamic Liberal leader and the island's chief advocate of Confederation with Canada, will address an open meeting of the University of Toronto Liberal Association at 4.15 p. m. today in Cartwright Hall, St. Hilda's College. Mr. Smallwood will tell the story behind the recent decision of the Newfoundland people to seek union with Canada.

JOSEPH SMALLWOOD

Born in Newfoundland 48 years ago, Mr. Smallwood was a newspaper reporter in St. John's, Halifax and Boston and editor of the Evening Advocate and Daily Globe in the island capital before turning to politics. He was campaign manager for the late Rt. Hon. Sir Richard Squires, Liberal prime minister of Newfoundland before the commission government regime. In 1946 he was elected to the Newfoundland National Convention and a year later was chosen a member of the seven-man delegation which went to Ottawa to seek terms of Confederation.

He is the author of seven books on Newfoundland and for seven years made 15-minute daily broadcasts over the Newfoundland radio.

Dynamic Approach Stressed By P.H.E. Professional Sport Not Encouraged

The School of Physical and Health Education. Sounds like a swell opportunity for getting the latest information on football rules, basketball technique and perhaps the occasional tip on the ponies at Woodbine, doesn't it? Sure, and it is, but it is also a lot of hard work both physical and academic.

Contrary to general opinion on the campus, the three-year course does not stress the athletic side of its curriculum, said Dr. Stanley Ryerson, Director of the School. The course is divided into three divisions, Arts and Science, Health Education and Physical Education. "We aim to turn out well-rounded personalities", said the director. "The student must take a full Pass Arts timetable in additional to the Health and Physical Education."

From the first year, the dynamic view of health is pointed up. Dr. Ryerson and the staff teach the principle that good health is a combination of three factors; quality of structure, degree of efficiency of the structure, and adaptation of the organism to its environment. If any of these three is deficient the organism (man or any lower animal) has suffered a loss of health. Thus Dr. Ryerson's theory is that health is a positive entity capable of being lost and also regained.

"Students of the School have a wide-open field after graduation," Dr. Ryerson said. The majority of women graduates become high school athletic teachers but until last year very few of the men went to O.C.E. Community recreational centres, camps, and industrial recreation clubs absorbed most of the men graduates. Should a graduate become inspired to undertake investigation and research there is available for him a very fertile and almost untouched field in physical, nutritional and psychological problems, and their relation to both individual and community health", said the Director. "The entry of graduates into the field of professional sport is not encouraged," he added.

This course and its technique is almost entirely the work of Dr. Ryerson. He developed his theory of health as a positive entity from work during the first and second wars and has delivered papers on the subject before many medical associations both in this country and abroad.

The course in Physical Health and Education at the University of Toronto is possibly the only course of its kind in Canada or United States that stresses a dynamic approach to the subject of health.

In 1940, at the request of Warren Stevens, a degree course for men and women students succeeded the former diploma course in Physical Education for Women. In the fall of 1941 the Margaret Eaton School was merged in the course and the School of Physical and Health Education was formed. In the first year of the new course 17 students graduated out of a class of 21. Since then, the school has graduated between 300 and 400 students.

Alcoholics Anonymous Will Open UBC Branch

Vancouver, British Columbia, Oct. 21—(CUP)— Alcoholics Anonymous, the self-help movement that has saved more than 80,000 confirmed drunkards from enslavement by the bottle, will establish a branch at the University of British Columbia.

An ex-alcoholic now studying agriculture there is forming an exclusive university branch of "AA" to save his fellow students from the mire of drunkenness he just escaped.

Among students at UBC, he says, there are many potential candidates who seek to save themselves from the affliction of liquor.

"It is surprising," he says, "the number of students who can't wait to get off the campus and everybody heads for the beer parlor.

"You see them every day, the same faces, down in the pubs."

"Just the other day," the sponsor of AA on the campus says, "I saw a young fellow and a girl roll out of a car at 8.30 in the morning just before lectures, still squiffed to the eyeballs with their car filled with beer."

Book Review

The Undergrad

The articles in this issue of The Undergrad are adequately controversial and could lead to a future presentation of opposing views. As long as a minimum of control is maintained, that is all to the good. Although the Controversy Section deals with a college matter, the principles involved are of much wider application and are particularly topical. The article on The Common Law is enlightening and should send the reader to Bleak House and Kafka to gain the human and moral perspective. The quotation from A. P. Herbert is almost worth the price of admission, merely to discover how pathetic a humorist can be when beyond his depth—or is Herbert out of context here? Convention Credo is a rather inept attempt to do the impossible but is interesting for its Eighteenth and Nineteenth Century connections. Perhaps the other credos will be allowed future space. Such capsule crystallizations of political philosophy are always invaluable when it comes to weighing practical party conduct.

The poetry section is slight in size and not too strong in quality. The chopped rhythm of Mary Ringsleben's poem gives a bated breath effect which, however, does not consistently fuse with the poetic meaning. A good poem, though. It is a pity that Housman is too evident in W. M. Gough's thought and structure for the next two poems to attain much underivative force, for the last three lines of the last poem display power.

Summer Straw is a satisfactory sketch which just misses being a subtly unified short story. A certain lack of precision in both conception and construction seems the primary cause. The directional flow is not concentrated or controlled, so the outline of the work has little intrinsic validity. On the other hand, The Fort on the Lea suffers from too much emphasis on a superficial aspect of the directed flow: the plot. The choice of historical setting was a mistake even though it allows the use of the device at the end which, in part, saves the story.

Perhaps it is one more symptom of our critical age, but the book reviews seem about the best things in the magazine. The review of Two Quiet Lives is excellent; Jack Smith's review, though more subjective and thus more open to criticism, is good; and Samuel Lavine handling Reed, perhaps not too concisely but justly, is better than in his article on law.

This first number of The Undergrad gives staff and contributors a substantial basis from which to work. The layout, general appearance content, despite a somewhat Time-ish cover—the red border, no doubt—holds to the middle course between the too ostentatiously sophisticated and the unimaginatively academic. It is probably the only course for an undergraduate publication.

Village of Souls

Philip Child's Village of Souls (Ryerson $3.00) has the distinction of being an historical novel which deals with one of the most pressing national issues facing Canada today. The novel, which is the author's first, presents an extremely authentic and moving portrait of seventeenth-century France and its inhabitants.

Village of Souls, which appeared in England in 1933, has as its basis a love-theme. The aristocratic Lys de Faverolles, who comes to New France as a "fille du roi," is courted by Jornay, a coureur du bois whose knowledge of Parisian society was confined to the thieves' quarter. An Indian girl from the Mississippi region who falls in love with Jornay completes the triangle. In the course of the novel many different lights are thrown on the relations of whites and Indians during the early days of New France. Mr. Child is the first writer to write of the Indian as a human being rather than as a freakish or sub-human creature, and he loses no opportunity to emphasize the gulf which separated the savage from his European contemporaries. He feels, moreover, that the type of education which the conquerors tried to foist upon the natives did nothing to bring the two races into close harmony. He points out that a people who have come to accept torture and bestiality as part of their code, and whose standards are adapted to the life they must lead, cannot easily be taught the meaning of Christian love. Yet he depicts the efforts of the missionaries with a sympathetic, albeit protestant, eye. The novel is packed with inci-

The Skin Of Our Teeth

Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth" opened Saturday for a week's run at Hart House under the direction of Robert McGill who also designed the colourful and ingenious sets. The production bore all the earmarks of Gill's great creative and organizational powers. He succeeded in establishing an atmosphere of highly pitched exuberance, built on, never subdued by, stunning precision and discipline, and he prodded the large cast of student-actors into giving not only their best, but an absolute best. Anna Cameron, as Sabina, stands out, of course. Her part makes almost inconceivable demands by reason of its length and protean qualities. She carried it with the grace and ease reminiscent of the way a native girl balances on her head a load which would make a mere sahib pant and stumble. The four members of the Antrobus family were faced with hardly less challenging tasks. There is quite a distance between a caricatured Andy Hardy family and a monumental group of archetypal figures. All four went as far in filling and exploiting this wide area as Wilder would allow them. Audrie Lowrie's Mrs. A. could go farthest and went in the right direction with truly noble and powerful results. In the figure of Mr. A. the two poles were not quite as clearly pinpointed and in consequence Eric House had to operate in an atmosphere of slight haze which makes his sound and carefully proportioned work all the more admirable. Since the play is panoramic, rather than microcosmically self-sufficient, Mr. A.'s offspring had to labour under the handicap of tending towards being parental extensions, instead of genuinely dramatic factors. Henry and Gladys A. had to pay some penalty for this arrangement, though one could not ask for neater and more tasteful interpretations than those given by Edward Follows and Eleanor Swan respectively. Cassandra in Atlantic City is as difficult a job of histrionic imagination as any of the aforementioned; Sheila Craig, the Fortune Teller, dealt with it in a completely reassuring manner. Audiences used to Gill productions will hardly require being told the minor parts, the handling of groups, and the technical work can only bring on rhapsodic references to happily chosen actors happy in their parts, absolute integration and almost complete illusion of effortlessness

Every particle of praise would be gladly repeated and expanded under oath but the urge to come to the play itself becomes irresistible. This is really the greatest compliment at the reviewer's disposal; is not he the greatest pianist who causes one to forget his flesh and bones and the wood and wire of his instrument? There is no question as to the effectiveness of the play. A look at the audience during and after the performance showed that Wilder had succeeded in setting in motion a record number of little cerebral wheels, many of which had become rusty and forgotten through disuse. If a playwright (and cast) attains just that there is ample reason for gratitude. The therapy of the alternate dip into the hot tub of pathos and the cold one of rehearsal atmosphere is not merely a splendid curb on preachiness, but often so truly successful that one actually depends on the other (e.g. the double presentation of the philosophers' quotations in act III; the unbearable made acceptable, even valuable). Yet, somehow, this device carries with it a note of self-consciousness that slams the door on greatness. But I am quite prepared to admit that the gain of an almost actively participating audience was worth the cost. It certainly serves to wipe out potential rebellion against the device of telescoped time which is definitely appropriate to our anthropological age. I would suggest that the play is valuable because it snaps at the lazy abandon to mechanico- historical semiconsciousness, rather than on account of its "carry on" moral.

If nothing has been said of dinosaurs, lantern slides and the other delightful paraphernalia it was because I am naturally assuming that all those within the range of this department will look at them themselves.

It is sad to know that the capacity of Hart House Theatre for this run does not equal the number of enrolled students; but we would rather see long lines of mourners unable to buy their tickets than a single empty seat in the auditorium, because that would be a blot on the collective escutcheon.

Lubka Kolessa

Lubka Kolessa's all-Chopin recital at Eaton Auditorium last Saturday was one of the first recitals this season—and one may predict it will be remembered as one of the most remarkable ones. The hall was filled to capacity in spite of the regretably late announcement of the detailed program. But Mme. Kolessa is rightly known to be at her best in playing Chopin; and music-lovers in the case of Chopin never come to listen to this or that particular work, they flock together to enjoy that unique musical magic, the Chopinesque.

The program was unusually, but effectively constructed. Chopin's most weighty compositions, the two sonatas, marked the opening and end. The central position was occupied by the Allegro de Concerte, op. 46, a "different" Chopin. Its healthy, unperturbed spirit, its many diatonic sections, the use of contrast within short space, apparently all rare with Chopin, acted as a welcome relief from the tension of the passionate Bb min-

Blue Soccer Teams Win Two Victories

By BILL BABCOCK

With a masterful display of soccer skill on rather uneven turf, the Varsity Blues racked up their third straight win of the season as the defeated McGill 4-2. All members of the forward line, except one, accounted for a goal.

After only three minutes of play, Bob Antoni bashed the ball into the net to put Toronto out front. He was followed closely by Brian Barton, who was put into the clear on a beautiful pass from his winger, and made no mistake. The play now surged back and forth and McGill came through with a fine goal on the part of Hayward.

After half-time, Toronto came back strongly and gave the home fans something to cheer for when Jimmy Colvin smashed a sure shot into the mesh from close quarters. For a while the Blues surged around the goal and had many shots on the goal. No less than eight of these went astray because of the uneven ground and the difficulty of judging the ball.

Then catastrophe befell the Blues when centreman Antoni was hurt on the play. He was replaced by Adam Glass who played well. The final goal by Toronto was scored by Jim Barber. Taking a pass from Barton, Jim streaked down the right side of the field, eluded three Redmen, and drove a shot that was too hot for the goalie to handle. The Toronto defence now made their only mistake of the season when they assisted McGill's cause by potting the ball neatly into their own goal. Thus the score ended 4-2 for the Blues.

INTERMEDIATES WIN 4-0

Paced by Captain Al Beckwith with two goals, the Intermediate soccer team gave McMaster a severe trimming on the front campus Friday afternoon to the tune of 4-0. Bill Leach opened the scoring in the dying moments of the first half, when he dribbled in to fake the goal-keeper out of the net and booted the ball home. The play during this half was fairly even with neither team seeming to have an advantage in play.

After the second half opened the Blues defence stiffened and their forward line really started clicking. Al Beckwith, always the worker, was in at the pay-off on two of these scoring occasions when he carried the ball in and made no mistake either time. Both of his goals were neat efforts when he dribbled in and around the Mac defence to get a clear shot at the goal. Glen Williams completed the scoring for Toronto when he was awarded a penalty shot as a result of rough play on the part of McMaster defence.

Wycliffe counted four times while Emmanuel notched one goal for the final score of 4-1.

McGill Win Rugger Tilt By 6-5 Score

By HANK WESTCOTT
Sports Editor

When you see a McGill coach stand and cheer a Varsity play—it's real sportsmanship, and that's the kind of thing that was commonplace at Varsity Stadium, Friday afternoon, when Varsity and McGill opened their annual home-and-home rugger series.

McGill won 6-5, but winning or losing seems to be an incidental factor in the game for the 15 players on each team. Before and after, they were chatting away like brothers, and in one case that is exactly what they are. Don Glen is the captain of the Blues, while his brother John is a star forward for McGill.

To add to the disbelief of the fans, the Varsity coach, Jack Gibbs, refereed the game, and was commended as "very fair" by the McGill team.

But even with such overt examples of friendliness, the game is definitely not for women and children. Varsity's Bill Reisbury came off with a leg injury, and teammate Alec Douglas had a face laceration that took two stitches to close. McGill's Jack Fairweather suffered an injured shoulder.

More confusion was added when a penalty goal attempt that Don Glen kicked looked good from the stands, but was ruled wide by referee Gibbs. Until the game was over, the fans thought Varsity had won. But they have their chance to even the count when the two teams clash in Montreal next Saturday in the return game in the points-to-count series for the title which Varsity won last year.

McGill held all the scoring fire in the first half, with Varsity unable to crack the superb McGill defence. Wally Tilden started the Montrealers on the way with a three-point penalty goal, and Scott scored a try a few minutes later. The convert was no good.

Varsity carried the play in the second term, with Vibert finally breaking through for a try (three points) which Glen converted for the other two points.

Both teams had members from England, Australia, and Maritime Canada, with one, McGill's Charles Alexander, a former player with the famous London Scottish team.

Dents Edge Forestry In Football Contest

Dents rugby team gained a win over Forestry in a Group III rugby game Friday afternoon by a score of 7-6.

Dents scored a converted touchdown and a single in the first half to give them their seven points. McKusker crossed the line for the major while Woolidge converted and later added a single.

Cuff chalked up five of the points for Forestry when he went over for a major and Sheldon kicked the convert to leave Forestry on the short end of the 7-6 score.

Gals Tie Men In Lacrosse At Trinity

St. Hilda's women held their Trinity brothers to a 6-6 tie on Friday in the first men-versus-women lacrosse game ever held on this campus.

The Saints were playing by women's rules and the men were playing by their rules. The girls found it hard to get used to the men's hard checking but actually were at an advantage as their rules call for twelve players instead of the men's five.

To make it more even, Christie Russell, Saints' goalie, traded places with Jim Brownell and drew anguished gasps from her team-mates when she stopped their shots. The distaff side had added aid in the form of Syd Lynde, who turned 'Saint' for the game.

The battle of the sexes raged from three o'clock to a quarter to four from one end of Trinity field to another, with no time out and also no referees. The men led all the time but when the women upped their points to tie the score, the exhausted group ended the game.

One Trinity player asked what he thought of girls' lacrosse, came out with the astonishing comment, "They were too rough."

Junior Harrier Won By School

Senior S.P.S. ran away with the Junior Harrier Meet held Saturday morning on the back campus. St. Mike's, who won the championship last year failed to make a showing in the first three spots.

As in golf, the lowest score is declared the winner and the Senior Schoolmen won with 68 points. The Junior Engineers from Ajax ran a close second with 72 points. Trinity with 98 points was third.

Flower of U.C. was the individual champion, coming in first, while McCurry from the faculty of Dentistry followed close by. U.C.'s Hyrshko came in third.

The first ten in the meet are as follow.:

(1) Flower—U.C.
(2) McCurry—Dents.
(3) Hyrshko—U.C.
(4) Denbigh—U.C.
(5) Forestall—St. Mike's.
(6) Gray—Ajax.
(7) Smith—Ajax.
(8) Greene—S.P.S.
(9) Findlay—S.P.S.
(10) Winch—Vic.

Molson Stadium To Be Enlarged

Montreal, Oct. 24—(Staff)— Vic Obeck has advanced plans to enlarge Molson Stadium's seating capacity to 35,000 and the plan is regarded favourably by university officials, sources here say. If carried out the Montreal bowl will be the largest in Canada.

The plan calls for "expansion and not reconstruction," according to Obeck who wants to extend the grandstand around the east end and along the south side.

The present capacity of Molson Stadium is about 16,000 and that's with a lot of 'shoe-horning.' With requests for tickets reaching an all-time high Obeck feels that the McGill squad could easily draw 35,000 every week.

Girls' Tennis Team Ties For Top Slot

By JOAN HUME

Kingston, Oct. 24—(Staff)—The women's intercollegiate tennis team fought to a tie with McGill for first place in the meet held at Queen's on Friday and Saturday. Queen's was two points behind Toronto and McGill with seven points and Western ran third with five.

Pat Cockburn, Trinity III, won two games as Varsity's first singles player. She easily downed the McMaster singles' player 6-0, 6-4. The Western player gave her a better game, but Pat came from behind to defeat her 4-6, 6-2, 6-3. Dot O'Brien of Queen's showed topnotch tennis when she defeated Pat 6-1, 7-5, after a well-fought match.

But Pat Cockburn, Intramural tennis champ, really proved herself in her match with June Devaur of McGill. This game between Pat and June Devaur, who won all her matches, was one of the best games of the tournament. Pat put up a great fight and gave the McGill player a wonderful game although she lost 6-1, 6-4. This score against June was not bettered by any of the other first singles' players.

Pat Montgomery, PHE I, second singles player for Toronto won all her matches. Her iron will have had a gruelling test when she meet Betty Evans of McGill. Many of the games between these two went to deuce and it was add out, add in, time and again. After winning the first set 6-4, Pat was losing the second set 5-2. If she had muffed the rally it meant losing the point, game and set to Betty Evans but that didn't phase Pat. She won that rally and then five games in a row to win the second set 7-5 and take the match.

The blue and white doubles team of Jane Matthews, Trinity III and Ev. Aiken, Vic II, only dropped one game their first, when they lost 6-1, 2-6, 6-4 in a close struggle with McGill. Western put up a valiant struggle but went down before the Toronto pair who used some spectacular shots.

McGill won the meet last year and Varsity took third place behind Queen's. Sceptics said that the Toronto team had had little chance of beating McGill this year, whose coach is Eleanor Files who ranks second in the realm of Canadian tennis. But our team displayed topnotch tennis, losing only three matches and kept the Montreal women from the shutout they had last year.

Afterthought

Elbow-Smash Gives Penalty To Meirowitz

By BOB JONES

Montreal, Oct. 24—(Staff)—Gaudeamus igitur was strictly the post-game theme for Varsity as they dispersed to various points on Montreal Island. The Red and White goalposts were downed and dismembered in a fashion similar to that employed minutes before by the Blues as they took the McGill line apart.

* * *

Evidently, Jack Parks of the London Free Press attempted an apology for Western's close shave here last week by pointing an editorial finger at six McGill players and shouting "Import!" A half-time skit on Saturday ridiculed the accusation by having six Cadillacs driven onto the field; out of these emerged six uniformed replicas of the suspected Americans and these worthies proceeded to distribute stage money about the field to the great amusement of the McGill crowd. That skit, incidentally, along with a high-school kicking contest prevented the College bands from putting on any display; the trip for Bob Cringan and his lads was therefore not all it might have been.

The truth about the Americans, according to local sources, is that their presence here in the north is prompted solely by academic ambition; at least two of them have been residents of the city for some years. The others including Meirowitz, star ex-Syracuse lineman, are taking advantage of the GI Bill of Rights plan to attend McGill.

Bob Masterson stole a leaf from Obeck's notebook on Saturday when he made full use of the unlimited substitution rule in employing Huycke and Volpe almost exclusively as defensive secondaries while Cummings and Waldon were sent in to spark the offensive. Obeck substituted three backfielders on an exchange of the ball, leaving the full-back and flying wings to do a full time job. The system backfired on Vic but was so successful for the Blues that Masterson will probably retain it for the remainder of the schedule.

SPORTSWOMAN

UC I took Vic I for a 7-5 defeat in the only softball game played on Friday. Taking a hold of the game in the last half of the 1st inning, UC drove five runs across the plate. Vic came to life in the third inning, scoring all five runs, but could not catch up to the fast playing UC team.

On the mound for UC, Joan Macgregor pitched a steady game. Outstanding in the fielding was UC's Betty May, who made two vital catches in the second inning. The batting of both teams was good, and it was the errors of the Vic players that brought about their defeat.

Even Vic Obeck, sitting dejectedly in the Montreal dressing room had praise for the Blues. "The way they played today they could beat any team in the league," he praised.

SOCCER NEGLECTED

The Editor, The Varsity,
Dear Sir:

A Leprechaun happened to be passing your staff room a week ago Saturday night, October 16th, and amidst the general gnashing of teeth heard a more trenchant note, the gnawing and rending of a piece of paper. When your chagrined Sports Staff had retired, our leprechaun sneaked in and found the minced and tattered remains of the report of last Saturday's Senior Blues Soccer Game—handed in by an accredited representative (not me Ed.).

If I did not have friends in the spirit world, I would have accused your Sports Editor of assault and mutilation in the case of Soccer vs The Varsity Staff! But he now has my profound sympathy.

Doubtless when the news came over that both the Argos and The Maple Leafs had lost, he could scarcely blink his eyes in that shadowy vale of tears, and so further fractioned the single half column usually so generously allotted to soccer—the only winning team in a major sport that weekend.

From somewhere in the mists of memory a snatch of song keeps haunting me: "We'll shout and fight for the Blue and White, And the honour of U of T." I once thought that Senior (and Intermediate) soccer also wore blue and white, but my eyes have been opened. That team—and the year before that, and the year before the year before that—has had its blue and white splashed beyond recognition with the purple of victory.

Yours with heartfelt condolence,
Erri Thompson, I Meds.

CANADA SAVINGS BONDS

The Editor, The Varsity,
Sir:

The subject of this letter may, on cursory review seem trivial, but it appears to me to require clarification.

At the present time, the Dominion Government is floating another issue of Canada Savings Bonds. They will be available on November 1, bearing interest at 2 3-4 per cent per annum. Strangely enough, the financial year of our Chartered Banks ends on the 30th of November. These two facts may indeed be uncorrelated, but let us go further.

If you purchase a bond from your savings account, you lose your interest on that amount for the last quarter, (September to November) and the bank gains at least two interest-free months. Even though your new bond bears interest at a higher rate than a savings account, it is still insufficient to repay you for having lost three months' interest at 1 1-2 per cent per annum compounded on the lowest amount in each quarter.

Individually, the difference is relatively small but on considering a multi-million dollar issue it is evident that very material advantages accure to our financial giants —the banks.

or sonata. The program also contained groups of etudes and waltzes.

That Mme. Kolessa's playing was of the highest order hardly needs to be emphasized. Her technique was flawless and powerful, yet the total effect was one of musical sensitivity (especially in the inimitable lyrical melodies of Chopin) rather than of brilliancy. Altogether, I have never enjoyed Mme. Kolessa's playing more than in this recital.

dents designed to impress even the cold-blooded reader—the burning of two Iroquois braves on the Place d'Armes for instance. There are no stock types, and characters like Marie de L'Incarnation and Father Bernard stand out in vivid contrast to rogues like Bertrand and Titange. Perhaps too much attention was devoted to the early life of Lys, considering the limitations of space, but certainly the central protagonist, Anne, was adequately treated.

Today, when Indian affairs are coming to the fore in the national scene, Mr. Child's book will be read with more than a passing interest. For his extensive research into the myth and folk-lore of the first Canadians enabled him to present a valuable study in the psychology of a native people. Certainly Village of Souls should arouse in Canadians a deep interest in a problem as yet unsolved.

Lee Cowan.

Undoubtedly these bonds are an ideal, risk-free investment and our banking system is 'second-to-none, but why, may I ask, can't the Treasury wait until December 1 to market its securities? Thus, the small investor could still buy his bond and get his full savings interest as well.

Buy Canada Savings' Bonds? Sure, but if you keep your money in the bank, then leave it there until December 1. You still lose (accumulated bond interest) but not so much!

COLE SCAN

The late great humorist (to borrow a phrase from TIME) Robert Benchley, never did graduate from Harvard, even though he completed the four required years of attendance. In his graduating year he was obliged to write a thesis, and for his selection of topic, he was confined to a series of subjects that rivalled each other for dullness. Completely out of sympathy with his subject, and nursing a deep resentment for his unimaginative instructors, Benchley finally made his choice and spent several months of his final year at Harvard in the preparation of his thesis. Beaming in his characteristic way, Benchley presented the completed project, satisfied that he had given a stuffy subject an imaginative treatment. Unfortunately, his instructors lacked Benchley's sense of humor and he was not allowed to graduate; they didn't like his treatment of the subject. He had chosen The Newfoundland Fisheries Disputes, a satisfactory choice, but had written it from the viewpoint of the fish.

Student Poll Asks Opinion On ISS Plans

The local committee of the International Student Service will conduct a poll of student opinion today to find out the feelings of the student body toward the relief activities of the I.S.S. The results of the poll will help to determine the goal for the relief money, which is collected each year by I.S.S. in their annual campaign.

A group of girls situated in the various faculty and college buildings, between the hours of 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. will ask the following questions:

Are you in favour of sending relief to fellow students in Europe and Asia?

What form do you believe the relief should take? i.e. would you rather have the money going into the purchase of books, clothing, and food, or for some other reconstruction plan?

To what three countries would you prefer to see the relief go?

Information gathered by this poll will be of great assistance in determining future relief activities of International Student Service, and it is hoped that the girls will receive the students' co-operation, said Warren Goldring, I.S.S. president.

The main purpose of the poll, Warren Goldring stated was to give direction to the University of Toronto delegates at the Conference. It (the Poll) was also expected to influence the decision of the whole Conference on these very important matters he said.

"The entire value of these two points depends on the care and the intelligence of the students in answering the questions in this poll," Goldring said.

Ontario Premier To Address Rally Of P.C. Students

Ontario's new premier, the Hon. T. L. Kennedy, will be the speaker at the first open meeting of the U. of T. Progressive Conservative Club. The meeting will take the form of a noon-hour rally, and will be held Thursday, Oct. 28, in West Hall, U.C., at 1:00 p.m.

The subject of Premier Kennedy's address will be "My Policy". There will be a question period at the conclusion of his talk.

This meeting will mark the beginning of the P.C. Club's regular activities for the year. Regular meetings will be held once a month which will be addressed by prominent party leaders. Included among those who will address the club later in the year will be the party's new national leader, George Drew.

Grads Give Coeds 'Gen' On Post-Graduate Careers

Inside information on the ways and means of beginning careers in public relations, publishing and the allied fields was dispensed to Varsity women undergraduates who attended the Career Forum, sponsored by the Panhellenic Association in the Women's Union yesterday.

Careers on Parade, featuring advice from Joyce Tedman, ex-newspaperwoman and publicity agent; Mrs. Pauline McGibbon of the National Film Board; Zoe Trotter, radio and newspaperwoman who was the first woman to represent a newspaper in the press gallery of the Alberta legislature; Mildred Spicer, U. of T. Class of '47, now Assistant Fashion Editor of Chatelaine magazine; Ruth Wells of the Ontario Department of Travel and Publicity, and Kay Mathers of Clarke, Irwin & Co., publishers, stressed the opportunities available for women in these fields. The need, various speakers agreed, is for women who are enthusiastic, willing to work hard, and for those who have the winning combination of self-reliance and femininity.

Miss Wells, a graduate of the University of Manitoba, sketched her own career as art teacher, globe-trotter, saleslerk in a London, England, department store, and, later, as a member of the fashion and advertising department of the same store. During the war, she joined one of the women's services, travelled in Europe and the Near East. The keynote of the policy of the Department of Travel and Publicity, she said, was service and assistance in giving out information.

Open Fields

"If you can do the job, you can get it," declared Mrs. Pauline McGibbon, who spoke on careers for women in commercial and government films. The fact that top-flight positions can be and are held by women in the publishing field as well was emphasized by Miss Kay Mathers, who represented that type of work. "There is no discrimination against women," said Mrs. McGibbon. 'Women may be employed as producers, script writers, managers, as well as technical workers, research assistants and film librarians. Mrs. McGibbon mentioned that she, herself, had first become interested in movies as a volunteer on a committee on which her job

University in '49 For Newfoundland Says J. Smallwood

"Newfoundland will soon have its own university," said Joseph R. Smallwood, chief advocate of the island's union with Canada, in an interview with The Varsity yesterday. At present the island's only institution of higher earning is University College where students may enroll in the first two years of courses in arts, science and pre-meds.

The standards of the college are high and students leaving it are accepted at most Canadian universities, including the University of Toronto, where they are given full credit for their courses. However, most Newfoundland students who desire a university education attend Dalhousie or Mount Allison.

Unique Feature

A unique feature, said Mr. Smallwood, of education in Newfoundland, is "it's completely denominational. While all grants to the schools come from the government and the standards are set by it, the schools on the island are run by the Salvation Army, the United, Roman Catholic and Anglican Churches. Officials of the Department of Education are nominated by the denominations," he said.

"The terms of the union by which Newfoundland entered confederation with Canada, guaranteed that the present educational system would be allowed to continue as long as desired and made provision for the union of any denominational schools," said Mr. Smallwood.

Improvements

"Illiteracy is rapidly disappearing in Newfoundland and the past 10-12 years have seen the greatest improvement," Mr. Small said. In his lifetime the statesman has seen the educational grant rise from one-half to four and a half million dollars. Newfoundland, with a population of 327,000 now has 1,400 schools and 2,300 teachers.

Mr. Smallwood addressed a large open meeting of the Toronto Liberal Association yesterday afternoon.

He outlined the history of government in Newfoundland beginning with its appointed governor in 1729 and tracing development up to the present time when a national referendum showed a 7,000 majority in favor of confederation.

Confederation

When Canadian confederation was first outlined at the Quebec Conference in 1864, Newfoundland had already obtained responsible government. The island's delegates to the conference highly approved the proposed union but when the matter was referred to the people, it was rejected decisively. "So decisive was the defeat," said Mr. Smallwood, "until 1946 no public man would dare admit openly that he favored confederation." It was in 1946 that an elected national convention was held to decide which choices of a future government should go before the people in a referendum.

Since 1934 Newfoundland has had a Government by Commission. This form of government replaced their system of responsible government and was deemed necessary by the United Kingdom when the depression of the 30's left the country bankrupt. It consisted of a governor who was advised by six appointed ministers, three from the United Kingdom and three from Newfoundland.

Two conditions made by Britain for restoring responsible government were that the island become self-supporting again and that the people request it, he declared.

The end of the war saw New-

Can't You See Blackboards Either?

It had to happen sooner or later. Yesterday was the day. The students filled Convocation Hall and waited for the lecture to begin. It was a lecture in psychology and the large size of the class made the blackboard nearly impossible to see. The professor started writing on the board. The students strained to see the writing on the board. Then a student in the balcony did it. He pulled out a pair of binoculars and started taking notes.

For all those interested in acting or announcing for the University Radio Shows, there will be auditions today at 4.15 p.m. in West Hall, University College. The Director of Production, Mel Breen, Graduate Studies, will give a short introductory talk outlining the plans for the year. Whether or not you have submitted an application to the Committee please come to this important meeting.

"The auditions will be conducted by the Production staff and everyone will be given an opportunity to try out for the first program. This meeting will also form the basis for appraisal of your position in the programs projected for the year. The Production staff is anxious to organize all the available campus talent, so please do not miss this first meeting," said Breen.

VARSITY PARTY

The first Varsity party will be held this Thursday evening at Fantasy Farm. All Varsity staff members are invited to sign a list in the Varsity News Office if they expect to attend. The group will meet at the office at 8:30 p.m. and proceed to the farm. Admission is one dollar per person.

Night Classes

Thousands Attracted By Extension Courses

By HERB WOOD

Tonight men and women will be hurrying across darkened campus and under the three lights that illuminate the main entrance of University College. They are people with a purpose. Every night but Friday and Saturday you can see them, the young and old, through rain or snow, all possessing the common desire for knowledge.

Dr. W. J. Dunlop, silver-haired and bespectacled, has been director of the University Extension Department since its beginning in 1920. Year by year, he has kept pace with modern requirements through the introduction of new courses. At present the night student has a choice of fifty different subjects. Included in this group are Authorship, Chinese, Interior Decoration, Metallurgy, Nutrition and Drama. For a time, the class in Drama was discontinued. This is how it happened.

A mature, grey-haired woman besought Dr. Dunlop for a part in a play.

"I played that very part in high school when I was a girl," she appealed.

And there was a young, vivacious creature who bemoaned that she had been left out entirely. Dr. Dunlop gave commands and all casting stopped. The group began again, but without the controversial play-acting.

Trade-Unionists Complain

Dr. Dunlop smiled as he recalled another complaint. This time representatives from a class in Public Speaking for trade-unionists came to him with a grievance.

"Our instructor doesn't give us enough time for speeches."

"How much time do you require?" Dr. Dunlop inquired.

"Twenty minutes would be fine."

"All right, I'll see that you have all the time you need."

The next time the class met, Dr. Dunlop slipped in after it had started. He pulled out his watch. The first speaker started but came to a dead stop after only two and one-half minutes.

"Go on," urged the instructor.

"No, I'm finished. That's all I wanted to say."

The next one took only two minutes and the third, one and one-half minutes. Such is the method used by Dr. Dunlop to keep every one happy.

The University evening classes have no entrance qualifications and the tutorial classes do not lead to any examination, certificate, diploma, or degree. Last year more than 8,000 people attended these lectures. Toronto and its University stand out across the Dominion as the only example of university night classes. An example of the popularity of these courses was shown last week. The class for purchasing agents taking such subjects as Tariffs, Transportation, Economics and Psychology overflowed a room seating two hundred and seventy people! The overflow group were assured of accommodation for the next class by Dr. Dunlop. "Arrangements will always be made for those seeking education," he pointed out.

Salesmanship Popular

The evening courses are divided into two self-contained terms of ten lectures each. The first term begins in October and runs till the Christmas holiday and the second beginning in January. Fees, depending on the size of the class, are from five to ten dollars per course. The smallest classes have at least twenty people in them. The instructors are all members of the University staff except in such classes as Salesmanship and Business, when experts are called in from the business world. The course in Salesmanship is the most popular.

One day, Dr. Dunlop got the idea of transferring the evening classes to the College of Education building on Bloor Street. Everything appeared to favor the idea. Streetcars were handy, there was a large free-parking area, and the lonely walk across the campus was eliminated. But to the astonishment and dismay of Dr. Dunlop, the attendance dropped!

"We all know now," he chuckled, "that these people want to feel themselves a part of the University besides coming to learn."

The following is the first in a series of editorials contributed by the heads of the various political clubs on the campus. They do not reflect the opinions of The Varsity in any way.

The Liberal Party

There are two things upon which any party must base its appeal for students' support. The first is its philosophy; the second is its platform.

Liberalism is "the philosophy of freedom". This is the root meaning of the word, and this phrase has continued to sum up the essence of the party's principles in all the stages of its development. Freedom is the most valuable element in human life; Liberalism hence believes that it should be the first duty of the state to ensure the preservation and development of individual freedom in all its aspects. Freedom must be first: it must not be allowed to slip into second place behind any doctrinaire concepts of state control.

True freedom involves freedom from want and from fear, and from the hampering effects of social distress. Hence Liberalism holds the necessity of the provision by the state of adequate measures of social security and social service which will make freedom in the abstract become freedom in reality. The Liberal Party has in the past converted this belief into fact; it has passed almost every measure of social security on the Statute Books of Canada from Unemployment Insurance and Mother's Allowances, through to the Health Measures which are in formation at the present moment. In doing this it has so held the confidence of the Canadian people that it has been retained in office for twenty-two of the past twenty-seven years, and with the exception of sixteen years in all, continuously since 1896.

Freedom means also freedom of association in Trade Unions and other groups, freedom to bargain on equal terms, and freedom to obtain through one's own efforts those things which are most desired in the economic sphere. The Liberal Party has hence passed every single piece of progressive Dominion labour legislation, from the Industrial Disputes Investigation Oct of 1907 through to the new labor Code of 1948. The services in the promotion of the first Act of a young man by name of W. L. M. King were among those which later secured for him "employment from time to time in Ottawa". The public support which came to him in view of his continued development of labour law served to stretch this employment out considerably. It would seem logical that the present Liberal plank which pledges the party to continued support of collective bargaining and the support of union security will play their part in keeping Mr. King's successor long in office also.

Freedom, thirdly, means the freedom of all groups within this country to develop unhindered their own traditions and social heritages in the manner which seems best to them, so that they may make their own peculiar contributions to the richness of Canadian life. The Liberal party has long been the foe of artificial standardization and the compulsory dictatorship of racial majority. It has chosen its leader twice from among those distinguished Canadians of French language and ancestry, and has been the only political party to do so. It is the only party which can claim support from coast to coast in all regions and groups of the country.

This is Liberal philosophy and policy. It betrays none of the backsliding, hesitation, about-facing, and fluctuating leadership which are so obvious elsewhere. It has been instrumental in moulding Canada in the past. There can be no doubt that it contains also the germ of Canada's future.

Pres. U of T Liberal Assoc.

The Adventures Of Houndog Hormone, P.D

(Installment No. 2)

We left Houndog handcuffed to two men discovered by him trying to break into Good Old Charlie's Malting Plant. The clever detective had just told the men that he had sent for the police on his midget radio before he made the attempted arrest. In reality he had taken his radio in for repairs immediately upon the conclusion of the World Series and could not have sent the message as was claimed.

"You'd better turn yourselves over to me. And sans struggle," Hormone added with a cosmopolitan smile.

"Good heavens," said one of his captors, "you'll just wear your battery down. The nearest police station is three blocks away and my Dick Tracey radio never reaches more than two blocks."

"You mind your battery and I'll mind mine," Hormone said. But a low groan escaped his lips. There was still however one ray of hope.

The private detective glanced furtively to either side. Silently he balanced himself on the balls of his feet, (for in many ways Hormone was an unusual man). The double - dislocate - with - full-gaynor was his last gleam of salvation. This was a trick taught him at college by Busty Martin, and was especially designed for just such a situation as this. The captive did a double back somersault with full gaynor and dislocated the shoulders of both the men to whom he was handcuffed.

Long a fiend of ping-pong, Houndog was in ideal condition. He poised. With a catlike spring, he leapt twelve feet into the air. A terrible grinding rang through the cool night.

"Good God," he said (for he was a religious man), "I've been double-crossed. I've dislocated both armpits." He gave a little, devil-may-care laugh. "My best friends won't have to tell me now," he said.

Then he grimaced with pain and sank to the ground. Suffering was written on his face. "S-U-F-F-E-R-I-N-G", it read. He passed out.

"Something you've eaten, old man," said one of his companions, apparently in good health and unperturbed by the detective's performance of a double back somersault with full gaynor.

"He seems a little pale," said the other. "Let me slap his face." So saying, he belted Houndog with the back of his hand. The sleuth's head described a full circle.

"Remarkable chap," said the face-slapper.

"Do try to revive him, Hubert," said his friend. "He can't scream when he's unconscious, you know."

"I was wondering, George, what treatment we should give him now," said Hubert.

"How about No. 83?" His companion snorted in disgust. "Not on your life," he said. "Save it. You've had nearly half the bottle already all by yourself."

"Well then, we'll get him back to the meeting and let the C.V. decide what to do with him."

"Just as you say, old fellow," said Hubert, and they picked up the limp corpse and trotted off into the night.

Hormone came to in a dark, dank cellar. A loose candle flickered on a table in front of him. He was bound hand and foot. His bleary eyes focused slowly. He felt his armpits. "Thank heaven I've located them," he whispered, "I wouldn't have known myself without them."

Then he glanced around the room. A huge plaque hung on the wall beyond the candle. Cemented to it were human bones arranged to form letters.

He pored over the words. They read "Anti-Anti-Vivisection Society of America, Local 67." A terrifying scream rent the air, and a calm voice broke into the silence which followed with the words: "Come to order, gentlemen, come to order."

Hormone groaned. What horrible fate awaited him?

DP's Subject Of Third ISS Ajax Meeting

The first issue, facing the third annual conference of the International Student Service to be held at Ajax, October 29-30, will be the problem of D.P. students in Canada.

The conference hopes to bring forth a proposal whereby D.P. students may be brought to Canada to finish their University education, and become Canadian citizens. Consideration will also be given to the proposal of the I.S.S. at U.B.C., to bring students to study at a Canadian University for one year, Warren Goldring, chairman of I.S.S., explained.

Undergraduates, graduates, and professors representing the Canadian Universities, will gather to discuss and to determine the future programme of the I.S.S.. In addition to these, there will be an investigation of summer study, and travel opportunities; national, international, and regional conferences; exchange papers, correspondence, broadcasts and future meetings.

Ajax Student Wins SAC's Scholarship

G.M.A. Burton, 18-year-old student from Matheson, Ont., now resident at Ajax in first year Chemical Engineering has been awarded the $300 Students' Administrative Council Scholarship.

The award is made annually to the student living in the Manitoulin district who obtains the highest average in first class honors in the nine Senior Matric papers prescribed for the course which he chooses. The scholarship is tenable only in Medicine, Applied Science and Engineering, Forestry, Dentistry and Pharmacy.

Endorses Mission

It was with deep interest and gratification that I read of the holding of a University Christian Mission in the University from January 16th to 20th, 1949. The purpose of the Mission is to afford the students who are members of, or affiliated with, the Protestant churches represented on the committee, an opportunity to re-examine their views with respect to religion and thereby to stimulate and strengthen religious convictions. In these days when materialism and materialistic philosophies are rampant, educational institutions must be concerned more than ever before with the development of character as well as the sharpening of intellect, and encourage thereby the personification of the ideals founded in religious conviction that are essential for the solution of so many of the problems that are vexing mankind.

The University will be ready to co-operate equally in this regard with all religious denominations, and will support with equal enthusiam retreats or missions held by members of the Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths.

New Service Plan of RCAF Offers Summer Employment

This year the Royal Canadian Air Force is commencing two completely new plans for service during the summer months.

The first of these, known as the summer Employment Scheme, is applicable to former aircrew veterans only. Students coming under this plan must be enrolled in the faculties of Applied Science, Medicine or Dentistry. In order to qualify they must also intend to graduate in 1950 or 1951, or in the case of medical students, 1952.

Students will be given the privilege of working on practical engineering and medical projects in the R.C.A.F. Their age at graduation plus their number of years of service must not exceed twenty-seven.

Under the alternative plan, known as the Summer Aircrew Training Scheme, no previous service time is required. Applicants must be single and between the ages of eighteen and twenty-one. They will spend three summers with the R.C.A.F., and should intend to graduate in the year following their third summer of training.

Accepted applicants will receive the rank of Flight Cadet, with a pay of $143 a month, plus board. Upon graduation they will enter the R.C.A.F Regular, Auxiliary, or Reserve.

Anyone interested may secure further information and application forms from Professor T. R. Loudon of the Faculty of Engineering. All applications must be handed to him by November 10, 1948.

University Librarian To Obtain Doctorate At U.B.C. Ceremonies

The degree to Dr. Wallace and another to Luther Evans, Director of the Library if Congress, Washington, will be conferred at the ceremony marking the opening of a new wing at the University of British Columbia Library.

World Federal Government Attainable Says 4T8 Commerce & Finance Graduate

Creation of a world federal government was discussed in Luxembourg this September at a convention attended by a U. of T. graduate, Chuck Eddis.

Chuck, graduated last spring from Commerce and Finance, spent this summer and early autumn in Europe attending a series of conferences of the American Unitarian Youth. In September he took time off to represent Canada's World Government Association at the Congress of the World Movement for World Federal Government, in Luxembourg. The newly formed campus chapter of the World Government Association was thus indirectly represented by a U. of T. graduate.

During his undergraduate years Chuck belonged to the Student Christian Movement and, in his second year, was president of the Humanist Club. In his final year he was treasurer of the local Unitarian Church.

Luxembourg

In Luxembourg, Chuck was one of 281 official representatives, coming from Belgium, Canada, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Eire, France, Germany, India, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, United Kingdom and the United States. These delegates announced the purpose of their meeting in the preamble of the Luxembourg Declaration, adopted by them on September 10:

End Hunger

"Modern technology has dramatically united a world community, but that community—unlike the national communities which compose it—has no common government. Without such government it cannot achieve either justice or peace, or prosperity. Our generation demands the right to set its common house in order. It demands a government to serve the common welfare of all, to end hunger and to protect the lives, liberties and property of all men, which no national government can any longer protect."

Lord Beveridge told the delegates on the final evening of the convention, "You are concerned with the most tremendous transference of political power in all history."

Four-Fold Plan

The Luxembourg Declaration plans work toward world federal government by four general means. (1) It supports the formation of regional federations such as a "United States of Europe", as long as "they remain subordinated to the overriding objective of establishing World Federal Government." (2) "The development and transformation of the United Nations Organization into a World Federal Government" is suggested. (3) The support of a working majority of the members of each national legislature is to be sought. (4) Finally, "an aroused and informed public opinion" is to be created by "calling for a Peoples' World Convention in the autumn of 1950 for the purpose of drafting a Federal World Constitution and submitting it to the United Nations and to national governments for implementation."

Letters

The effect of the Congress upon Chuck may be seen in extracts of letters which he wrote to Charles Brown, graduate of last spring from Osgoode, and now Executive Secretary of the World Government Association. August 5, he wrote from Somerset, England:

"Last night we had a very sincere discussion on the present state of the world, a discussion started by a minister who spoke to us here at our farm camp. . . . . Long after he went home we were still talking about world government, and debating its practicality at the present time. I naturally argued the case for giving world government an energetic try, as our only hope. So many seem to have lost all hope, and anticipate war as inevitable.

Christian Mission To Hold Assembly At First of Year

After a year and a half of preparation by a General Committee representative of both faculty and students, a University Christian Mission will be held on this campus from January 16 to 20 inclusive.

Bishop Stephen Neill, Assistant to the Archbishop of Canterbury, is to be the Chief Missioner and will be assisted by fifteen others from Canada and United States.

In a joint statement issued yesterday, Chief Justice J. C. McRuer, Chairman of the General Committee, and Professor Charles Leslie, Chairman of the Executive Committee, said the main work of the General Committee had now been accomplished, and the success of the Mission now depends upon the activity of the colleges and faculties in forming committees to foster preparation on the local level.

"To fight against an idea is not good enough. We can meet with ultimate success only if we fight for an idea. It is our conviction that within the Christian Faith is found not only the highest idea, but the dynamic for its achievement. It is, therefore, most timely in the midst of conflicting ideologies to have presented to us on this campus the claims of the Christian Faith not only upon our personal life, but also our life within the University and as members of a world society," they said.

Psycology Head UNESCO Delegate Back From Paris

Dr. Bernhardt of the Psychology Department of the University of Toronto returned from Europe last week where he participated in a UNESCO conference dealing with the project of "Tensions affecting international understanding."

This meeting, the first held of its kind, took place near Paris on October 7 to 12. The project was attended by representatives of fifteen nations. Most of the delegates participating consisted of professors in different universities, in the field of social studies.

"As a result of this meeting, recommendations were made to national committees in the various states represented", Dr. Bernhardt said.

The conference also made reports to UNESCO in an advisory capacity. At this inaugural meeting a general line of action was agreed upon by the delegates in regard to the field of research work.

The project included work on attitude changes in relation to tension.

European Undergrads May Win Scholarships For Study in Canada

In a motion unanimously carried by an S.C.M. fireside meeting Sunday, the S.A.C. was asked to form a committee to investigate the possibility of bringing eight German students to the U of T next year.

The plan, which hopes to give 50 carefully selected German students a year's scholarships in Canadian colleges, came as a result of the six-week I.S.S. seminar held near Kiel, Germany, during the summer, and attended by Sunday night's speaker, Gordon Campbell. Referring to "Reasoned Trends of Thought" as discussed at the Seminar, Campbell declared that the theme was chosen to provide a wide survey of the social sciences and their implication for the physical sciences.

Student Players Use Novel Means To Preview Film

Three members of the Hart House players, W. Hutt, graduate of Trinity; Bea Goldberg, III UC, and Mel Breen, graduate of UC, will enact a "live preview" of the forthcoming movie, "Dear Murderer", which is scheduled to appear at the Odeon-Danforth Theatre in the near future.

"The three players will act out a scene of the film using the original script," D. Wareing, manager of the theatre, said Friday.

The players are scheduled to make their appearance at the theatre Thursday, October 28, at 8:45 p.m. They will also stage a similar scene in the Fairlawn Theatre the same night at 9:40.

VARSITY LECTURE

There will be a lecture given in the art of feature writing and narrative technique today in Room 11, U.C., at 1 p.m. All news and feature writers of THE VARSITY should attend.

Toronto Artists Featured At Red Feather Concert

The Red Feather concert, to be held in convocation Hall, Thursday, is the first of a series of annual presentations planned by the recently formed Undergraduate Association of the Faculty of Music.

The programme will feature several outstanding artists who are giving their services for the good of the cause. Sir Ernest Macmillan, Dean of the Faculty of Music will act as master of ceremonies, and there will be renditions by Leo Barkin, Hyman Goodman, Edmund Hockridge, Alberto Guerraro, Frances James, the Leslie Bell Singers, Dr. Healey Willan, and the Solway String Quartette.

Tickets are on sale at the S.A.C. offices and the Royal Conservatory Book Counter. Seats are not reserved and are priced at one dollar.

Callaghan To Speak At Library Tonight

Morley Callaghan will speak on "Postscript to Letters" at the first Library evening, tonight The The Library Evenings are held in the Hart House Library and are conducted by the Library committee.

Tonight's event will be a local "Author meets the critics" discussion. It is expected that Mr. Callaghan will answer questions about his new book "The Varsity Story".

There are four such evenings held during the year. Members gather about the fireplace and chat in an informal manner.

United Nations Week Is Approaching,

Birthday of United Nations Forgotten But Not The Need of European Orphans

In a world steeped in tradition, pomp and ceremony it seems a strange thing that one of the most important days of the year for peace-seeking peoples, slipped by unnoticed, unheralded and uncelebrated. How is it that the third birthday of the United Nations can be so easily forgotten?

This thought was borne out yesterday by commentator Sasha Davidson of the CBC who remarked that not even UN officials mentioned this oversight.

This apathy among both the members of United Nations and all thinking peoples of the world is a dangerous thing. Can it be that we who have holidays for every minor occasion fail to see the significance of remembering the beginning of this important organization?

To this group next week will be put the problem of the children of Europe. This is our problem and our duty so it is to be hoped that in the future more attention will be focused on immediate and critical human problems.

What can be done for the children of Europe, called by the New York Times "Europe's Little Old Wise People," is the pending question for the many committees, but there are many groups actually helping these waifs. Many orphanages have been set up in Italy, some under the sponsorship of nuns. The lack of equipment and facilities seems to be the main difficulty, but food, clothing and shelter, must be the prime need to be considered.

The children, who for so long have hidden in caves and bombed ruins, are now venturing out and pleading, not in words, but by the look in their faces, for help. We, who are privileged to live in a land of plenty, do not see the horror and want in the eyes of those innocent victims of war, can, and must keep this problem to the fore, in hopes that in some small way efforts will be launched immediately to alleviate this condition.

It is up to all of us to help those who are already working towards the goal and not hinder, through petty politics, something above the realm of race and creed.

Osgoode Grad. and Former Lecturer Greatly Honoured

Work is fun maintains Miss Waddell former mathematics lecturer at the University of Toronto, but the students of today don't realize the enjoyment that can be gained from her university work. She feels there is a responsibility which also goes with earning a degree and few of us appreciate our duty to the community and country. Speaking from experience the much-beloved lecturer stated present-day society places too much emphasis on material ends, rather than attainment in education and professional work.

Perhaps it is the fault of the teachers as they have not imparted to the students the fervour and excitement of a subject.

Having first gained degrees in pure mathematics from the University of Toronto, Miss Waddell went to Bryn Mawr for two years. Later she returned to her Alma Mater to become the first woman appointed to the mathematics staff where she remained until 1947. She became outstanding as a tutor and many famous people remember those extra lectures which were a boon to the athletes of the University, who missed lectures because of sports.

Leslie Blackwell at a banquet last year reminisced about Mary Waddell's coaching and probably many others such as George Drew, Connie Smythe, Wilson Woodside and Victor Sifton, will tell tales of lessons given by her.

As if all this work was not sufficient Miss Waddell studied law, entering Osgoode Hall in 1921. She was called to the bar three years later to become one of the only women to be both a lawyer and a teacher in mathematics at the University. Not many people know that she is a lawyer in her own right and a Notary Public, for her main forte is her gift of teaching.

After the last war she taught returned men and then took many classes in S.P.S.

In 1939 Miss Waddell studied pure mathematics at Chicago. Special work was done by her at Knox College, Moulton and St. Andrews.

As Canada lacks a mathematical asociation, Miss Waddell became the first woman to join the American Association, which was a great honour.

To complement her work with undergraduates, Miss Waddell acted as president of the University Women's Alumnae Association, and in June, 1948, was elected secretary-treasurer of the class of 1903.

A charming custom was her holding of tea parties in which she was able to meet her students away from the classrooms.

Mary Waddell is at present teaching extension classes at the University and continuing to help the undergraduates with their problems.

Conservatism More Expensive?

The Penguin series, always the best books for the least money, have recently published two books which give an up-to-the-minute picture of English politics, Labor Marches On, by George Parker, a Labor M.P., and The Case For Conservatism by Quinton Hogg, a Conservative M.P.

An amusing sidelight is the fact that the Conservative book sells for 50 cents, while the Labor volume is only 35 cents. The reason? An explanation lies in the publisher's note. When the publishers asked the two men to lay bare the facts of their respective parties as they saw them, they stated a definite number of pages to be written. When the two men completed their work, seems that conservatism overstated its case. Labor, being more definite and to the point, wrote the required number of pages. Mr. Hogg could not cut his book, so the publishers settled their dilemma by charging more for the conservative verbiage. All goes to show conservatives will have to cut down on their word power.

Diamonds On The Side

Nothing a man appreciates more than a pair of sox—knitted by his beloved . . . or so they say. For the befuddled female who knows little about knitting such things especially where diamonds are concerned, we have the solution. In the current Regent knitting book, there is a pattern, No. 2106, which is a plain sock, three diamonds down each side. The beauty of the pattern is that the diamonds are knitted in later . . . no need for innumerable little balls of various colored wool bobbing around. Strongly advised for those who knit like us . . . that is, for sufferers of digital immobility.

Chinese Touch

Just a jog from the campus is Chinatown, filled with ideas for gifts and unusual food. An example of a useful but different gift, suitable for THE wedding gift that we saw last week . . . a hand-lacquered tea tray, cream pitcher, sugar bowl, tea pot, six cups and saucers and queer little spoons . . . all in black with gold and red designs.

And when the menu at home becomes a little deadly, how about an oriental dish? Almonds, chopped celery, mushrooms, and rice boiled together with soya bean sauce poured over all . . . a tasty surprise.

Distaff Side

By PAULA ZUMSTEIN

Again this fall Varsity students are going down to Grenwich village to have their fortunes told. The most popular fortune-teller, Mrs. E. C. Fearnside, has been telling Co-eds the surprises in store for them for fifteen years and has gained an astonishing reputation for her uncanny predictions in some cases.

After entering the little green cottage on Hayter Street, the number and variety of people occupying the musty, smoke-filled tea-room is truly amazing. Women from fifteen to fifty glance toward the seer's cubicle awaiting their turn for as long as two hours in tense anticipation. The expressions of those leaving vary from disbelief to complete absorption, from new hopes to the depths of despair.

The interest in this irrational procedure stems from the number of incidents prophesied by Mrs. Fearnside that have come true. The spring is the most encouraging time to make a visit, and be assured of success in the coming examinations. Then there is the promise of the tall, handsome man to be met during the summer, week-ends up north, parties and dances to be attended, happy thoughts to discuss and compare with those received by others of a quite similar nature. Of course these predictions for a date in the distant future are either forgotten by the time they should be realized or are found to be of such a nature that almost any interpretation can be applied to prove their veracity.

A plumber working outside Mrs. Fernside's last week laughed as he spoke contemptuously, "There's a crystal gazer just around the corner and some of those women go right over there when they leave the tea-room and hear a different story every time, they're crazy". Could be.

Crossfire

U.N.

By JANET HARBRON

Everything is international these days and from the women's viewpoint it seems like a new fashion. Horizons are expanding until one feels that the something encompassing us will break like an overripe pumpkin and throw all sorts of people into nowhere.

As yet, to all intents and purposes, our tranquillity remains undisturbed. But apathy grows like a cancer destroying the inward part of a structure outwardly sound. It is important then for us to become part of the fashion and actively engage in the international new look.

There's no time like the present—an old cliche which serves us adequately as we approach United Nations Week. In Toronto we have a United Nations branch with an active women's section conducting their own meetings and engaged in varied educational and social activities. They feel that whatever our political views, understanding contemporary problems is of prime importance.

On the campus there is no United Nations Club but we have an ardent nucleus of students able and willing to see things in perspective.

A part well played in such a group leads to the attainment of higher goals after graduation. The U.N. has a comprehensive service employing interpreters, researchers, reporters and publicity people. It's a fine service ridiculously cheap in

"V-I-C-T-O-R ..." The pretty gals who led the Scarlet and Gold cheerleading section could very well have stopped right there. Victory, and what is synonymous, success, were the keynotes, not only at the football game last Tuesday, but also throughout the entire week.

Last Tuesday a Bob that had fast been developing into a full-scale Campus production, reluctantly but skilfully resumed its original and peculiar function at Vic. And on top of that a wonderful show as well. Director Doug Maxwell and every member of the cast and committee certainly should be congratulated. In particular we would like to single out Murray Maxwell's hard-working stage crew who provided the excellent scenery and costumes.

Last Wednesday afternoon Vic's Johnny Rhame was the individual star at the Senior Intercollegiate Track Meet as he garnered two firsts and a second. Such outstanding athletes as LaRochelle and the McCarlands were overshadowed by Johnny's brilliant performance.

Coming from behind and battling all the way, a fighting Scarlet and Gold twelve defeated the highly rated Medsmen 9-6 in a closely-fought game.

Yes, it's been a great week for Vic but rather than dabble in the past, let's take a look at the next seven days. In the world of sports it's that all-important game tonight between Vic and Skule. The new, eye-catching football sign in the main hall of Vic provides all the information with regard to time and place. But at the same time there is an unwritten message which goes something like this ...

"LET'S BEAT SKULE!!! EVERYBODY OUT!!!!" And when the cheerleaders swing into action, let 'em know you're there.

Once again it's Red Feather time and once again Vic has an honour to uphold. Last year we won the award for having the highest per capita contribution on the campus. Harry Green who is in charge of the Vic Campaign this year, announces that there are very big plans in the making that should see Vic go over the top. These will be announced in the very near future. Keep your eyes open because, believe me, it's really going to be something.

Here's the bloodhound department. If anyone nose where the V.C.U. can find a good photographer to be present at College events contact any member of the Executive. Doug Maxwell has asked us to sniff around for more people to help with the decorations at the Vic Informal. Preliminary details have been outlined but now the Committee needs artists. Don't be bashful peoples, let Doug know via the V.C.U. office.

The Class of 4T9 are asked to meet in front of Vic by 7:30 this evening. Then on to the square dancing, round dancing, stunts, food and fun at Fallingbrooke. And be sure to wear your old clothes. There's a 5T2 Class do in the offing this Friday but we're not quite sure of the details. Better keep your eye on the bulletin board.

Here's another note for 4T9'rs. All graduation pics, including those to be taken from November 22 to 25 will be taken at Ashley and Crippen's on Bloor St.

The Wymilwood Record Hours will begin on Thursday, October 28, at 4:30 in the Blue Room and will continue at the same time on Monday and Thursday each week. Gordon McKenzie will be the Thursday commentator. A week from tonight Lister Sinclair will address the Club but more of that later.

Contrary to earlier statements it's not a Rub and it's not a "Shove". It's just a nice, quiet, chummy "T" Dance and it's going to be held in Alumni Hall tomorrow afternoon between the hours of four and six. Allow us to quote from the words of Mabel. Who's Mabel, you ask? Why, she's the Chick from Vic who has so much to say in the new Vic Handbook that is definitely coming out this week. Anyway here's what Mabel writes:—"I went to the first "T" Dance of the year and what a dance it was. These record sessions are held every two weeks and are they ever a lot of fun! I got to dancing with quite a few new fellas; guys I'd never even seen before. One in particular I remember. His name is Jimmie. He's got the biggest brown eyes and the cutest nose. I'm certainly going to be at the next "T" Dance. Maybe, he'll be there." Why not come out nose-hunting yourself? There's more than one cute beak around Vic.

Next week we're going to get the views of the weaker sex in this column. In case you haven't figured it out yet Stan "13" is not a she! But for the feminine touch you love so much, read the Corner next week.

—Stan "13"

Double Blues Steamroll Over Trinity 17-5

New Blue Basketballers Show Great Promise In First Practice

On the heels of the glorious news from Montreal over the week-end, comes more information calculated to gladden the hearts of Varsity sports fans. Basketball has returned to the campus!

Candidates for 1949's edition of the basketball Blues are bigger and better than ever. Many over six feet and others are expected to grow. Topping all contenders for the first string centre slot is large Everett (corruptible to the mountain of the approximate name) Tyndall, a boy whom most of you will remember as a star with the Intermediates of last year. Tyndall is 6'5" and his wingers close.

Coaching the Blues in the temporary absence of Bob Masterson, is another with whom most cage followers are familiar — blonde Barry Lowes, a top rank performer for the Blues at his right forward spot over the past few seasons. Barry spent part of the summer at a basketball school run by New York University, perennial U. S. intercollegiate champs, and returned to Canada jampacked with new ideas guaranteed to confuse opposition quintets—he should be an asset.

Lowes is very high right now on several newcomers to the squad. In yesterday's first practice Smalley, of last year's St. Mike's Western team, was travelling both ways at an excessive rate of speed, as were Bill McManus and PHE'er Al Warrick, two holdovers.

Other hopefuls — and there are still several dozen candidates for the two Blue teams—include Lachnace, tennis champ Art Anderson, and five members still in football gear, Gray, Stockman, Volpe, McMillan and Waldon. We'll have information on the "unknowns" in later issues.

INTERFACULTY SPORTS

The Interfaculty lacrosse schedule has received another setback due to the inavallibility of helmets. Slated to start tomorrow, the schedule will be held back till at least next Monday.

St. Mike's took undisputed possession of first place yesterday afternoon when they overran Trinity by a 17-5 margin. That makes three straight wins in as many starts for the double blue.

Interesting to note and it may be a sort of record, the Mikeman booted out five rouges in the first half. Bill Kelly accounted for three and Dick Brown kicked the remaining two.

While on the subject of kicking, Ed Brennan, St. Mike's end who handled the Irish kickoffs, unleashed two fifty yard efforts and Gaunt of Trinity got away several nice kicks when he was not too rushed by the St. Mike's line.

Forestry edged out Meds 1-0 yesterday in a front campus soccer duel. Forestry moves into the top in Group II by virture of this win. The winning singleton for Forestry was scored by Stewart.

SPS IIIs were victors over the UC/PHE IIs in the volleyball department besting the combines in straight sets. The UC/PHE firsts overpowered the St. Mike's firsts in the second encounter.

Intermediate Track Meet Is Tomorrow

Tomorrow, at McMaster University, Varsity will be gunning for their second track and field title of the year when the Intermediate intercollegiate squad goes west. A nineteen man team will compete at Civic Stadium with representatives from McGill, OAC and their hosts. Here's hoping that they draw better weather for the meet than their senior brothers had to endure and that they enjoy the same success.

St. Mike's Kickers Boot Five Rouges In First Half

By JOHN KENNEDY

A powerful St. Mike's team rolled over the Trinity twelve last night, beating them 17-5. The game featured a fine kicking display by the Collegians plus a hard-hitting ground attack that shook severely several Trinity backfielders. Bill Kelly was the largest gun for St. Mike's gathering eight of their points while Dick Brown and Eddie Brennan aided materially in this department.

St. Mike's broke into the scoring column in the first quarter on sparkling punts by Brown and Kelly and a TD effort by the latter which was converted by Brennan. In the second quarto Brown and Kelly repeated their kicking prowess ending the half at 11-0 on Kelly's third single.

Trinity opened up in the third quarter with nice running plays by Rogers and Perkins which put them in position for their pride-saving score. Their touchdown came off a Gaunt to Sparling pass which started from the St. Mike's fifteen. The placement attempt was smothered.

Dick Brown and Bill Kelly were the individual stars of a well-played tussle. Eddie Brennan and McIntyre also played brilliantly for the Saints.

For the Red and Black, Gaunt and Sparling stood out with their passing and running respectively.

Line-ups:

St. Mike's A	Trinity
Popp	Leuty
McDermott	Campbell
Bourque	Whitehead
O'Hara	Imrie
B. Brennan	Gray
Timmins	Sparling
E. Brennan	McCarter

on the sideline

By ELEANOR NESBITT

The ball has commenced rolling, and within a few weeks the 1948-49 session of bowling will be underway.

Last year some 200 students met to the thunderous din of the rolling balls and scattering pins, and along with the fun, found confirmation of the old saying that 'Practice makes perfect'.

For those who have bowled, here's an opportunity to keep in good trim.

For those who have never bowled or who feel they aren't very good here's their chance to learn.

The nearby Midtown Bowling Alleys offer us special rates of $2.00 for 20 strings. Their alleys can be used by us any afternoon from one to five except Saturday.

For those who don't participate in many athletics, bowling is a sport which is enjoyable and in which considerable skill can be acquired even though it is a minor sport. Nor does it require much time—just a spare hour for a game or two an any afternoon.

Those who excel in the art will have an opportunity to compete in the Bowling Tournament held in February. Each college or faculty submits a team for this annual event and last year some outstanding scores were handed in. Liz Ross of UC scored a high average of 240 for her three games, and Betty Flynn of St. Mike's the high single of 263—which is some pretty fair scoring for the fairer sex.

Notices have been posted by the reps in UC, Vic, Trinity, St. Mike's, OT, and Nursing but any other woman paying athletic fees (those are part of the extra fee you paid way back in September, remember?) can play. Just get in touch with Eleanor Nesbitt in Mulock House, Whitney Hall if you are interested.

Speaking Of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

It would appear that the 1948 football season commenced about two weeks too soon for the liking of the Varsity Blues. Now that the air has cleared (and is has been cleared with a vengeance) we can settle back and prepare for that last glorious battle against Western.

If the Blues had to beat McGill I can't think of a better score than 41-0. The unfortunate part of it is that so few Varsity followers were there to witness the debacle. That kind of a score is a bit of a novelty in Canadian football—and it undoubtedly won't happen again for a while.

No one will try to claim that Varsity is actually forty-one points better than any team in the senior intercollegiate loop; but when a team runs into one of those days when everything goes right, it's a pleasant spectacle for the loyal fans.

Next Saturday's set-to should be a dandy. McGill isn't going to take that score lying down. Any team that can hold Western to 24-19 score is not to be taken lightly at any time.

News from Western continues pleasant. Bob McFarlane managed to get himself hurt again last Saturday, and Bob Farley may be out for the season. Queen's must have played it really tough—reports say that they sent Don McFarlane hobbling off a couple of times too.—'Always did like the Queen's attitude.' If you can't beat them, hurt them.

The horizon is brightening—and the Blues have made arrangements with local sportswriters to forego forecasting victory. So just to make certain we don't lose Saturday, I wish to go on record as saying that McGill will beat the Blues by at least three touchdowns.

SPORTSWOMAN

Vic II trimmed St. Hilda's III 18-10 in two and a half innings yesterday on Trinity's back campus. Both teams showed up very poorly in their fielding, but Vic made up for it in batting strength. In the first innings 13 girls crossed home plate with very little effort. Doreen Webster slammed out two consecutive homers, the second one bringing in three teammates. St. Hilda's was weak in batting and four walks helped their score considerably.

If PHE IV beats Trinity, they will be tied with Vic for first position in league IV. A deciding game will then have to be played.

Basketball

In the first game at OCE last night, Vic Freshies edged St. Mike's B 13-12. Vic was leading throughout the first half, but beginning in the third quarter St. Mike's, led by peppy Fran O'Brien, who chalked up five points, put on the pressure and threatened to take the game. But Mary Shackleton, Vic's tall intercepting guard, and Jane Reddick, her quick teammate who scored six points, kept the double blues coming out on top.

The tight guarding of PHE Freshies enabled them to beat Vic Freshie's A 12-6. Their two outstanding guards were alert June Davidson and pass-grabber Jane Lloyd. Helen Kinney, fast forward for Fizz Ed, accounted for five of the PHE points. Dorothy Aiken of Vic scored two of her team's points as well as darting nimbly for the ball.

Physio B led UC Freshies B until the fourth quarter when UC surged ahead to win 12-9. Physio had the stronger team, but towards the end of the third quarter, one of their players was put off the floor for four personals and as they had no sub, Physio had to finish with only five players. One of these five, Betty Coo, played an excellent defence game, foiling many of the U.C. plays. Forward Shirley Norwick was swift and shot four of the Physio points. Ross Creelman and Nancy Webster starred for UC with four points each.

UC Freshies downed St. Hilda's Freshies 18-11 in the last game of the evening. Backed by the strong guarding of Ann Gostling, Maureen Irvine piled up 10 points for UC, This UC team outsped, outpassed and outplayed the Saint's team, showing good zone defence. Joan Stirling and Jane Rogers paced the Trinity team with five and four points respectively.

All the games last night were rough and fouls were numerous. Basketball is a noncontact game, but players were pushing, holding and bumping into one another in every game.

With the death, a couple of days ago at 78, of Franz Lehar, one of the last reminders of a gentler era passed away. When he was in his heyday, and the music of his The Merry Widow was hitting around the world, the minds of people were occupied with quieter thoughts than the prospect of an imminent atomic demise. Those years, ending just before the outbreak of the First World War, were the times that older folk think of when they pine for the 'good old days'. We, of this generation, who will some day also pine for the 'good old days' will inevitably think of them in terms of the wars that were fought humanely, when atomic and biological weapons were just being developed. Such, we suppose, is the nature of progress, when we shall regard death by high explosive as preferable to being poured into eternity as the by-product of an atomic holocaust. As soon as our Time Machine is ready, we're heading back for the turn of the century as quickly as possible—we want to hear The Merry Widow again.

NFCUS Group Will Survey Larger Fees

The general increase in fees in the Universities across Canada is to be investigated by a committee set up at a meeting of the National Federation of Canadian University Students last night. It will be the duty of the committee to contact the local NFCUS on each campus and gather information about the new fees on each campus and the reactions to the increases at the various universities.

Acting on the data collected, the committee will present its report to the SAC. In the SAC report of last year it was recommended that the fees be immediately lowered to 1946 level, and progressively lowered to provide free and equal opportunity for all students.

Copies of the SAC report are to sent to the other Canadian Universities to acquaint them with the problems at the University of Toronto and to win the support of the local student groups. Michael Shenstone IV Trinity, and Jack MacLea, IV, SPS, were named to head the committee.

George Wilkes, IV Forestry, said the combined efforts of the SAC and NFCUS would perhaps bring pressure to bear on the university authorities and the dominion and provincial governments to increase the grants to the university and give a greater chance to those students who are in financial difficulty to complete their education. He said that in the SAC report there was sufficient proof that the new fees had made completion of their studies impossible to many students, and that definite action was needed to correct this condition.

Plans were discussed at the meeting for a Music Festival with students from the eastern universities —McGill, Queen's McMaster, Western, and the French-speaking schools. The local NFCUS hopes to bring talent for the festival to Toronto. The expenses for the visitors are to be paid from receipts, although additional help may be needed from the SAC. Arrangements are yet to be made for housing accommodations.

"The biggest snag in the project," said Wilkes, "is the musicians' union. The instrumental groups would have to be union members and this would probably exclude a large group who have musical ability. This difficulty would probably necessitate the use of choral groups mainly in the festival," said Wilkes.

Across The Campus

Now and then, it isn't a bad idea to stand back a little way and take a look at your surroundings, in order to see the vastness of the university and the life around it. Here from one of the many university towers, the photographer stopped long enough to capture a glimpse of the campus, looking past University College to the lake.

Dents Romp To A 14-0 Win Over St. Mike's 'B' Team

The faculty of Dentistry stamped itself as the team to beat in Group IV when it romped to its second straight victory with a 14-0 win over the St. Mike's Bees. Except for a momentary lapse towards the end of the first half, the winners were never exerted in whitewashing the double blue squad.

Dents started off with a bang when they took the opening kickoff and worked it down to the St. Mike's thirty-eight yard line. From there Irv White kicked into touch for the first point of the game.

A St. Mike's fumble on their own thirty was the start-off point for the second march for Dents which ended only when Ken Ryan went through right middle for a major. White, who was outstanding in the hoofing department, converted.

The Mikemen retaliated with a passing attack which was their only bright spot in the contest. A Belmont to Carr aerial went all the way to the three yard line but was called back by a misunderstanding over the number of the down. The next play was Belmont to Dubois and then Art Holmes chucked to O'Heaney who was downed on the Dents five yard stripe as the half ended.

In the second half Dents came up with a play that can only be called spectacular. White passed to Woolidge who, after a thirty yard run, tossed a long lateral to Moore who just made paydirt as he was pulled down by two St. Mike's tacklers. White also made the convert on this score.

Wes Moore recovered his own short kickoff and gave Dents the ball on the St. Mike's thirty-eight from where they carried it to the twenty yard marker. White came in for his second single at this point to end the scoring.

The Dents line was undoubtedly the major factor in their victory. Although their backs were both big and fast, the holes that were made for them were big enough for the proverbial truck. Woolidge, Moore and White were notable ground gainers for the Dents squad while their line was universally brilliant.

Norm Nadeau made several runs of twenty yards or more for the losing cause but never seemed to get away in crucial territory. Belmont played a steady game for the Mikemen as did Dubois, Burrows and O'Heaney.

Aim of CCC Is Cooperation Between SAC and Societies

An interim constitution for the Club Co-ordinating Council was adopted yesterday afternoon after examination and some minor amendments were proposed and adopted by delegates from campus organizations who attended the first meeting of the season in Trinity College.

An important aspect of the constitution, commented chairman Ed. Cosford, is its statement of the purpose of the Council: It is to serve as a link between the SAC and independent student organizations. "None of its recommendations," the constitution reads, "shall be considered mandatory." It is hoped, however, that the council may be of great assistance in individual club activities requiring campus-wide support.

The aims of the Council are to permit collaboration and prevent overlapping in cultural activities as well as to link the clubs with each other and with the SAC. Finances are to be applied for as needed from the SAC, and membership of clubs not so far represented on the council must be approved by a two-thirds majority of the existing membership. Delegates from 15 clubs attended the meeting.

VARSITY PARTY

Thursday night's barn-style Varsity Party is slated for Fantasy Farm with emphasis on plaids and slacks, and prizes for the "best hick".

Those attending will meet at the Varsity Office at 8.30 p. m. Thursday and those who have not yet signed the list should sign up before the quota is filled.

University College Red and White Night Features Two Skits

Four hundred men and women are expected to attend U. C.'s first Red and White Night of the year tonight in the Women's Union.

Red and White Nights are exclusively for students of University College of all years. Four are being planned for this year by the joint executives. Admission to these events is by presentation of ATL cards.

Highlight of the entertainment will be two skits, one by first year women and the other by residence men. There will be bridge downstairs and dancing in the theatre.

Big Float Exhibition For Homecoming Show

Plans for a giant float parade on the Saturday morning of the Homecoming week-end, (November 13), are well on their way.

Dave Gold, parade marshal, would like all faculties who have not appointed a parade representative to do so at once. In addition, all campus organizations wishing to enter floats are asked to name their representatives and leave their names in the SAC office, Hart House.

A meeting of all parade representatives will be held Wednesday, Oct. 27th at 5 p.m., in the UC Junior Common Room.

Cheques Ready Except For Grads Says DVA Bureau

Student veterans entitled to DVA maintenance allowance cheques will receive them tomorrow and Friday in their college or faculty, DVA officials said yesterday.

It is expected that all undergraduate students, with few exceptions, will be paid. This cheque will cover the period from the commencement of the school year to October 31st inclusive. DVA counsellors will be at pay points in most cases and no cheque will be issued unless the veteran presents his Admit-to-Lecture Card.

Students in the School of Graduate Studies cannot receive their cheques this week, as, in each case, the veteran's program must be confirmed by the Committee of the School of Graduate Studies, and these confirmations are just now being cleared. However, it is hoped that many of these cheques will be available through the Graduate School office from time to time, between Nov. 1st and Nov. 15th.

The list follows:

On Thursday, Oct. 28th: Victoria, Trinity and St. Michael's Colleges, Medicine, Hygiene, Social Work, Music, Nursing, Occupational and Physical Therapy.

On Friday, Oct. 29, Forestry, PHE, OCE, Institutional Management, theological colleges and all courses not otherwise mentioned. On Thursday and Friday, UC and Occasional Students, Dentistry, Engineering, Pharmacy.

Mobilization Is Necessary Say Debaters

The alarming conclusion that compulsory military training for one year is necessary was reached yesterday evening in a lively debate at Trinity College. The resolution was carried by the pitiful margin of one vote.

"Leisurely mobilization after the outbreak of war is obsolete," stated Michael Macklem, III ELL, first speaker for the affirmative. He said that Canada's strategic role in a future war will be more vital than ever before, and therefore the draft is a military necessity.

Macklem stressed Canada's present lack of military preparation for such a war, and outlined a four-step program designed to build up the country's defenses. This plan includes a radar screen across northern Canada, convoy forces, interception and ground forces. The draft is the only fair way to obtain the 35,000 men demanded by this plan, said Macklem.

Speaking for the opposition, Patrick Vernon, IV, Mod. Hist., challenged, "to look forward to another war is to create it." He recalled the motion stated that military training would be beneficial to Canada. What is most beneficial to Canada just now is peace, he said, not as an end in itself but for what it implies for the country's future. Vernon emphasized each person's need to develop all his potentialities, and held that external discipline such as military discipline is an anti-liberal measure.

Doug Scott, IV, C.&F., second speaker for the affirmative, called Canada "the northern gateway to the continent" and said that gateway is now wide open. Scott pointed to the mobilization now going on in Britain and the U. S. as evidence of the real danger of imminent war. He stressed that the training youth receives must emphasize defense, not authority, if its effect is not to be injurious. Roger Kirkpatrick, III Gen., maintained that such training will be injurious to morale and tolerance. He also stated that one year is too short a time to train men for the highly specialized skills of modern war.

Montreal Paper Was Not Banned; Only in Trouble

Montreal, Oct. 26 — (Special) — Fernand Delhayes, administrator of the students' administrative council at the University of Montreal said today that the Students' newspaper Le Quartier Latin will be published tomorrow, two days late.

He said make-up difficulties had delayed the publication of the semi-weekly newspaper. Earlier reports said that the newspaper had been suspended by university authorities following the publication of two articles in recent editions, which offended on moral and religious grounds.

One was a satirical take-off on the works of a French philosopher, Jean Paul Sartre, which was considered immoral by the University. The other article, written by a university student defended Paul Emile Borduas, recently suspended by provincial educational authorities from a teaching position at Montreal's Ecole de Meuble.

Mr. Delhayes said that suspension of the paper could be ordered only by the students' association which operates the paper or by university authorities. Neither of these have ordered the suspension.

He said that a delay of a day or two in publication, was not unusual.

'Varsity Story' Satirical Claims Author Callaghan

"The Varsity Story" is critical and satirical said the author, Morley Callaghan, speaking at the first Hart House Library Evening last night. Those who only caught the simple pastoral level of the book should re-read it, he declared.

In his talk on "Postscript to Letters," Mr. Callaghan compared the golden literary period of the Twenties with which he is associated and the present day when the passion and urge for artistic expression seem to be in decline. The difference between the "gay disillusionment" which followed World War I and the grim disillusionment after the late war may be the explanation, it was suggested. "Today, the business of living is everything," Mr. Callaghan said.

On the value of a university education for a writer, Mr. Callaghan stated although he fully recommends a college career, there was a tendency for the university to wear off "the rough edges" which an artist needs to preserve his individuality.

Optimism in Canadian writing, dissertations on the character of Toronto city and of the university were among the topics tackled in the informal discussion.

Help Wanted

Yesterday's ISS poll to sound out student opinion on relief measures to be undertaken by ISS this year reflects once more the great need of students in war-ravaged European and Asiatic countries.

Student interest in ISS work should be keener now that there is a general trend on the part of ISS to earmark funds for specific purposes. Yesterday's poll gave undergraduates an opportunity to decide for themselves the form that relief measures will take this year.

The need for a more personal contact with European students has been more fully recognized too. Last summer's ISS seminar in Germany did much to make European and Canadian students more aware of each other's problems. The need has been recognized at the University of British Columbia where undergraduates have enthusiastically welcomed a proposal to bring D. P. students to study at Canadian universities. Their enthusiasm has been such that the university administration has been approached for permission to levy an additional fee of one dollar to pay for the maintenance of the new immigrants at university for one year. The heart-warming enthusiasm of UBC students might well be copied on this campus.

A letter received recently by The Varsity from a nineteen-year-old German student tells, in faltering English, of his intense desire to continue his studies. "I don't know yet what I'll take for I am fond of all—and our future will be uncertain," he explains.

The darkness of war-battered Europe is gradually lifting—but very slowly. The intellectual hunger, the moral fear, can be met. But it will take your help and co-operation.

ART MUSIC DRAMA

La Boheme: Encore

Sunday night a cast of singers drawn from the Royal Conservatory Opera School repeated the substance of their monumental first broadcast with the first three acts of Boheme, slightly trimmed and in concert form. Nicholas Goldschmidt directed, George Crum played the piano and the occasion was the first Hart House Sunday concert.

This department has already noted the unique level that broadcast reached both as music-making and as radio transmission. I cannot agree with the decision to dispense with Act IV—I would gladly have traded Act III complete for Colline's Overcoat Aria alone—nor were the Great Hall acoustics any credit; but on the whole this second look proved fully as rewarding as the first, and quite as promising of things to come. Miss Morrison's tremolo, which I had originally found excessive, seemed to be more firmly in hand; Mr. Shields, though a bit placid, produced beautiful sounds; Mr. Hockridge was very fine, and Beth Corrigan's Musetta was sheer delight, with just the right amount of archness. The good-natured horseplay of the garreteers was delivered wonderfully well, without the silly gabbling and guffawing one always hears from the Met.

I confess that I expected the loss of the orchestra to be a very serious one, for, heresy though it may be, I maintain that Puccini's orchestra is very nearly as essential as Wagner's; in fact, I think I would rather hear a Schubert lied with orchestral accompaniment than a Puccini opera without. George Crum's playing almost convinced me otherwise. He played in, around, under and through the vocal line with astounding resourcefulness and magical effect.

Doug Ross.

ART MUSIC and DRAMA

Goodbye, My Fancy

Last night's play at the Royal Alexandra is rather hard to categorize. It may perhaps be best described as a light comedy with sudden hiccoughs of melodrama. While it stayed on the comedy level it was amusing and entertaining. The melodramatic peaks seemed to be as out of place as a talk on abstinence at a stag party.

It was a most unfortunate play in which to introduce Madeleine Carroll for the first time on the stage in Canada. Miss Carroll made as much out of her part as was possible, and succeeded at times in making even the melodramatic portions not seem too much out of place.

Sam Wanamaker as the rootin'-tootin' cameraman from Life magazine had some juicy lines which he spoke with obvious pleasure and enthusiasm. Miss Birdeshaw, played by Lillian Foster, an old-maid professor at a girls' college who has taken her first snootful was delightful whenever on stage. Conrad Nagel's part was a thankless one which nevertheless he played in his usually able manner. Shirley Booth, who seems to be stuck with the role of the hard-boiled secretary or newspaper woman ("Philadelphia Story") with a golden heart, fitted the part perfectly, though stumbling occasionally over her words.

It seems rather a pity that the playwright did not stick more closely to comedy and found it necessary to bring in the cathartic action of present-day issues.

Track Team Tries Tests

By JACK MILNE

Today at Civic Stadium in Hamilton, the Intermediate track team does battle with McMaster, OAC and Western in an endeavor to repeat last year's victory and retain the 'Guthrie' cup. The team is strong in every event, especially the middle and long distance runs, but can expect a close race from OAC, last year's runner-up, and McMaster, this year's dark horse entry.

The sprints will be a toss-up between Waldie of Western, McMaster's ace—Warga, and Varsity's Mark Gray. Toronto's duo of Bassingthwaite and Hryshko will have their work cut out for them when they meet Smylie of OAC in the half-mile event. At last year's meet Smylie and Warga were the only double winners. Western's Roach should run the 440 well under 52 seconds and is the favorite.

The two distance races, the mile and three mile, find Varsity well represented by four of their crack harrier men, Barr, Wilson, McMullen, and Gawinski, and should place all four.

Bill Lachance, Varsity's ace discus thrower should do well, but can expect trouble from Trant of OAC. The pole vault could end in a Varsity victory if Bruce Rawlingson, Ajax freshman can hit his old stride. So far this fall he has been plagued by lack of sufficient time to train, but he should do well in any case.

Parkin, last year's victor in the running broad, and Jimmy Mathers, a former UTS track star should both do well over 20 feet.

If the weather remains warm and sunny, and the track is dry, it should be a closely contested meet, but just for the records, we will take Varsity intermediates to repeat their big brother's victory of a week ago.

SPORTSWOMAN

Softball

PHE I was downed 13-7 by Vic. 1 yesterday. This first loss of PHE 1 was due mainly to the fact that the outfield was weak and the fumbles at first base frequent. The most exciting incident was a hit by Jane Macklin, PHE, that was almost a homer. Pitching by Marg. Doyle was good. This puts Vic 1 in second place while PHE 1 maintains its position at the head of the league.

In the opposite corner of Trinity field St. Mike's edged PHE 11 8-7. Standing out for St. Mike's was the short-stopping of Nancy Goetz, while their high-scorer was Lucy Callaghan who ran the circuit twice.

Basketball

PHE III trimmed Vic Senior A 31-8 in last night's basketball tilt. Phiz Ed's forward line of Ann Bradshaw, Jane Cloke and Gwen Smith showed great team play sinking 24 points between them.

O.T. was outshot 32-16 by U.C.'s Juniors. Carol Dunn scored 20 points for UC giving out some very spectacular shots. OT's top scorer was Ruth Eades who sank four balls. OT matched the opposition on play but were away off on their shots.

Vic Sr. B fouled their way to a 22-5 loss to Physic A. Jean Cossar copped 12 points for the winning team.

You first year people will have your chance tonight to find out that your friends in senior years were right when they told you Red and White Nights were fun. All you have to do is bring yourself and your A-T-L card to the Union tonight at eight. You'll find bridge downstairs and dancing upstairs. There'll be hilarious skits — one produced originally by Norma Harrison for the freshie formal initiation and the other put on by the men from 73. And there'll be lots of food. ... The committee of Jack Hoolihan, Rae Evans, Jean Truemner and Olive Jane Piper has worked hard to make this party fun. ... See you there!

Do you think that a CCF'er, a Liberal, an LPP'er and Progressive-Conservative could never agree on one subject? You'll find there's one time they can. ... Attend the Parliament tomorrow at four in the J.C.R. and you'll see what we mean. ... There'll be a lively debate on the topic, "Resolved that campus political clubs are harmful to undergraduate life." Upholding the resolution will be Wallace Fram and Roy Brigham while Virginia Nairn and Geoff Wasteneys will speak for the negative. Alex Dixon will be Speaker of the House.

Many of the more-than-100 people who attended the first debate two weeks ago were first year students. The Literary Directors, Jim Cairns and Nora Beacock hope to see a continued interest on the part of these students in the debates. If there's anyone who wishes to speak at the debates, he or she may leave his or her name (complicated, isn't it?) with the Canteen Steward, John Osborne, who is also taking care of a book for suggestions of debate topics.

Mr. Osborne, who is in charge of the J.C.R. Snack Bar this year, is responsible for the contented looks that many UC students wear and already has a host of student friends. ... He serves them the best hot dogs and coffee within campus range. ... Mr. Osborne was in the army for 35 years, serving with the Royal Canadian Dragoons in World War I and the Pay Corps in World War II. He is being assisted by Michael Davis, III Eng. Lang. and Lit., who is also a veteran, seeing service with the army for five years. Mike, in addition to helping out in the Snack Bar, is an active member of the UC Players' Guild.

We wandered into the J.C.R. Monday afternoon to hear the U.C. Follies singing chorus in its first rehearsal. Maybe it was Ward McAdam's coaching, maybe it was the clear sweet voices of the girls, maybe it was the lovely music, but most likely it was a combination of all three that made us realize that this year's Follies is really going to be different. ... Responsible for much of the original music for this year's show are Jane Young and Ed Dyson. ... No jazz, no blues did we hear on Monday ... just beautiful music.

A week from today will see an experiment in student government that should be watched with interest. The Lit and the W.U.A. are having their first open joint meeting. Men and women will meet together to discuss student activities, most of which are joint affairs anyway. This meeting and one in January may be a forecast of an amalgamation of the two societies.

For your coming-events calendar. ... What comes after the game on Saturday? The football dance at Simpson's Arcadian Court. The UC Alumni Association is sponsoring the dance with proceeds to be used for scholarships. ... The U. of T. German Club meets tomorrow night at eight o'clock in Wymilwood. It will be a busy night, for besides entertainment including a shadow play, "Die Fromme Helene", violin and concertina selections, there will be election of officers for this year. Refreshments, too, of course.

Vic Blanks School 13-0

Vic triumphed over Sr. SPS 13-0, yesterday afternoon on the Back Campus, for their third straight win, in interfaculty competition.

SPS received the kickoff. On a first down fumble recovered by Vic Harry Damp ran a TD, for the first score of the game. Jim Little converted for one point.

From the first play Vic looked inspired as they steadily forged down the field, in a series of successful end runs and plunges, as well as some passing. The Vic line proved superior and constantly worried the SPS backfield into hasty plays. Vic's Lorne Lodge scored the second TD, in the second quarter after receiving an SPS third down kick. Again Little converted to put the score at 12-0 for Vic.

In the last quarter Tom Dryden kicked a single, for the final point of the game from the SPS 25 yard line. This last period saw a bucked up SPS line. Both teams played strongly up to the last minute of play. The Vic stars were: Harry Damy, Lorne Lodge, Jim Little, Ron Smith, Ralph Barford. SPS stars were: Jack Trist, Walt Gibson, Norm Firth, Brent Rowe and Joe Lyons.

Lineups:

VIC: Lodge, Rumble, Little, Damp, Smith, Sherwood, Ashforth, Barford, Hill, Watson, Anning, Dowsett Kilgour, Ledger, Colbert, Allen, Fairley, Grose, Dryden, Knight, Reid, Gore, Frick.

SPS: Lyons, Coates, Wilson, Hyslop, Heslip, Rowe, Foster, Powell, Trist, McCreery, Littlejohn, Weaver, Firth, Bernstein, Ward, Gordon, Kidd, Medland, Lawson, Gibson, Kerr, Hall, Laing, Vann.

Dents, Knox Win In Soccer Games

Dents beat St. Mike's 2-1 in soccer yesterday, while Knox defeated Trinity seconds by a 3-1 count.

St. Mike's took an early lead when Andre Valere scored, but Dents soon rallied with a penalty goal after some hard pressing around the goal mouth. Valere later sprained his ankle when he stepped on a slippery ball. Peters scored his second goal in the second half to hand Dents the win.

It was the first win of the season for the Knox team in the other game, and in the opening minutes Marsh Jess tallied to put Knox in the lead. Moments later Bill Ainslie added two quick goals.

COLE SCAN

To some men, thinning hair represents the same terrifying prospect that wrinkles hold for women. For some obscure reason, these men feel that their vigorous masculinity is inextricably bound up with the thick, wavy hair of their halcyon youth, and to see it thin and wave with every fitful breeze is the surest indication of onrushing senility. This Samson Complex has led to the squandering of millions of hard-earned dollars on fantastic preparations that do nothing more than aggravate the sufferer's hopeless frustration. The only patents that do grow hair are only effective in cases where the hair would grow back in any event. In most cases, however, if the hair is thinning, the only sensible thing to do is to reconcile one's self to the inevitable advance of the process. So what if your hair is thin, asks some unknown wit. Who wants fat hair?

Wesleyan Co-Ed Union

Illinois Wesleyan University at Bloomington has lacked a common meeting place for students, faculty and alumni for many years. They are, at present, erecting this $1,100,000 building to fill this lack. The Georgian building is of brick with tile plastered interior partitions, steel windows and concrete stairways.

New S.A.C. Budget To Show Surplus; Cut Some Expense

The Students' Administrative Council's financial set-up seemed a little brighter last night after Finance Commissioner J. C. Holtom presented a new revised budget which made provision for an estimated surplus this year of $990.

The new budget was brought in after previous estimates had indicated the SAC would face a heavy deficit.

Slash Outlay

The new budget, approved last night, is based on a total revenue of $39,250. This year's original budget called for a revenue of $40,450. Total expenses have been slashed with the revised budget based on an estimated expenditure of $38,260. Previous figures listed an expenditure of $39,876.97.

Last year's net operating surplus was $1,891.98.

SAC members were cautioned not to be too optimistic about the new budget when Finance Commissioner Holtom warned, "This surplus could quite easily turn into a deficit if costs of publication were to rise." Publishing costs of The Varsity and Torontonensis had risen approximately $7,000 since the original budget was drawn up.

Figures listed in the new budget weren't absolutely accurate, explained Holtom. "But they're as close as we can come at this stage. At any rate they're a pretty accurate guess."

Expenses Reduced

A sharp reduction in expense was effected in the SAC Housing Service which this year is operating on a figure of $1,600, representing a saving of $1,060. The original budget called for a Housing Service expenditure of $2,660.

Other savings were made in expenditures of the University of Toronto Debating Union which were slashed from $250 to $200. More than $250 was lopped off NFCUS expenses which this year call for an expenditure of $140.

Donations, slashed to $100, were cut in half and NCSV expenditures were completely cut—representing a saving of $300. NCSV expenses will be examined further at a later date, Holtom explained.

Revised estimates of publication expenditures showd the Students' Handbook with a deficit of $835 more than was originally budgeted. Torontonensis expenses were $600 less than called for in the original budget. The saving reflects the increased revenue expected from the sale of the yearbook to graduates. Expenses for The Varsity were upped $200 because of increased printing costs, although most of the increased cost will be absorbed by an increase in advertising rates.

Germans to Get Priority In ISS Student Scholarships

A motion that priority be given a scheme in which German students rather than D.P. students would be brought to the University of Toronto, was passed almost unanimously at an open meeting held by the International Student Service.

The purpose of this forum held on Wednesday was to form the policy of the Toronto committee and the national organization, and to discuss the I.S.S. National Conference at Ajax this week-end.

Two plans involving German and D.P. seminar students were received favorably at this meeting, but the motion of priority was carried, in case only one project would be accepted.

A plan was suggested whereby eight scholarships would be awarded to German university students who would spend one year at the U. of T. and afterwards return to Germany. An alternate plan, also recommended, involved the bringing of D.P. university students to the U. of T. Upon graduation, these students would remain in Canada.

The former scheme was given priority in case of a choice, because it was felt that this scheme would promote better understanding and break down prejudices in Germany. Also there would be a greater number of German students than D.P. students from which to choose.

These ideas will form the main part of the program of the I.S.S. Conference which will be held this Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. This third annual committee conference will be attended by representatives from universities across the Dominion.

The U. of T. delegates who will be present are Warren Golding, IV U.C., and Bill McDougall, III Trinity. They are the chairman and treasurer of the Toronto committee, respectively. Observers who will also be sent include Nancy LeSueur, IV U.C., and Pat Daniel, IV U.C.

Plans were begun regarding the Canadian summer seminar which will be held in Quebec next May 15 to July 1. Approximately 100 Canadian students will attend to discuss "problems in Canadian unity".

Unofficial reports of the I.S.S. student poll conducted Tuesday indicated a large majority was in favor of sending relief to foreign students.

VCF To Be Addressed By Missionary Bishop

Bishop Houghton went to China in 1920 under the China Inland Mission. After serving six years as missionary in East Szechwam and as editorial secretary of the Mission in London, he returned to China as the first bishop in the eastern section of Szechwan.

Now general director of the mission, he has spoken in South Africa, Sweden, Great Britain, Norway, Denmark, Germany and Switzerland. He is travelling through the United States and Canada.

No Overtime For Classes At Varsity?

A certain professor will never run overtime in his lectures after what happened to him yesterday. It was two minutes before the hour and the lecture-room was disturbed by the ringing of an alarm clock. He continued lecturing till the hour. Then, looking up as if nothing had happened, he asked quietly, "Can anyone please tell me the correct time."

L.P.P. Protest Election When Labor Positions Won By Conservatives

Montreal, Que., Oct. 28—(C.U.P.)—A political mix-up occurred at McGill on Tuesday. An election meeting of the Student Labor Club, which was predominately L.P.P., was held, but most of the L.P.P. members are still visiting in Yugoslavia. The Progressive Conservative members were in the room before the meeting started, and when the L.P.P.ers entered and saw them, they walked out and the P.C.s held their own election.

The L.P.P.ers are thinking of protesting the election since they didn't know who the intruders at the meeting were. Said a P.C. member: "It's constitutional. That's all there is to it."

The McGill Liberals are wondering what the Progressive Conservatives are going to do with the club now they have it, and the students jokingly wonder when the P.C.s will take over the L.P.P. club.

RED FEATHER MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Red Feather Campaign Committee this afternoon at 5 p.m. in the Smoking room of the Women's Union Building.

All-Campus Show To Excel Others States Director

"A fast paced musical revue built around the theme of the new student union is our objective", Producer Norm Jewison told an organizational meeting of the All-Varsity Revue, Tuesday.

The show is in urgent need of two secretaries and a business manager whose jobs, however unglamorous, are vital to the production of any show, Jewison stated. Script writers, a costume designer, dance directors, stage crew, singers, male and female chorus lines, comedians, individual acts; in short—all people interested in any phase of the All-Varsity Revue are asked to attend the registration to be held in the drill hall Friday, Oct. 29, at 1.30 p.m.

"We are interested in making the best possible use of all talent available on the campus," Jewison said. "Varsity has lagged behind the other Canadian universities in not having an all-campus show drawing support from every faculty. With no traditions behind us we have an opportunity to present a show that will rival and even surpass such well-known productions as the McGill Red and White Revue and the Queen's Revue," he said.

Student Union

Nearly Everybody But Us Has One, It Seems

By HARRY RASKY

By now you will have discovered that a student union is not a scarce item. We at the University of Toronto are not pioneers in suggesting that the students need a co-ed union. We are only trying to fill a cultural and social need.

The Illinois Wesleyan University had the same difficulty. Their problem is now solved. They have built a student union.

It must once again be pointed out that a union can not be built by patching together parts of plans of existing unions. A union must be made-to-measure and the plan must be tried on for size before it can be accepted. So, what was good enough for the Illinoisians may not necessarily be good enough for us. Theirs is a small college with different needs. Ours is a large college and we need . . .

Stopping only long enough to refuel our typewriter-magic-carpet with a new ribbon we start on our tour of information. This is 'Operation Student Union', target Illinois.

Food First

In the busy college student's day, the hour most suitable for discussion is meal time. Many a geometrical problem is solved over a hot bowl of soup. Indeed, many a war is stopped because of a friendly talk during a tea party. This was the idea of President Holmes of Illinois University, when he decided that the memorial center should include a dining-room large enough for the whole student body.

Lounges Later

Students the world over are known to be constant loungers. It was decided that the southern social centre should include a large lounge. This was to be big enough to house formal gatherings. This particular lounge has a special feature—a series of laminated wood arches with a span of 67 feet from which will be suspended a 16-foot canopy providing light in troughs and concealing fresh air ducts.

Room of Remembrance

By way of a war memorial, there has been a room of remembrance included in the building. It will include a complete record of all the Wesleyan men and women who served in World War II. For those who gave their lives that such a building might be built there are plaques and mementos. This is a room to be kept alive by the living in honour of the dead.

Suitably close to the remembrance room there is a small room set aside for quiet prayer or spiritual reflections.

Room of Reception

Also included in the pattern for culture is a reception room. Close to it is a special room set aside for the faculty. It is to be used as a club room. Those who helped build the building are also not forgotten. There are large headquarters for the alumni. By having their offices in the same buildings as the undergraduates, a closer link is set up between those at college and those who have now become an official part of it.

Other parts include student government offices, headquarters for student and faculty organizations and a student bookstore.

Kitchen Continued

Of special interest to students in home economics courses is the fact that the second floor kitchen is used for a home economics laboratory for experimental cooking and practical applications of meal - planning courses.

One of the other kitchens is used as a banquet hall. At Wesleyan University the stomach is an important part of the students' make-up.

Although small in size, Wesleyan was large enough to see the need for a student union and to do something about it. The University of Toronto is large in size; how really big it is will be seen in what it does about the urgent need for a cultural and social centre—a co-ed union.

The following is the second in a series of editorials contributed by the heads of the various political clubs on the campus. They do not reflect the opinions of The Varsity in any way.

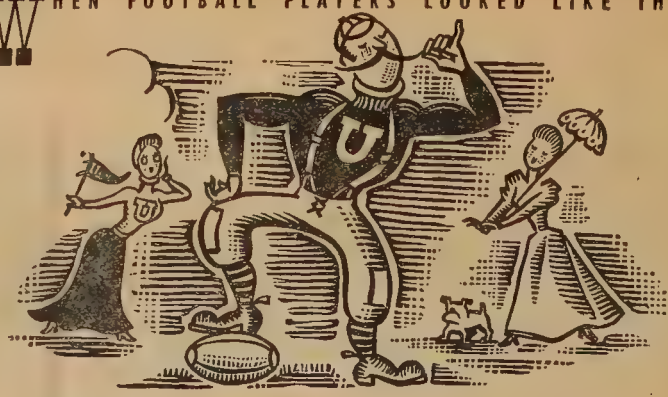
Progressive-Conservative Party

The philosophy of Progressive Conservatism can possibly be best summed up in a slogan used by the Young Conservatives in England — "Forward, to the Right". Canada today stands very literally at a cross-roads. With the present government mired in a rut of expediency, with no clear purpose or sense of direction, a very natural popular desire arises to get the wheels rolling again, to go forward with a clear and honest policy along one path or the other.

There are some who urge that we should take the path to the Left, the way of Collectivism and centralization of power. This path leads to a planned and regulated society, in which the individual exists as part of a mass, fitted into a pattern established by the state.

Progressive Conservatives believe that true progress lies in the other direction, along the way of individualism and decentralization of power. They believe that the individual can achieve more if he is permitted and assisted to build for his own future than if his existence is planned and regulated for him, and that if the individual progresses, the community progresses as well.

This concept of individualism finds expression in several basic principles of the party. Progressive Conservatives believe in an economic system based mainly on free enterprise. Free enterprise has brought Canada the highest standard of living in the world, because it stimulates economic progress through competition, because it gives every individual the opportunity to advance himself to the limit of his own abilities, and because by maintaining economic freedom it protects political freedom. The P. C. Party does not advocate "Laissez Faire". Free enterprise is not perfect, and the party offers many measures of government control where free enterprise does not do its job, such as subsidized housing and strict anti-combines legislation. However, though imperfect, free enterprise comes closer to perfection than any other system in the world.



Another principle basic to the P. C. Party is the maintenance of the Federal system. In a country that is divided regionally into extremely varied economic, racial and religious interests, it is imperative that these regional groups have as much power over their local affairs as possible. The more power that can be left to the governments that are closest to the people, the closer the popular control over government will be. The P. C. party has therefore vigorously opposed recent attempts to concentrate power, particularly financial power, in Ottawa, and has advocated a Dominion-Provincial conference to redefine the relations between the Dominion and the Provinces.

Believing that the freedom of the individual must include economic freedom, the P. C. Party has outlined a complete program of social security, including Health Insurance, Retirement Insurance, and extended family allowances. Socialism and Social Security are not the same thing. Progressive Conservatives believe that Social Security can and must be achieved without convulsing our society with economic experiments.

Canada has had enough stagnant government, and is waiting for a government that will go forward with a clear purpose along one path or the other. A Progressive Conservative government will go forward with a clear and long range policy of immigration and national development to "Build Canada". It will go forward to restore the supremacy of parliament and end order-in-council and taxation-by-radio government. It will go forward with practical measures rather than abstract theories to build for the future.

The path of true progress lies along the road of freedom and individualism. The Progressive Conservative Party goes forward along that path — Forward, to the Right.

Aspiring Actors Attend Audition For Radio Shows

Tuesday afternoon at 4.15 in West Hall about 100 students were auditioned for acting and announcing roles in Varsity radio shows.

Mel Breen, director of productions, conducted the assembly, assisted by Ron Grant, Bill Hutt, and Beth Robinson. Speaking to the aspirants Mr. Breen explained that the purpose of the auditions was to estimate their ability to read scripts and also to estimate the character and tone of their voices. He stressed the importance of their attending the courses in radio sponsored by the Radio Workshop; for practice and experience, he said, are necessary for those interested in radio as a career.

The casting, Tuesday, was not to select persons for special roles. The particular casting will come later in the year. Casting for the first program, and adaptation of "The Varsity Story" by Morley Callaghan will be held late this week or early next week.

Real Meaning Hidden In Works of Rabelais Declares Prof. Hicks

"Rabelais' works should be read not for their uncouth exteriors but for their realistic essence and substance", stated Professor R. K. Hicks at a meeting yesterday of the Trinity Arts and Letters Club.

In Rabelais' great work, "Gargantua", he established a type of novel modern in its form. His optimistic attitude coupled with his belief in the inseparability of mind and matter indicated his place in letters as a man ahead of his time.

Through the characters of Pantagruel and Gargantua, his brilliant satirical attacks on contemporary religion, education, law and medicine indicate his revolt against Renaissance ideals. For Rabelais, the study of nature and anatomy was fundamental to an understanding of man. His ideas, however, are presented under the cover of buffoonery and ridicule, often obscuring their real meaning.

In conclusion, Professor Hicks stated that Rabelais was a gay moralizer, whose ideal was stated in "Gargantua" as, "Good hope lies at the bottom of everything."

Stress Necessity For Direct Action To Guard Liberty

"Eternal vigilance is the price of salvation," said Dr. T. A. DeLury, University of Toronto professor emeritus, stressing the necessity for action in combatting infringements on liberties, in an address to the Humanist Club at University College, yesterday afternoon.

Need For Action

Dr. DeLury specified the need for action in Canada, citing the padlock law in Quebec and the suspension of civil rights during the spy scare as examples.

"If you don't believe in democracy, what will you believe in?" asked the speaker, referring to orders-in-council as another evil.

In a humorous vein, Dr. DeLury suggested that "perhaps no one but you or I was fit to be trusted with power."

"Whatever is human, you cannot regard as alien to you," he said. "It is our duty to stand up and be counted when it comes to a question of human rights." He mentioned the example of Christ who treated injustice to the least of men as a personal experience.

Dr. DeLury was introduced by Myer Brody who enunciated the principles of the Humanist Club as "social action in forming public opinion and doing something concrete in line with humanist beliefs to correct existing evils."

Beaver Brigade Tours All Europe Finds East Best

The way in which the people of Eastern Europe are working to reconstruct war-ravaged areas and increase their standard of living was the chief impression gained by members of the Beaver Brigade, a group of students organized by the Canadian Committee of Democratic Youth, who spent the summer travelling and working in Europe.

Three University of Toronto students were among the group: John Anderson, IV, Victoria; Steve Endicott, IV Modern History and Audrey Tobias.

"Nowhere in Eastern Europe did we see military preparations and everywhere the common people expressed their desire for peace," Endicott said.

"No member of the brigade had any trouble crossing into eastern countries", said Allen. "Very few brigade members, including myself, are members of the Labor-Progressive party, nor did L.P.P. members determine the actions or opinions of the brigade."

Endicott said he was impressed by the large numbers of well-armed police, patrolling Italian streets. "Italy's army had been restricted by the peace treaties and this show of strength could only be interpreted as a means of intimidating the people," he said.

"We want to appeal to the students and youth of Canada to enter a great crusade for peace. The thought of war against these people is too horrible to contemplate," Brigade members said.

RUSSIAN LESSONS

A meeting to arrange a tentative timetable for a series of Russian lessons will be held in the Upper Meeting Room in Hart House at 4.15 p.m. tomorrow. The object of the lessons is to obtain a reading knowledge of the Russian language for research purposes.

These lessons will be of one and a half hour duration and anyone interested but unable to attend this meeting is asked to contact Professor B. E. Shore, Room 302, 87 St. George St., Local 162.

SAC At A Glance

The Students' Administrative Council at its meeting last night:

Heard Al Weir of the University Christian Mission's General Committee ask for student support of the Mission.

Received a letter from Athletic Directorate enclosing cheque for $500.00 toward maintenance of U. of T. band, an increase of $250.00 yearly.

Heard Red Feather Committee Chairman Jane Hazard, U.C. report on plan for Red Feather campaign on campus.

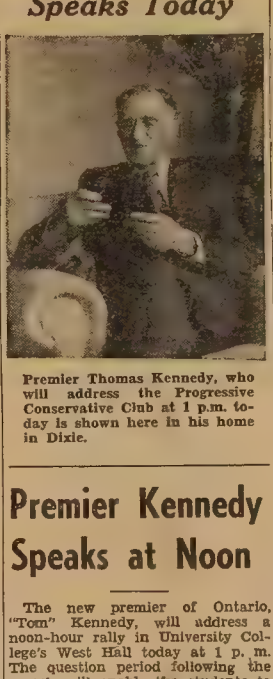
Heard Anti-Discrimination Commissioner report that an investigation is being conducted on charges of discrimination on the campus.

Heard Finance Commissioner J. M. Holtom introduce the new revised budget. (This budget will be published in The Varsity next week.)

Heard Ex-Service Committee Chairman Fred Umansky explain that his committee would investigate the effect of removed rent controls on student veterans.

Heard Blue and White Chairman Joe Potts explain that a letter will be sent to Canadian Passenger Association protesting a ruling whereby trains from Toronto cannot operate as low fare excursions. Toronto is classified as an industrial centre and is, therefore, ineligible to operate such excursions. The letter will be sent with the support of the NFCUS committee.

Heard Blue and White Society Chairman Joe Potts explain that measures will be taken to ensure that future pep rallys do not get out of hand and cause public mischief.



Heard SAC President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy report that working committees of the Student Union Plan are now collecting information for building reports.

Heard Radio Commissioner Paul Fauteux report scripts now ready for presentation of "The Varsity story," Nov. 11 and 18.

Set up a committee to investigate possibility of bringing a group of German students to study at the University next year. The committee is headed by Mary Stephens, SAC representative of Social Work.

Approved a suggestion of David Holmes, OCE, that SAC adopt general policy of taking a greater interest in helping invalided veterans.

Musicians Donate Talents For Red Feather Concert

With Sir Ernest MacMillan as commentator, a number of Toronto musicians are donating their talents for the Red Feather concert at Convocation Hall tonight at 8:30.

An informal evening of music is the keynote of the first concert ever given to aid the U. of T.'s Red Feather drive. Between numbers, Sir Ernest and the artists themselves, Dr. Healey Willan, the members of the Solway String Quartet, Dr. Leslie Bell, who is presenting his group of singers, Alberto Guerrero, pianist; Hyman Goodman, violinist; accompanist, Leo Barkin; Frances James, soprano, and Edmund Hockridge, baritone, will discuss their music, letting the audience in on what's happening.

Highlights of the program, according to Wallace Laughton, III Faculty of Music, program co-ordinator, will include selections from the works of composers ranging from Palestrina to the moderns. The Solway String Quartet, experimenters in a movement to popularize chamber music, will play works by Tschaikovsky, Haydn, Kreisler, and Arthur Benjamin's Jamaican Rhumba. Dr. Willan, to open the program, will play three of his own compositions, and Mr. Guerrero will contribute a Chopin group. Spirituals and traditional airs will form a large part of the Bell Singers' selections.

Singers Frances James and Edmund Hockridge will present groups of three songs, Miss James' from Schubert, Paladilhe and Greig; Mr. Hockridge's from Handel, Mednikoff and Malotte. Mr. Goodman, who is concertmaster of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, will play two of Kreisler's violin numbers and the "Romance" of Weniawski.

Through the generosity of the artists themselves, of the University, in giving the use of Convocation Hall, and of the T. Eaton Co. Ltd. in installing special lighting and a concert grand piano, the Association hopes to make a large contribution to the U. of T.'s total subscription to the Red Feather campaign.

Tickets may be obtained for one dollar at the S.A.C. offices, Hart House and U.C., and at the Conservatory.

Balkans Remain Quiet During Land Reforms

"The Balkan people will only tolerate the Communist regime so long as it solves their land problems," said Professor B. E. Shore in an address to the Political Science Club at Wymilwood last night.

The New Order, involving the industrialization of the Balkans and the integration of their economies, has been hindered by nationalism and the complexity of races. The Church, which the present regime dare not oppose, is the only centre of opposition at present.

Professor Shore recently returned from a three months' trip through the Balkans.

C.C.F. Club Denies Rumored Relation To Campus Weekly

Rumours that the U. of T. C.C.F Club is in any way connected with the Campus were discredited last night in a reolution completely denying any affiliation between the C.C.F. Club and Campus. The resolution, passed at a membership meeting of the C.C.F. club held in the Women's Union read: "The University of Toronto C.C.F. Club has been informed that some members of the University believe that the newspaper Campus has been connected with the C.C.F. This Club wishes to state that Campus is not, and has not been the journal of the C.C.F. and that as far as this Club is concerned Campus is an independent journal."

Second Resolution

A second resolution dealing with charges laid in the last issue of Campus, against Miss Ferguson, of racial discrimination in admitting students to residence in Whitney Hall was passed unanimously. The resolution reads: "The University of Toronto C.C.F. Club requests the Board of Governors and the SAC of this university to investigate the charges of anti-semitism laid by Campus against Miss M. Ferguson. The Club condemns discrimination on racial and religious grounds and feels that above all those concerned with education should be aware of the danger that such activity presents to our society. The Club believes that these charges should be investigated, not only in fairness to the students, but also in fairness to Miss Ferguson."

Request Answer to Fees Brief

A resolution calling for an answer to the fees brief sent to the Board of Governors by the SAC last spring was also passed. It reads: "Whereas university fees are today as high as they were a year ago; and whereas the cost of living is even higher than it was a year ago; therefore this Club urges the SAC to reiterate its support of the fees brief presented nine months ago to the Board of Governors and as yet unanswered. This Club requests the Board of Governors to take any possible action to have university fees reduced."

Reports from delegates to the Provincial Convention were presented. The delegates reported that all the Club's specific instructions had been carried out. A report on the CCYM Convention, dealing with the possibility of closer relations between members of the University Club and CCYM was also given.

Form Committees To Seek Opinion For Co-ed Union

Work on the proposed co-ed memorial union took another step forward with the appointment yesterday of seven working committees to investigate the facilities students will want in the union. The committees will seek the advice of experts and interested groups on social and intellectual activities, restaurants and snack bars, recreation, services and maintenance.

Opinion of the individual student will be sought in a questionnaire which will be issued early next week. Fifteen hundred questionnaires will be distributed over the university on the basis of faculty enrolment.

An idea of the job facing the working committees can be garnered from a list of the things the services committee must look into —checkrooms, barber shop, post office, telephones, office for the management and a co-op bookstore.

Gordon Gwynne-Timothy president and chairman of the union committee, stressed that the job was now in the hands of the individual committee chairmen. Committees will be divided into subcommittees to examine each facility proposed for the Union.

A copy of the Iowa State union report will be places in The Varsity office for the guidance of committee members.

A fifth-year architectural student, Stan White, has volunteered to make the co-ed union the subject of his graduation thesis. He intends to submit a complete plan of the proposed building based on the findings of the working committees.

TB Survey in Drill Hall For All Varsity Students

By NAN McKENZIE

The C.O.T.C. drill hall is housing a bus these days and is at the service of those who may or may not house the tuberculosis germ.

The "autobus" standing in the drill hall holds the X-ray equipment being used this year by The University Health Service in their annual X-ray survey. Into this bus is welcomed every member of the student and staff of the University of Toronto between now and Nov. 4. The whole process takes fifteen minutes. Walk in the day of your appointment, give your name to one of the battery of secretaries waiting to serve you, line up, lean fully-clothed against the plate, pick up your books and walk out. If you don't hear anything more you know that you are free of tuberculosis of the lungs. Only if symptoms are apparent in the X-ray will you be notified by the Health Service.

If there are symptoms present, what then? The expert radiologist examines each negative and those found with any irregularities are sent to the University Health Service to be "blown up" and carefully studied by the Services' own expert in his laboratory. If evidences of infection are found, the student is notified and examinations by other methods are given. Arrangements for treatment are made immediately by the health service and if necessary, entrance to a sanitorium is also provided.

Those not compelled to take X-ray are being urged by the Health Service to consult the charts about the campus and decide now the date on which they will take their X-ray.

But why take an X-ray if you are not compelled to by university regulations?

If you can mark one or more of these statements "true" you need an X-ray, according to a Canadian Tuberculosis Association circular:

I have never had an X-ray. I feel tired for no good reason. My appetite is poor and I am losing weight. I catch cold quickly and it takes a long time to get over it. I have a cough that hangs on. There has been TB in my home. I have worked with someone who had TB. I have been told I have a congestion in the lungs, bronchitis, asthma, heart trouble or sinus infection, but I have not had my chest X-rayed. I want to know that my lungs are O.K.

Graduate Body To Be Active In New Alumni Federation

Morley W. Sparling, B.A. Sc. has been appointed Executive Director of the Alumni Federation of the University of Toronto, Dr. J. A. Bothwell, Federation President announced yesterday. Dr. Bothwell said the appointment was a key move in the re-organization of the Federation. "We hope ultimately to see at least 40 per cent of the graduate body active in the organization" he said. "There are more than 50,000 living graduates of the University of Toronto."

Mr. Sparling was Chairman of the Engineering Alumni Scholarship Committee in 1944 and when the Varsity Appeal Committee was formed to lay the plans for the University's campaign for $13 million, he was invited to act as Chairman of the Graduate Organization. On March 15 of this year, the Committee appointed him its Executive Secretary.

Mr. Sparling began his career with the Seymour Power & Electric Company in Eastern Ontario after graduating in Electrical Engineering from Varsity in 1909. With the formation of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission, Mr. Sparling went into the retail automobile business where he stayed for 15 years. In 1930 he joined the North American Life Assurance Company, resigning this month in favor of his new full-time appointment with the Federation. He was Chairman of the Toronto Chapter of the Chartered Life Underwriters and President of the Toronto Association of the Life Underwriters. Mr. Sparling is married, has a son and a daughter. Another son, Richard, died on active service with the RCAF.

Our Readers Write

The Editor, The Varsity:

Dear Sir,

I want you to know how very disappointed I am in the attitude of The Varsity towards campus news as reflected in the interview printed on page three of the issue of Tuesday, October 12, concerning the "Snow Cornice" project of the Arctic Institute of North America.

The manner of presentation and the unthinking manner of acquisition and use of material in question, indicates to me considerable lack of true interest on your (used somewhat impersonally) part in the affairs and news of the student. Surely it would have been to your advantage to have had sufficient initiative and sincerity to have contacted me, so that something of greater interest to the student body than this feeble effort might have resulted. What you printed is a straight crib from a downtown newspaper, and a poor crib at that. (Being misnamed worries me not, save that it is evidence of careless workmanship on your part.)

I am sorry if The Varsity felt scooped on the deal but it was given opportunity during the fortnight before publication in which the downtown paper was after the story.

It must be obvious to you that the city paper interviews are cast for a different reader. You made no attempt to include points of special interest to my fellow students nor was any mention made of the Hart House Exploration (a newly formed organization about which many will doubtless be interested—if they ever hear of its existence through The Varsity). It was through this society that I made the initial contact which resulted in my joining "Snow Cornice".

Not a hint was there of Don Salt's connection with the University—and I am sure his fellow Schoolmen would have been more attracted to the item had they known he had just graduated from S.P.S. How much more interesting to know a man's connection with the University, his position in relation to it—after all that is what makes it University news, is it not?

All in all I think the whole thing is a pretty poor show on your part, whatever may be the cause or difficulties involved.

Please understand that I am not using the term "you" in a personal sense so much as the symbol of the head of the heirarchy. Probably the trouble is down the line—but as we found in the services, the commanding officer is responsible for the actions of his most lowly subordinate. This is not really a personal gripe or grudge but simply a desire on my part to see more of the student's point of view incorporated in The Varsity.

I would be happy to feel that it was my paper, but I shall not continue to do so if the connection of the news with University life is not emphasized. I can always get the ordinary slant on things from the city dailies.

With best wishes for a successful year, journalistically speaking.

Yours truly,
Alan Bruce-Robertson
III Medical Year

Is Reader Bruce Robertson's tongue in his cheek? The Varsity showed such a "lack of true interest" that it contacted him one week before story appeared in downtown press but was informed that his "facts" had been turned over to another paper and were, therefore, unavailable to The Varsity at the time.

It is true that The Varsity's treatment of the story was inadequate. But a little more co-operation on the part of Mr. Bruce-Robertson might have avoided the "feeble effort" which he so indignantly deplores.—Ed.

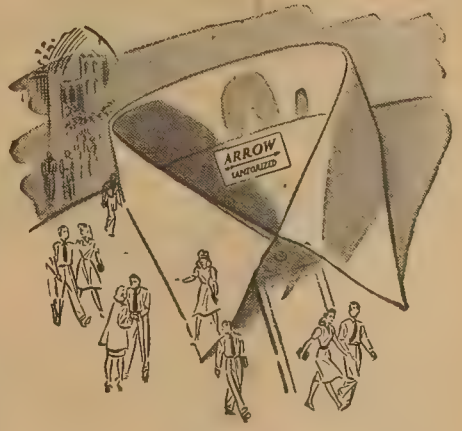
Claim Funds Missing; Former Student Head Rushes Home to UBC

Vancouver, Oct. 28 — (C.U.P.) — Former president of the University of British Columbia's Alma Mater Society, Grant Livingstone has cancelled his tour of Canadian universities and is rushing back to Vancouver to answer charges that war memorial funds were "diverted" to general student funds last year.

Livingstone, who headed a Canadian delegation to a meeting of the International Union of Students in Europe, arrived in Sydney, N. S., Thursday.

Livingstone, last year's Alma Mater Society president, and Bob Harwood, treasurer, have been under fire from students for the past few weeks. They have been accused by students of mis-managing $17,000 in conducting student activities of last year.



COLE SCAN

The world situation can't be so bad after all, if Berlin can be shoved off the front page by the gruesome details of another routine murder. The panting sob-sisters are given more space to wring a false tear out of the pop-eyed reader, than are the international correspondents to report events that may possibly, just possibly, mind you, result in graver consequences. We suppose such newspaper coverage is necessarily in the nature of a dress rehearsal for the procession of wholesale murders that can be expected in the near future. We can hardly wait until the sob sisters go to work over the corpse of the United Nations. What a field day they'll have then, wringing real tears all around the world!

INTERMEDIATE TRACKMEN WIN

Sr. Meds Victors Over UC Combines By A 16-2 Margin

By HAL HOLDEN

On the strength of a second half surge sparked by brothers Al and Gabe Varga who counted a touchdown apiece, Sr. Meds. hammered down a fighting UC/PHE squad by a score of 16-2 on the back campus yesterday. The win puts Meds in undisputed possession of second place in Group I of the Intramural League, having been tied with UC/PHE before yesterday's encounter.

For the first half it was a tight squeeze for Meds to gain their half-time lead of 3-1 as Johnny Sheridan's Red and White crew, who seem to improve every time out, came up with some heads up football to keep the powerful Meds' backfield pretty well in check. A momentary lapse in the U.C. backfield resulted in a loose ball rolling around on their own 2-yard line and after it squirted out from underneath several eager Medicine men, Pete Byrne trapped it to be downed for a safety touch by Rick Ricci. This gave the Red and Black their two point margin at the half as tennis champ Art Anderson had booted a single for U.C. and Al Varga the same for Meds.

Although the Varga brothers grabbed the scoring limelight, quarterback Tonk Cecutti was just about the best player on the field. Besides calling a clever game from his pivot spot, Cecutti gained oodles of yardage on end runs. This play was Meds' strongest, thanks to Cecutti who either shook one of the Vargas loose or cut in when he spotted a hole himself.

Hank Henshall, the diminutive signal-caller for the Combines and lanky end Rea Gibson got together for the chief U.C. offensive threat, a short pro pass about five yards over the line of scrimmage.

Gabe Varga started off Meds' second half touchdown jaunt by intercepting a U.C. pass at the Meds' 35 yard line. Brother Al then flipped a pass to Jimmie Smith for a first down and Tony Cecutti moved the yardsticks again, cutting in off an end run. Smith went around the other end for another first down to the U.C. 20 yard line and on the next play Cecutti lateralled to Gabe Varga who shook off a tackler and crossed over for the first touchdown of the game. The extra point was kicked by Jimmie Smith. Al Varga later hoofed another single.

Shortly after Art Anderson kicked his second point of the game in the fourth quarter, Al Varga rounded out the scoring by intercepting a U.C. aerial at midfield and galloping down the sideline for a major. Jimmie Smith added the extra point.

For the losers, Henshall, Joe Shapiro and Bruce Miles did some good ball-carrying while Gibson and Byrne held their end up on the front wall.

Scoring

Bill Danylchuk Is Way Ahead

Bill Danylchuk sky-rocketed into the individual scoring leadership with his four touchdown effort against the McGill Redmen last Saturday. Western's Jack Parry and Don MacFarlane follow in second and third spots with eighteen and sixteen points respectively. Choresteckl, McIntyre, Stockman, Volpe and Huycke made first appearances on the scoring list.

Speaking Of Sport

By GEORGE MacFARLANE

Special mention is due one, Bill Danylchuk, who in one fell swoop took over the top spot in the intercollegiate scoring race. Bill hadn't picked up a single point in the first two league games—for that matter very few Bluemen had hit the score sheet. In one game he passed the McFarlanes and Parry, and if Bruce Cummings can continue to find him with those touchdown bombs, he'll stay right up there.

There was many a sceptic who doubted Danylchuk's ability to stick with the Blues this year. He's fast, but small, and was considered green in the whys and wherefores of senior football. But even the most sceptical observers are ready to admit error of judgment. Under Bob Masterson's tutoring, Bill has blossomed into one of the most dangerous backs in the Blue camp.

The day before the McGill game, I remarked to young William that I was hoping to recoup certain losses sustained in the first two games. William promptly responded with four touchdowns. So if you have some investments planned for future games, just see Bill. He'll look after you.

Going back into history a bit, here's a twenty-year-old tit-bit that caught my eye. The University of Michigan was playing Navy, in the days of a great Michigan end named Flop Flora—(no kidding, that was his name). A Navy man stood on his own ten-yard line, ready to kick. He took the pass from centre and began to go through the act of kicking. But Flora was through the line like a shot. As the Navy man dropped the ball towards his foot, Flora snatched the ball out of the air. And as the Navy man's leg swished through the empty air, Flora scooted across the goal line for a Michigan touchdown.

Lacrosse League To Open On Monday For Certain

At long last, the Interfaculty lacrosse league has set a definite opening date. Next Monday at 1.00 p.m., Meds firsts and U.C. firsts will raise the oft-postponed curtain on the '48 season.

The league was scheduled to open exactly two weeks ago Monday, but owing to a shortage of helmets, hostilities were somewhat delayed. But, showing great bursts of perseverance, Mac McCutcheon finally came up with a solution to the problem of supplying head-gear for the combatants.

When it became apparent that regulation lacrosse helmets were not available, nor possible to be imported from the U.S., Mac whipped up a combination rugby helmet and face-guard from last year's lacrosse skull-protectors. The U. of T. has ordered a dozen new rugby helmets, due to arrive today, so that the opening game will get under way Monday next.

This year there are 23 teams in the league. The top three of Group A, the top two in Group B, and the top team in each of the remaining four groups will enter the playoffs. Mac is very doubtful as to the possibility of winding up the playoffs before Christmas. With the late start, the semi-finals and the finals will probably go after the New Year's.

Word from the Interfaculty Office has it that all the teams are showing an increased interest in the popular indoor game, and that all have been practicing more seriously than in years past. So, be there early Monday to see Meds and U.C. while they're still standing.

Varsity Piles Up Ninety Two Points O.A.C. Is Second

By JACK MILNE

Yesterday afternoon at Hamilton's Civic Stadium Varsity's track team walked off with ninety-two points to capture, for the second time in a row, the intermediate intercollegiate championship. OAC was the runner up, well behind, with forty-one points followed by McMaster and Western with seventeen and fourteen points respectively.

Varsity won, not only on the skill of such athletes as Kettle, Smith, Beckett, Rawlinson, McMullen, LaChance and Hryshko but also on the drive and stamina of men like Gawinski, Gray and Devereux. In the 440, for example, Devereux completed the last 300 yards with a badly twisted ankle and barely made the tape where he collapsed.

Ted Gawinski came in second in the three mile event which is quite a feat considering that this was his second such race this year.

A real thorn in the side of Varsity was the middle distance ace from OAC, Smiley, who not only won both the mile and half mile but set an intercollegiate record for the latter event, doing the distance in the time of 2.01.4. His was the only double win of the day.

Lack of starting blocks hampered the sprinters and hurdlers and tilted the times toward the slow side. However, Hryshko managed to do the 440 in 53.2 seconds and Jack Milne was able to win the high hurdles in 16.8. Milne also finished second in the low hurdles.

Varsity took the first two places in the three mile event wih McMullen coming home first followed by Ted Gawinski. Wilson and Barr of Varsity took second and third respectively in the mile. Gluntz of Toronto placed second in the high and third in the low hurdles. Jack Gray racked up two seconds in the 100 and 220 yard dashes.

The running broad jump was won by Kettle of Toronto, who was closely tailed by Parkin. Parkin had two third places also in the high jump and javelin events. Rawlinson won the broad jump while LaChance and King placed first and third respectively in the discus throw.

The Varsity relay team of McFadden, Gray, Hryshko and Bassingwaithe were victors in their event followed by OAC and Western in that order.

Results:—100-yd. dash: 1, Waldie, W; 2, Gray, T; 3, Thompson, M. Time: 10.5.
220: Warga, M; Gray, T; McFadden, T. Time: 23.9.
440: Hryshko, T; Devereux, T; Warga, M. Time: 2.01.4. (New record 889: Smiley, OAC; Wilson, T; Barr, T. Time: 4.42.
3-Mile: McMullen, T; Gawinski, T; Schwietzer, OAC. Time: 16.16.
High Hurdles: Milne, T; Gluntz, T; Collard, OAC. Time: 16.8.
Low Hurdles: Hikicki, OAC; Milne, T; Gluntz, T. Time: 28.7.
Running Broad Jump: Kettle, T; Parkin, T; Waldie, W. Distance: 19' 11".

Intermediates To Engage Rams Friday

The Varsity Intermediates play hosts to the McMaster Rams this Friday afternoon in the Varsity Stadium in their fourth rugby game of the season. With a 9-0 victory under their belts from last week in Hamilton, the Second Blues will try for their third win of the season, while the Rams will battle for at least one victory in their schedule.

The Rams lost to the top-place team, the Aggies from OAC, by a score of 25-6, and also to the Western Colts, 36-6. Last week they held the Blues to only nine points although outplayed considerably. In this encounter they intend to do or die and Varsity will have a fight on their hands.

The Varsity Intermediates now hold second place in the Intermediate League winning two games from Western and McMaster dropping one to the OAC Aggies. The Aggies are to date undefeated, winning a game from each of the other three entries in the loop.

Although the odds are for Varsity in this game anything can happen as was proven in the Varsity-McGill game last Saturday. McMaster are not to be underestimated and put on the power on occasions.

Trinity Harrier Winner Is Dawson

Yesterday afternoon twenty runners left the mark to embark on the annual Trinity Harrier, a featured inter-year event among the "crumpets-and-tea" boys. The entry list was made up mainly of freshmen, since every one of the "worms" who couldn't think of an excuse quickly enough had been conscripted to run in the race.

The runners burned up the ground over a 4 1-2 mile course leading from St. Hilda's College up Bedford Road, down the Rosedale Ravine as far as the Glen Road Bridge, and back home, via Elm Avenue, Park Road, and Ramsden Park. The ground was fairly well scorched by Bon Dawson, fourth year, who was paced by Flowers of PHE, who came along just for the fun. Dawson's winning time of 27'04" was 41 seconds better than his last year's record. Following him were: Frank Thompson, 1st year; Mike Wright, 1st year; Sandy Best, 2nd year; and Pete Stewart, of 1st year.

ART MUSIC DRAMA

Freda Trepel

Freda Trepel's piano recital on Monday evening was a triumph of virtuosity, but unfortunately it was not an artistic success. Her style is too bombastic and uneven in tonal texture, while the net impression is of someone over-energetic.

These qualities were evidenced in the Chopin Ballade in A flat major, when at times she piled harmonies to a thunderous volume and at others allowed them to sink to blank inaudibility.

The modern group fared better. Particularly good was Kabelevsky's Sonatine in C: played with a nice brittleness. Liszt's 13th Rhapsody, the closing number, was performed with the scintillating sweep of line and whirlwind passage work that dazzles the listener and captures the spirit of Liszt.

T.S.O. Opening Concert

The warming feeling of artists and audiences come home again reigned at the opening concert of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra last Tuesday, and was intensified by Sir Ernest MacMillan's remarks which included an appeal for Community Chest and an invitation to flock to tonight's Red Feather Concert at Convocation Hall.

Copland's Suite from the "Appalachian Spring" Ballet was the first major item. In spite of some wearisome moments, inevitable perhaps when ballet music is taken to the concert hall, Copland's work leaves the impression of genuine alertness and skill combining to achieve simple beauty or neatly focussed interest at will and, in consequence, some irksome mannerisms of orchestration were gladly overlooked.

One could not help suspecting that the strain of Copland's claims on the performers sapped some of the strength and concentration that should have gone into Mozart's D major concerto for violin to which Mr. de Kresz brought his impressive technical mastery.

This opened dim prospects for Schubert's Symphony No. 7, a work that is terrifying and grandiose, and I do not mean on account of its much-feared length. Was it the restful intermission, or the challenge of the composition, in any case the symphony was offered with the high intensity and along the sweeping lines for which it calls, and if the third movement constituted a slight drop, I am quite willing to leave the blame with the composer.

New Library For McGill

Montreal, Que., Oct. 27.—(CUP)—More than a million dollars of the $9,075,000 objective of the McGill fund has been earmarked for library additions, university officials revealed recently.

The estimated cost of the new library is $1,500,000.

Canadians' reading habits vary by size of communities. In larger cities we read more philosophy, in smaller communities more religion. In the big places people read about sociology and the arts; literature, history and travel are popular in smaller centres.—Quick Canadian Facts.

Optometrists Make Survey In Township

Twenty-two students in the Ontario College of Optometry are conducting a school vision survey in a North York Township school. One thousand school students will be examined in the survey.

"The object of the survey is the investigation of the possibilities of preventive optometry," E. J. Fisher staff representative of the college said yesterday. Preventive optometry he pointed out would enable the early diagnosis of ocular difficulties of school children normally not found until a later period in life.

"The survey is a research investigation, a screening test to locate children's vision which is not up to par," Fisher said. Up to the present time 500 children have been examined.

Some of the checks being used in the survey are visual efficiency, examination or diseased conditions, muscular imbalance, color vision and depth perception.

The present project is the continuation of the ground work set up by last year's optometry students.

In conjunction with the teaching staff of the school where the survey is being conducted, a portion of the "Op's" students are assisting, with the use of an eye movement camera, in a remedial reading class.

Unidentified Culprit Entered SAC Office On Wednesday Night

University Police have not yet discovered the identity of the thief who broke into the offices of the Registrar and the Women's SAC in U. C. Wednesday evening.

The criminal apparently possessed keys to both offices and had a good idea where any money or valuables may have been kept.

Fortunately, neither the Registrar nor the SAC are in the habit of keeping any money in their offices, so the thief was foiled. He did, however, do some damage to the desks when he forced the locked drawers, scattering stamps and small change in his search for money in more substantial amounts.

The break-in apparently occurred between 5.15 and 6.05 in the late afternoon, and was discovered at 6.40, but the culprit had made his getaway, leaving little behind in the way of clues.

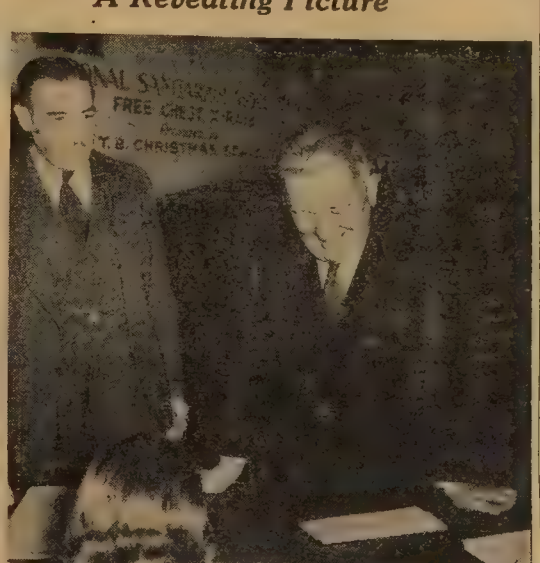
Officials in the Women's SAC office stated that this was not the first time their office had been entered, and as a result they have been careful to keep nothing of value on the premises. They expressed irritation at this sort of irregularity and indicated that steps would be taken to provide a new and more effective lock for their door.

Teaching and Librarianship Are Topics of Career Forum

The second session of the Panhellenic-sponsored Careers on Parade will be held Monday, November 1 at 4.15 p.m. in the Women's Union Theatre. The topics of teaching and librarianship will be under discussion.

Chairman of the forum is Mrs. Kate Aitken, well-known lecturer, writer, radio commentator, and cooking expert. Mrs. Aitken was for a long time Women's Editor for the Montreal Standard. In 1945, and again in 1947, she toured Europe at the invitation of the British Food Minstry, and on the latter trip attended the Royal wedding in London. This year, in addition to her many other interests, Mrs. Aiken was Director of Women's Activities at the Canadian National Exhibition.

To speak on teaching at the forum will be Maude Standing, a member of the staff of North Toronto Collegiate. Eileen Weber, of the School of Library Science, will discuss the various fields of library work.



PLAN WOMEN'S BAND

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 28—(CUP)—An exuberant second-year artsman at the University of British Columbia is planning an innovation on the Pacific Coast campus . . . an all-girl orchestra.

Already the student can see the marquee lights blazing out the name of his sex-aphone orchestra. But right now he has his problems. Nineteen piano players, all female, have applied, but he has only one piano.

Previous to his orchestra venture, the artsman was running a date bureau and a baby-sitting agency.

NFCUS Plans Greater Aid For Canadian Universities

"The National Federation of Canadian University Students, otherwise known as NFCUS, is a student's union—having aims similar in many ways to those of the trade unions", George Wilkes, IV Foresary, chairman of NFCUS Committee on the campus, said.

Wilkes was commenting on the apparent ignorance on the campus of the functions of NFCUS. "Its general and basic function is to be of service to Canadian university students in all ways possible and in any and all fields of students' life. It aims at co-ordinating the individual efforts of the Students' Councils of the 18 universities who are its members," he said.

Railway Fares Reduced

Wilkes feels that the lack of interest in the organization on the part of the students results partly from their lack of knowledge about things which have been accomplished through NFCUS and things which can be accomplished in the future. "NFCUS acquired for students the reduction in railway fares which is now in force at Christmas, in the fall and in spring. It founded the National Federation Exchange Scholarships for undergraduates. The 30 per cent reduction in the cost of sports equipment enjoyed by the universities is a result of NFCUS action."

When asked whether NFCUS intended to rest on its laurels this year or pursue more achievements in the economic, cultural and recreational fields of student's life, the chairman stated that, "In the economic field, the Federation to-

Varsity Hopes High Redmen Practicing Anti-Pass Defence

Varsity's Big Blue team will again be called upon to deal with the "Red Menace" from McGill tomorrow afternoon as Coach Vic Obeck tries for his first win over the Torontonians in two seasons as headman for the Redmen. After last week's game in which McGill were rendered "pass-happy," the Blues are naturally favoured to repeat their win.

Blues Supreme in Air

Boasting the most feared pass attack in Intercollegiate football and a line which is at present the equal of any in the league, the Blues will endeavour to demonstrate to any hometowners and doubting Thomases that their first two games were off colour performances.

Terrific credit is due to Dave Copp, John Shore, Fraser Mustard, Jack Williams, Ches Evans, Archie Jones, Bill Lloyd, Jack Daly, Cliff Beatty and Ed Fisher (otherwise referred to as "the line") for the manner in which they threw their blocks last Saturday thus enabling "the arm", Bruce Cummings, to throw the leather around with such gay abandon.

Practice Pass Defences

McGill has been practicing its pass defence all week in anticipation of what lies in store for them in Varsity Stadium on Saturday. If the weatherman comes up with rain Saturday, the Redskins may show to better advantage, while Cummings would be handicapped by a wet ball.

Rocky Robillard, McGill's fighting little quarterback, pulled a Rozumniak last week as he performed most of the backfield chores and kicked well for Vic Obeck's harried crew. Murray Hayes had difficulty in going anywhere against the tough Toronto line.

Western Host to Queen's

Elsewhere in the Intercollegiate league, Western will be at home to the Queen's Gaels who gave them such a battle last week, before succumbing 19-12. With half the schedule completed, there is a very definite possibility that the Yates Cup will find a new home this November as Jack Parry and Don McFarlane represent the difference between a championship and a runner-up club. John Metras is witnessing the inevitable improvement of the other three teams as well as having his own stars take a real going over every time out.

McFarlane's Limp is Worse

Bob McFarlane is on the limp again as a result of the treatment Queen's gave him while team-mate Bob Farley is out for the season. If the rugged going continues, the Blues may have a much easier time of it than expected when November 13th and the Mustangs arrive in town.

Because of the secondary school kicking contest at McGill, Margie and Bob Cringan's Blue Band were unable to present their regular half time performance. However, they promise even bigger and better routines this week.

President Smith Gets Free X-Ray For T.B. Survey

"It didn't hurt a bit," smiled President Sidney Smith, as he stepped from the white bus in the C.O.T.C. drill hall that houses the X-ray equipment being used by the University Health Service in its three week survey for tuberculosis of the lungs. The equipment will be kept here until November 4 to X-ray every member of the student and staff bodies who would like one.

President Smith said he was grateful to the Health Service for the opportunity of having his X-ray taken and that he "would do it every year if they would let me." He urged that all students and members of the staff-operative, administrative, academic and mechanical should take advantage of this offer for a free X-ray.

Finding one case alone is worth all the expense, labor and time spent on one of these surveys, the President said. He had known three students at the University of Manitoba who would be dead from tuberculosis by now had not infection been discovered at an early stage. Today they are well and happy.

The emphasis at the University age level is prevention, and finding the disease in its early stages ensures successful treatment, said Dr. C. Gossage, director of the University Health Service.

Engineers Blast Artsmen Davey Escapes Ajax Alive

In a red-hot debate in Hart House Ajax last night, Vic's own Keith Davey blasted Skule and SPS rocked Davey back on his heels with a spirit proving and resolve: "That Skule spirit is the most dynamic force on the campus." The affirmative was opened very ably for the engineers by Mr. Brian Jurges, vice-president of the Ajax Engineering Society. He enumerated a staggering list of firsts for the Skulemen, proving statistically that SPS led the field in everything from athletics to social events. His brilliant exposition of the Engineering Society as a model for all to behold, and his reference to the song: "All the nice girls love a Skuleman" were particularly forceful. When Brian sat down the debate was well in hand. Jim Service from Vic then took the floor but was stopped by the Security Officers at the door. Jim dwelt upon the merits of Artsmen in general, and Vic in particular. He slammed Skule for being self-centered and lacking the true Blue and White spirit. Don McFarland, vice-president of 5T2 engineering year, reiterated for Skule. A former Artsman, who was "clewed up" and transferred to SPS, Don had a true insight into the "atrophied brain" of the Arts-type. The spirit of Arts, he maintained, was lost in the shambles of a decadent faculty, midst a murky haze of abtruse philosophy and dewy-eyed idealism. Keith Davey then ripped into Skule, tracing briefly the origin of the now classic feud, and advancing a plea for a greater Varsity spirit and less "Toike Oike." Keith was in his usual good form, and luckily escaped damage as all Skulemen had been

University Dramatics Use Canadian Talent In Campus Production

Canadian authors are featured in the first bill of three one-act plays to be presented by the University of Toronto Drama Committee in Hart House Theatre on Nov. 6.

"Overlaid," by Robertson Davies, takes place in a Canadian farm kitchen. It concerns an ardent member of the Metropolitan Opera Guild, a farmer of seventy, who has just received two thousand dollars from an expired insurance policy.

The University College Players Guild Production is directed by Don Davis, and features John Walker as the farmer and Edith Greenberg as his self-righteous daughter.

"Still Stands the House," presented by St. Michael's Drama Society, is a drama of the Canadian prairies. Its author, Gwendolyn Pharis, an Alberta playwright, won first prize at a recent Dominion Drama Festival for her play. It is directed by Jane McNalley.

Trinity College, the third College taking part in the bill, is presenting "The Wonder Hat" by Ben Heckt and Kenneth Sawyer Goodman. It is a farcical harlequinade, and features Dick Butterfield as Punchinello, who sells the wonder hat and starts the trouble, Marg Bronson as Columbine, and Robin Taylor as her comic maid.

This bill is the first of three similar bills, the next to be presented in January, and the third at the Dominion Drama Festival.

Vic Holds Open House For Parental Group

The Victoria Women's Association held their annual reception in honor of the mothers of new students in Victoria College, Wednesday. The reception consisted of a general tour of Victoria College, Victoria Library, Emmanuel College, Emmanuel Library, and the various Victoria residences. This is the first year that the mothers were shown through the male residences. About twenty Vic girls were selected by Miss Anne Templeton and Miss Jean Fraser to act as guides in the tour. Two guides were assigned to each group of ten or fifteen mothers.

The Victoria Women's Association is an association of mothers of Victoria undergrads or grads who meet on the fourth Wednesday of each month. Mrs. Walter Brown, wife of the President of Victoria College, is the president of the association.

Who's Who

The sudden decision of Grant Livingstone, former president of the University of British Columbia Alma Mater Society, to cancel his tour of Canadian universities, will leave many students still confused about the relationship between the National Federation of Canadian University Students and the International Union of Students. Livingstone, who was chairman of the NFCUS delegation to the IUS conference in Paris last summer, had planned to speak to undergraduate groups across Canada about the role of the NFCUS group at the Paris conference.

The issue of NFCUS affiliation with IUS, shrouded in charges and counter-charges, came after last year's NFCUS Christmas conference when delegates voted for affiliation with IUS—providing certain conditions were met and the decision ratified by two-thirds of Canadian university student bodies. The decision was ratified in June and a Canadian delegation of four, headed by Livingstone, proceeded to Paris to discuss affiliation with IUS officials.

According to Livingstone, the delegation was given authority to sign the IUS constitution—in effect making NFCUS an official member of the IUS. The delegation did not do so. Livingstone has returned to Canada charging that "the Canadian delegation was shunned, refused admittance as an official delegation and treated with scorn."

IUS supporters, on the other hand, accuse Livingstone of misrepresentation. The "conditional" affiliation sought by the NFCUS conference was unsuitable, they say. However, it appears that Livingstone, while at the IUS conference, submitted a new proposal on behalf of NFCUS for affiliation. This proposal, IUS officials felt, was an approved basis for affiliation—providing it was authorized by the NFCUS parent body.

IUS supporters claim they cut red-tape by issuing official "observer cards" to the Canadian delegation. They claim the Canadian delegation agreed to the IUS proposal that a member of the IUS council attend the NFCUS national conference this year. They claim Livingstone accepted these proposals in Paris.

In a letter to the IUS Credentials Committee, dated Sept. 13th, Livingstone said "NFCUS . . . has found the constitution of IUS to be acceptable and desirable as a basis for its fundamental purpose, which is co-operation and unity with other representative national student unions for the benefit of Canadian students."

It would be an understatement to suggest that a misunderstanding exists between NFCUS and IUS. Certainly there is much that needs clarification. And until Livingstone explains what happened at the Paris conference, Canadian students will remain confused. An early report is required.

Havoc Created; Banana Found In Pudding

One of the biggest scandals to hit the campus in this decade broke into the news with the announcement last night that a slice of banana was found in a serving of banana cream pudding being eaten by student in Hart House cafeteria yesterday evening.

John Mellon, III Forestry, discoverer of the slice of banana, told The Varsity that the whole thing came as a complete surprise to him. He was eating his banana cream pudding quietly and believed, when he picked up the slice of banana, that it was merely a lump in the pudding.

His cry of amazement at the discovery created a riot in the Hart House cafeteria which was only quelled after police were called in.

Officials of the cafeteria described the situation as "unheard off", and said "we intend to search out the culprit who pulled this faux pas of the century." A $500 reward awaits the discoverer of the employee who allowed the banana to get into the pudding.

Cafeteria employees, in an informal poll, said they could not imagine how the slice of banana got into the pudding. "Every precaution is taken against such an incident", they said. "It has never happened before."

Cafeteria officials believe that the person or persons unknown responsible for the misplaced slice of banana, are also at the root of other troubles facing the cafeteria.

Cited by them as unsolved mysteries at present were the following —1. Someone, at present unknown,

Tory Premier Hints Support For Students

In an interview yesterday, Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Premier of Ontario hinted that the students in Ontario universities might expect a reduction of university fees some time in the future, "perhaps in a year or so" but for the present there would be no change.

In answer to a question as to whether he thought universities should be state controlled, the Premier said he was satisfied with the present arrangements and would not elaborate further, than to say, he disapproved of state control of universities.

Premier Kennedy was interviewed after he had addressed a capacity crowd of 250 to 300 students attending the opening meeting of the university Progressive Conservative Club in West Hall, University College yesterday afternoon.

In his opening remarks the Premier urged all those present to forget their individual party politics for the present. "The greatest personal gratification is obtained when one forgets politics and concentrates on giving good honest service to the public when you hold a public office," he said. He said this had been his own personal policy throughout his years of political life and he had found it to be very satisfactory.

At the close of his address, a question period was permitted, during which time students raised questions on everything from highways to the pertinent one of hydro. In answer to the question regarding the acute Hydro situation, he said that all possible haste was being made to construct generating units to overcome this difficulty.

Hold Opening Debate Of Thompson Series

The initial series in a competitive impromptu debating scheme, the Thompson debates, sponsored by the Victoria College Debating Parliament, will get under way next Monday.

John Allen, the Minister of Education and convener of the Impromptu Debating Committee, said that numerous students had submitted their names to contest the debates.

Outlining the procedure to be followed Allen said that interested students should sign the schedule posted on the main bulletin board opposite a time convenient to them. Anyone may debate with or against certain colleagues providing vacancies can be found on the schedule. Otherwise team members and topics will be chosen at the debate, each person being allotted five minutes to prepare his speech. The debates will be judged according to a specified point system, by members of the UTDU, faculty, and officers of the Victoria College Debating Parliament.

Political Clubs Harmless Say U.C. Student Debaters

A resolution, "that campus political clubs are harmful to undergraduate life," was defeated by a vote of 23-14 at the second meeting of the U. C. Parliament yesterday afternoon

Lost Souls

The Prime Minster, Wallace Fram, III Hon. Law, as the first speaker for the affirmative confined his argument to the adverse effect of political clubs upon general undergraduate life. He stated that he was not concerned with the "two hundred and fifty lost souls" who belong to campus political clubs, but rather with the two thousand, two hundred and fifty other students in U. C. who are non-partisan. Speakers sponsored by the political clubs "deluge us with streams of propaganda". "We do not get constructive ideas from these clubs. They merely strengthen preconceived biases".

Ginger Nairn, II Pol Sci., spoke for the negative. She said "that through these clubs we get a chance to compare this 'propaganda'. University is not an ivory tower any more; even though we are students we are also Canadian citizens and should be acquainted with the actual practices and policies of political parties. Students can form a rational basis for beliefs and can wield some influence in party affairs."

The second speaker for the affirmative, Roy Brigham, IV Pol. Sci., argued that it is possible to join only one political club and thus the student is subject to party bias, which defeats the broadening of personality in the student. The latter he said was a main purpose of University life. In answer to a question from the floor, he declared himself in favor of an organization in which all political views would be discussed by students and party leaders.

Geoffry Wastenej's, IV Pol. Sci, last speaker for the negative refuted the two affirmative arguments, saying that members of political clubs are not confined to one point of view, but are able to attend open meetings of any club. "Only one club insists on party membership."

After voting on the resolution, the House elected a new Prime Minister, Geoffry Wasteneys and a new Leader of the opposition.

IUS, Communist Tool States Livingstone

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 28.—(CUP)—International Union of Students was denounced as a tool for Communist propoganda by Grant Livingstone, National Federation of Canadian University Students' delegate to the recent IUS conference, and former president of the student government association at the University of British Columbia.

Livingstone described the policy of IUS as "blind, Moscow directed."

He said that Canadian delegates were never allowed voting privileges at the conference and were permitted to sit only as observers.

"The executive is overwhelmingly Communist and the Council which should be the deciding body serves only as a rubber stamp," he added.

People of Europe Thirst for Peace Declare Students

"The Iron Curtain is a myth," said Steve Endicott, IV Vic, at a press conference yesterday morning. As a member of the Beaver Brigade, sponsored by the Canadian Committee of the World Federation of Democratic Youth, Endicott and 44 other young Canadian students and workers representing trade unions, universities, and religious organizations, visited the countries of Western Europe and Czechoslovakia, Poland and Hungary in the Eastern zone.

Other U of T students on the trip were John Anderson, IV Vic, Virginia Shipley, III UC, and Audrey Tobias, Trinity 4T8. As a result of their experiences, the group stated that they wished to organize a peace crusade among our own youth, to counteract what they referred to as "war propaganda stepped up in the capitalist press."

No Talk of War

"Nowhere," said Endicott, "did we find talk of, or preparation for war when we were in Eastern Europe. The countries," he continued, "were not dominated and were in no way subjugated by Russia. We found in Eastern Europe a positive progressive attitude and a whole economy geared to reconstruction in contrast to talk in the western Marshall Plan areas of rebuilding the Rhur as a war potential and a France so deep in economic chaos that it was incapable of reconstruction."

"The young people we asked about the possibility of another war told us they didn't know whether or not there would be one, that they didn't want war, and that they wanted at least to be let alone to rebuild their countries."

In Czechoslovakia, the Canadians spent two weeks working with the townspeople of Lidice, rebuilding a town totally destroyed by the Nazis. One of the chief objects of the trip was the task of representing Canada at the first International Conference of Young Working Youth held in Warsaw in August.

Bitterness towards the United States was not evident in countries behind the "so-called Iron Curtain". These countries, Brigade members declared, were anxious for American help but would not accept it with "political strings attached". In France, the Canadians encountered hostility from Frenchmen who mistook them for Americans. "The French," they said, "were very unfriendly to the United States because they feel they are being subordinated by US economic measures to western Germany."

On their arrival in Montreal, members of the Brigade said, a welcoming reception from local young people was thwarted by R.C.M.P. "We must reach the youth of Canada through meetings arranged through the universities and other organizations in which they participate," they said.

Community Chest To Receive Help From Vic Frolic

Miss Toronto will make the draw for prizes being offered at the Vic Feather Frolics next Friday night. Proceeds from the Frolics will go to the Red Feather Campaign. The whole of Victoria College will be open to all members of the university.

"There will be prizes for everything," said Harry Green, vice-president of the VCU and director of the event. Most important of the prizes are those offered for the lucky draw. Included are a $25.00 voucher at Eaton's, four tickets in the blues for Ice Capades, tickets to Jimmy Dorsey, the Vic Informal, and the Western dance. The evening's special will be the Booby Prize—a ticket to Skule Night.

Also on the program is a variety show featuring old and new talent at Vic. The show will be under the direction of J. Harvey Smith. There will be three performances during the evening to accommodate everyone. For those who want to try their luck there will be a midway offering games of chance and skill. Dancing in the co-ed common room will complete the evening.

LECTURES BY CANDLE

Candlelight lectures became the latest thing in learning yesterday when four Pass Arts students showed up for an English lecture bearing wax torches during a Hydro shutoff. Asked to douse their lights by the professor they mumbled: "We just wanted to brighten up the lecture."

Costumes To Feature International Dance

The Varsity International Ball on Nov. 5, under the combined efforts of the Spanish, French, Russian, Ukrainian, and International Student clubs has emerged as an all university function symbolic of the university's welcome to visiting students. Last year an International Ball was sponsored by the International Students' Organization and held in the Oak Room in Union Station.

Honorary patrons of the ball are Lieut.-Gov. and Mrs. Lawson; President Sydney Smith, who is National Chairman of the United Nations Society for Canada and Mrs. Smith; J. Alec Edmison, Toronto President of the U.N.O. and Mrs. Edmison; and the Warden of Hart House and Mrs. Ignatieff. Guests will include the Faculty Deans and the Hart House Board of Governors.

A unique feature of the ball at which National costume or optional dress may be worn, will be a variety dance program including folk dances which will last an hour. Music will be provided by Art Hallman and Jim McDonald orchestra. Because of the informal nature of some of the clubs participating it will be possible to attend [illegible] and tickets may be bo[illegible]dually.

Gala Weekend

Tradition To Be Started By Big Week-End

By STAN FILLMORE

"Plans for the week-end of November 12-14 are almost complete and indications are that it will be a terrific affair," Doug Love, publicity director of the Blue and White Society, announced yesterday. And the week-end of Nov. 13 is going to be one big blow-off for the University of Toronto. Not only is it the date of the Varsity-Western football game but also the week-end of the Varsity Homecoming and Open-House. The Blue and White Society have planned three days of activities for all graduates, undergraduates and their parents.

Another pep rally is to be held at 8.00 p.m. the evening of Friday 13 on the back campus.

"Plans for the rally are already well developed," Love said, "and with the time still remaining, we will have the scheme worked into tip-top shape." Don Harron, well-known for his CBC appearances, is to be master of ceremonies and many of Toronto's top sportsmen have been invited to attend. Johnny Metras, Mustang coach, is also expected to be there. A big bonfire is scheduled and accommodations will be provided for dancing. It is expected that both types of dancing will be carried on . . . ballroom and the U. of T. rhumba, better known as "snake".

A colorful and gala parade is on the books for Saturday morning. Assembling on the back campus at 10.00 a.m., it will proceed by way of Hoskin Avenue to University Avenue, along Bloor to Yonge, down Yonge and along College to the front campus. There it will pass in review before the judges' stand in front of Hart House where a shield will be presented to the winning float by a committee of judges headed by President Sidney Smith. Already ten faculties have entered floats and all other campus clubs and organizations are invited to participate.

In addition to the floats the parade will be made up of the color-guard, U.N.T.D. and C.O.T.C. contingents. The Blue and White Band (with Margie, of course), the pipe band and cheerleaders. It is hoped that the Western brass band will also be in the line-up.

Saturday afternoon at the usual time and place the final scheduled game of the '48 football season will take place. The cheerleading crew is to be augmented with their counterparts from the gay nineties.

"The dance on Saturday night is to be a "big do" of tremendous proportions," Doug Love said. "Extensive and extraordinary plans are nearing completion and adequate facilities are being provided for all who wish to attend." Student entertainment for the intermission is being planned.

"Convocation Hall is to be the scene of the Sunday morning church service. Several prominent speakers have been approached and we are momentarily expecting a reply from them," Love said. Student glee-clubs, soloists and organist will provide the music. All students and their parents as well as the grads are urged to attend this service.

Sunday afternoon is to be open house at Varsity. University College, Vic, Dents, Nursing and Occupational Therapy have already made plans to hold receptions with refreshments in their own buildings. Other faculties are expected to make similar arrangements. Warden Ignatieff has assured full co-operation of the Hart House Staff wherever possible. "This is going to be a wonderful opportunity for all students to show their parents about the university, for all buildings are to be open for tours and inspection," said Love. An information centre with direct telephone lines and co-eds as guides and directors will be set up in the old observatory.

This year's Homecoming week-end is the first to be held at Varsity and the Blue and White Society hopes it will become another of the University's traditions. Plans as they now stand seem well calculated to keep Toronto aware that its university is very much alive and not so conventional, Love

Foreign Christian Mission Will Adopt New Programme

Realizing that the old system of Christian Missions was no longer adequate, and to attempt to analyze and change Christian Foreign Missions to meet modern trends, the "Foreign Mission Program of Advance" will hold a service in Convocation Hall at 7.30 on Sunday, Oct. 31. Dr. Henry Sloan Coffin, Principal Emeritus of Union Theological Seminary, New York, will be the speaker.

At the Foreign Mission Assembly held at Columbus, Ohio, it was decided to hold a series of regional conferences in 36 selected centres throughout the United States and Canada. Thirty five hundred delegates were in attendance, representing 95 Foreign Mission Boards. Four of the conferences will be held in Canada, and one of those in Toronto.

"The 'Foreign Missions Program of Advance' is the title of a movement in which 66 Protestant denominations in the United States and Canada have united in an endeavor to meet the chaotic world situation with which the Christian Church is today challenged," said E. M. Nichols of the Student Christian Movement.

A reception and discussion will follow the service at 8.45 at the School of Missions, 97 St. George Street. The speaker will be Professor V. E. Devadutt of India.

The conference is supported on the campus by the Canterbury Club, Disciples Student Fellowship, Presbyterian Fellowship, and the Student Christian Movement

Propose Scholarships At UBC For Germany

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 25—(CUP)—The Board of Governors at the University of British Columbia will decide today whether student fees are to be raised one dollar in January in order to finance a unique "education for democracy" program.

Success of the plan formulated by student Cliff Greer and approved by students at a general meeting this month hangs on passage of the fee increase.

Under the plan, students at UBC would pay an extra one dollar with second term fees in January, the money to be used for scholarships to bring four of Hamburg students to the campus.

Greer hopes to expand the plan until every Canadian university offers one overseas scholarship for each 2,000 students.

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

C.S. Band Collection

The selections of the Band collection, now in the Hart House Art Gallery, contain representative works of some of the greatest of Canadian artists, with Jackson, Emily Carr, Harris and Lismer.

This exhibition certainly shows how satisfying it must be to have a large income and good taste. The collective taste of the Bands is excellent, if somewhat conservative. The problem of the collector is two-fold; he has to create a collection that he can live with, so the paintings must have a permanent attraction, and he must retain his own individuality. That is he must not allow himself to become as a wall on which the painters may exhibit. The Band collection certainly has a permanent attraction, for although it contains examples of every major experiment in the field of Canadian art, it never pesters the viewer with undue emphasis on a particular phase of the experimentation.

It is very difficult to choose between a great and a mediocre painting, for even the keenest critical mind is subject to appalling lapses. However only in one or two cases has the Bands' good taste overpowered their individuality and here the result is thin. The collection as a whole is breath-taking. I liked especially the Emily Carrs and Harris' mountain scenes.

I would advise everyone to see this exhibition, for some of the best of Canadian art is here. It should be required seeing for all incipient disciples of the modern school; before you go overboard for the disjointed and garish, drop into Hart House and see what the old stagers can do.

Mischa Elman

The second last time I heard Mischa Elman was in a 1945 radio performance of the Tchaikovsky Concert from Symphony Hall, with Paul Paray conducting the Boston Symphony. At that time I was struck by the number of liberties Elman chose to take with the score especially in the matter of tempo. Since this artist has been on the American concert stage for well over forty years, it would be absurd to anticipate a diminishing of these qualities in a short space of three. Consequently, Elman's Thursday night recital at Eaton's was thoroughly predictable; along with the faults were the thrice familiar virtues, and most of the time these last were mightily fetching.

There is no denying the tone, to be sure—rich, vibrant, pulsing. It is an unfortunate fact that it is also omnipresent, and thoroughly inapplicable to a whole library of scores. For example, I am sure that Handel never dreamed of such a tone or style for his violin sonatas, and so the sounds of his A major sonata, a comely piece, put one in mind of one of the poorer Stokowski transcriptions of Bach. On the other hand, the Brahms of the First Violin Sonata fared better, if only by reason if its immediate relevance to Elman's salient characteristic.

All this caterwauling is very minor indeed when one takes a critical look at the technique, which is impeccable, and the vitality, which is enormous. But there is a danger in divorcing the artist from the music he associates himself with, a practice which results in adulation and a belief in the divine right of Kreislers, Paderewski, etc. Thirty years ago Elman was the ne plus ultra; but today we know that our Milsteins and Sterns are just as good, if not better.

So who knows what 1978 will produce?

Ajax Triumphs In Heavy Fog

Highlighted by a spectacular 40 yard placement kick by Valenti of Ajax, the game yesterday between Trinity and Jr. S.P.S. at Ajax, ended with a score of 10 to 1 for Ajax.

In the opinion of the fans, it was one of the cleanest games yet played. Good sportsmanship predominated throughout the game.

Trinity was the first to ring the bell, getting their only point on a kick by Rogers in the first quarter.

In the second quarter with Ajax in possession of the ball on Trinity's 35 yd. line, the Engineers pulled a fake run to the right resulting in Valenti crossing up the Trinity team by throwing a sansational pass to Folinsbee who caught it on the dead run on the 10 yd. line. He barged through two Trinity men for the touchdown amid the cheers of the onlooking Jaxmen, scoring the team's first touchdown of the season. Valenti made the convert.

In the fourth quarter on a third down, Valenti made his spectacular 40 yd. placement kick, which was the highlight of the game. Hanson made the final point for Ajax bringing the score to 10-1 for the S.P.S. Jrs.

In the Trinity team, Rogers kept his team in the game with his numerous long kicks, which kept Ajax in their own territory. Sparked by their quarterback Imrie, the Trinity backfield thrilled the Jaxmen with some really razzle-dazzle plays. One in particular, in which no less than five men handled the ball, netted them about fifteen yards.

Outstanding in the Ajax backfield was Julie Hanson, who time and again carried the leather through the Trinity line, averaging six to eight yeards each time. The Jaxmen proved in the show against Trinity, that when their offensive is really clicking, coupled with their strong line, they will be a hard team to beat from here in.

Trinity Ties Ajax In Soccer One All

The Ajax team opened the game against their old friends and arch rivals, Trinity I, by scoring early in the first half with Mesfin faking his way through the Trinity defence with some clever footwork to score Ajax's first and only goal. The second half opened with Trinity pressing hard to even the score. Trinity split the Ajax defence several times until that long awaited opportunity arrived and Wells found himself in scoring position to bang home the tying goal for Trinity. The game ended with both teams trying to break the tie but they were turned back by the outstanding goaltending on both sides.

Feverish?

Above is top McGill plunger Murray Hayes who was one of the two or three backfielders who played against Varsity last week like they were interested in the game. He'll show again tomorrow in Varsity Stadium.

SPORTSWOMAN

Softball

Meds II topped League III when they defeated PHE III 13-11 in two and a half innings on Wednesday. Sally Sarles of Meds hit the only homer but heavy slams were hit by both teams with Irene Haine slugging for Meds and Joan Savage for Fizz Ed. Irene Haine showed up well in her pitching against PHE's which gave the opposition three walks, and also in team work with Sally Sarles, first baseman, in putting out many players.

St. Hilda's III defaulted to PHE IV tying the latter with Vic II for top positions in League IV. A toss was made putting Fizz Ed in first place and Vic in second for the playoffs.

In yesterday's semi-final game, PHE III edged Vic II 15-12. At the end of the second inning the score was 6-0 for PHE but in the third, Vic made 12 runs, most of them due to Fizz Ed errors. PHE came back in the bottom of the third with six more runs to tie the score. In the fourth inning the Vic batters went down one, two, three but the Fizz Edders got in three runs to win the game. Neither team was playing topnotch ball and fumbles were frequent although Jacey Steele, who got a run every time she was up, played a strong first base for PHE.

Basketball

In Wednesday's basketball tilt St. Hilda's Jr./Sr. team downed UC Srs. 15-10. The play was very close up to the end of the third quarter, the score being 9-8 for Trinity. From that point on St. Hilda's came out with great team play, the forward line of Joy Hallet, Pat Cockburn and Curly Mathews standing out particularly. The team displayed a tight six man defence and good interception. Curly was not only the star of the game but also the top scorer, copping five points. Lil Laakso was high man on the Red and White, sinking two balls. On UC's defence Mickey Thomas played her usual good steady game. UC played as individuals rather than as a team and their shots were off.

Some spectators were actually present last night in the form of three loud cheering Trinity men. Supporters are really appreciated at the basketball games.

Western Seeking 26th Victory For Record

The University of Western Ontario Mustangs, undefeated in their last 25 games, will get a chance to tie one of the most honored records in Canadian football on Saturday when they play hosts to Queen's University at Little Stadium. And by a quirk of fate, they will be playing the present holders of the record.

From 1922 through 1925, the Gaels from Kingston won four consecutive Intercollegiate titles, and added three Grey Cups, and established an undefeated record of 26 games. The Mustangs have 24 games and a tie in their last 25 league starts.

The Western victory streak began in 1939, when they won the first four consecutive Intercollegiate titles. After a five-year layoff during the war, formal Intercollegiate competition was resumed in 1945, with a shortened schedule of four games. The Mustangs won the synthetic championship that year, although the CIAU has not recognized it as official. They repeated in 1946, and again last year, although their winning streak was snapped at 21 games when Varsity held them to a 12-12 tie in the final game last season.

If the Mustangs win the title this year, they will tie a league record for winning four consecutive champions, which is held jointly by Toronto and Queen's. Toronto did the trick beginning in 1908, and Queen's repeated in the twenties, although both teams were playing in a three-club league at the time.

For the second Saturday in a row, the Mustangs lost the services of a player for the rest of the season, and it brings to four the number of players who have been sidelined for the rest of the year with injuries. Bob Farley, a first year man in the Mustang backfield, suffered a torn cartilage in his knee in Kingston. The week before in Montreal, Vern Brown was put out with a dislocated shoulder.

Blues Seek Third Win In Stadium Vs Rams

By EDWARD J. SOKOLOWSKI

The Varsity Intermediate Rugby team meet the McMaster Rams from Hamilton this afternoon at 2.00 p.m. in the Varsity Stadium. This game will be free to all students and this game should prove as good as any Senior game.

The Varsity team defeated the Rams last Thursday night in Hamilton 9-0 and this game, Don Bark says, "We should roll up the points in this game. Our team is in good shape and we will play a good game."

Bill Brewer is still nursing a cut hand and is expected to be out for at least another week. Bob Garside will carry the load in the kicking, passing and running department and from the results of the last game against the Rams, Bob will be the biggest threat to the visitors.

Hubie Sinclair, captain of the club, will quarter the team along with Birkenshaw. The backfield of Stan Barbor, Kelly, MacFadden, and Garside are one terrific combination as well as Rich Howson, Ecclestone, Stevenson, and Tom Lawson.

Both Davidson and Bill Scott are powerful men, filling the centre position and in the last game gave the Ram line plenty of trouble. Insides, Roberts, Bruiser Brown, Errington and Killer Kilpatrick and middles Harry Hyde, Forge, Longmore, and Zimmerman can be counted on to make holes for the backfield or to hold out the enemy for the pass plays.

The end department was a little short as a result of injuries but now is filled with Artie Bell, Dave Graham, Russell and Bob Davis, who take care of that position very capably.

Kennedy and Al Sivell, two ends, will not be playing as a result of cracked ribs.

The Varsity team will be fighting for their third win of the season while the Rams have yet to win their first game. Both teams are in top shape and they expect to play one of their best games of the season.

Buffalo State Teachers, Niagara University and OAC will provide competition for Varsity in a combination—intercollegiate and senior interfaculty harrier to be run at High Park tomorrow morning. All contestants will have the timer as their opponents in order that the winners of both classes may be determined.

The Varsity intercollegiate team will consist of George Doull, Dunc Green, Ted Gawinski, George McMullen, F. McCurry, G. Wilson, B. Williams, P. Niblock, J. Flowers and D. Barr.

During the last two weeks, at least eight men and women have been murdered, six badly beaten and two carried off, gibbering idiots. The victims of the murders and the beatings were neatly dispatched and thoroughly drubbed, but we lost no sympathy over them. They deserved to die and to have their heads caved in. These victims, over whom we shed no tears, met their deservedly miserable ends behind microphones that sent their cries and gurgles screaming through the radios of an unoffending nation. If we can just wait it out, maybe they'll all be killed off, leaving the airwaves fit for ears that don't regard violent homicide as an evening's relaxation. In case you're wondering, the two carried off as gibbering idiots were ourself and a trembling friend. We just couldn't take it! Please, Mister, please loosen the straps, we have a column to write!

Games don't have to start late. This year and, we're afraid, every year, the softball games on Trinity Field as well as the basketball games at OCE seldom, if ever, start on time.

Softball games are scheduled to start at one o'clock. Naturally some of the players will have 12 o'clocks and won't be able to get there on the dot of 1 but that hasn't been the trouble.

At most ball games, the players are there by 10 after 1. The umps are there by 10 after 1. The managers are there by 10 after 1. Even some spectators are there by 10 after 1. In fact, believe it or not, everyone is there by 10 after 1 but the games don't start then.

Why? ? ?

For one thing, the line-ups are seldom or never ready. While the players stand around and the umps get hotter under the collar, the scorers try to figure out Who's on first, What's on second, Idunno's on third, etc., etc.

There's no need for this at all.

It's the manager's duty to see that her team's line-up in batting order is ready at the time the game is scheduled to begin. If the score cards were filled out beforehand, games would not be held up.

One other reason why the games have been slow in starting is that the equipment is not ready.

One game was held up for more than five minutes while someone went to the SAC office in the UC basement to get the required catcher's mask and chest protector. When she returned, the umpire realized that there was no home plate. Somebody gave up her notebook as a pinch hitter for the plate. But this was rather hard on the donor who winced at every run.

Half way through the game someone noticed that an extra base had been lying just a ball's throw (underhand at that) away from the first base line.

When the games start late, it means either that the game won't be finished or else that half the players skip their 2 o'clocks. The baseball season is almost over but we can do something about basketball. Have your line-ups ready. If you are the home team, be sure that you have a timekeeper. With co-operation from everybody concerned the games will start and end on time.

Let's LOOK At It

The University girl's natural shopping territory is Park Plaza corner, the F. J. Watt, Sportswear, who are showing some of the season's top designing in woollen dresses and coats. Every co-ed knows the shop for smart separates, and it's gratifying to remember that now Watt's can supply you with the type of all-day-long woollen number that can actually take you dating as well with a good solid quota of oomph. Watt's encourage you to shop around any time, like to get your slant on things, have outfitted more campus queens than most big stores.

If you're the timid type who turns away from the Joan Rigby window with a shuddering sigh knowing that such perfection is not in the territory of your only budget, take our advice and reconsider the whole strategy. Joan Rigby suits start at fifty-five dollars, and lady you can travel farther and do much worse. Moreovgr, Joan Rigby suits are the type to give your investment a pretty long life-line. A suit of the J. R. heritage just keeps rolling along, season after season, and spiked up with a new accessory or two it maintains its gentle air of superiority. It is likely at last handed down to some deserving relative. 54 Bloor St. W.

Any young man with an eager look in his eye and matrimony on his mind, is well advised to visit Scheuer's at 131 Yoge Street, if in quest of a three-stone engagement ring or solitaire of definite quality quotient. Scheuer's pride themselves on a special price of one hundred dollars on a carefully selected group of engagement rings which have been a Scheuer advertisement of good value these many mating seasons. Oldest diamond importing house in Canada, Scheuer's are downtown, facing Temperance.

A friend of ours who comes into Toronto from a city nearly as big twice a year on a shopping spree, had just purchased three ensembles from Travers Fox. "Why three?" we asked, being on the cautious side. "Well, it's like this" she said. "I like my clothes custom-made. I also like to know what theyre going to look like after they're made up. I go to Travers Fox because I can have custom-made fittings on a dress I know will suit me." Try it on, get the "look" and let those wonderful fitters do the rest. Moved, incidentally, to larger and verree luxurious showrooms at 1175 Bay.

And when we tell you you can still buy a lunch with the civilized trimmings for thirty-five cents we're not fooling. Go to the Hearthstone and check. They do it at noon, and of course, you can be more lavish with fifty or sixty cents, but it's a spot you're not ashamed to take admiring friends from back home. Banquets a speciality, incidentally, and they can seat up to two hundred and fifty guests. Bloor West of Bay.

Months under the tutelage of Palmer Brown, a natural flair for the perfect hat to make you perfect, a year of training at art school and a couple of years at millinery design all go into the background of that very remarkable young person Gilbert Phillips, who is hanging up a shingle at 95 Bloor Street West. Already a coast-to-coast theatre "big name" and several of the more sophisticated career girls around town have discovered Gilbert. He's hoping you'll do the same, makes it interesting to be pretty, and knows a lot about what it takes to give your headline "zing." Go up to the top floor.

People are usually better looking than they think, reason being that most sensitive souls develop an anguished expression in frot of the camera which is of course the result of really caring. But now if you Really Care, and want someone else to Really Care, there is this remarkable Polyfoto technique by which twenty photographic shots are pelted at you at every possible facial angle, and out of all these is sure to come the look that expresses the real, the indestructible, the irresistible you. Drop in and prove the value of these words at Bloor and Bellair. Chances are you'll come away all built up to a dramatic and compelling new ego.

BLUES TRIUMPH 33-0

Blues Do An Encore

Tommy Waldon (85) poured through the leaky McGill line with all the celerity of a rabbit Saturday afternoon when he scored two touchdowns in the Varsity 33-0 rout of McGill. Here he is making one of his more potent thrusts, moving all the way into the McGill tertiary where Rocky Robillard (38) reaches for him. Al McLeod (37) is falling over Robillard in his eagerness to get at Waldon. Neither of the McGills did any good as Waldon went over for his second try of the game.

Win Boosts Blues To Second Place McGill In Cellar

By BILL ROSS

Varsity's football Blues demonstrated in a convincing manner that their 41-0 victory in Montreal was no flash in the pan when they routed Vic Obeck's McGill Redmen for the second time by a 33-0 score in Varsity Stadium Saturday. This win, coupled with Western's defeat of the Galloping Gaels, boosts Varsity into undisputed possession of second place, four points behind the first place Mustangs.

Well over 1,800 football fans enjoyed near perfect football weather as the Blues put on a sterling display of passing and running to pile up 22 first downs to McGill's eight. The highly touted McGill line could not stand up to the powerful Toronto onslaught which ripped it for a total of 108 yards.

Blues Score High

The Blues rolled up 74 points against none in eight quarters of superb football against the red and white squad which held Western to a 24-19 battle and broke into the high scoring department which was solely the domain of the Mustangs thus far.

Cummings, Huycke, and West were the spearheads of the passing attack which directly accounted for one touchdown and aided very materially in all of the others. The ground attack was led by Toogood, Waldon, Danylchuk and Cummings whose rushing efforts totalled 177 yards.

John Shore recovered a blocked kick on the McGill 14 yard line and set up the play which saw Cummings pin point John Chorestecki with a touchdown aerial for the first score of the game at the three minute mark. Cummings booted the convert.

Cummings Scores

Bruce Cummings clicked again with a long pass, this time to Ted Toogood who raced to the Redmen's four yard line before being knocked into touch. Cummings went over for the major which he converted.

Half Ends 19-0

Nearing the end of the half two West to Lawson passes advanced the ball to the McGill thirteen-yard mark. Cummings then threw to Danylchuk who was downed at the McGill five. Waldon skirted the right end for a major which Nick Volpe converted. The half ended with Toronto on the desirable end of a 19-0 count.

Murray Hayes sparked the Redmen in the second quarter when, single-handed, he gained twenty one yards while his teammates were thrown for losses totalling seventeen.

Third Quarter

Opening the third quarter with a will, Varsity marched from their own 34 to the McGill nine where they were stopped, failing to make yards. Hayes went through the Blue line for 15 yards and Robillard's kick was run back to midfield. Failing to make their second first down Varsity kicked to Hackett who made only one yard on his runback before he was downed by Jack Gray. On their one yard stripe, McGill's first two plays were squashed by the Varsity line. Robillard fumbled the final snap and his rushed pass went incomplete. Varsity took over the ball on the McGill one from where Waldon went over for his second score of the game on the first play. Cummings made the convert.

Last Stanza

Cummings kicked to Fairhead whose lateral to Hackett lost yards as Hackett was downed at the McGill four. Burckett was caught behind the line by end Alec Lawson for a safetly touch raising the score to Varsity 27, McGill 0 in the opening minutes of the last quarter.

VARSITY LECTURE

There will be a lecture for all Varsity news and feature writers in Room 11 of U.C. at one o'clock today. All reporters are invited to attend.

UBC Executive Deplores Attack On Livingstone

Misleading press coverage of recent University of British Columbia financial difficulties have thrown a cloud of suspicion on Grant Livingstone's character and integrity, according to Dave Brousson, U.B.C. Alma Mater Society president, who has issued a statement to The Varsity.

"Both Paul Plant and myself can unhesitatingly say that there is no suspicion in anyone's mind here that there was any dishonesty in the administration of last year's student affairs, but that, on the contrary, the job cost Grant many sacrifices in money, time, academic record and personal health," Brousson's statement said.

"We deeply regret the implications cast, and sincerely hope that this statement, and the later reports to be issued may partially undo the harm done," Brousson's statement concluded.

Varsity Librarian Honored By U.B.C.

Dr. W. S. Wallace, Librarian for the University of Toronto was awarded the degree of Honorary Doctor of Laws at the University of British Columbia on October 27. The degree was conferred at the opening of a new wing of the UBC library.

Dr. Wallace, who has been with the University of Toronto for over 20 years, is the first Canadian librarian to receive this degree.

At the same time, Mr. Luther Evans, Librarian to the U. S. Congress, received a similar degree.

Pre-Fab Homes As Part Answer To Housing Need

"Our plan is not the complete answer to the housing problem of the married students on this campus, but we expect it will be of help to those who can afford it," declared Fred Umansky, chairman of the SAC Ex-Service Committee recently.

Umansky was referring to the Ex-Service Committee's follow-up on the Vic Married Students Club suggestion on pre-fabricated houses. Movies on the construction of these houses are to be shown by a housing contractor on Tuesday, Nov. 2, and a shuttle service to see the pre-fab housing project on the Queensway will be operated. The movie and tour will be open to all students and staff.

Commenting on the pressing problem of the rising cost-of-living, Umansky said:

"It was the prevalent enthusiasm of the majority of veterans last term that sent a delegation to present their case to the Veterans' Affair minister and other members of parliament, and further, gave healthy impetus to the final acceptance of our proposals not only in principle but also in fact, when Mr. King announced the $10 increase and other benefits for the married student.

"However," Umansky continued, "the mounting price index, with special reference to the costs of domestic and college supplies and instruments has far outstripped any benefit the veterans might have had from the adjustment last April."

Umansky also urged single student veterans to provide his committee with full statistics on their welfare to aid the campaign for increased benefits for them.

Forms for this purpose will be issued shortly.

CORRECTION

The Vic Feather Frolic will be held Thursday evening, Nov. 4., instead of Friday evening as was reported in last Friday's issue of The Varsity.

Judges, drawn from the U.T.D.U. will have the following duties:

1. To select, on a point system similar to that used in the Robinette debates, the eight best debaters taking part.

3. To decide which speakers will debate on the campus and which off the campus.

ISS Lays Plans For Bringing Students Here

Two plans were drawn up for bringing European students to Canada, at the third annual Canadian conference of I.S.S. held last Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Ajax. Under one scheme displaced persons will be brought to Canada for complete university training, and will remain here upon graduation. Under the other project, called the Exchange Student Plan, European students will come for one year's university study, and then return to Europe.

Under each of these plans thirty-five foreign students will be brought over, providing for approximately one European student for every 2,000 Canadian students. Every Canadian university is expected to take at least two students, one under each project. A third project will consist of sending aid to Europe.

Constitution Adopted

A written constitution was drawn up providing for annual conferences, the next to be held in October, 1949. Also a national committee was set up, consisting of two students, one faculty member, and one graduate from each of Ontario, Quebec, the Maritimes, and the West.

Mr. N. Ignatieff, Warden of Hart House, was elected graduate representative for Ontario. Pat Daniel, IV U.C., and Russ Bell, Carleton College, are the Ontario student representatives, while Dr. James Gibson, Carleton College, was elected faculty member. Dr. Marcus Long of the U. of T. was among five delegates-at-large which were also chosen.

To Hold Seminar

An administrative commitee will be formed to include eleven members appointed annually from the national committee.

Mathew Saunders is replacing Gordon Campbell as national secretary of I.S.S. In addition, each of the four regions will have a secretary.

Plans are also underway for a Canadian student seminar, the location of which will be picked by the national committee.

I.S.S. also hopes to implement relief projects in India, France, Greece, and Hundary.

NFCUS HEAD HERE

Grant Livingstone, chairman of the NFCUS delegation to the IUS conference in Paris last summer, will address an open meeting of the undergraduate body at 1 p.m. tomorrow. Place of meeting will be announced tomorrow.

A Living Memorial

Elsewhere in this issue appears a letter headed "Union No Memorial", which roundly condemns the idea of a student memorial union building. The writer's argument is based—mistakenly, we think—on the premise that such a project would be frivolous and would be disrespectful to the memory of men who died in combat.

The letter reflects a state of mind which, while common thirty years ago, has gradually faded with the realization that respect for the dead implies more than a bronze tablet—or lip service at the rate of two minutes per year.

Most veterans of World War II will be the first to acknowledge the bitter futility of the shop-worn platitudes uttered each November 11th—platitudes which will be uttered again within a few days—while the "brave new world" for which their comrades died remains as distant as ever.

We do not "speak sarcastically" of the monuments erected to the dead of World War I. But we do criticize the mentality that conceived those monuments. And by so doing we pay no disrespect to the dead. If the dead could speak they would ask for no marble pile or bronze statue to commemorate them. We believe that respect can best be fostered through a living, useful monument—a monument designed to widen the gates of knowledge, tolerance, and good-will—in the hope that they would one day eliminate the necessity for future monuments.

A student union building is a living, useful monument—a monument to former men and women of the University who died during the last war.

It is true that there are many projects which would fill a need more immediately apparent—needs not only of the student body but of the public at large. Hospitals, relief funds, housing projects—all merit the support of the general public. But there are other agencies devoted to raising funds for such worthy organizations.

Most war memorials in the past—and today—have been conceived by particular groups in honour of members of their own group who died in battle. A student memorial should be one built by students in memory of students—and to fulfill the needs of students. This attitude was overwhelmingly indicated last year when a student poll listed a student union building as the type of war memorial most desirable on the campus.

And the greater the effort expended in erecting a memorial—the deeper will be the memory. Contributing a sum of money to erect a memorial may satisfy a student's sense of conscience but it will be a momentary and fleeting satisfaction.

A student union building, conceived and designed by students, and made possible by the energy and devotion of students, will be a more everlasting contribution to the memory of the University's war dead.

The Padre's Pastoral

By Rev. E. Crossley Hunter, Trinity United Church, Bloor and Walmer Road.

I was asked, recently, to speak to a college group upon this subject, "Is Religion Necessary?" Certainly the attitude of many today would seem to answer that for life as they conceive and desire it, religion is irrelevant.

Religion seems necessary if life is to have meaning and purpose. The outright materialists of our day are frank in their confession. "The universe is a gigantic flywheel and man is a sick fly taking a dizzy ride" —H. L. Mencken. "The outstanding fact of human life is the utter futility of it all. The most satisfactory part of life is the time spent in sleep when one is utterly oblivious to existence." —Clarence Darrow. "Brief and powerless is man's life. On him and all his work the slow doom falls pitiless and dark."—Bertrand Russel. It was the religion of the prophets and Jesus that led them to believe that life was Divine in its origin and eternal in its destiny.

Moreover, we need religion to give us our ultimate standard of value and character, otherwise expediency becomes the rule, and there is moral anarchy. We need to realize that pure materialism means that there are no eternal values and at long last, when the drama of life is done, Christ and Hitler are the same, they both end in nothingness.

But most of all we need the power of high religion to create character that can be trusted with this amazing increase of scientific skill. A leading physicist in a state university of America has recently written: "I have come to three conclusions, (1) That salvation is not to be found in science (2) We must have a moral revival, (3) We can have no moral revival without a living religion." No generation has ever received greater warning against the spirit of irreligion than ours. Witness Sir Richard Livingstone of Oxford: "If we allow the spiritual basis of our civilization to perish we first change and then destroy it". While President Robert Sproul has said: "The university which makes no effort to stimulate its sons and daughters to a sensitiveness to the issues of religion is likely to be a danger rather than a benefit to the state." But I know of no warning more penetrating than that of Elton Trueblood in his "Predicament of Modern Man": "Ours is a cut-flower civilization. Beautiful as cut flowers may be, they will die because they are cut off from their sustaining roots." We cannot maintain the sacredness and dignity of life apart from the faith that man is made in God's image and is therefore precious in His sight.

If we believe that religion is necessary, we must bear in mind that our spiritual faculty, like every other faculty of body and mind, must be cultivated or it atrophies—we use or lose. And the tragedy of our generation is that we are forgetting this inviolate law and giving little time or thought to the development of the spiritual—all too little time for worship, prayer and meditation—with the result that the spiritual is becoming unreal.

I understand the university is planning a preaching mission in the near future. It comes at a timely hour in the life of our college and world. May we be wise enough to give heed to the things that belong to our peace.

McMaster Rams Baffled By Intermediates

Blues' Pass Attack Made Possible By Strong Line Play

Sparked by a spectacular aerial attack, the Varsity Intermediate Blues romped to a 59-0 victory over the McMaster Rams at Varsity Stadium on Saturday. For the first seven minutes of play, the Rams looked like a winning team, their line tearing great holes in the Varsity front wall, but once the Blues got under way they seemed to be able to do just whatever pleased them.

Varsity Line Outstanding

Passers for the Blues had all the time they wanted to look the field over, and there always seemed to be a receiver in the clear. Huge gaps in the McMaster line allowed such runners as Gregg McFadden and Al Stevenson to really roll up the yardage. Every member of the Varsity line turned in a stellar game.

First Quarter

After halting the Ram drive in the opening minutes of the game, the Blues began a downfield march of their own which culminated in a touchdown by Greg McFadden. An extension end run, from Sinclair to Garside to McFadden was the play which did the trick. Later in the quarter, a 20-yard pass from Tom Lawson to Jack Birkenshaw put Garside in a position to plunge over for the second major score of the game. Al Stevenson kicked the convert.

Second Quarter

The second quarter saw an inspired Varsity team go scoring wild. Bob Garside completed a mighty 45-yard pass to Hubie Sinclair who ran another 15 yards for a touchdown. Sinclair passed to Howson for the convert.

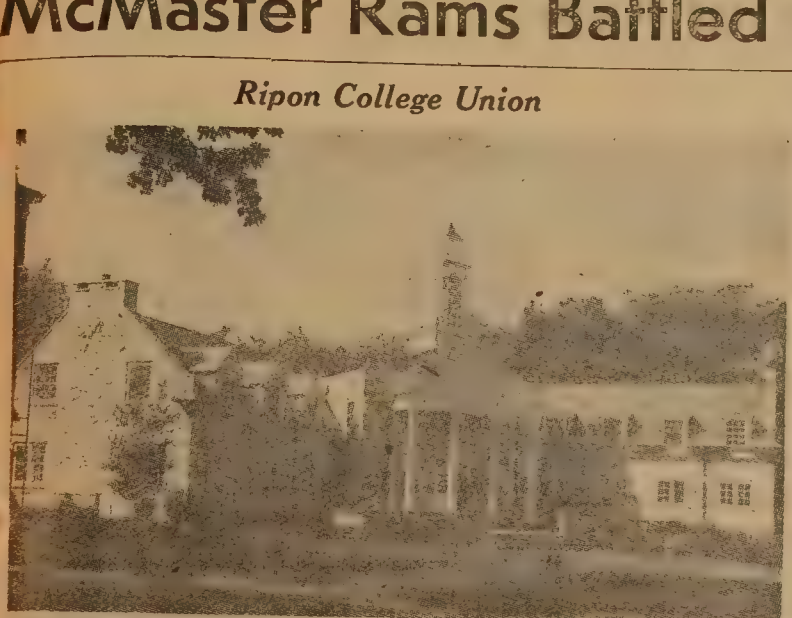
Within four minutes, Stan Barbour and Garside plunged the McMaster line for two more major scores. Both converts failed. Stevenson booted a 30-yard field goal that split the uprights squarely. Another Garside pass, this time to Howson, accounted for the final touchdown of the half. It was converted by a Sinclair to Graham pass.

Third Quarter

The Blues carried the attack into the second half, and early in the third quarter, Sinclair scored for Varsity on a sneak through the centre of the line. McFadden and Howson were the chief ground gainers for the Blues in this quarter. A thrilling 40-yard run by Rich Howson paved the way for a pass from Jack Birkenshaw to little Artie Bell that was good for five points. Stevenson kicked the extra point.

Fourth Quarter

In the fourth quarter, Ecclestone plunged over for a touchdown that was converted by Stevenson. With only six minutes of play remaining Tom Lawson intercepted a Ram pass and ran 40 yards for a major score. A pass from Birkenshaw to Howson garnered the extra point.



The Blues completed 11 passes out of 17, while McMaster succeeded in completing only one out of nine. The Rams made eight downs to Varsity's 21. McMaster was plagued by fumbles, which proved to be a significant factor in their downfall.

The Varsity line was undoubtedly the standout of the game. Led by husky Adam Zimmerman, they displaced a stone-wall defence and a hard-hitting offense. The Blues' backfield quickly found the holes which were opened for them, and showed good form in every department

Standouts for the Rams were Ritchie, a hard charging lineman, Don Carnie, a running and kicking back, and Pat Mackan, a backfielder who played at quarter for St Mikes College last year

Forestry Dean Sees Progress – Flays Critics

There is much criticism today that forestry principles are being advanced and adopted too slowly, Dean J.W.B. Sisam, said at a recent meeting of the Foresters' Club.

Answering this criticism, Dean Sisam pointed out Forestry has actually made remarkable advances during the last 20 years, in utilization, research, mechanization, public and professional education, and other phases. This progress was all the more remarkable taking into account the obstacles of the traditional feeling in an agricultural economy that forests were secondary.

Interest in the profession and application of basic principles in the field as a first step after graduation were the key to success in any profession, Dean Sisam stated. There are a great many opportunities in forestry work at present, he said, and active, progressive men are needed in all branches to build a strong professional organization.
